CONFERENCE MUST PAY.

Finding No Town To Take The Responsibility, Committee Decides To Hold Next Session In Wilmington.

Since Asbury Church, Smyrna, announced its inability at this time to entertain the big Methodist Episcopal Conference, the question of entertainment has been held open without result and this has been a shock to the traditional hospitality of the peninsula that always has provided for the free entertainment of ministers and laymen. The increased cost of living is the alleged reason for church members refraining from inviting Conference to meet with them. Because of this state of affairs, District Superintendents Hoffecker, Watt, Stephenson and Jones announced that Asbury Church in Wilmington, the "Mother of Methodism" had been selected for the next conference session and that each minister and official layman would have to provide his own lodging and pay his own board for the first time in the Conference history.
Not only that but the Conference will receive a recommendation from the district superintendents for the appointment of a commission of nine members, one from each Conference-at-large, and two from each district, to select future places of Conference sessions annually, and to assess each church one per cent of its pastor's salary to get a fund to pay the board of ministers at Conference, on a basis of $1 a day. Several attempts have been made in the past six years to put such a system into effect, but always has been defeated by the pastors on the ground that it was unnecessary because of the proverbial hospitality of the peninsula.

FAVORABLE DEMOCRATIC

Prospects. Control Of Congress Probable.
Ohio, New Jersey, New York Lead Good.

This week practically ends the campaign and all that now is needed is the registering of the vote next Tuesday. The election is already settled and the count will show which party has won. If anything can be judged from the reports coming in from all over the country the democrats will make a clean sweep this congress and especially does this seem true in the stand-still states of the East. In Ohio, President Taft's state the republicans are putting forth unusual efforts to hold that state in line for the party, but apparently their strenuous efforts are not meeting with the response expected of them. Sen. Foraker and Mr. Garfield have proved to be trying problems to the republicans as one can not make a speech without scoring the other. Foraker has also giving some hot shots for Mr. Roosevelt.
In fact he made it so hot for the party that they called his speech-making off. Then his friends made it so warm for the organization they apolitized and sent him out again. It looks at present as though Mr. Hamon would sweep the state of Ohio and carry with him several of the strong republican congressional districts.

In New Jersey Woodrow Wilson, President of Princeton University is making a fight that has caused the leaders of both parties throughout the union to sit up and take notice.
Leading what first was looked upon as a forlorn hope, he, by the force of his campaigning, has apparently snatched away the looked for east victory of the republicans, and unless all signs fail will be elected as Governor of the rookribbed republicans State of New Jersey. This will bring him strongly in the public lime-light and will cause many of his friends in the East to point him out as the best man to lead democracy to victory in the coming Presidential election.

New York state has long been looked upon by the democrats as theirs this year. The exposition of corruption at Albany together with the failure of the republican party to pass the direct primary bills advocated by Governor Hughes had made such a split in the Republican party as to make it practically an assured thing that the democrats would carry the State.

Into this jumps Mr. Roosevelt and by cleaning up the old bosses took the sting out of the corruption and primary charges, but in doing so he has put himself up as a target, and the issue in New York is Rooseveltism.
Everything in this state seems to be favorable to the democrats at the present time, and the press of that state are freely predicting the election of Mr. Dix the democratic candidate for governor by an overwhelming majority.

Outside of these the outlook is very favorable in many strongly republican states for the democrats. Here in Maryland it is generally believed that they carry at least five out of the six congressional districts.

HALLOWE'EN FESTIVITIES

Growing Yearly in Popularity, Make-Up And World Costumes.

Probably never in the history of Salisbury has there ever been seen so many persons celebrating a yearly holiday as were on the streets Monday evening taking part in the Hallowe'en festivities. All ages were represented and all kinds of fancy and fantastic costumes could be seen.

The masqueraders made Main Street their parade grounds, and from early in the evening until late hours this street was filled with the merry makers. Since this has become such an important event with our residents it has been suggested as a good idea for some prizes to be offered for the best make-up and thus turn this occasion into a general holiday affair.

In addition to the street makers several Hallowe'en parties were given, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Toadyne entertained a number of their friends at an old time Hallowe'en party where spoons in plenty were in evidence. For the smaller folks Misses Madeline Tull and Iris White entertained at Mill Grove.

YOUR VOTE IS NEEDED. COME OUT, DEMOCRATS, TUESDAY.

Election Day is next Tuesday, November 8th. Arrange your business as to give up that day for the greatest duty that you, as a sovereign citizen, can perform. On that day all men are equal. The vote of a Rockefeller has no more value than that of a poor man, and may not have as much weight in the political scale if the poor man resides in a close congressional district where one vote may elect or defeat a representative in Congress, or a number of the state legislature who will vote for a United States Senator.

It is useless to attempt to forecast the outcome of the election, for who can tell how some men will vote with independence and political unrest in the air? As a general thing, however, the trend is strongly toward the Democrats, and the Republicans are on the anxious seat promising that if you will give them just one more chance they will do better. But Republican promises are at a discount just now, because they have not been kept in the past. The promise to revise the tariff downward and thus decrease the high cost of living, they failed to keep, and prices of most necessities are as high as ever before. From the general outlook, the sovereign voters will elect a Democratic majority to Congress, as a protest against the broken promises of the Republicans and their numerous sins of commission and omission.

There are over fifty congressional districts where a few votes may term the scale, and the vote of yourself and your neighbor may be the deciding ones. Be sure and get that sluggish Democratic neighbor and take him to the polls. His vote is needed this time.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Of Business Men's Association. To Open Headquarters On Main Street.

There was a largely attended meeting of the Business Men's Association, Friday evening, the occasion being the annual election of officers.
Vice President John D. Williams presided.

The first business transacted was the reading of the report of O. E.
Harper, W. B. Tilghman, B. F. Kennerly and L. S. Powell, the committee appointed to represent this association at the meeting of all the State Boards of Trade in Cambridge last week. The report was read by Mr.
Kennerly, and was a very interesting document, showing that the delegation had learned some valuable things from the gathering at Cambridge.
The report was unanimously adopted. Next came the election of officers and the following named by acclamation:

President—John D. Williams.
1st. Vice President—Graham Gundy.
2nd. Vice President—W. B. Tilghman.

Secretary—J. W. Oorkran.
Treasurer—R. D. Grier.
It was decided to open headquarters on Main Street in one of the large buildings, where an attendant would be constantly on hand to receive and entertain visitors, and to impart any information desired relative to Salisbury. This is a move in the right direction, and will result in great good to the association as well as this city.

GARRIE A. NATION HERE.

Tells Them A Few Things At Parson Opera.
Pool Rooms Declared Great Evil.

Garrie A. Nation, who has been classified as the modern Don Quixote has been making a tour of the Eastern Shore, reached Salisbury this week and for two evenings made the Wellin ring in Parson's Opera House on the smashing question. A number out of curiosity were present to hear her deliver her addresses. It is to be presumed that she found conditions fairly satisfactory here as we have heard of no places being smashed or any raids being made. Despite her national reputation she was not greeted here with the overwhelming enthusiasm that some had expected.
The chief evil found on the Eastern Shore seem to be the pool rooms and bottle business chiefly carried on by the colored population.

PENINSULA MOTOR CO.

And The Classy New Cadillac Car For 1911.
Which They Are Agents For.

The Peninsula Motor Company are now in active operation at their new garage on East Church Street where they have erected a commodious building, especially adapted for the storage and equipped for the care of automobiles.

Their special for which they are distributing agents is the popular and well known Cadillac, than which no car in this section has a better reputation for reliability and endurance.
In appearance and many of the material parts the 1911 "Cadillac 30" stands even superior to its predecessors. Some of the 1911 improvements are:

Increased Power.
Cylinder bore increased 1/4 inch to 4 1/4 inches. This, with more efficient carburetor (Schoeller) which is water injected, effects a material increase in power. Piston stroke 4 1/2 inches. Wheel base increased from 110 to 116 inches, making the car ride easier than ever.

Improved Appearance.
Double drop frame, 3 1/2 inch drop, which makes car set lower, and this with the larger hood and more roomy interior greatly improves the appearance. The radiator is slightly larger hence has greater cooling capacity.
Tinkler roller bearing rear axle. This is the same axle as used on a number of America's highest priced cars.
More powerful brakes, more easily and greatly increased efficiency. Contracting and expanding double acting brakes, both equalized.

Two Ignition Systems.
Two complete and independent ignition systems, each with its own set of spark plugs. The two ignition systems consist of Bosch high tension magneto and the new improved Delco system with single unit coil, high tension distributor and controlling relay. Either system alone is efficient for operating the car. All electrical wiring enclosed in copper tubes. Copper manifolds are used for water inlets and outlets in the circulating system. Clutch may be removed in a very few minutes without disturbing other members.
Messrs E. Dale Adkins and W. I.
Livingstone are at the head of the Peninsula Motor Company and will be glad to demonstrate the qualities of their car at any time. Ask for descriptive catalogue and other literature. They are also equipped for furnishing auto accessories and Mr. Livingstone has had a large experience in mechanical construction which amply qualifies him for the repair department of the new Company.

A VELVET COAT.

Is Considered Very Smart For Outdoor Wear.

There is no more becoming fabric than black velvet, and certainly it would be difficult to imagine anything smarter for outdoor wear than the velvet coat depicted here. It is composed of that rich, soft velvet known as velours du nord, and it is luxuriously lined with black satin. It would perhaps be seen at its best accompanied by long soft scarfs and big muffs of sable, and those who possess such sets should make a point of acquiring one of these coats. The model sketched is of a length that appeals to women who cannot with advantage wear a really long coat. It is semi-fitting, handsomely strapped with black satin and finished with a large motif of black silk cord. There are others that have a Russian blouse effect, with a collar of black satin. Two braids, the wide, flat military type and the narrow Russian braiding, are used to decorate the model with very happy results. A braided band defining the waist is piped with black satin, and a wider band is used to trim the sleeves. Another suggestion which is made with a deep revers collar outlined with satin can be cut on very graceful lines. Satin strappings are also continued along the edge of the coat, forming a narrow border, and somewhat wider, decorative straps are finished with satin buttons and loops of black silk braid.

It should be every woman's ambition to have one of these coats, which fit so well with the season's prevalence for velvets on all articles of clothing.

NEW BOUDOIR GOWNS.

Silk and Crapé Largely Used, and They Are Made Full Length in Princess Form.

Full length gowns for the boudoir are nearly all made in the classic princess form, with wide effect at the waist, but with few, if any, gathers from the top. These and the long gowns of the year are usually in thin silk or crapé or in clinging albatross cloth, enriched by pretty underlays of pink, blue or violet of a sufficiently strong tone to show through the outer material and with floss embroideries in delicate effective designs. Some of the quaint trimmings of the year are combined in the tea gowns. Shell plaits, or those ruched plaits which are being revived from the fashions of the fifties, often border the foot and the fronts of a boudoir or tea gown. They are made in the old-fashioned way of taffeta, sometimes fringed at each side and sometimes hemmed.

To Starch Linens.

In starching linens and similar goods too light for mourning starch and too dark for the white, put in the boiling starch a large piece of tissue paper in shade to match as nearly as possible the dress material. This will dissolve, and when the starch is strained nothing but the dye will remain, making a starch of the exact color desired.

This is a good hint for the woman who does much color embroidery of the stiffly starched variety.

Novel Tunic Effect.

A pretty idea for the finishing of a tunic, especially one of velvet or other soft material, is to slash the tunic in front, like an overskirt, and knot it loosely at each side, drawing it away so as to show a great part of the undergarment up to the knees. The knots are made about halfway from the ankles, and the tunic falls loosely below them. Of course it is caught with a few stitches in back to keep it in position.

WEBSTER AND CHOATE.

The Latter Might Well Be Compared to a Rapid Fire Maxim, the Former to a Thirteen Inch Gun.

"Probably no educational institution in our country has ever graduated two more eminent and eloquent lawyers than old Dartmouth college gave us in Daniel Webster and Rufus Choate," says a writer in Our Dumb Animals. "It was my privilege as a member of the Suffolk bar to attend many years ago the trial of one of the most important cases of the year in our supreme judicial court at Boston."

"On the two sides were arrayed some half a dozen of our most eminent lawyers. Daniel Webster and Rufus Choate, as it happened, were on the same side."

"A hostile witness was put on by the other side, some of whose evidence was of the utmost importance to Webster and Choate, if it could be obtained. He man at our bar had more profound skill in cross examination, and the questions he put to the witness were like the fire of a Maxim gun, but in every instance he failed to get the evidence he wanted and finally sat down in despair."

"Then Webster, who had been sitting in his great armchair, apparently about half asleep, as though taking no interest in the case whatever, slowly arose to his feet, put his great eyes on the hostile witness, asked him in the most serious tone a single question and brought instantly the required answer. Then as quietly he sat down and apparently went about half asleep again. It was a scene photographed on my mind, never to be forgotten."

"The difference between Webster and Choate cannot better be explained as it rests in my mind than to compare Choate to a Maxim gun raining bullets of eloquence wherever he chose and Webster to a great gun that can send out a thirteen inch shell to penetrate an ironclad."

"It was wonderful to listen to Choate. I remember a case in which an ordinary lawyer would have simply said to the court that he moved a postponement of the case because witness so-and-so was sick, but in this case Choate arose and commenced by saying that his important witness was on a bed of sickness and perhaps a bed of death and so went whirling up almost to the skies on this simple motion, to the great interest of everybody that heard him."

"Our old chief justice, Judge Shaw, one of the greatest lawyers of his time, was a plain, practical man, and looked in his old age as he sat on the bench somewhat like a Chinese idol, and he used to frequently cut off Mr. Choate's eloquence by calling him back to the plain facts."

The Reconciliation.

The doctor was soon at the child's bedside. Remedies were administered; then the agonized pair watched the light for life—skill and vitality on one side, fierce disease on the other. When at last the struggle ceased, the gray dawn of day was looking in at the window. Life had won. The child slept.

"She is all right now," said the doctor, shaking the man's hand, which had gripped his, and feeling his heart grow warm under the look of mute gratitude the woman turned upon him.

When he had gone the two stood side by side at the baby's crib, looking to her regular breathing. Then, with one accord, they turned and kissed each other. And in that kiss the icy barrier between them melted away.—Atlanta Constitution.

The French Guide is a Public Pest. Paris has produced a species which is the lowest embodiment of sentimentality. It is the "guide." The guide is an evolutionary "throwback," a reversion to type. You must go deep into the mind of the man who has risen to find his prototype—back of the ape, back of the tiger, back of the snoutless hog, though he partakes of the nature of all of these, to the dim ages when nameless troglodytes treaded in cold lethargy the primordial slime. Somewhere in that category belongs the Paris guide. Intermittently these ghosts of dead deities squeak and gibber in the streets of the city.—Collier's.

A Long Spell of Duty. A Scotsman had come to London on his way to India and for a few days had time to amuse himself by sight-seeing before his departure, says Oscar Reamsay in his "Reminiscences." He had been much struck with the appearance of the mounted sentinels of the horse guards, Whitehall, and bore them in remembrance during his eastern sojourn. On his return after a period of thirty years, on passing the horse guards, he looked up to one, and seeing him, as he thought, unchanged as to horse, position and accoutrements, he exclaimed, "Oh, friend, ye have had a long spell o' it, I left."

Mutual Surprise. They stood beneath the mistletoe. She was justly proud of what he had done.

"How does you like me?" she exclaimed. "I never was so surprised in all my life."

"Better was I," he replied contentedly. "I thought it was your younger sister."—Chicago Post.

Forbidden Fruit. "Your husband has been so successful, Mrs. Pennington. Do tell me how you kept your husband."

"Oh, you see, the doctor has given me a printed list of things I mustn't eat, and I observe the dishes from that."—Woman's Home Companion.

A kindred done to the good is never lost.—Herrick.

Mothers!

Don't fail to procure Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for your Children while cutting teeth. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Twenty five cents a bottle.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have suffered with indigestion, have been cured by it. When nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. But what you want, is Kodol digested. It is not the ordinary "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Kodol is only at all druggists.

1911 Moline "35"

4x6 Long Stroke Motor — 35 H. P. — 36-inch Wheels — 112-inch Wheel Base

Touring Type . . . $1,650
Toy Tonneau . . . $1,600

One of the best evidences of the exceptional merits of the Moline "35" is the remarkable record it made in the 1910 Glidden Tour. In addition to winning the Chicago trophy, donated by the Chicago Motor Club, the Moline "35" made the best record of any car entered in the entire tour, regardless of classification, size, power and selling price. It out-pointed all competitors; was never late at control a single time; did not carry a single extra repair part, not even a cotter 2,852 miles; and at final technical examination to determine the wear and tear of the cars at the end of the grueling sixteen days' grind, it was found to be in the best mechanical condition of any car in the tour. This tells the story of the dependable, high standard service the Moline "35" will give its purchasers. No point the 1911 Moline will stand comparison with any other car of its class, which will be mailed free on request.

An Important Case

By BELLE MANIATES

"I know that you have sorely rested since your last case, Miss Thorne," said the doctor, looking down into the young face saddened and sweetened by experience, "but I can only save the lad with your help. I told his brother there was a glimmer of hope if I could secure the nurse I had in mind, and he said to offer you any inducement."

"I will take the case," she replied. "I can go at once."

In a few minutes she was seated beside Dr. Wall, and as they rose he told her the details of the case.

"Brian's fever, and the boy is one of those high-strung, nervous types. It will be a fight, but you seem to understand and soothe nervous children so well."

"Perhaps," she said, musingly, "it's because I once had the care of a child like that one who was very dear to me."

"He calls constantly for his sister; yet he never had one."

The automobile drew up before a large stone house. A maid opened the door and took the bag from the nurse.

"Wait here," directed the doctor, going upstairs, "until I come back."

When he returned the nurse was gazing at some photographs on the mantel, her face very white.

"What is the boy's name?" she asked, abruptly.

"Paul Whitridge."

"I thought so. I can't take this case. I can't stay here, not even to save the child's life."

"See here," said the doctor, roughly, "haven't you learned that doctors and nurses can't indulge in personal feelings? We must work for the good of the patient. The boy is much worse; saving."

"I think I can quiet him. I will go up and see him, and then," she added, firmly, "I must leave." When she came out the doctor led her into a room which he used as a consulting room.

"You promised the boy," he reminded, anxiously.

"I couldn't refuse; but I stay only on certain conditions."

"You may make any you choose."

"You know something of my history. That I lived in the west, that I separated from my husband, took another name and came here to be a nurse. This child, Paul, is my husband's young brother. They have evidently moved to this city."

"Good Lord!" ejaculated the doctor. "Mr. Whitridge is a bad, cruel man, and I should loathe and despise him. I only stayed with him as long as I did because I was attached to the child, to whom his brother was utterly indifferent. I cannot understand his motive in professing anxiety. I don't want to see him. I won't see him! I thought it out while I was sitting by Paul—how to manage it. You can tell him I am eccentric and a man-hater, that I never go in a house where there is a man, and that I will stay and nurse the boy only on condition that he doesn't come into the sickroom when I am there."

"He will consent to any arrangement when he learns Paul has become quiet under your influence. He is devoted to the child."

"Men of his type," she replied, scornfully, "never change. But please go and make the arrangements with him."

The doctor sought the master of the house, and soon returned.

"He will willingly give his word of honor."

She made a contemptuous gesture. One evening when the lad was asleep she went down on the beach to watch the breakers. In a long stretch of shimmering moonlight she saw a man approaching. He was tall and slim and straight as a fir tree. He paused before her.

"Helene," he said, "may I not thank you for saving the life of little Paul?" She looked at him astounded. Then a comprehending light came into her eyes.

"You are Francis Whitridge, Walter's brother," she asked.

"Yes; and I have always regretted that I was abroad at the time of your marriage, and afterwards. I know what your life with Walter must have been, but we must not speak ill of him now that he is gone."

"Gone!" she echoed, wondering.

"He died six months ago."

"Oh!" she cried, in an awed tone of relief.

"We have looked everywhere for you—little Paul and I."

"Then it was you who were in the house during Paul's illness?"

"Yes; when the doctor told his story of the 'eccentric' nurse I believed him. But in my anxiety for the boy and for his care, I used to violate the contract, in part. I often lingered near the sickroom. I heard you call him 'little brother,' and I knew who you must be. I didn't dare reveal my identity, lest your antipathy to Walter extend to his relatives. Yesterday a reference to my brother's death before Dr. Thorne led him to suspect the state of affairs, and he told me you did not know of Walter's death. So I came to tell you, and Helene, for Paul's sake, can't we be friends?"

She looked at him earnestly. There was no look of Walter in his lineaments. But an odd resemblance of Paul attracted her. She trusted him instantly.

"Yes," she replied, softly; "we will be friends."

Fluffing the hair.

To make the hair which goes over the pompadour fluffy, some girls resort to the device of rough combing it underneath, which means running the comb backward over the hair, and then sprinkling powder over it underneath where it does not show when the hair is done up. Coming and powdering in this manner undoubtedly has a drying effect, which makes for fluffiness, but both are too disastrous to the hair to be indulged in, for the rough combing breaks it, while the powder badly clogs the pores.

HER DEAREST WISH

TOT'S HEART SET ON POSSESSION OF A PONY.

And Though It Wasn't a Very Elegant Animal, and the Carriage Was Rickety, Little Girl Was Delighted.

"If I only had a pony," began the little girl, then she stopped. That pony had been the subject of her dreams and her waking thought for weeks. It had become so much of an all-absorbing subject that it had been frowned upon in the family circle, but suppression only made it more important.

"If I only had a pony." The little girl had planned it all out. She had told father and mother the plans. Father had looked worried and mother had seemed sorry.

The little girl couldn't understand this, for to every little girl a father always has money, for he has means of earning it that little girls lack.

"Some day," father had said, and on this foundation the little girl had built the dreams and the plans. It was all arranged. There was a nice shed to keep the pony in, and she had gathered grass and put it in a soap box in the stall in case the pony should come.

She would drive to the office for father every day of the world, and when mother wanted something from the grocery in a hurry all she had to do would be to jump on the pony or get into the little cart that comes with all ponies and get it in no time.

How the other little girls would envy her as she drove past! Some of them she would let ride with her, but some of them—no, they were mean and shouldn't even come near the pony.

Mother told father all these things at night, and father would do sums in mental arithmetic in the dark and postpone the solution to another time, for all sums cannot be worked out right away.

Then mother took a hand. "John," she said, "can't we get some kind of a pony for her? Anything will do. She doesn't need a fancy pony and cart or anything like that—just something she can drive." Father said he would see.

And a few days later he drove home behind a small and very tame appearing animal that might have been called a "horse" by a courtier.

The buggy was old and rusty, but a coat of paint would settle that, and it would look fine.

"My pony!" said the little girl. That was all. She could say nothing more for at least an hour, not even when she was taken up to the buggy and allowed to drive all by herself.

"It cost only $20," father told mother when they were together that night, "and the buggy is about to fall to pieces, but she will have just as much fun out of it."

"You're a dear boy," said mother. "Nonsense!" said father, gruffly. "She had to have it!"—Galveston News.

Back in the Field.

"Family pride just about reaches its limit with the Biddies of Philadelphia," said a man who hails from the burg of scrapple. "To be a Biddle in Philadelphia is sort of like being an archangel in heaven—at least from the point of view of the Biddies. One of the women of that numerous family married a man who was quite her social equal, but who was afflicted with the somewhat commonplace name of—well, say Robinson. They have a little girl, who is now about six years old, and called is never permitted to know the name of the fact that her mother was a Biddle. In Sunday school a couple of weeks ago her infantile mind was expected to grasp the problem of salvation according to the doctrine that we must be born again. When she reached home she ran to her mother, exclaiming: 'O, mother, I have such good news for you!'"

"What is it, dear?" asked her mother.

"Why, when you die and go to heaven explained the little girl, 'you'll be a Biddle again!'"

Edward's Interest in Medicine.

In particular, the late King Edward was interested in the promotion of everything that might tend to bring the best aid of medicine and surgery within the reach of all, and in the wide employment of any scientific development which might mitigate or, happily, prevent the spread of dangerous disease. He was saved from typhoid fever death by the great Sir William Jenner in 1872. In 1902 Sir Frederick Treves, the great Scotch surgeon, operated on the king for an abscess around his appendix. In 1896 the king suffered from a severe attack of rheumatism. King Edward was Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of London and Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, and was the intimate friend of a number of doctors.

Grasping the Situation.

"I want to exchange these," said the customer, handing a long box across the counter to the saleslady. "I never could wear anything that compressed me so, here," placing her two hands just above her waist line.

"Oh," responded the saleslady, after dutifully encircling the customer's waist with a tape measure, "you need a larger size. These are too tight across the diagram."

The Way It Looked to Him.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge of the defendant in a case of assault and battery.

"I think I must be guilty, your honor," answered the defendant.

"You think so?" said the judge.

"Don't you know?"

"Well, your honor," answered the prisoner, "it's like this: The plain, old and I was the only one in the room, and the first thing I knew was that I was standing up, and he was doubled up under the table. So I guess you'd better call it self-defense."

Apprehensive.

"Come on and take a ride in my monoplane," insisted the inventor.

"Why, it has a speed of a mile a minute."

"Indeed," said the cautious friend.

"What has direction to do with it?"

"Why—was I thinking perhaps it was that speed coming down toward the earth?"

LOYALTY TO CHRIST

By JAMES CARDINAL GIBSON.

At the Esplanade, Montreal, Canada.

Text.—St. John 14. "The word was made flesh and dwelt among us."

It is related in the life of the patriarch St. Anthony that on a certain occasion he received a letter full of filial homage and affection from Constantine the Great. And the letter was signed not only by the emperor, but also by his two sons, Constantius and Constant.

The disciples of Anthony, learning that their father was honored by a special epistle from the emperor, were naturally elated and filled with complacency, and the venerable patriarch, observing the exultation depicted on their faces, remarked to them: "You rejoice, my sons, because the emperor has written to me. But should it not be a cause of greater astonishment and delight to you that our eternal Father, the king of kings and emperor of emperors, has written to us by his beloved Son and has made us partakers of the divine nature?"

And now, dearly beloved, assembled as we are in this historic church and at the close of a most consoling and successful eucharistic congress and after partaking of the banquet of the Lord, should not we rejoice with Anthony in the dignity and the inestimable blessings we possess as members of the Christian family?

It is customary for a king on the occasion of his coronation to bestow some titles and distinctions on a number of his most conspicuous and devoted subjects. During these past days you have crowned Christ the Lord as your king, as well as your high priest. You have always acknowledged and proclaimed his spiritual sovereignty over you. He reigns now over your intellect and reasoning powers, over your heart and affections, over your imagination and memory and over the whole empire of your soul. And I need not tell you, enlightened Christians, that the homage you pay to your heavenly king, far from lessening, rather strengthens and purifies, ennobles and consecrates your allegiance to your temporal rulers.

And what does Christ give you in return for your loyalty to him? Ah, my brethren, no earthly monarch can reward his subjects as bountifully as the king of heaven rewards his servants. We know from history how uncertain and capricious are the smiles and promises of temporal rulers. No man ever served his sovereign with more unswerving fealty than Cardinal Wolsey served Henry VIII. But when he lost the king's favor he could be exclaim in the anguish of his soul: "Had I served my God with half the zeal I have served my king he would not have left me to mine enemies."

What little, then, does Christ confer on you for your allegiance to him? He creates you the adopted children and heirs of his eternal father, the Father, St. Augustine in his immortal work "The City of God" says that many rulers and generals of pagan antiquity desired to impress upon their subjects, as well as on themselves, the conviction that they were descended from the gods, so that the consciousness and recognition of their divine origin might stimulate them to heroic deeds and command the admiration of their followers. Thus Alexander the Great, Aeneas, Scipio, Romulus and Caesar were regarded as the offspring of the gods.

But, while their titles were imaginary, yours, as St. Augustine remarks, can with truth lay claim to the title of children, not indeed of heathen divinities, but of the one true and living God. Children of the most high, when temptations assail you, when the demon attempts to ensnare you in his coils, say to him: "Begone, Satan. I am a son of God. I was born for greater things. I am destined for heaven. I have come from the banquet of the Lord. The blood of Christ flows through my veins. Those lips which are purpled with the blood of the lamb must not be polluted. I have been nourished with the bread of angels and with God's grace. I shall not degrade myself by feeding on hooks of hyacinth."

And when he shall appear we shall be like to him, for we shall see him as he is. We shall be like him in justice and sanctity, like him in immortality, like him in eternal glory and beatitude. As the stormy apostles of God, and if children have also, heirs indeed of God and joint heirs with Christ; yet so if we suffer with him that we may be also glorified with him.

MEN IN POLITICS.

One of the most encouraging signs of the day in the politics of the nation, is the tendency noticed to pay more attention to the character and standing of the man who asks for the support of the voters.

In the present campaign this can be seen by the strength developed by Woodrow Wilson in his fight for governorship of the strongly Republican state of New Jersey. When nominated for this office his closest friends looked upon his efforts as useless and his cause as hopeless, however, as the campaign progressed, it was found that he was arousing an interest among the voters of the State that was unusual and which if continued indicated his election. It is hard to tell how this will turn out at the polls next Tuesday, but whether elected or not, he has demonstrated that a man of strong convictions and ability joined with a character that is unassailable and an integrity unquestioned, is a force to be reckoned with regardless of the party under whose banner he may be fighting.

This is not the only case that could be pointed out, but, on the contrary, in almost every instance, the man who is leading the ticket comes in for a close scrutiny by the voters, who do the electing. A man of straw, with no particular ability and representing no particular principles, whose character is unknown or tainted, and whose only claim for election is that he was nominated by some particular party and therefore is exposed to represent the principles advocated by that party and will vote like a sheep with his party when elected is having a hard time. People are learning to discriminate and demand that the men who are put before them for their selection, be men of character and honesty, first, and men of ability and courage, second. If this continues, and all true citizens hope that it will,
then parties will have to nominate strong, fearless and honest men, if they expect to win in the battle before the American people.

Everywhere the voters should carefully scrutinize the candidate placed before them by the various parties and select the man who they believe will honestly and faithfully represent them when elected to office.

Let this test be applied to the two candidates before the people of this First Congressional District. Let them have in mind the private lives, the political history and the public records of the men who are asking them for their votes, duly considering the ability of the men to perform what they promise and the principles that such will stand for after his election.

This is not a campaign of personalities and is not intended, either directly or indirectly, to cast any reflections on the candidate of either party, but we believe that the man who has been nominated on the Democratic ticket will stand the test of investigation, and that when all things are considered, the careful, thoughtful voter will see that his vote to cast for him on next Tuesday. Mr.
Covington stands for honesty in government. His public and private life are clean and he will faithfully represent the people of this District in Congress. Moreover, he stands for a repeal of the present high tariff, which is taking money out of the pockets of the consumers and putting it into the pockets of the men who control our big trusts. If the republican claim that the tariff allows them to pay the higher wages paid to American laborers could be sustained, and it would be shown that all of the present tariff went forth as pur-posed, then there might be some justification for the tariff. When one looks at the enormous fortunes that have and are being piled up by those who control the management favored by this high tariff, then it will appear that instead of all this tariff finding its way into the hands of the poor and helping them, the major part of it finds its way into the padded bank accounts of the trust magnates. Are the people in this country in favor of the high tariff? If so let them refrain from voting for Mr. Covington, for unless we are much mistaken in the character and standing of Mr. Covington, he will do all in his power after his election to see that a fairer and more just law is placed upon the statute books of this country. He fulfills the first requisite that should be demanded of a candidate, that of honesty, integrity and fearlessness, he fills the second demand, that of ability and he represents the principle for which his party has fought for years, that of placing the right kind of tariff law on our books. Democrats of Wicomico County should need no urging to come out to the polls on Tuesday and cast their vote for a man that is entitled to their respect and confidence, who has proven his ability, and who if elected can be trusted to do his best whatever may come up in an honest, fearless manner.

BIG DEMOCRATIC MEET.

Ings—People Much Interested.

The various meetings being held this week throughout the County have been much more largely attended than expected, and the present outlook is for a good Democratic majority which is variously estimated by political prophets anywhere from 400 to 600 for the County.

A meeting was held in the Court House on Thursday evening for the three districts of Camden, Salisbury and Parsons. Hon. "Stover" Brown the well known Baltimore reformer and democrat gave an able talk on the tariff and other issues of this campaign. Sen. Jesse D. Price followed with an able address and ended with an eloquent appeal to the voters to stand by the Democratic party and tariff reform. Although the weather was very unfavorable this meeting was well attended and the speakers received an enthusiastic welcome from the hundreds present. This County is in good shape and if the voters come out Covington will be given a handsome majority here.

—A gentleman gave the following description of the location of his property, recently, in placing a value upon it, and judging from the value at which he estimated it, the location had much to do with the same. —The Magazine Agency established by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Wicomico Presbyterian Church last year gave such complete satisfaction to its patrons and enabled the Society to net such a fair profit that it has decided to continue the Agency for another year. This Agency claims that no one in the Magazine business can underbid it as it has secured rates from one of the largest Distributing Agencies in the country. Renewals are just as profitable to the Agency in most cases as new subscriptions. Miss Alice Hill, of Camden Avenue, has been appointed to receive subscriptions.

You Can Work Near a Window

In winter when you have a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a portable radiator which can be moved to any part of a room, or to any room in a house. When you have a

PERFECTION OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless you do not have to work close to the stove, which is usually far from the window. You can work where you wish, and be warm. You can work on dull winter days in the full light near the window, without being chilled to the bone.

The Perfection Oil Heater quickly gives heat, and with one filling of the font burns steadily for nine hours, without smoke or smell. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap, put in like a cork in a bottle, is attached by a chain. This heater has a cool handle and a damper top.

The Perfection Oil Heater has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged and can be unscrewed in an instant for reworking. The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in Japan or nickel, is strong, durable, well-made, built for service, and yet light and ornamental.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT...

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL,
Pastor Brooklyn
Tabernacle

The Message of the Hour to the Church and the World.

London, October 30.—Pastor Russell of Brooklyn Tabernacle today addressed an audience of nearly four thousand people from the above text. His hearers were of all classes and very intelligent appearing. He had closest attention. He said in part:—

God has messages for those who have hearing ears at each great dispensational change in earth's affairs. These messages have generally been in the nature of forewarning of coming distress and the reasons therefor. Such a message was given to our first parents when they were expelled from Eden—accursed would be the ground for their sakes. Thorns and thistles it would bring forth unto them. In sweat of face they should eat bread thereof until they should return to the ground, from whence they came. Another great message went forth at the time of the flood; another before the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah; another at the close of the Jewish Age, when Jesus and his Apostles called attention to the prophecies which foretold the Divine rejection of the nation of Israel for a time and declared that all things written in the Law and the Prophets concerning them would have fulfillment, quoting the prophecy which declared that their house would be left desolate; that they would have neither prophet, nor vision, nor priest, nor ephod for many years, but that eventually God's favor would return to Israel—that he would gather them again and fulfill to them everlastingly the blessings promised both to Abraham and to his descendants—"the sure mercies of David."

A week ago we considered the prophetic message, "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people, saith your God" (Isaiah xl. 1). We noted then that the due time has arrived for the fulfillment to Israel of this comforting message—that as a people the appointed time for the return of favor to them is accomplished because their two-fold disciplines for sin have been fulfilled. Thus our present day is clearly marked and the words of our text following imply that now is the time for a special message to all, in proportion as each may have the hearing ear. It is the voice of God which calls now through various channels and agencies. It cries not from the "City Babylon the Great." It cries not from the citadel of Christendom; but from the wilderness, from those who are more or less separated; from those who have heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues" (Revelation xviii. 4).

Prepare the Lord's Day.
The message of the hour to every hearing ear is, "The Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple" (Malachi iii. 1). For centuries you have been praying, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." Now your prayer is about to be answered, whether you prayed in sincerity or in hypocrisy. The glory of the Lord is about to be revealed. "All flesh shall see it together." It will not be revealed merely to one nation, nor merely to one holy class. His glory will be revealed in flaming fire—in judgments. All flesh shall see it—the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant, the holy and the unholiness. But, as the Prophet Malachi declares, "Who shall abide the day of his coming, and who shall stand when he appears; for he is like fuller's soap (in its attack upon grease and dirt), and he is like a refiner's fire." As it melts and separates the dross of sin and iniquity (Malachi iii. 2).

The coming of a great earthly king to a city is the signal for a general cleansing up everywhere. And so the Lord declares that the message of his fast-approaching Kingdom should influence all who have the hearing ear to make preparation. To each nation it means. Set your house in order. An inspection is at hand. See that your laws are just and equitable and that they are administered justly. The same message comes to each self-governing city, and lastly, and most important of all, this message comes to each individual, and especially to all who have named the name of Christ. Or, as St. Peter declares, this inspection of the King of kings and Lord of lords must begin with the house of God (1 Peter iv. 17). And if the inspection be so searching that it must begin with God's saints, what could we expect of it when it reaches those who are merely nominal Christians and then the world in general! Ah! we may expect just what the Bible advises us will come, "A time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation" (Daniel xii. 1). The message of this hour, dear friends, elsewhere stated in Holy Writ is, "Seek meekness; seek righteousness. It may be that ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger" (Zephaniah ii. 3).

Hidden Things to Be Revealed.
The greatest Teacher the world has ever known, a Jew, eighteen centuries ago, declared prophetically of our day, "The things which are hid shall be revealed" (Matthew x. 26). We see his prophecy fulfilling. The secrets of nations are being exposed. Injustice in its every form is being brought to light as never before. Inequality in financial institutions and in politics and in private affairs is being remorselessly unmasked and brought to light. Expediency and policy might say, "Hide these things from public gaze. But under Divine Providence the light is being turned on everywhere and hidden things of darkness are being exposed, sometimes in the evil and sometimes in the good. And sometimes, perhaps, the Adversary succeeds in making the good to appear evil. We are merely noting the general tendency—the great fact so peculiar to our day. We are not saying that every charge of fraud is bona-fide.

Levelling Processes Are at Work.
The great levelling processes mentioned by the Prophet may be seen at work everywhere in society—in politics, in finance, in religion. A straight path is certainly being marked out in the wilderness. The people are coming to see gradually what constitutes Justice from the Divine standpoint—the path that Jehovah God will take when coming to mankind to require an accounting for the blessing of religious and of enlightenments granted to humanity in this, our day. Those who point out to mankind the straight paths do not always walk therein themselves. Nevertheless, the great purpose of the Almighty is being accomplished in the exposures of sin and injustices, whether made from the Christian pulpit or from the socialist platform or in the public press. The Divine edict is, "Make straight in the desert a highway for your God" (Isaiah xl. 3)—show his path of righteousness; make it known to all the people.

We should remember, however, that it is one thing to know the path of righteousness, of justice and of equity, and another thing to walk therein. Let us, my dear hearers, see to it that we not only recognize the Divine standards of righteousness and that we proclaim these to all who have the hearing ear, but let us also take heed that we be not condemned in respect to those principles which we allow and acknowledge and proclaim as the Golden Rule to others. Alas for the hypocrites who proclaim the way of the Lord to others, yet ignore that way in their own dealings. We have every reason to believe that honesty is one of the qualities which our God most highly appreciates in his creatures; hence we may be sure that hypocrisy is one of the most abominable qualities in the sight of Heaven. Hearken to the words of the Great Teacher, "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! * * * for ye load men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers" (Luke xi. 44-46).

Let all who have named the name of Christ; all who in any sense of the word profess to be God's people, put far from them the hypocrites which appear so abominable in others. Let us be honest. Let us practice even more than we ever preached. Let all who belong to the Lord be indeed burning and shining lights in the world—examples of justice and righteousness in their homes, in their neighborhoods, in the workshop and in the markets. Let us not only proclaim and assist in making straight before our feet the pathway of our God, but let us conform our words and deeds and thoughts thereto. The general result of the uncovering of the hidden things of darkness, and the bringing of them to light, and the proclamation of the straight way of the Lord, will have a great effect, and that effect is declared by the Prophet. It will mean a Revolution—a symbolical language, an earthquake. Note the picture given, "Every valley shall be exalted, and every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough places smooth." Not in one instant will all this mighty transformation of society be accomplished. Not at once will all the degraded members of the human family be brought to the general standard or level. Not at once will the mountains and hills the kingdoms and princedoms of the world be brought down to the common level. Not at once will thus a general equalization of society be effected. But it will be effected. The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.

"The levelling process already is begun in Germany, for instance, one-fourth of the Reichstag is composed of Socialists, notwithstanding the fact that the wealthy have several votes to the poor man's one. Already we see the great mountain (or nation) of Russia yielding to the demands of the people and granting them a measure of civil rights. There we see a practical illustration of the lifting up of the valleys and the bringing low of the mountains. In Great Britain we see another wonderful illustration of this principle; for here, more than in any other Kingdom of Europe, perhaps, the distance between the mountain tops of autocracy and the depths of social degradation, have been lessened, so that in Great Britain, the change demanded by the new Kingdom, Messiah's Kingdom, will be less than in many other countries. Here it has come gradually.

The Glory of the Lord Revealed.
A well-known American author (Henry Ward Beecher's Sister) once wrote some words which seem prophetic:—

"I can see his coming judgments, as they circle all the earth.
The signs and warnings promised, to precede a second birth;
I read his righteous sentence, in the crumbling thrones of earth;
Our King is marching on.

"The Gentile Times are closing, for their kings have had their day;
And with them sin and sorrow, will forever pass away;
For the tribe of Judah's Lion, now comes to hold the sway—
Our King is marching on.

"The seventh trumpet is sounding, and our King knows no defeat.
He will sift out the hearts of men before his judgment-seat.
Oh to be swift, my soul, to welcome him, who jubilant my feet—
Our King is marching on."

The exposure of the realities of our humanity—the shame of society and of religion and of business and politics, all are constituting a great black background, against which the glories of the Lord are being revealed in striking contrast, as the critics of the world mercilessly hew to the line and lay bare the cankers in politics and pollutions of our social system. The effect of this primarily will be the arousing of the masses against the classes of privilege. Their human idols and ideals will crumble. Their confidence in men will melt. They will give vent to what they will esteem to be a righteous indignation. And so doing they will forget that the masses are equally as unrighteous, unjust, as the more favored classes, in proportion to their opportunities. Wherein they judge others they should also condemn themselves, and the result should be that mercy which the Lord enjoins.

Only those who forgive others their trespasses—who thus manifest a spirit of love and sympathy—need expect to have mercy, consideration, shown them by the new King. He will surely punish injustice and unrighteousness, of word and deed and thought in the poor as in the rich, in the ignorant as in the learned, in the outwardly religious as in the outwardly profane. The message of the hour to Christian, Jew and Gentile is what it was eighteen centuries ago, "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of heaven is at hand." Repent and reform respecting public injustices, no matter of how long standing, no matter by whom practised and approved. Repent of and reform from and disown the rank errors to be found in so many Church creeds, dishonoring to our Creator. Let us be honest in our professions of faith. Repent as respects wrong practices which have crept into our Churches, quite out of harmony with the teachings of Jesus and the Apostles.

Let us return to the simplicity of the early Church. Let us repent of the God-dishonoring statements we have put forth in the name of God and religion and the Bible, by which we palmed off bad tidings of great misery, as instead of the true Gospel of Good Tidings of Great Joy which shall be unto all people. Let us repent of and abandon the falsehoods and misrepresentations so common in business life—the subservience of the Truth to money. Let us repent of and put away the dishonesties of the Stock Exchange, through which the weak and ignorant financial inmates are deceived and impoverished. Let us repent of the iniquities which abound in nearly every home, even those where Christ is claimed to be the Head—Injustices of husbands toward wives and of wives toward husbands, the strong-minded toward the weaker-minded—Let us repent of the injustices practised by parents upon children, in violation of the same Golden Rule. Let us repent of the dishonest and dishonest to parents, practicing by many children. Let us repent of the selfish ambitions of our own hearts and let us pray earnestly to the Lord, "Create within me a clean heart, O Lord, and renew a right spirit within me." "Cleanse thou me from secret faults; keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins" (Psalm li. 10; xix, 12, 13).

The Time is at Hand.
True, these and similar exhortations have been made by the Lord's people from time immemorial. And yet the present proclamation is different from all others in that it proclaims, "The time is at hand." "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Not an earthly kingdom with an earthly king; not a papal kingdom exhorting the world to righteousness in the name of the Lord! Not a Protestant ecclesiastical empire exhorting to godliness! But the real Kingdom of God's dear Son so long promised, so long prayed for, is at hand! It will be a Spiritual Empire, replacing and displacing Satan's empire in the world and using as its earthly agency Israel restored to Divine favor. Men will not say, Lo, here, or, there, but, Behold, the Kingdom of God will be in the midst of mankind—everywhere present, empowered to bless and empowered to punish. The Great Prince of Light, the King in his glory, with the elect as his Bride on the heavenly, spiritual, invisible plane, will soon take the scepter of power. His great power and the glorious majesty of his righteous rule will be manifest in the judgments which will prevail—rewards and punishments. "When the judgments of the Lord are abroad in the earth, the inhabitants of the world shall learn righteousness" (Isaiah xvi. 9).

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a brick dust sediment, or settling, or stringy or milky appearance often indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back are also symptoms that tell you the kidneys and bladder are out of order and need attention.

What To Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills almost every wish in correcting rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. Corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its renounceable health restoring properties. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

TO ALL WOMEN. A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many A Sufferer in Salisbury.

No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, side ache, etc. Urine poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, languor, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Salisbury woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mrs. Jennie A. Collins, 313 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "Several members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from White & Leonard's Drug Store, and have received great benefit. I know that this remedy is a reliable one for kidney disorders and I am certain that no one suffering from these troubles will make a mistake in giving it a trial."

The DAIRY

MAKING A COW DRY.

This Will Give Her a Good Rest, and She Will Produce Better and More Milk When Freshened.

In order to get a good year's work from a dairy cow it is necessary, among other things, to have her dry long enough to afford her a good rest. The dairy cow cannot be held to continuous production without a serious drain upon her strength. An occasional cow has been known to do very good work for a term of years without any rest, but such a cow is a prodigy and should not be taken as a model for all cows.

There will be no serious trouble in getting the scrub cow dry, and a few that are not classed as scrubs, but there is a long jump between that class and the really high bred dairy cow that is as good as her breeding. It is at times a problem to dry off a really first class cow, and many plans have been resorted to with varying results.

A common method is the starvation plan, the cow getting nothing but straw and a very small amount of water. The plan works with the cow, but there is an element of cruelty about it that does not appeal to a humane dairyman. The plan generally used is as follows:

Before time to turn the cow dry she should be made fat. The work is then half done, as it is second nature for a fat cow to go dry. The other half of the job consists in reducing the feed. The cow will soon be dry if milked only at irregular intervals, and she will be in fairly good condition. When she is pronounced dry the feed should be increased in order to put her into good condition for another year's work. A given amount of feed will make more milk when fed to a dry cow than when fed to a fresh one. Make the dry cow fat, and then when she is fresh she will pay for the feed with usury.

A cow should not be considered dry as long as there is the slightest amount of milk formed, as the accumulation will dry in the udder, forming a cheesy mass that may cause trouble later. If the cow has been properly dried and conditioned and she is really a good one she will be very apt to have a large udder when she freshens.

A FEEDING TROUGH.

Simple, Sanitary and Convenient Device For Dairy Stock—Must Be Built Sufficiently Low For Calves.

This device requires little explanation. The bench is sufficiently low to allow a calf to reach the small pail. The outfit cannot be upset, as the support is on the ground.

Feeding Trough For Dairy Stock.

porting legs are sunk some distance in the ground, and the calf gets at the milk easily without any extra attention. The pail is easily removed for washing.

Protecting Rosebushes.
A good way to protect a bed of tender rosebushes is to bend them carefully down to the ground, hold them in position with stakes and then cover with leaves, straw or earth. On my own rose bed I follow this plan, using a heavy layer of leaves held in place by a wide strip of wire chicken netting laid on the bed and securely staked at the edges.

Use Right Fertilizer.

The proper use of commercial fertilizers will assist you in increasing the yield of your crops and start you in soil improvement. Fertilizers should supplement barnyard manure and not take its place. Study the value of fertilizers before you use them.

Green Manuring Essential.
Green manuring is necessary if you build up your soil economically. With out a sufficient quantity of vegetable matter in the soil it will not produce good crops no matter how much commercial fertilizer you use. For good crops the soil must be in a good physical condition.

Protecting the Young Trees.
Don't let the young orchard trees go into winter without protection. Anything that shades the bark will protect from sun scald, but a covering that gives the trees immunity from both sun scald and gnawing from rodents is better.

Plant Soy Beans.
Soy beans are remarkable plants to withstand drought. Some have produced a large crop, although drought came in a most critical time in their development. Soy beans should be more extensively planted.

His Experience.
Fockem, who had loved and won. Once let this sentence fall: "It's better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all."

Rubbing It In.
English—Yes, several years ago I fell in love with a girl, but she wouldn't marry me, because I was a regular fool of me. Miss Knox—Now, that what I call a really shame. I've often wondered how it happened.

Not Sorry For Blunder.

"If my friends hadn't blundered in thinking I was a doomed victim of consumption, I might not be alive now," writes D. T. Sanders, of Harrodsburg, Ky., but for years they saw every attempt to cure a lung racking cough fail. At last I tried Dr. King's New Discovery. The effect was wonderful. It soon stopped the cough and I am now in better health than I have had for years. This wonderful life saver is an unrivaled remedy for coughs, colds, la grippe, asthma, croup or weak lungs. 50c and $1.00 Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

As its name implies (two-for-one), is very different from other paints, in that it is so made that you only require ONE-HALF as much as though you bought a paint ready mixed. For instance, should you require, say, thirty gallons of high-grade ready-mixed paint at $1.75 to paint your property, you would have to buy only 15 gallons of 2-4-1 at same price, and 15 gallons of Pure Linseed Oil at 70 cents—a clear saving to YOU of $15.00 on your paint bill. If Linseed is cheaper—you save MORE.

TRYING TO FOOL

The Working Man, Says "Truth" Of The Wicomico Republicans.

Messrs. Editors:—The Republican organization of Wicomico County, in an effort to try to fool the farmers and endeavor to show them that the present high prices are to their advantage, issued two thousand circular letters to the farmers of Wicomico County, signed by the Hon. William H. Jackson. A great many of these letters were sent to the Democratic farmers of the County and fell on deaf ears. There was no argument and nothing to convince the farmers. So the letter fell flat.

As was expected, some of these letters fell into the hands of the working men in Salisbury, and they at once took notice that it, as the circular letter said, the present high cost of living was so advantageous to the farmer, then the working man in the mills of this city were getting a raw deal. To counteract this bad effect on the vote of the working people, the Republicans started the argument that the present high price of living in this city was caused by THE LOCAL MARKET. That the butcher really bought his meat low enough, but that the extra prices were put on after the meat was received here.

This argument is also falling flat. The working people of Salisbury are too intelligent to swallow this kind of talk. They have their eyes open to the fact that the present high prices are caused by the Republican Tariff Laws and that while the cost of living is soaring every day, their wages remain just about the same as they were five years ago when the cost of living was at least fifty per cent cheaper than it is today.

The Republicans are catching it on all sides. They are reaping the results of fooling the people in breaking their platform promises when Taff was elected. They promised to come to the relief of the working people of this country by reducing the Tariff on food stuffs and they also promised the farmer to come to his relief by reducing the Tariff on farming implements, clothing, and a hundred other things which enter into his daily living and which he is forced to buy at prices ranging from forty to seventy five per cent higher than he should pay. The Republicans broke their promises to both the working man and the farmer. They are now before the bar of Justice and are being indicted for their trickery. The verdict will be given next Tuesday in almost every State of the Union and here in Maryland the verdict will, in all probability, be a clean sweep for the Democratic party. Lincoln was right when he said "You cannot fool all the people all the time." "TRUTH," Salisbury, Md., November 4th, 1901.

CUPID and CANINE VERSUS COUNT

By VANCE C. CRISS

"I certainly am in a devil of a fix," remarked James Easley, better known as Jimmy, lounging in an easy chair in his bachelor apartments and addressing a bulldog for want of a better confidant. "Think of a lover here in the twentieth century, anxious to wed the girl of his choice yet unable even to see her because an obdurate father has the dutiful daughter securely guarded in a country house. And what is worse, the announcement has been made of her engagement to some foreign fellow whose father happens to have had a title. Bess doesn't want to marry Count Bolenski and I don't blame her, but just how to prevent the match and assume the role of bridegroom myself, an arrangement mutually agreeable, is more than I can figure out just now."

Whopper, this being the name to which the canine answered, barked sympathetically and squirmed himself as if to show what he would do to the count if given an opportunity. Something in the pose of the dog suggested an idea to Easley. True, the thought was only in an embryonic state but there was possibility of elaboration.

"I'll do it, Whopper, and you will have a chance to play the star part," announced Jimmy as he knocked the ashes from his pipe and prepared to leave the room.

Madge Whitworth and he always had been friends and it was to her he hurried that he might enlist her aid in perfecting and carrying out his scheme. From the time that the two were playmates in childhood they had looked to each other for assistance in tight places, and it was natural that he should go to her now for counsel in solving the most vital problem he had ever faced.

Intuitively, it seemed, the woman felt that something out of the ordinary had brought Easley to her house so early in the day, for it was hardly nine o'clock. Without waiting to complete her toilet she hurried into the reception room. She understood the situation and knew, with the wedding of Bess Armond to Count Bolenski set for no distant date, there was need of immediate action. Just what was to be done she did not know, but she would do her part, whatever it might be, and gladly, too.

For nearly an hour they sat on the big window seat and discussed Jimmy's scheme. Whatever the plan was, both young persons certainly regarded it as excellent, for frequently the silvery laugh of the girl and the bass of the man rang out together, fully attesting their confidence of ultimate success. And the interview had been so encouraging to Easley that he was smiling the old smile that had made him famous in college, when he left the house. Apparently the weight of recent worry was lifted from his mind.

Immediately after his departure Madge hurried to the telephone and called for the country home of Jonas Armond. Her request that she be permitted to speak with Miss Armond, who in truth was allowed little more liberty than the inmate of a jail, at first met with a flat refusal; but perseverance had its reward and finally the fair prisoner's "hello" sounded over the wire. Madge cautioned Bess to say nothing that would indicate what was being told her, but to listen and remember. They talked for several minutes. Smiling at the surprise her message must have caused the girl at the other end of the line Madge finally hung up the receiver without waiting for a reply. Then started to her room.

"It will be hard on the count," was her spoken thought. "But Jimmy does better that girl, and she loves him."

The following afternoon precisely at three o'clock a closed carriage was driven up the avenue of tall maples which led from the public road to the imposing home in the very center of Shady Grove, the Armonds' country estate. No sooner had the vehicle stopped than a woman, closely veiled, alighted and walked briskly up the broad steps as if bent on business of the utmost importance. Speaking rapidly to the butler who appeared at the door in response to her ring, she was shown into the hallway and, a moment later, a maid reported to Miss Armond that the modiste for whom she had sent, desired to see her. Laughingly bawling the fact that she was constantly at the mercy of those who designed her clothes, the young woman instructed the maid to bring the caller to her room immediately.

"Madge,"

"Bess."

The words, the embrace, and the resounding kiss that followed the departure of the servant, left no doubt but that the dictator of fashions was most welcome. For several minutes the two girls talked excitedly, but at last in low tones, Bess ever watchful lest someone enter the room or attempt to spy upon them. When the conversation closed, Miss Armond was informed concerning the plans for frustrating her wedding to the foreign nobleman and for consummating a marriage much more to her liking, as the blushing girl's cheeks told all too plainly. As Madge rose to go, the imprisoned girl threw both arms about her visitor's neck and was about to cry from excess of joy when the door swung open suddenly and Jonas Armond walked in.

"Yes, I think the change you suggest in the waist will be all right," began the daughter, but she could not conceal her happiness. She spoke in a most matter of fact tone and with an air of finality that indicated that the interview was at an end. With a bow to the father and a nod of approval to the young lady, the stranger left the room.

"Bess," exclaimed the parent, "I have come once more to ask you to cease your foolishness. This marriage is the end of your mother's and my ambitions and you should desire nothing better. Your love for that young scapegrace Easley was only a childish affair and there is absolutely no sense in snivelling around here as if you were getting ready for a funeral instead of preparing for your wedding to a highly-respected nobleman. Brace up and smile. Later in life you will laugh when you remember how silly you acted."

"I will do as you wish, father," replied the girl, and surprise was written in every line of Jonas Armond's face, for this declaration, were it as final as the words implied, meant the lifting of a fearful load from his mind. Knowing well the disposition of his daughter he had been constantly uneasy for fear she would attempt to escape and marry Easley in spite of the precautions he had taken; and even now he was not entirely convinced of her sincerity.

"Do you mean what you say?" he asked, and his blue eyes looked searchingly at her.

"Is this a time for joking?" she counter-questioned, and her gaze was as straightforward as her father's.

From that moment Bess was a very different person. She went about smiling instead of sighing, laughing instead of crying, and manifesting every interest in the plans for her marriage to Count Bolenski. So complete was the transformation that she playfully teased her father about how she would scorn him, a mere American, after she had become a member of the nobility. If ever a girl was happy, Bess surely seemed to be, for every trace of her former melancholia had disappeared.

"Don't you suppose, Jonas," suggested Mrs. Armond, who understood her daughter better than did the father, "that Bess is planning something?"

"Of course not," rejoined the head of the family, a little indignant perhaps at the implied want of confidence in his judgment. "Like the sensible girl she is, she has seen what is proper and already has begun to regret her former conduct."

Preparations for the wedding went on apace, for it was now Wednesday and the ceremony was to be performed on Saturday morning in the little chapel near the estate. Though both parents had opposed having the marriage in the secluded church they were forced to yield to the wishes of their daughter, who threatened, if refused this one request, to create a scene by rejecting her titled suitor at the altar.

The nuptial morn dawned bright and clear. The sun beamed down on the fragrant flowers just opening their multi-colored petals to catch his quickening rays, while everywhere the birds caroled forth glad lays as if their music were intended to be a festive march to bid the bride Godspeed upon her way.

It was almost the appointed hour to start for the quiet chapel, when Jonas Armond and his wife stood for a moment on the spacious veranda, quaffing delightful drafts from spring's overflowing cup of joy as they awaited their daughter, who was to leave them on this day. Bidden by a common impulse, each looked questioningly into the eyes of the other. Perhaps, after all, it would have been better to have sacrificed their own ambitions and to have allowed their daughter to have her way, was the unspoken but mutually recognized thought of each. Both remembered the time, years ago, when they had opposed the wishes of parents and started their life together. Smiling at the reminiscence, they turned to face their only child. She greeted them cheerfully and in her evident delight the fear that perhaps she would be unhappy was forgotten.

It was only a short journey and the bridal party arrived in ample time at the quaint old chapel which nestled in a grove of ancient elms. Already nearly all of the invited guests had assembled, though, strange to say, the groom had not appeared. This attracted no attention at first, but as the belated guest came in and still the husband-to-be failed to present himself, questioning glances began to be cast about the room. At last everyone was there save Count Bolenski and his continued absence became the theme of numerous animated conversations carried on in whispers that were none too low.

But the wonderment of the guests was a trifle compared to that of Jonas Armond, who was both amazed and vexed at the delay occasioned by his chosen son-in-law. Rapidly his excitement increased until his measured pacing back and forth between the chapel and the road became apparently a race against time.

The conduct of the bride, however, was singularly out of keeping with the situation. She remained calm and seemed unaffected even by the almost pitting glances cast in her direction through the longnettes of fashionably gowned women.

But luckily the suspense was to continue little longer, for Jonas Armond, upon glancing down the road for perhaps the fiftieth time, saw an automobile and heaved a sigh of relief. Surely it could be no other than the groom, and the old man knew by the speed the machine was making that the driver was anxious to get to his destination.

Retracing his steps even more rapidly than during his previous performance, the highly agitated father rushed into the chapel and bade his daughter make her final preparations. Then he hastened again to the roadside that he might greet properly the distinguished man who was to become a member of his family.

By this time the car was almost upon him, when suddenly it seemed as if all bedlam had broken loose. The peaceful silence of the countryside was broken by the crack of revolvers, the "honk honk" of the motor horns and the discordant shouts of hilarious men. Alarmed by the noise, the guests hurried from the church and added their high pitched exclamations of surprise to the general confusion. The bride and even the wedding were forgotten in the excitement of the moment and as the flying auto came to an abrupt stop every one crowded toward the throbbing machine.

Without warning, a grotesque figure was tossed from the car and everyone turned his attention to the strangely clad being. The man, for such it seemed to be, was followed by a bulldog that instinctively seized the stranger's trousers by the most convenient part and hung on with a tenacious grip. Wild howls of fear issued from the lips of the terrified newcomers, who danced madly about, too frightened to remain quiet enough to permit of anyone's coming to his relief.

"Safe me, hellup me," shrieked the creature, and with coatails flying out over the determined dog he made a rush for Jonas Armond. Then the guests recognized him. It was Count Bolenski.

Immediately a light dawned on the father and he looked about for his daughter. He was just in time to see her in the automobile waving a fond farewell as she passed from view around a distant corner. Angriely, the irate parent denounced his child and her fellow conspirators, while the count, having been freed from the stubborn canine, called down maledictions upon them all. But it was of no use! Bess was gone and there would be no marriage to a titled foreigner. The guests, betraying a lively interest in the whole affair, started homeward, and Armond and his wife, after bidding the count take care of himself, began their return to the country estate.

Just as they were turning into the shady avenue Jonas Armond espied for the second time that day, an approaching auto and halted the team he was driving. He did not have long to wait. The big motor stopped near him and in it were his daughter, four men and another young woman whom he recognized as the "modiste" of four days before. Turning to him, the glow of a great happiness upon her face, Bess spoke:

"Let me introduce my husband, Mr. James Easley. We were married in the automobile on the way here."

Father and mother looked at each other in amazement. Again each recalled, but did not mention, the time they had scorned the wishes of parents, and smiled.

"Well, I'll be—d!" ejaculated Armond, then smiling, he concluded:

For the Heavens Only.

A collection was being taken up in a Scotch church one Sunday on behalf of the heathen. The minister made a stirring appeal, and the warren started around with the box. One of the first members of the congregation to whom he offered it, says a writer in the Church Family Newspaper, was evidently ill-disposed to the cause.

In a stage whisper, heard alike by congregation and pastor, this man said in blank vernacular:

"Tak it awn', lad. I'm not going to give owt."

At that period the collection boxes were taken direct into the vestry. Down came the preacher from the pulpit, went into the vestry, brought out one of the boxes, and marched straight toward the gentleman, all the congregation imagining that the minister was going to shame the unbeliever into giving something.

The clergyman offered the box to the heretic with the naive remark:

An Acute Sense of Taste.

William and Lawrence were in the habit of saving a part of their dessert from the evening dinner for consumption the next morning, and in accordance with this custom two small cakes had been placed in the cracker-jar for them. William, being the first up on the following morning and being hungry, went to the jar. He found only one cake, and a large piece bitten out of that. Full of wrath, he went upstairs and roused his brother.

"Say!" he demanded, "I want to know who took that big bite out of my cake!"

"I did," sleepily answered Lawrence.

"What'd you do that for?"

"Well, when I tasted it I found it was just cake, and so I ate the other one."—Youth's Companion.

Modesty.

"So you put some of that famous poet's lines into your play verbatim?" said the manager.

"Yes," answered the playwright.

"Don't you think that showed a great deal of nerve?"

"Not at all. It was modesty. After reading the famous poet's lines I really did not feel competent to improve on them."

A Man Built
Of Sentiment

"Oh, Joe," said Jeannette to her brother, "what do you think I received by express today?"

"A glass bottle picked up on the coast near Atlantic City containing a message."

"His name? Shipwreck? Vessel sinking? We are all lost?"

"None of that. I've had a lover I didn't know of. Read it." And she handed him a bit of paper on which were scrawled her full name and address—and—

In a few minutes this vessel will carry us all to a watery grave. I wish you to know that there has been one who has unknown to you, loved you devotedly.
But he will die as he has lived without revealing himself to you. Farewell.

"Well," said Joe after reading the message, "do you suppose it's genuine?"

"Something tells me it is."

"What?"

"I feel—somehow it seems to me that had this man wooed me we would have—"

"Would have?"

"What a noble, good man he must have been to love me at a distance!"

"Noble, good man, eh? To love you at a distance! Will you kindly explain?"

"Why, there must have been some reason why he couldn't declare himself. His great heart bore the load without permitting me to share it."

"Then why didn't he keep on bearing it without mixing you up in this way?"

"He knew a woman's nature. I wish you knew it as well. A woman receives her greatest compliment in the love of a good man."

"You mean a noble, good man. Don't leave out the noble."

"This man must have been a noble, good, self-sacrificing man."

"Where does the self-sacrifice come in?"

"Why, if he had told me of his love
I would have loved him. We couldn't marry and—"

"How do you know you couldn't?"

"Why, what other reason would there be for his not?"

"Lots of 'em. The chances are he was beneath you, probably some cab driver who once drove you somewhere or—"

"Joseph!"

"More likely a common sailor, with his arms and breast tattooed with anchor."

"You are simply showing your envy of one who was doubtless your superior."

"At any rate, I'd have more sense than to keep my love a secret till a few minutes before I was to be launched for kingdom come."

"You haven't that nobility of soul to understand this man's nature. He would not speak till what he said would not make me suffer till it would be only sweet for a woman to hear."

"Nobility of soul, eh? I haven't nobility of soul. And this man, how do you know he had a soul at all? How do you know he isn't a myth? Somebody may have been playing a joke on you."

"One who would play such a joke would have as little soul as the myth he created."

Joseph looked sorely troubled.

"It seems to me," he said presently,
"that a rival has sprung up—a blood-less, spiritual, heavenly, noble, good, unselfish—"

"Heretic. Any more?"

"Why do you sneer at him?"

"I'm not sneering at him. He's simply a manufactured man, one who has been built up out of pure sentiment, with sentimental aims, legs, head, hands."

"Who created him? Not I! I never heard of him till I received his only and last message."

"At any rate, he has replaced me. I'm going to say farewell. I'm going to give way to your ideal hero."

"You should strive to be like him."

"Like him? Do you suppose I'd wish to be like a man of those paper, with nothing inside of him but gas? He isn't even gas. He's a vacuum."

"There's no substance in the angels."

"There are different kinds of angels."

"I do believe you hate him."

"I hate him! I'm perfectly indifferent to him, confound him!"

The girl burst into a merry laugh.
She laughed for five minutes, holding her sides, then tried to say something, but she was interrupted by another involuntary peep of laughter. Finally she controlled herself sufficiently to say:

"Joe, this is—"

"It's certainly no laughing matter."

"Yes, it is, stupid!"

"Stupid! It's well that a stupid man should give way to a little tin god."

"Joe, the next time you send me a message from the dead do have sense enough to write it on paper that I won't recognize as your own."

The expression of mingled fierceness and misery on Joe's face gradually faded away and gave place to one of humane tenderness and relief.

"Did you recognize the paper?" he asked.

"How could I, help it since I've a ton of it upstairs?"

"And the writing?"

"Scarcely at all distinguished. I knew it in a minute. How came you to do such a thing?"

"Well, Charlie Baker said that a girl would fall in love with a man made out of sentiment quicker than with one of flesh and blood. I thought I'd try it on you. I won't try it again. You pretty nearly scared me to death."

The new materials that are being shown are for the most part decidedly better, though quite as soft and pliant as they were last year. Among them, however, in spite of the promises given to heavy elastic, silk, velvet and cashmere of all weights

DIDN'T LIKE COURSE DINNERS.

A colored woman, native of the south, had been working for a flat dwelling family of moderate means in the East end, but resigned recently to accept a place bringing higher wages with a wealthy family who lived in a large house on Euclid heights and have their dinner served in courses every night just as if there was company.

This colored woman had been brought up to put everything on the table at once, with the exception possibly of the dessert, and did not take kindly to the course system.

A few days ago her former mistress met her on the street and inquired how she liked her new place.

"Oh, not very well," she replied. "I don't like this hyah way of 'savin' things in courses. The's too much shittin' o' the dishes fo' the fewness o' the vittles."

She Was Encouraged.

"Was your story accepted?" asked the bosom friend.

"No," answered the struggling author, who has hopes of selling something before she dies, "but I think the's made an impression on the editor."

"Oh, how lovely!" cried the bosom friend. "Do tell me why you think he was impressed."

A tender smile flitted across the face of the discouraged author. "I noticed that the pages containing the account of my hero's death were spotted with what looked like teardrops," she replied.

Unsatisfactory.

"Arabella," said the anxious mother,
"what in the world did you and Mr.
Derox find to talk about last night?"

It was buzz, buzz, the entire evening.

"Oh, we were talking about trusts and combines, mamma," replied Arabella, merrily, "but the conversation was not at all satisfactory to me."

"Why not?" queried the mother.

"Because," explained Arabella, "he talked about all the combines he could think of except the matrimonial combine."

Patient Explanation.

"Something wrong with my right foot," said the man at the hotel counter. "Could you direct me to a good carpenter?"

"Excuse me," said the clerk, with a sly glance of amusement at the lady bookkeeper, "but of course you mean a chiropodist."

"No. I'm going to be patient with you, young man, and tell you I want a good carpenter. My right leg is a wooden one."

WANTED TO SCATTER HER STAKES.

The Summer Girl.

She cut quite a figure on the ice
last winter, so they say.

And now she cuts one on the beach in her bathing suit each day.

Not Encouraging.

The lady tourist (timidly)—Are all your passengers seasick during the voyage, captain?

The Captain (tolerantly)—There are exceptions.

The Lady (brightening)—Many exceptions, captain?

The Captain (turning away)—I ain't seen any for several voyages.

Made a Difference.

Little Willie—What is logic, Pa?

Pa—Logic, my son, is your line of argument in a controversy.

Little Willie—And what is sophis-try?

Pa—The other fellow's.

Valued Results.

"Was your garden a success last year?"

"In some respects," replied Mr.
Crossland. "I got some of the best fishing worms out of it that I ever saw."

Not an Attractive Deal.

Diggs—I see that the Chinese want to borrow a billion dollars.

Wiggs—Say, I'd hate to lend it to em, then have to take it out in sundry work!

So little time to see

THANKSGIVING NOV. 24.

President Issues A Proclamation. This Country's Home Day.

The day most respected by our people and celebrated all over the country as the time when families, separated during the year make an effort to gather around the dear old home fireside, has been fixed this year for Thursday, November 24th. And now that the fathers and brothers have had their good time settling the affairs of the nation by their votes, the mothers and sisters will take their turn and begin to prepare the good things to make the home coming of the distant loved ones a feast indeed. President Taft before going home to vote issued the formal proclamation which is as follows:

"This year of 1910 is drawing to a close. The records of population and harvest, which are the index of progress, show vigorous national growth and the health and prosperity well being of our communities throughout this land and in our possessions beyond the seas. These blessings have not descended upon us in restricted measure, but overflow and abound. They are the blessings and bounty of God.

"We continue to be at peace with the rest of the world. In all essential matters our relations with other people are harmonious with an ever growing reality of friendliness and depth of recognition of mutual dependence. It is especially to be noted that during the past year great progress has been achieved in the cause of arbitration and the peaceful settlement of international disputes.

"Now, therefore, I, William Howard Taft, President of the United States of America, in accordance with the wise customs of the civil magistracies since the first settlements in this land and with this rule established from the foundation of this Government, do appoint Thursday, November 24, 1910 as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer, enjoining the people upon that day to meet in their churches for the praises of Almighty God and to return heartfelt thanks to Him for all His goodness and loving kindness."

The document is dated November 5.

WICOMICO IS ALL RIGHT

Increased Democratic Majority. Most Districts Show Gains.

Although it was known that there was little or no dissatisfaction in this county, either with the candidate nominated for Congress or with the party there was considerable question as to how the vote would come out owing to the fact that there is usually but little interest taken in a Congressional election. The fears of some of the party leaders however proved to be groundless and the voters came out in a number to surprise even those who had been familiar with the situation at all points of the campaign. There were a total of 5211 votes cast this year, and when it is remembered that this is within a few votes of being as large as was cast in this county two years ago, a presidential year, this is a remarkable showing. The Democrats, who are responsible for arousing the voters to the necessity of coming out and registering their votes, are to be congratulated upon this showing.

In almost every District of the County can be found Democratic gains with the exception of Trappe, and old Parsons leads this gain by rolling up a majority of 262 for Covington. Camden, too, did well, giving a majority of 140 as against 75 two years ago.

The official vote of the county follows:—

GREAT DEMOCRATIC VICTORY

Party Sweeps Nation. President Taft Loses Own State.

For the first time since 1892, the Democrats have a chance to rejoice over a nation wide victory. Many are the reasons given for the great change in public sentiment as shown by the election on Tuesday and that shown two years ago when Taft was triumphantly elected as the head of the nation. Part of this has been attributed to the increased cost of living brought about as the Democrats charge by the high and unreasonable tariff law enacted by the Republicans last winter. Also it is said that it is due to a quickened public conscience which is tired of being betrayed to the interests by those who were supposed to be working in the interest of the people at large, but who really represented the special interests in their every public act—whether this last is true or not it is an undeniable fact, that the men, who for years have been most active in their support of these corporations have been repudiated by the voters this year.

Some attribute the Democratic victory to the fact that the Republicans are divided among themselves and that the fight among leaders in their own party gave the Democrats the chance to come in on the tidal wave which swept the country. In New York state and everywhere among the enemies of Colonel Roosevelt, the Democratic victory is put down to his participation in politics. Fought by the large and influential papers of New York City, betrayed by the leaders whom he had defeated in his convention fight in New York, and failing to get Democratic support to offset the defections in his own party he went down to defeat in the old empire state, for although not a candidate himself he was made the issue in that state and the defeat of Stimson as governor is looked upon as a repudiation of Col. Roosevelt and his policies.

However it looks like all of the Republican leaders were repudiated everywhere, this election and the observers failed to see where Col. Roosevelt should be singled as the only one of his party that was repudiated at the election on Tuesday.

Taft met the same fate in his home state, where Judson Harmon, the Democratic candidate for Governor, swept the state with more than 50,000 majority carrying with him the legislature and state offices.

In New Jersey, perhaps was won one of the most remarkable and noted victories of the year. Here with a strong man opposed, President Woodrow Wilson carried the state by close to 50,000 majority. This victory is largely looked upon as a personal one for Mr. Wilson as his way of making a campaign together with his strong personality and the belief of the people in his honesty and sincerity, contributed mainly to his success. His victory has made him loom up as one of the strongest men in the party, and many of his followers may be expected to start a boom for him for the next candidate of his party for President.

The Democrats will control the next Congress by about 50 majority and will have 41 Senators to the Republicans 51 in the Senate. As several of the Republican senators are known as progressives it is quite possible that in all matters of progressive legislation they will stand with the Democrats.

FIRST DISTRICT DEMOcratic. Covington Gets Big Majority. Size Of Vote Great Surprise.

Although the few days before election, but few could be found who believed that the First District would give a big majority this year for Mr. Covington, yet election day brought out the voters all over the Eastern Shore by the thousands who had made up their minds to put back in Congress the man whose record had been so good as to justify another term. As the returns commenced to come in, it was seen that most estimates on the majorities were entirely too low and it began to look, for a while, like he would equal his great victory of two years ago, and with the same easy ticket in the field, he would doubtless have done as well, if not better.

While there has never been any question as to Mr. Covington's election, the conservative estimates did not give him more than from 1000 to 1500 majority, while his actual plurality exceeds the 2000 mark. Worcester County leads the counties in the District, giving nearly 800, while old Wicomico comes next with 537. Somerset, which was claimed by Dryden by 1000, gives him less than 300, and Dorchester expected to roll up from 500 to 800 for the Republican candidates, gives Covington close to 100.

The unofficial vote in the First District is as follows.

Counties.	Covington, D.	Dryden, R.
Caroline	219	...
Ocell	296	...
Dorchester	5	...
Kent	189	...
Queen Anne's	407	...
Somerset	291	...
Talbot	159	...
Wicomico	537	...
Worcester	778	...

Covington's plurality, 2317. In addition to carrying the First District the Democrats have carried five of the six Congressional Districts in the State, and in the fifth the old Republican stronghold of Sidney Mudd lost by less than 600.

Probably the greatest Democratic victory in the State was the victory of Mr. Lewis in the sixth. This is one of the strongest Republican sections of the State and has not gone Democratic since 1892 and it was looked upon as a forlorn hope, but the big majority of Pearce was overturned and Lewis beat his Republican opponent, Mr. Warner, by nearly 800 votes.

The Democrats in the state are, of course much elated over their great victory and look upon it as a forerunner of what is to come in the State next fall and in the nation during the presidential fight in 1912.

POWELLVILLE SPEAKEASY

Raided. Arrests Made At Pistol's Point. Much Whiskey Confiscated.

It has been rumored for some time that a speak easy was being run in Powellville by Benjamin Davis. An arrest was made of this party last year but owing to a lack of evidence he was dismissed. Instead, however of making him more careful and respect the law, the case of his escape from punishment seems from all accounts to have made him bolder and it is alleged that he has been dispensing liquor with a free hand.

A telephone message was received from Powellville Sunday night by the police officials that a drunken crowd had gathered and a riot was imminent. Deputy Sheriff Smith and Constable J. Frank Waller left immediately for the village driving 14 miles and say they found Benjamin Davis, a resident of that section, dispensing whiskey from a sugar barrel. Prior to their arrival Davis and others according to report were on guard over the barrel with shotguns and declared that it meant death to the first man who interfered with their traffic.

The officers drew their revolvers and made Davis put down his shotgun, also taking from him a revolver. All the others present disclaimed ownership of the barrel.

The officers arrested Davis and took him to the Snow Hill Jail. He is also wanted at Ocean City on the charge of selling liquor there last year.

GOWNS FOR WINTER.

Smart Effects in Velvet and Satin.

Fur Trimmings With Lace and Chiffon a Marked Feature—White Gowns Again Come Into Fashion.

This season special attention is paid to the reception gowns and to the theater and restaurant gowns, and already there are exhibited many different models, which almost without exception are extremely attractive.

One of the marked features of this gown is the fur and velvet trimming used with lace and chiffon. There is something delightfully incongruous about fur and lace that is always attractive. White gowns have not been too popular of late, but suddenly they have been restored to favor, and now, trimmed with fur, preferably sable or ermine, are destined to receive universal approval. White lace combined with chiffon or net and trimmed with bands of ermine is smart and effective, while voile de sole embroidered with silk and also with bands of ermine is most becoming.

The fashion for short skirts continues. Even the most expensive materials are made in this style, but the fashion will last is not to be too strongly relied upon. Dressmakers have reached a marvelous proficiency in their art when they can turn out short skirted gowns made on such becoming lines as are to be seen today, but the smartest short skirt ever made looks the grace and charm of one that has a train, even though it be merely a short one.

The velvet gowns this winter are to be extremely smart and original. The smartest are remarkably simple in design, rather on the order of those worn for the last few seasons by very young girls. The skirt is short enough to clear the ground, gathered into the waistband and with a broad band around the lower part of the skirt. The waist with some little fullness is joined to the skirt under a cord or piping of velvet. A silk or satin belt with long ends and a wide lace collar and cuffs complete the only trimming. Fascinating are the new colors in velvet, in blue, purple, dark brown, green and red, and not only in chiffon velvet, but in the best qualities of velveteen and corduroy. That a velvet gown should be included in the winter outfit is quite evident. From an economical standpoint there is nothing more practical, for the gown in itself is appropriate for reception or theater and with coat to match is the smartest of street costumes.

Draped effects are easily obtained with these soft finish cloths, and an endless variety is to be noticed in the different models. It is a mistake to attempt the too classical draperies. They are not practical and in fact are not becoming to the average woman and are most difficult to attain. To begin with, there must be a perfect fitting lining, and the lining must be boned most carefully. Over this the material is to be draped, but the lines must follow and indicate distinctly the lines of the wearer of the gown. There is a model displayed where the folds of drapery hang loose from the shoulders, and the waist line is completely hidden under a tunic effect.

The band around the bottom of the skirt is in fashion for awhile, but its width is dependent entirely upon what is becoming to each individual. It may be so wide as to half cover the skirt, or it may be so narrow as to look almost like a turned over hem. This is not to recommend the extravagantly tied in skirt, which could never be made becoming, only to indicate how the fashion can be carried out in such a modified degree as to insure its popularity for a time and to mark a contrast to the plain straight skirt of last winter.

A BUTTERCUP D.

Mercedized Cotton Best for a Cover or Other Parts of Under wear to Work It Upon.

Here is a wonderfully practical model in buttercups for a corset cover design.

You will get most satisfactory results if your work be a combination of solid stitch and outline. The turned up petals of the flowers should be worked solid; also the tiny leaves at the base of each form. Outline the other petals, and the seeds in the center work in French knots. The large flowers with no turned edges may be worked with long and short stitches at the outer line of each petal, the knots giving sufficient work for the center.

When you make the buds, follow the same idea, working the small holder in solid stitch and outlining the round bud.

French knots for the sprays of fine grass and stem stitch for the delicate connecting lines are quick and effective finishing touches for the design. The narrow leaves are best in solid stitch.

Your scallops will be buttonholed in the usual way, and just for variety place a little dot in each scallop, which you will work solid. The eyelets are conveniently placed both from a working and wearing standpoint. The preliminary overcasting, followed by buttonhole stitch, will be necessary.

Soft white mercedized cotton is recommended. Keep this entirely white, although beautiful underwear with just a suggestion of the maker's favorite color introduced in tiny knots or dots is frequently seen.

This design for a corset cover is adaptable to a combination garment or a chemise.

For a ruffle for drawers or for the popular combination there can be made a repetition of scallops and one spray of the design. Repeat as often as you wish.

These flowers of the field will have your approval when the work is finished.

To Hold Flowers.

To wear a cluster of flowers or a single blossom on a tailor made coat, sew a little loop of heavy braid underneath the collar lapel, with the ends sewed together at the outer edge just under the buttonhole. In this way flowers can be attached without sticking a pin into delicate cloth just where it will show most. It is a plan adopted by men also for their boutonnieres, and a very useful one.

Drinking water with meals will increase the flesh. It is necessary, however, that a certain quantity be taken into the system between the meals.

To believe that you are growing older and older every year and to positively expect to look older and older every year is to produce old age conditions in the system.

The plan of three meals has been found to be an excellent arrangement of daily diet for the average person.
Yet a great many people have found two meals a day the best method for keeping the body well fed.

One thing should not be lost sight of—one may live long and not live well.
People who do not lead natural lives, while they may live long in years, are not living at their best, are not thoroughly efficient, nor do they by any means extract from life all the enjoyment that is possible.

THE LOST LETTER

By LAWRENCE ALFRED CLAY

It is of no consequence what the misunderstanding was about. The lives of young people are full of misunderstandings, and the more they are in love the thicker the misunderstandings come along. Cupid sends them as tests. Where two people in love can't patch up a misunderstanding and go ahead and be happier than before they shouldn't marry.

It was a little awkward in this case that Miss Nina Farrand, schoolteacher, was going on her summer vacation the next morning, and so Mr.
James Clingham of the insurance company wouldn't have an opportunity to drop in next evening and bring the dove of peace under his arm. Miss Nina had said to herself that she wouldn't write a line while she was gone, and he had as good as said that his time would be fully occupied without writing private letters.

When Miss Nina reached her aunt's in the country she found it was five miles from the nearest post office.
She had given Mr. Clingham the address before the spat. On the way up there she hoped the distance would be 20 miles, for she was cross yet, but when told it was only five miles her heart was like lead. Five miles to the post office, and sometimes the family did not send or go for a whole fortnight. Five dusty miles, and most of the way uphill, and she and Mr.
Clingham had at each other!

If there had been a post office within ten rods she would have tossed her head and braved it out, but five miles!
She wanted to weep. She wanted to write a long letter the day she arrived, if only there had been a telephone—but there wasn't!

Miss Nina waited five long days and then she wrote. She had a heart, and she wanted to spread it with the ink, but it wouldn't do. Mr. Clingham must be taught a lesson. She mentioned that she had arrived, that she had found her aunt about as usual, that there were hollyhocks in the garden, that it was dry weather and that a goose had chased her.

Mr. Jones and his old horse and wagon came jogging along on time, and when the letter had departed the schoolma'am felt relieved. Indeed, she almost felt sure that the farmer would bring her one in return. Mr.
Clingham might simply write that it was his busy day—and the city was dusty—and the comet didn't amount to shucks—and he was going to the ball game, and sign it: "Your very obedient servant," but it would be a comfort. She went half a mile up the road to meet Farmer Jones on his return. She pretended she was looking for scenery.

"Got you a letter, by golly!" he shouted at her from a point 20 rods off.
"Yes, got you a letter, and it's postmarked in the city. Bet it's from your fellow. Whoa, Eph! Here's the epistle."

He started to draw it from the pocket of his old lined duster, while the heart of the young lady started up a-tinking, but it wasn't there. He searched other pockets. He looked into his hat. He hunted over the wagon. No letter.

"Jerusha, but I've lost it!" he finally admitted.

"Oh, Mr. Jones!"

"Now don't have a fit, young lady.
The harness busted on me about four miles back, and I got down to fix it.
I must have lost the letter then. It was right at the foot of a hill, and there was a cow looking over the fence. I'll start right out in the morning and look for it."

"But I'm so sorry!" wailed Miss Nina.

"So'm I, but don't have a fit. The letter will be right there in the morning."

In the morning when Mr. Jones came along, Miss Nina insisted on driving along with him. He was full of confidence that the letter would be found, and when he finally reached the foot of a particular hill he drew rein and said:

"Right here is where the harness busted, and right here is where I got down. We'll find that letter in a jiffy."

The fatal spot was reached at last.
There on a stone sat—not the lost letter, but Mr. Clingham himself! She was within twenty feet of him before she saw him. They were staring at each other in the most awkward way, when a rumbling in the distance was heard. From down the road came a cloud of dust, and in the midst of it could be made out Farmer Jones and his old rig. The old horse was on the run and the old wagon was creaking, and the farmer was shouting and holding a letter up to view. He drew nearer. He stopped. He flourished the letter once more, and shouted:

"Never lost the letter 'till I laid it in my pocket, and it got into the lining. Jest found it an hour ago, and came on the gallop!"

The letter was handed down, and he turned and headed for home. As he got along to Miss Nina's aunt she was at the gate to ask:

"Well, did you find her?"

"Yes."

"Was she tickled about the letter?"

"No, not very."

"But why?"

"Cause she'd found something else to be tickled about. I guess it was the fellow who wrote the very letter, and he was on his way out to explain something. Better get into the house and fix up a big dinner, for they'll be here within an hour, and they'll both be mighty hungry. Them young folks always are after they have kissed and made up."

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have tried with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nausea, fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

MOLINE "35"

Long Stroke Motor

Every day is adding new laurels to the splendid efficiency and lasting performance of the 1911 Moline Long Stroke Motor.

Enthusiastic reports are coming in from those who have received 1911 cars, substantiating the fact that the remarkable record made by the Moline in the recent Tour was an epoch-making triumph for the long stroke motor in this country. Those who have driven the 1911 Moline say it has no equal (regardless of price) in the long stroke class. This gratifying experience is naturally due to the many advantages not obtainable in a short stroke engine. Briefly these are:

- power development.
- flexibility.
- life, because of fewer motions of engine.
- Smooth, quieter operation.
- Economy in gasoline.
- Easier in control, especially in crowded thoroughfares.

Other advantages are fully explained in our 1911 Catalog. Easy to Buy—The most important thing you want in an automobile is DEPENDABILITY. What better proof of dependability can be asked than the record of the 1911 Moline in the recent Tour, the severest run ever made with an automobile? The next thing you want is STYLE. The grace and beauty of the car pictured here tells its own story. And then you want a modest PRICE. $1,600 for four-passenger Touring Type, $1,650 for five-passenger Touring Type. Point by point the 1911 Moline will stand comparison with cars costing from $600 to $1,000 more.

Several second-hand makes of cars for sale at reasonable prices. The "Excelsior Auto-Cycle," $225 to $310. Used machines (all makes), $50 up.

SHELTER FOR FARM ANIMALS

At the Same Time the Device Shown Prevents Them From Trampling on Hay, Straw or Corn.

The illustration shows an excellent manner of stacking the straw, hay or corn fodder that it may be fed from the yard. This method not only prevents the cattle from pulling it down and wasting it, but provides an excellent shelter for them from the weather. The uprights or posts are made of concrete and so have greater durability than if constructed of wood. These are easily molded by building a box form of the right height and about fifteen inches square on the inside if only four posts are to be used. The concrete is tamped inside, and when cured the frame may be erected upon them to form the foundation for the stack.

When desired the number of posts may be increased and their size decreased.

Provides Shelter and Prevents Waste.

creased. Thus, if six posts are used they will be simply strong if made twelve inches square; if eight posts are used they can be made ten inches square.

The advantage of this shelter is very apparent to every farmer, as it saves a large portion of the straw, etc., that would be wasted by the cattle trampling it into the yard. A man-hole can be built through the center of the stack and the straw thrown down through it in feeding, thus giving the cattle a sheltered place to feed away from snow and rain. If well made it is not the least unsightly.

FEED FOR DAIRY COWS.

Winter and Summer Dairying Can Be Made Equally Profitable by Variety of Good Rations.

Dairy cows must have a variety of succulent, easily digestible and nutritious feeds for giving a continuous and large flow of milk. The average cows give a good flow of milk in summer, when the pasture is fresh and green, but when winter comes and dry feeds are available they soon fall off in their milk. With the silage for winter feeding enough variety is furnished so that the cows maintain a large flow during all the year, making winter dairying as profitable as summer dairying, and hence the net profits for the entire year are good.

Some have the mistaken notion that with a silo and silage no other feed for the cows will be required. Silage is not intended to take the place of bran, oilmeal and other rich feeds, but to supplement them and furnish bulk with a wide ration. Silage must not be fed alone, but in connection with dry hay and concentrated feeds. Corn silage, bright clover or alfalfa hay, ground corn and wheat bran or oilmeal make a good ration for dairy cows in cold weather. This silage may also be kept in good preservation for supplementing dry pastures in summer or for supplementary feeding when the available pasture area is limited for a number of cows.

Cows Need Salt.

Cows require from one to eight ounces of salt a day. The more concentrates they are fed the more salt they require. It should be where they can have access to it every day. According to experiments made at the Wisconsin agricultural station, about two ounces a cow a day is the average amount required.

The cow's pedigree is all right if it tallies with the milk pail.

The first cold rains are hard on the cows, and they should be kept in the barn in such weather.

It requires grain as well as roughness to produce butter fat, and butter fat at present prices is what pays.

A liberal banking of sheds on the north side will prove a boon to the cows when the cold weather comes.

The richest color of the cream is when it first rises to the surface, and if churned in that condition the butter will be yellow.

Get rid of your deadhead cattle before the winter months set in. It does not pay to carry them over. Only the producers should be permitted to stay on the farm.

The cow's appetite is important, but it should not be abused. As much harm comes from allowing her to eat too much as comes from not allowing her to eat enough.

A heifer becomes a cow after she has her first calf and begins giving milk, no matter at what age, and she remains a heifer until these maternal obligations are assumed.

In dairying there are special breeds enough and reliable information enough, so there is no excuse for a man who goes it blind and blames luck and the weather for his failure.

Flouting the Hair.

To make the hair which goes over the pompadour fluffy, some girls resort to the device of rough combing it underneath, which means running the comb backward over the hair, and then sprinkling powder over it underneath where it does not show when the hair is done up. Combing and powdering in this manner undoubtedly has a drying effect which makes for fluffiness, but both are too disastrous to the hair to be indulged in, for the rough combing breaks it, while the powder badly clogs the pores.

THE RESCUE

Having slowly walked out on the porch, the young woman summer resort dropped into a chair without a word.

"You look sleepy," remarked the man in the hammock. The summer resort favored him with a glance of scorn. Then she leaned forward.

"Did you ever resuscitate a drowned bluejay?" she inquired.

The girl at the table who was writing a letter, and the man who was repairing a fishing rod dropped their work and stared at her. The man in the hammock gasped feebly.

"Huh!" he said impolitely and unbelievably.

"Sleepy!" went on the summer resort with emotion. "Who wouldn't be sleepy after getting up over and over again in the middle of the night while all the rest of you people were slumbering sweetly? I don't like arising in the early dawn when the little birds are singing and the fresh light sun is rising, and I doubt the veracity of any person who claims that he does. I think he is putting it all on, just like those abandoned prevaricators who say they love cold baths and adore Strauss' operas!"

"Just because it inconveniently went on the young woman summer resort, 'it is fatiguing to go prancing around at that hour and caroling things about the lovely morning sunshine! So you must make my bitter feelings when I awoke this morning with an awful start at exactly four o'clock!"

"Why didn't you stick your head under the pillow?" asked the girl at the table. "I always do when it gets light so early!"

"It wasn't the light," said the summer resort. "It was a noise. Something was slopping and splashing and hopping around out by the pump. Then I remembered the galvanised tub that stands there to catch the overflow water and I realised that a bird must have got in and couldn't get out. When I scrambled to the window I could see the tip of its wings whenever it dipped into the air. It was just awful! So I grabbed a kimono and slippers and flew!"

"Most appropriate method of locomotion," murmured the man with the fishing line, "inasmuch as it was a bird—"

"When I got there," pursued the summer resort ruthlessly, "it had stopped slopping. It was a perfectly gorgeous bluejay and it was standing on its tail on the bottom of the tub with its beak barely above water. I spilled it out and picked it up. It merely opened its mouth and gasped feebly and rolled its eyes. One more minute and it would have been dead. So I carried it in on this porch and laid it down and hadn't an earthly idea what to do. It seemed choking to death."

"You should have rolled it on a barrel," said the man in the hammock. "Artificial respiration would have been better," suggested the man mending the fishing line.

"You are both brutes!" said the summer resort indignantly. "I knew its poor little tummy and lungs were full of water and I did hold it upside down and shake it, but it only struggled. Then I pipped it against a sofa pillow on the floor in the sun and determined to leave it to its fate while I went back to bed. But I couldn't sleep a wink worrying about it, so every ten minutes or so I'd get up and sneak out to see what the bluejay was doing."

"The first time he had fallen over on his side and was feebly kicking with one foot. When I picked him up and set him straight again he let out a most pathetically feeble 'che-e-e!' So I petted him and said I was sorry and he seemed to appreciate it. At any rate, he didn't act any more afraid of me than he would if I had been his own mother."

"The next time I went out he had fallen over on his back and curled up his toes and I thought it was all over. But when I set him up straight he cheeped again and wobbled his head. He was so helpless and babyfied and so clearly didn't like the way his tummy and lungs felt that I almost wept over him."

"Well, this progressive first aid to the injured went on till six o'clock. If I straightened that bluejay up once and set him on his feet and smoothed down his feathers as though they were a pinafore I did it a dozen times. And besides he demanded so much verbal sympathy. He seemed to feel better if I stayed and talked to him."

"I think that finally I did go to sleep, because it was seven o'clock when I went out to the porch again and then I couldn't believe my eyes. There was a big, smoothly preened bluejay with his crest magnificent in the sunshine flying about trying his best to get out through the porch screens. When I went near him he cawed raucously and flew from me in the most abject terror."

"It was my drowned bluejay, recovered and superbly ungrateful. He simply glared at me when I remonstrated with him, so I opened the screen door and shooed him out and he went and perched on the top rail of the fence, where he appeared to think it over. He's gone now."

"I am so mad at his rudeness that I wish I had gone to sleep and let the foolish thing drown. Three hours I wasted on him!"

"Try the barrel method next time," insisted the man in the hammock.

The Way It Looked to Him.

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge of the defendant in a case of assault and battery.

"I think I must be guilty, your honor," answered the defendant.

"You think so?" said the judge.

"Don't you know?"

"Well, your honor," answered the prisoner, "it's like this: The plaintiff and I were the only ones in the room, and the first thing I knew was that I was standing up, and he was doubled up under the table. So I guess you'd better call it manslaughter."

HOT WATER COMPRESSES.

Simple Remedy Will Often Cure Nervous Tension and Fagged Feeling and Enliven the Tired Woman.

Hot water compresses are very refreshing and toning in many different cases of illness. Use them when your eyes are tired and your brain feels dull—in other words, when you are fagged.

Take off all tight garments and make your couch ready to lie on. A piece of rubber cloth is put over the pillow, and at the head of the couch is a little table on which is a small glass stove with a basin of water. The stove is not essential, but it keeps the water from growing cool.

Before lying down dip a cup of hot water slowly. Heat in the stomach helps to take away blood pressure from the head. Then place a square of soft white flannel in the water, wring it and place the cloth at the back of the head, bandage fashion. This means that the pad is on the pillow. Then wring out another cloth and put that over the top of your face, pressing the material in closely so it will lie over the eyes and touch the temples and face close to the nose.

As soon as the compress shows a sign of growing cool replace it with another, and continue for fifteen minutes and sometimes longer. At the end of that time get up and bathe your face thoroughly in cold water to tighten the skin, which has been relaxed by the heat treatment. Then darken the room and lie down again for fifteen minutes. After that you will be as fresh as can be.

The treatment is simple, but as a rule it acts favorably. Most of the exhaustion a woman has is from the nerves, and if they are relaxed she takes a fresh lease of life for the time.

PRINCESS GOWNS.

Two Good Suggestions For Remodeling These Frocks That Are Now Out of Fashion.

The princess gown is now so largely a thing of the past that women who have frocks of this character on their hands, or, rather, in their wardrobes, are casting about for ways of remodeling them in accordance with the prevailing styles. Here are two good suggestions, each worked out in the case of an actual gown.

In the first case there was a front skirt panel which extended a little above the fitted waist line. The great object of course, was to give the appearance of a belt where no belt was, and this was achieved by the introduction of a large ribbon rosette at each side, with a loose fold of ribbon to match, connecting them at the back. The gown then seemed equipped with a girle which was broken only at the front panel.

In the other frock the situation was complicated by the fact that the princess effect extended upward in bib fashion and yet was too high to agree with even the present empire styles. The problem was solved by slashing the gown at the belt in a wide oblong, leaving only the front, as if it were a skirt panel, and then, introducing a shirred oblong of the same material as the deep yoke on the blouse. Thus the gown seemed transformed to a tunic frock built over the yoke material. A strap of the skirt fabric which had been cut out was applied over the shirred material to complete this effect.

To Cleanse Tatting.

Tatting cannot be properly washed to look as good as new, for it is almost impossible to restore the picots to their natural shape. Soak the pieces in gasoline and while wet dust them with cornstarch. Wrap them in a clean towel and leave them for several hours. Beat the towel lightly, lift out the lace and shake it free of starch. Press the picots into shape and iron lightly on the wrong side.

TAPESTRY TRIMMED TURBAN.

A bit of old though handsome brocade or a strip of Chinese embroidery can be faced with plain satin of a harmonizing tone and used effectively as a trimming on the new fall turban. Tapestry trimmings are the millinery fad of the season, and the smart little turban pictured shows one way to use a strip of tapestry, the high crown being made of soft beaver. This beaver crown is folded over toward the front, the joining of the tapestry strip is hidden under a bow made of changeable metallic gauze and two broad velvet tabs.

Society Note.

Reverend Fourthly seeks the assails, Reverend Fifthly the mountain crowns. Reverend Tenthly goes to Europe. Only G. Nick stays in town.

Apprehensive.

"Come on and take a ride in my monoplane," insisted the inventor.

"Why, it has a speed of a mile a minute."

"Indeed," said the cautious friend.

"In what direction?"

"What has direction to do with it?"

"Why—I was thinking perhaps it made that speed coming down toward the earth."

THE CITY'S LIGHTING.

Owing to the fact that the council in their advertised bids for lighting has designated electric light, there has been considerable discussion on the subject of the City's lighting.

It is generally believed that the Home Gas Company is ready to give a price on this, and that the action of the council will result in the placing of a lighting contract for the next three years, without giving the City the benefit of a competition in the bid. It is true enough that the statement has been made that more than one company will bid on the Electric lighting, but we are afraid that the people generally will not look upon the outside bid as genuine competition. Even if the competition is real, there is no good reason, that we can see why all in the lighting business should not have an opportunity to compete. We are sure that the council is fully aware of the fact that they are handling the public's money, and no matter how reasonable the price may be for electric lighting, there will be a large number of taxpayers who will believe that the City could have obtained better terms if the bids were asked for from the Gas Company as well as the Electric.

In this day and time the corporations exercise such undue weight with so many of our public bodies, it behooves our officials to be extremely careful in their dealing with them. We do not want the factor of public utilities corporations injected into our politics, and the only way to keep them out, is for every one to see and believe that all are, at all times given a fair, square, and honest deal.

THE VICTORY AND ITS RESPONSIBILITY.

The result of the election on Tuesday gives great pleasure to the millions of citizens of this country who believe in the old time Democratic principles. And well may they be proud, for in every state, they have made substantial gains and in most of the pivotal states have carried the election. New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Ohio, New Jersey and Indiana have joined the Democratic ranks as well as several other doubtful ones. The Democrats will do well to remember however, that great as the victory was, yet, it gives them control only of the House of Representatives, while the executive and Senate of the nation remains in the hands of the Republicans. The victory as far as substantial results are concerned, while not an entirely empty one, is incomplete. To make it really effective and thus give our party the chance to govern this country, the Democrats must keep up the fighting forward to the next presidential campaign of 1912.

If good judgement is shown by those of our party upon whose shoulders falls the responsibility of directing its actions during the intervening time, then we may hope to repeat the victory of this year and then enjoy the substance as well as the glory of victory.

This country today has repudiated the Republican party and close observers believe that this repudiation was due to the failure of the Republicans to carry out the promises of their platform especially in regard to high tariff. The present tariff, despite the statements of the leaders of the party, was looked upon as higher instead of a lower tariff, and its revision regarded as a failure of the party to carry out its promises of a fairer and more equitable measure. The people came to the conclusion that they had again been betrayed and their interests again sacrificed in order that the special interests might continue to prosper and grow rich at their expense.

It is generally believed that the public conscience is at last thoroughly aroused, and that the voters have joined in the battle against special interests and special privileges with a determination to drive them from politics. And that in their voting they will know neither Democrat or Republican, when those names are used only as a mask to hide their true motives—the corrupt and unprincipled special interests. It is very evident that they are carefully looking at the caliber of men whose names are put before them as candidates, and are showing that they can pick out the honest and sincere.

The party which is able to produce a leader or leaders in whom the people have confidence is the party that is going to win future political battles in this country. These leaders must not be mere insipid men about whom no evil can be spoken and not much good, for the voters are fast learning that the man without a record and without initiative is the type of men that the interests and corrupt politicians of both sides usually select, knowing that he can be handled when elected and thinking that his colorless records can be used in the campaign to make the voters believe he is all they could wish.

For years the Democrats have been greatly handicapped for the lack of good strong men to lead their party, but with the type of men who are now taking an active interest in politics, there should not be much trouble along this line, for, with men like Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, and Harmon, of Ohio, there should not be much trouble to rally around a leader who will have the confidence of the people.

With a Democratic Congress advocating safe, sound, but progressive, legislation and with a leader of the type of these two men, Democracy should be reasonably safe in the next presidential campaign.

COLORED MEN ARRESTED.

Visited in Philadelphia. Came from South.

Isiah Brown, 25 years of age, Alexander Walker, 23 years, and Samuel Brown, 19 years, were arrested in Salisbury on Thursday of this week on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. All of these are colored and hail from Charlestown, S. C., which according to their statement made before Justice of the Peace W. A. Trader, they left last summer.

They further stated that they voted in Philadelphia last Tuesday, and as they had not been in that city but a few months, it is presumed they form part of the fraudulent vote, commonly supposed to have been cast in that city for the Republicans.

City Council Proceedings.

Permits to build were granted as follows: To Oscar L. Martin, dwelling on Isabella Street; to W. B. Tilghman and Co., warehouse on river front; to John H. Tomlinson, warehouse near Elizabeth Street; to E. Virgil Hearn, barn and stables on Elizabeth Street.

On the previous Monday night ten permits to build dwellings were granted as follows: To Jno. W. Winder, dwelling on Fitch Street; to Mary Robinson, dwelling on Washington Street; to A. W. Wingate, dwelling on Cedar Street; to L. A. Parsons, dwelling on Union Street; to A. J. Pusey, dwelling on Smith Street; to O. R. Disharoon, dwelling on Anne Street; to Ella C. Williams, dwelling on Oak Hill Avenue; to F. M. Mitchell, dwelling on Lake Street and dwelling on Fitzwater Street.

Pleased With N. Y. P. & N.

Officials of the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk Railroad Company, including Mr. William A. Patton, president; Mr. Elieha Lee, superintendent, and his official corps, visited Crisfield in a special train to inspect the work on the new docks and warehouses which are being rebuilt to take the place of those destroyed by fire last February when Watchman Collins was murdered and the pier burned to hide the crime.

The officials found the work progressing rapidly and their contractors informed them that the work would be completed about Christmas. The new docks and warehouses when completed will be the largest and best on the Eastern Shore.

A Simple Prize.

A woman who was limited in her prize giving in a club to a twenty-five cent prize, bought three sheets of blotting paper and a yard of ribbon to match. The former costing five cents apiece, the latter ten cents a yard.

Each of the blotters was cut into four round mats large enough to extend slightly beyond the bottom of a dinner plate. The twelve pieces were neatly tied together with a ribbon, with a gaily bow on top, and the mats were ready for the careful housekeeper to slip between her fine china plates to prevent scratching.

That Being the Case—
"Nice little flat, all right."
"Yes, but we cannot take it, John, it is too small."
"Seems to me it's plenty large."
"Didn't I tell you this morning that hips were coming in fashion again?"

The Improvement.
"I say, wasn't that violin solo magnificent?"
"Rather." "I was just thinking how lovely it would sound on the gramophone."—Flegende Blatter.

Couldn't Be a Liar.
"You will never be able to make her believe that he is a liar."
"I wonder why?"
"I believe that he once told her she was beautiful."

Out to Be.
"I am in favor of a soleless Fourth."
"Well, I'd be, too, if I had three kids as many as your three are."

SCHOOL BOARD

Proceedings. Business Transacted By The Board At Friday's Meeting.

The School Board was in session Friday and transacted the following business:

The Board decided to sell at public auction on Saturday, November 12th, at four P. M., the old school building at Mardela Springs. Saturday, November 12th, the old school building at Mt. Hermon will be sold.

The contractor who built the new Gordy School, in Delmar District, notified the Board that the building is about completed.

The Board requested Mr. Holloway to attend this important meeting.

Paul Englebe, of Mardela, was appointed to fill the vacant scholarship in Charlotte Hall, caused by the resignation of Craighton Oomer. He was the only applicant.

The Board decided to close the public schools for the Christmas Holidays on Thursday afternoon, December 23rd, and re-open January 2nd.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

Mr. House's wife has just recovered from a prolonged illness of typhoid.

PASTOR RUSSELL.

Let us illustrate this: We have heard of the famines of India and how the British Government has spent millions of "Pounds Sterling" for irrigation purposes to compensate for irregularities in the rainfall. Undoubtedly the famines are to some extent due to water scarcity. Nevertheless, one of the ablest of our engineers informs the world that there has not been in fifty years such a scarcity as should have created the famines. The famines of India, which have cost the lives of millions, are to be accredited to greed—greed which has flourished under the shadow of the law. Wealthy millers concern themselves with the natives and give them no food. By agreement between themselves they do not compete, but press the market price of rice lower and lower until the poor native, unable to make a profit, declines to plant, care for and harvest the crop. As a result there is famine. The poor natives suffer, but the managers of the millings prosper. The large dividends of from fifty to one hundred and fifty per cent on invested capital to the wealthy owning them.

As an illustration of the exorbitant profits I will relate a case: Two young men whose accumulated savings amounted to thirty thousand rupees (about two thousand pounds, or ten thousand dollars) invested it in rice-milling. Their profits for the first year were eighty thousand rupees—about five thousand pounds, or twenty-five thousand dollars. They were not in the combine to depress the price of rice, but they profited by what the combine accomplished. These inequities of our present social order are beyond the reach and correction of any law. The few men of ability do not directly or indirectly interested in them.

The White Throne Judgment.

Neither Jehovah nor his great Representative, Messiah, can in any sense or degree be a party to injustice or inequality. The fact that injustice has been permitted, and that inequity has been the rule for centuries, is to be accounted for by the fact that during all this period the world has been under the reign of sin and death, and not under the reign of righteousness and life; it has been under the reign of Satan, "the Prince of this world" and of the darkness of selfishness and evil—all of which his name represents—and not under the dominion of Jehovah, and his righteousness, not under the King of glory, the anti-typical David and Solomon, the anti-typical Aaron and Melchizedek. The New Dispensation which Messiah's Kingdom will usher in is pictured in our text. It will be the dominion of the world-wide—pure, holy, righteous, just, truthful, God-like—Great White Throne. No wonder we read that the symbolical heavens and earth, representing the old order of things—social, ecclesiastical—will all vanish away.

But let no one think for a moment that ecclesiastical princes, financial princes and political princes will voluntarily acknowledge that the hour has come for a full surrender to Messiah and to all the principles of his absolute righteousness. On the contrary, these privileged members of our race will more and more be drawn together for mutual protection for the preservation of the special privileges which have come into their possession. Even now we see the prophecy of the Second Psalm fulfilling. We are in the very time when the Lord, through the Prophet David, calls the great ones of the earth to recognize the true situation of our wonderful day—that it means that the Day of Messiah has arrived, and that he should be recognized and his principles of righteousness obeyed.

But let no one think for a moment that ecclesiastical princes, financial princes and political princes will voluntarily acknowledge that the hour has come for a full surrender to Messiah and to all the principles of his absolute righteousness. On the contrary, these privileged members of our race will more and more be drawn together for mutual protection for the preservation of the special privileges which have come into their possession. Even now we see the prophecy of the Second Psalm fulfilling. We are in the very time when the Lord, through the Prophet David, calls the great ones of the earth to recognize the true situation of our wonderful day—that it means that the Day of Messiah has arrived, and that he should be recognized and his principles of righteousness obeyed.

The call is recognized, Salute to Son, O ye kings of the earth, while ye are in the way with him, before his anger be kindled and ye perish by the way (Psalm II, 10-12). But no, the prophecy declares that we are in the day when the people, the masses, will have foolish imaginations—when they will think that by their own strength they can inaugurate a reign of righteousness along the lines of Socialism or by anarchy. The people must learn that their help is in the Lord and not in their own frail arm. The people must see the force of the statement, "Blessed are all they that put their trust in Messiah" (verse 12). The Lord is about to establish the great White Throne of absolute justice in the world.

On the other hand, the money kings and earthly rulers and ecclesiastical princes are taking counsel together to day for the preservation of the present inequities of the world, by which they are profiting. The Lord declares that to this they are banding themselves against him and against the newly-appointed King, Messiah. For over a century human liberty has been making progress, in spite of every endeavor to restrain it. The potentates of earth perceive the rising tide of human intelligence and demands for equal rights. They perceive that unless something be done to counteract this general movement, the special privileges of the privileged classes will disappear. They are even now taking counsel together how the tyrants, which are people are putting upon them, may be broken and a reign of autocracy—political, financial and religious—be re-established; a reign such as prevailed centuries ago, but now upon a higher plane, controlled by brighter wits, holding under restraint more intelligent masses.

"Be instructed, Ye Judges!" Would that the cultured and influential princes of earth could take the proper view of the situation, realize the fallacy of their counsel, the impossibility of averting the great changes which are upon us by reason of the time having come for Messiah to take unto himself his great power and reign! Harkened to the Lord's words through the Prophet, "Be wise, now, therefore, O ye kings! Be instructed, ye judges of the earth. Serve the Lord with fear and rejoice with trembling. Do homage to the Son" (vs. 10-12). Could the wise of earth realize the situation and fully submit themselves to the Divine requirements of absolute justice and truth, what a blessing it would be to the world! If these princes would turn their attention from the grasping of power and

The Curse of Selfishness.

I need not do more than remind you that selfishness is to be found in every one of us, and that a semblance of righteousness is insisted upon by us all and adhered to, and violators of it are styled criminals. Nevertheless, it seems impossible to legislate equity justice. The keen intellects of men find opportunities for circumventing the laws and for committing theft and murder and sin in the face of laws and without danger of being punished.

money to the enlightening and uplifting of the people they would become ministers, servants, of the New Dispensation, which would be ushered in with rejoicing. But the Lord informs us that this will not be the case and that, as a result, Messiah's Kingdom will be ushered in by "a time of trouble" such as was not since there was a nation" (Daniel xii. 1). The Psalmist tells us the same—God will have in derision the puny efforts of the worldly-wise and great to re-establish autocracy. He will speak to them in his wrath the lesson which they refuse to hear by loving exhortation. The new King and his Empire will be established in the earth, and the declaration is that amidst such Divine displeasure he shall "break them with a rod of iron and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel" (Psalm II, 4-6; Revelation II, 27).

Small and Great to Be Judged.

God is no respecter of persons. Hence, before his Judgment Throne punishments will be meted out to the little, as well as to the great, when found to be violators of the principles of justice. Would that I could impress this upon many of the lower classes who are crying out against the injustices in high places while practicing similar injustices themselves. Let it be remembered also that the great White Throne speaks blessing, Divine favor and uplifting to all who love righteousness and hate iniquity—the little and the great.

It is in the past a certain retributive justice has seemed to proceed along national lines, blessing the nations which take the more righteous course, and frowning upon those which take the more evil course, this will no longer be the case in the not distant future. The testing imposed by Messiah's Kingdom will be along individual lines. He that eats the sour grape of sin will find his teeth on edge, and his alone. "Justice will be laid to the line and righteousness to the plummet," and all the refugees of lies, by which mankind in high places have sought to fool themselves and others, will be swept away. The hidden things of darkness will be brought to light and the glorious things of light will be everywhere recognized. Ultimately "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess" to the enthroned Messiah.

"The Book Will Be Opened."

The Master said, "My Word shall judge you in the last day." Happy has it been for the comparatively few who have heard the Master's Word in this present life, and have judged themselves thereby, and submitted themselves to his righteous precepts! These blessed ones will share with Messiah the glories of his Spiritual Empire, inviolable to men. But during the Thousand-Year Judgment Day of the world (II Peter II, 9) the words—the "wonderful words of life" to those who will obey, and words of death to those who will refuse obedience—will be the standards of justice for all mankind. The books then to be opened to all will include, not only the words of the Master and of the Apostles of the New Testament, but also the Divine message through the Prophets of old. Then all shall see the oneness and harmony of the Divine message of righteousness. According to those standards each who would have eternal life must conform his living and his thinking. The approved, at the end of Messiah's reign, will be delivered over to the Father perfect as human beings. The disapproved will be destroyed in the Second Death—without hope (II Peter II, 12; Jude 12; Acts III, 23).

Another book of life will be opened—another besides the one that is now open, which is styled the Lamb's Book of Life, and in which is written the names of his faithful followers of the present time—"members of his Body," "the Royal Priesthood," "the Bride, the Lamb's Wife." The new book of life will be for those who will be on trial during Messiah's reign. By its close it will include all of Adam's race found worthy of eternal life.

The judgment of the Church in the present time is not according to works, the perfection of which, under present conditions, would be impossible. Hence the Church's judgment is according to faith and the obedience of faith possible. But the world's judgment will be according to works; for the knowledge then will be so great that faith will no longer be at a premium. The great Mediator will accept of imperfect works according to the ability of the people; but, as they rise out of degradation, more and more will be required of them until in the end they will be perfected and absolute perfection of works will be required.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonials received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Saves An Iowa Man's Life.

The very grave seemed to yawn before Robert Madison, of West Burlington, Iowa, when after seven weeks in the hospital, four of the best physicians gave him up. Then was shown the marvelous curative power of Electric Bitters. For, after eight months of frightful suffering from liver trouble and yellow jaundice, getting no help from other remedies or doctors, five bottles of this matchless medicine completely cured him. Its positively guaranteed for Stomach, Liver or Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Only 50c all druggists.

Do the right thing if you have Nasal Catarrh. Get Ely's Cream Balm at once. Don't touch the catarrh powder and snuffs, for they contain cocaine. In a word, Ely's Cream Balm is a real remedy, not a delusion. All druggists, 75c per bottle, or mailed by Ely Bros., 66 Warren Street, New York.

Morrison Family

(Copyright by McClure Syndicate)

The name Morrison, Morison, Moreson, Murison and Maryson has as many explanations as it has forms. It has been variously claimed that it is a name indicative of Moorish lineage of some kind; that it means the son of a great warrior, that it signifies "mighty," and that it means the son of Maurice, or the son of the disciple of Mary; this last explanation would indicate that the name was borne by a family who had some church property, the property of a disciple of the Virgin Mary. Whatever its meaning, it is one of the oldest and worthiest names in all Scotland.

Lewis is a little island on the west shore of Scotland, and there is a tradition that the founder of the clan Morisona went there from Norway, and there is a tradition that he was Mores, a son of the Norwegian king. At any rate, the family became one of the most important on the little island, and for hundreds of years the leader of the family was the hereditary judge of Lewis. This position was one of great influence, for the judge had power of life and death at his finger's end.

All the Morrisons in this country are probably descended from this ancient Scotch family, although all of them cannot trace their descent. But there is one branch which has its lineage clear from the last of the hereditary judges.

Rev. Donald Morrison, and Rev. Kenneth Morrison, two brothers, and the ministers of the two parishes of Lewis, were born about 1630, and were grandsons of the last of the judges. Kenneth had a son, Rev. Allen, who in turn had a son Alexander, a taxman. His children were John, Donald and Allan, and in 1766 Donald and Allan emigrated to Canada. John stayed in Canada, but his three children, Donald, Roderick, and another Donald, all left home. The first went to Canada, the last to Australia, and Roderick, who died in 1854, settled in the Mississippi.

Many of the Canadian Morrisons came before very long to the United States. William, the son of Allan, who emigrated to Canada, was the first white man to discover the sources of the Mississippi river, which he did in 1811.

This William's son, of the same name, left Canada and settled in California; and William's uncle, Allan, settled in the upper region of the Mississippi. He was a member of the legislature, and he married a full-blooded Indian princess.

The Morrisons of New Hampshire are another big branch of the family who claim descent from the old Scotch hereditary judges. John Morrison, and his sons James and John, established this branch. John, the father, was probably born in Scotland. His sons came here in 1779, James to found the Windham branch of the family and John the Peterborough branch.

There were other first settlers named Morrison in Londonderry, among them Robert of Ireland, who came in 1719, and who had three children, Robert, William, and Sally; and Samuel, Jr., born in Scotland, who had John, Samuel, Mary and Susanna.

Three brothers, William, David and Hugh Morrison, established the family in 1734 in Nottingham, N. H. They had an uncle who went through the siege of Londonderry mentioned above, of whom it was said that he "watched all day, hoping to catch a mouse to appease his hunger, but it escaped into the wall, when he burst into a flood of tears."

In Virginia the family was established by John from the north of Ireland, and in Pennsylvania by Gabriel, also from Ireland. Gabriel and his wife were noted for their piety, and used to ride over three miles every Sunday to church, with their children in the saddles before them.

The arms of the Morrisons are blazoned: Argent, three Moor's heads couped sable two, and one banded of the first. Motto: Prote prudentia prestat.

Crest: Aurore, three barons' heads joined in one neck, the faces looking to the chief, dexter and sinister sides of the chief.

Dr. King's New Life Pills

OH, DEAR!

She took a course of First Aid to the Wounded, and, after long and anxious waiting, the street accident who had earnestly wished for took place: It was a bicycle picnic; the man had broken his leg; she confiscated the walking stick of a passerby, and broke it in three pieces for splints; she blushing took off her undershirt for bandages, and she was enthusiastically cheered by the crowd. When all was completed, she summoned a cab and took her patient to the hospital.

"Who bandaged this limb so creditably?" inquired the surgeon.

"I did," she blushing replied.

"Well, it is most beautifully—most beautifully done," said the surgeon, "but you have, I see, made one little mistake."

She felt terribly self-conscious.

"You have bandaged the wrong leg," he said quietly.

Getting Away.

"Haven't you forgotten something, sir?" asked the anxious waiter, as the thrifty guest prepared to depart without bestowing a tip.

"No, I think not. Here's my hat and here's my cane. I don't think I have forgotten anything."

"But you've forgotten me," said the waiter in exasperation.

"Not at all," answered the other. "I saw you standing there all the time. Bon soir, garcon; bon soir."

Blooming Alone.

The sweet young thing was being shown about Washington by her cousin, the noted correspondent.

"That is Senator Burton across there," he said, as he pointed out the Ohio statesman.

"He's the flower of the senate, isn't he?" gurgled the pretty dear.

"Flower!" repeated the correspondent. "What kind of flower?"

"The bachelor Burton," she coyly replied.

The Proper Size.

"For years," admitted the old bachelor, "I have made the mistake of hiding my light under a bushel."

"Yes," rejoined the young widow, "I have often wondered why you used a bushel for that purpose when a pint cup would have answered the purpose."

WITH A BUMP.

Clara—I've been skating on this ice until I'm fairly tired out.

Clarence—You shouldn't be tired. You sat down often enough, I'm sure.

The Ancient Ad.

"We will permit no advertising signs out in the ocean spray."

The old sea serpent straightened out his lines And sadly stole away.

A Tip From Papa.

He was poor but proud, and she was the only daughter of a wealthy tailor.

"I want you to love and trust me, dearest," he said.

"Oh," she replied, "I can love you all right, but papa says you are not to be trusted."

A Model Hired Man.

"Missus, do you need a hired man?"

"Well, yes, I'm looking for a man who can do the chores, sweep, clean the rooms, be polite and never be impudent."

"Say, missus, you're lookin' for a husband."—Success Magazine.

Not Impressed.

"My graduating gown will cost an even hundred."

"I know of a girl who graduated in a two-dollar gown and thus won a husband."

Col. W. S. Powell On Negro Education.

In the report of the Commission on Industrial Education appointed by Gov. Crothers appears an article by Col. W. S. Powell, editor of the Ellcott City Times and a member of the State Board of Education. His views represent an experience of twenty years in public education and I desire to emphasize that like Editor Henry Watterson of the Louisville Courier Journal, Hon. Clark Howell of the Atlanta Constitution and other outspoken leaders he is a member of the rapidly developing "New South."

The present general system of academic education for colored children is a farce. It really does them, after the fourth grade more harm than good. All their education above that grade paid for by the State should be industrial. Manual training for the boys and domestic science for the girls. There are two or three negro industrial schools in this State doing good work. The State through the State Board of Education, is now arranging to locate in the country a colored Normal School for educating negro teachers where the curriculum will be manual training agriculture and domestic science, after the student passes the eighth grade of the public school requirements. Such a school is an absolute necessity as we have a very few trained negro teachers. The masses of the race have only reached the agricultural stage of civilization and are not easily adjusted to city life under its strenuous pace. Agriculture is an industry or pursuit where prejudice and labor unions are unknown quantities. Nature responds as beneficently and lavishly to the skill of the black man as she does to that of his white neighbor. It is the one field that will help solve the negro problem of educational activity is adjusted to that beneficial end. It is the main channel by which material wealth will come into the race's possession and is also well fitted to inculcate lessons of thrift, industry, economy and devotion to duty. In almost every community I find a city school set out in the country. The modern rural school is an institution just coming into popularity in the West. Teachers must be trained in schools that will fit them to create a rural civilization for the twentieth century. The graduates must be "raised up" in an atmosphere of rural progress, become inspired enthusiastic and not hesitate when called upon to do missionary work. They must exhibit a keen interest in actual life of the present day. To minister to the wants of the masses they must be acquainted with their needs. In short academic and professional training to this date have produced a one sided view of education.

Agriculture is the hope and foundation of the race in America at this critical period and teachers must have at least an elementary knowledge of its principles to be in a position to help the two races to live together on terms of peace and mutuality in section where this pursuit is predominant and nine millions of black people dwell.

MT. PLEASANT.

Our farmers are very busy husking corn before it comes cold.

Miss Annie Baker and Miss Elizabeth Rayne visited Miss Addie Patey Saturday and Sunday last. They enjoyed a very pleasant visit.

Misses Clara Baker and Virgie Davis visited friends over in Worcester County Sunday.

Providence permitting, we will have preaching at the regular hour, 10.30 o'clock, by our pastor, Rev. D. H. Ford, Sunday School at 9.30. Hope we will have a large attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Patey entertained quite a number of their friends Sunday last. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Brittingham and son, Mrs. and Mrs. Lemuel Massey and son, Dorsey, Master Clinton Massey and Miss Pearl Phillips, of Salisbury.

One of our young girls left Wednesday for a trip to Bishopville. Likely she will have a new name when she returns. Wonder what it will be?

Miss Addie Patey visited her sister, Mrs. Wm. Parnell, of New Hope, last week.

Death Of Mrs. Truitt.

Mrs. Caroline Truitt, one of the oldest residents of Salisbury died Sunday morning at her home on E. Church Street, aged 88 years. Deceased was the widow of the late John D. Granddad's Little Fling

By ANNE H. WOODRUFF

"Give it up, granddad, do. An old man of 70 to take a carload of cattle to Chicago! It's the craziest notion I ever knew you to take into your head."

"Crazy!" ejaculated granddad, indignantly. "That's not the way to talk to me, son."

"Well, do be reasonable and let Dan go as usual."

"Now, boy, I'm just dying to have a little fling. I'm going to Chicago, and I'm going to take in all the sights; and I don't want no garden, neither. It's my last chance—at my time of life. Now or never, sonny."

Granddad chuckled joyously as his six-foot grandson turned away with an impatient gesture betokening anxiety rather than anger.

Granddad was a fine specimen of wholesome and vigorous age. Why, then, should he not go to Chicago without a guardian?

"Be a good little boy and take care of the ranch," was his parting salute from the car window, accompanied by a radiant grin.

"Take care of yourself," Jack shouted, adding to himself as the train moved out, "you old infant!"

Granddad enjoyed every moment of his journey from western Iowa to the great mid-western metropolis. So, when his carload of cattle was duly disposed of, and a thick wad of bank bills in his possession, he started out to take in the sights. As he was leaving the stockyard he met two men, whom from their appearance he judged to be farmers.

"Bless me! Ain't it lucky we met? You from Indiana and me from Iowa—the two finest states in the union. I might have got lonesome, but now we can have a roarin' good time," he cried.

So the three started out to see Chicago. Their car had gone about a block when it stopped to take on a lady passenger.

Sibella Graham—society reporter for one of the city's great dailies—had awakened that morning in her room at the Transit house, where she was the guest for the night of a former classmate—in the same disheartened frame of mind with which she had retired the evening previous. The curt, incisive words of the city editor were still ringing in her ears:

"Unless there is a marked improvement in your work, Miss Graham, the T.—will be obliged to discontinue your services."

The blow was none the less disappointing, because she expected it. The trouble was that she simply could not browbeat her brain any longer into taking enough interest in the details connected with her department to satisfy the patrons of the paper, who delighted in seeing their importance magnified in print. When she first started in to report for her paper she had felt a keen delight in her work, and was indefatigable in her efforts to give satisfaction. Five years of the grind, however, had dissipated the halo which rested upon the brow of the newspaper woman. The unending of trivial details had become a loathsome and wearisome task.

"Jack was right when he said that all Chicago had to offer could not compare with the freedom of western ranch life," she soliloquized. "To think of my having had the nerve to try to compel him to give it all up for an unfamiliar and un congenial existence here, because, forsooth, I preferred Chicago as a place of residence! How well I remember his sensible and manly answer:

"I cannot leave Oaklands, Sibella, I owe all I am, or ever will be, to my grandfather, who is the dearest old boy in the world. It would break his heart to have me leave him. I must stick to the ranch. It does seem to me, dearest, that you might be happy there. It really is something of a place, if I do say it."

"Well, I have had my way—I am a newspaper woman, and I have my Chicago (bless it!), and some other girl better worth having will marry—or has married, who knows?—the only man I ever could care for. I ought to be satisfied, but I am not. I long for a whiff of air from that selfsame despoiled ranch, and a chance to rest my poor, over-worked, idealistic brain. It feels as empty of gray matter as my hat. I declare, I would prefer to churn, make butter, or even milk the cows this morning, to doing my usual stunt."

When Miss Graham boarded the car she found every seat occupied. She was a slender creature—almost too slight for her lofty ambitions, as Jack had often told her in their university days. Strange that, notwithstanding their intimacy, she had learned so little about him or his circumstances. Clutching a strap, she stood away from the car, her dark eyes somber with the fear of what the day might bring forth. Suddenly she became conscious of some one tugging at her skirt. Turning, she looked into the eyes of an old man with a bright and jovial countenance, who indicated, by a motion, the seat he had vacated.

Now, although Miss Graham had always felt it incumbent upon her to offer her seat to aged persons of either sex, she understood human nature well enough to know that it would be an unkindness on her part not to accept a courtesy so graciously proffered. And who could call him old whose silvery locks belied the ruddy cheeks, the clear, bright eyes and beaming countenance which conveyed to her mind an impression of eternal youth? Seldom was such a face seen on a Chicago street car. The old man was chatting genially with his companions.

"You're all right as long as you're with me, boys. My boy, out in Iowa, told me to look out for them bunco chaps, but pahaw! they can't sell me no Masonic temple," with a knowing chuckle. His air of innocent importance was so rurally confident, so childishly patronizing, that Sibella received a distinct shock when she glanced at his companions, between whom she found herself seated. To her experienced eye they were no verdant countrymen, as their attire was intended to indicate. If ever a brace of Chicago's wily "con" men had an innocent in tow, here was a pair of them. It worried her to see the trio leave the car at Van Buren street, the old man hobnobbing over with innocent hilarity, his companions scanning furtive glances to right and left as they strode off, one on either side of him. She heaved a sigh, as she realized that she could not be a protecting providence to unwary grandpas, however appealing to her sympathies they might be.

Miss Graham's worst fears were realized. She received her dismissal that afternoon, along with a check for past services. "And now what am I to do?" she asked herself as she left the Polk street depot, where she had been seeing some friends off on the train. Pondering this question, she walked on and on, oblivious to her surroundings. She was aroused, however, in a very sudden and startling manner. A man—propelled by some invisible force—fell at her feet, blocking her passage, while the sound of the herring and botting of a door fell upon her ear.

The man lay motionless, his white hair stained with blood, his eyes closed in stupor. To her horror, she recognized in him the old man she had noticed in the car.

Granddad and his companions had spent the morning together, and had lunched at a restaurant more in keeping with the outward appearance of his friends than was entirely agreeable to him. When they started out, he was gently but firmly propelled towards a locality which the two men had kept in view all along, where men of their ilk consort to the accomplishment of their nefarious designs. Granddad objected strenuously at last, declaring that he was going back to have a look at the banks and office buildings.

"All right, gov'ner," said the older man, soothingly, "we'll go with you. Why, if here ain't Jake Hopkins! When did you come to town, Jake?"

"Got in this mornin'," answered the rough-looking individual who was standing in the doorway of a narrow building between a Chinese junk shop and a corner saloon.

"I wish you could let me have that five dollars you owe me, Jake," said the younger man. "I'm short."

"Come inside a minute, then," replied Jake. "I'll get a bill changed."

Granddad followed like a lamb to the slaughter—into what looked like a poorly furnished office, where a hook-nosed, hawk-eyed man sat at a desk.

"No," he said, to their request for change. "Short of change myself to-day."

"Can you change a ten?" the young man asked of granddad, who obligingly handed out his wad. In a second's time the four were upon him and had secured the money. They relieved him of his business papers, return ticket—everything. Then they thrust him through the doorway with such violence that he fell to the sidewalk, striking his head upon the pavement, and almost upsetting Sibella. A crowd began to collect; the patrol wagon drew up at the curb. The policemen searched his pockets in vain for a clew to identification.

"He has been robbed," declared Miss Graham.

"What do you know about this case, young woman?" the policeman asked. Sibella told him all she knew, and he said:

"This man must be taken to the hospital at once. He needs medical attention."

"I will be responsible for all charges," said Miss Graham, peremptorily.

She spoke upon an impulse. A feeling she could not define to herself, made it unendurable to think of the white-haired, gentle old man with the refined features and gracious demeanor, being sent to the county hospital. She was astonished at herself, for she would soon be penniless unless she could find employment. Here she was, with a sick man on her hands of whom she knew absolutely nothing, not even his name.

"A slight concussion of the brain," was the verdict of the examining physician. When Sibella called, on the following day, to inquire concerning her protégé, he was conscious, and she was allowed to see him. The nurse had explained to him the circumstances of his situation and he was prepared to receive her.

"So this is my good friend," he said, taking her hand in his, and beaming upon her from the pillow, adding whimsically to the nurse: "She ain't bigger than a pint of cider, but she has a heart bigger than all outdoors. Where have I seen you before?"

wrinkling his forehead in an effort to remember.

"You gave me your seat in the car," Sibella reminded him.

"Yes, I know," he said, "but it's further back than that. Well, my boy will know how to thank you when he comes, better than I can."

"Do you expect your son?" she asked.

"My grandson," he gently corrected her. "Sure, he'll come, when he knows. The doctor sent a telegram. Perhaps he's got it by now. He said I was crazy to come here, and—I'll pose—he was about right. Them bunco men buncoed me all right. There's no fool like an old fool. But, by ginner! I'm goin' to have a try at findin' them fellows—Oh, pahaw! and here I be on the flat of my back!"

"Them fellows" were troubling Sibella's thoughts as she walked from the hospital to Clark street. It seemed in no wise strange, therefore, that she should come face to face with them on the corner, as they were about to enter a saloon. They did not notice her, and hastily entering the nearest drug store, she rang up the police station, waiting in a fever of impatience until the patrol appeared and the arrests were made. To her surprise there were four prisoners instead of two.

"Nabbed the whole bunch," one of the policemen informed her, gleefully—"and the money, too."

"Then the old man will get his money back?" asked Sibella.

The policeman's "Sure!" made her very happy, and she could scarcely wait until the next afternoon to pay her charge another visit. When she did call the next day, the nurse left them alone for a few moments, and suddenly, without warning, a big, bronzed young fellow opened the door, and walked quietly to the bedside.

"Well, granddad," he said, "had about enough of Chicago?"

Granddad's eyes opened wide. "You bet," he answered, with a sheepish, but delighted grin. "The ranch in good enough for me. I'll not leave it again until I'm carried off. And you may thank this little girl here that I'm as comfortable as I be."

The young westerner wheeled about, and they were face to face.

"Sibella!"

"Jack!"

Both her hands were in his, and granddad entirely forgotten, when he recalled them to a sense of their whereabouts by crying, excitedly:

"Now I know! Now I know! She's the girl you always kept on your bureau—the picture, I mean. Well, I am glad! She'll like the ranch; won't she, Jack?"

There was no mistaking the love light that irradiated Sibella's eyes, and found a reflection in Jack's. He sank back on his pillow with a sigh of content, as the nurse ushered into the room two men from the detective bureau, who had come to report progress.

"What was the amount of your loss?" asked the chief.

"I'll tell you that—and go halves with you," replied granddad, with a shamed giggle and a sly glance at Jack from under his eyebrows, "when you ketch them chaps you get the money back. But I guess you never will."

"Stranger things than that have happened—even in Chicago," laughed the detective. "The men—and the money—are found. A slight testimonial to the officers who made the capture might not be out of order; but you should 'go halves' with this young lady here, to whose shrewdness and prompt action their capture is really owing."

Granddad's face was a sight to behold.

"What! Ketched 'em, have you?" he cried, with a joyous cackle. "Well, after all, son," with a quizzical glance at Jack, and a knowing nod toward the radiant girl face opposite, "I guess you needn't begrudge your old granddaddy his 'little fling.'"

Rudeness Rebuked.

An English squire of the eighteenth century once entered a private room in an inn clad just as he had dismounted from his horse—booted and spurred, wearing a muddy riding cloak, and carrying his hunting-crop in his hand.

He made a great noise and bluster in his entry, and the intrusion naturally offended the occupants of the room—a nobleman and some ladies.

The nobleman, however, bethought himself of a neat way of rebuking the country boy.

He rose and made him a very ceremonious bow, saying politely at the same time: "Sir, let me thank you; these ladies are vastly obliged to you."

"What? Why?" blurted out the squire.

"For not bringing your horse into the room as well."

The squire withdrew abashed, and henceforth learned to restrain his rustic lack of manners in public.

Would Run No Risks.

Mrs. Chesterfield's telephone bell rang the other evening, and putting the receiver to her ear, she heard the voice of an intimate friend at the other end of the line, talking excitedly.

"Oh, Mrs. Chesterfield," said the voice, "I'm in a dreadful fix. My little Ann has diphtheria!"

"How awful!" was the response. "Is she in the house?"

"Of course," replied the voice. "I have a trained nurse for her."

"If she is in the house," said Mrs. Chesterfield, "I must ask you to hang up the receiver at once. I have small children of my own, you know, and diphtheria is a contagion. I don't want to seem un sympathetically, but I will not run any risks!"

HORSE BURNED

In Early Morning Fire—Conflagration Confined To Stables—Narrow Escape Of Other Houses.

On Thursday night, or rather Friday morning about four o'clock, Salisbury's noted firebell rang out a loud alarm, arousing citizens from all sections to see where the fire was. It was soon located in the stables of Mr. C. E. Harper. W. K. Sheppard and Company used these stables and barn for their delivery horses and wagons. One of the horses was burned in the fire and all the wagons and delivery trucks, a loss to the Company of several hundred dollars. The stables were entirely destroyed. Several houses across the street were also several times and probably the protection of the trees saved the houses. The fire plug was some distance from the fire and considerable delay was caused by the fact that this plug was not located for some time.

REV. T. E. MARTINDALE

Warmly Greeted At New Castle—M. E. Church At Anniversary Service.

The New Castle Methodist Episcopal Church was filled to its capacity Tuesday evening and the people listened attentively to Rev. Thomas E. Martindale, D. D., of Salisbury, Md., who was the pastor of the church from 1891 to 1893. He spoke from the text, "They marveled at His answer," taken from St. Luke 20, 26. Both before the service and at the close the throng crowded about the preacher and joyously welcomed him. A fine musical program was given by a large chorus under the direction of Oberster Manlove. Mr. and Mrs. John Harris, of Wilmington, prominent church workers, who were members of the church when Dr. Martindale was the pastor, and family from Elkton, who attended the church at that place when Preacher Watkins was the pastor, were present. Every Evening, Wilmington.

THE COMING RECITAL

At The Opera House On Nov. 30th To Be Rare Fete Of Music.

An event of unusual importance in Salisbury's musical and social circles will be the recital by Mr. Walter G. Charnbury, the talented concert pianist, assisted by Mr. William A. McLeran, the popular baritone, both of Baltimore, which will be held at the Opera House on Wednesday evening, November 30th. It will be for the benefit of a worthy cause and it is expected that Salisbury society will attend in a body, for it is rarely that we are given such a musical treat by artists of so much prominence.

Mr. Charnbury, who is a graduate of the famous Peabody Institute in Baltimore, is generally considered the greatest American pianist; and Mr. McLeran, who has been heard as soloist at the Cathedral in Baltimore, and also in many entertainments and in recitals with Mr. Charnbury, is conceded to have a baritone of quality and sweetness which is rarely surpassed. The recitals given by these two artists are always heavily attended by people of musical and social prominence wherever they are heard, and it is hoped that Salisbury will justify its reputation as a musical center and make the recital on the 30th an overwhelming success.

LIQUOR LAW VIOLATORS

Judge Jones Sends Six Men To Prison From Snow Hill—Most Cases From Ocean City.

Wednesday was field day for the "dry" in Worcester County.

Louis Petri, of Baltimore, was sentenced to pay a fine of $150 and to be confined in the House of Correction for six months.

Thomas Small was ordered to pay $300 and spend twelve months in the House of Correction.

Charles W. Mitchell will pay $150 and will visit at the "Cot" for six months.

John Coffin got twelve months and will pay $300.

Benjamin Davis got six months and will pay $150.

All are well known white men and either pleaded guilty or were convicted after trials for violating the Local Option law at Ocean City. H. Hamblin, a former registration officer of Worcester County, tried his own case before the court without a jury but was convicted of the same offense. The circumstances, however, led Judge Jones to give him only thirty days in jail and a fine of $50.

Harvey Trader, manager of the Berlin Club, pleaded guilty of operating as a distributing agent, a technical offense under the local law, and was paroled on his own recognizance on the representation that the club had disbanded.

Judge Jones passed the sentences, and in each case expressed the hope that the events of the last few days would serve as a warning to others, as well as to themselves.

The Southern Convocation.

The Southern Convocation of the Diocese of Eastern convened in St. Andrew's Church, Princess Anne, last Wednesday and Thursday. The visiting clergymen present were: Rev. T. B. Barlow, of Cambridge, Dean of the convocation; Rev. T. Paul Maslin, of Hallow, China; Rev. W. B. Stehl, of Centerville; Rev. L. L. Williams, of Pocomoke City; Rev. Thomas B. Ockford, of Fairmont; Rev. W. W. Green, of Church Creek; Rev. W. H. Darbie, of Quantico. The opening service was held Wednesday evening with a sermon by Rev. Maslin on "Work and Conditions in China." Thursday morning, Rev. Mr. Williams, of Pocomoke City, preached the sermon; at night addresses were made by Rev. Mr. Darbie, subject, "Prayer," Rev. Mr. Stehl, subject, "Obedience," and Rev. Mr. Green, subject, "Remembrance of his Clerical Work." Mr. Green is 89 years old and is still in full possession of his mental and physical faculties. The convocation closed Friday morning with the celebration of the Holy Communion at 7.30 o'clock at which Rev. T. P. Maslin was celebrant.

Noted Gospel Workers Coming.

Special meetings will begin in the Division Street Baptist Church Sunday night, November 27th. Anthony W. Bennett, the noted Gospel singer, will be present and render a solo each night. Rev. H. Parlett East, of East New Market, will preach. Rev. East is an eloquent and powerful speaker. Rev. O. B. Falls, a widely known Baptist Evangelist, will take charge of the meeting on Monday night, Dec. 5th. Rev. Falls is an exceptionally powerful speaker and attracts large congregations wherever he goes.

—Miss Mary Rebecca Aldridge, of Chautauque, Md., was the week end guest of Mrs. John M. Toulson, William Street.

SALISBURY IS SELECTED

By The Virginia Conference Of Southern Methodists For 1911 Session.

Dr. B. F. Lipscomb, of the committee on entertainment of the Methodist Episcopal Conference, voted for Salisbury, Md., as the place of meeting of the Virginia Conference next year, which after being discussed and considered, it was adopted by the conference.

A point in the sister state was chosen, as Maryland is partially included in the Virginia Conference, but the annual meeting has never been held in this State.

While this is the first time that Salisbury has ever had the honor of entertaining the Southern Methodist Conference, the conferences of the Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant Churches have been entertained in Salisbury several times. The membership of the Virginia Conference exceeds either of the two conferences named above, but Salisbury is amply able to entertain the Virginia Conference as nicely as it has been entertained anywhere.

The people of Salisbury without regard to denominations, have always been generous in assisting various churches in entertaining large religious bodies, and we are sure they will next year assist handsomely in taking care of the Virginia Conference.

Trinity Church, in which the Conference will meet, is one of the largest and handsomest churches in the Virginia Conference.

THREE NURSES GRADUATE

Graduating Exercises At The Hospital After Taking The Three Years Course.

The graduating exercises of the nurses graduating from the Training School of the Peninsula General Hospital were held at the Hospital on Tuesday evening. The Superintendent, Miss Shiel, was assisted by the Board of Lady Managers in making the arrangements. More than a hundred guests were present to witness the ceremonies.

The graduates were Miss Ruth Jester Truitt, Miss Eunice Esther Moore and Miss Alice Anne Bennett. The exercises opened with a prayer by Dr. Graham. Miss Elliott, Mrs. F. P. Adkins, Mr. Edgar Laws and Mr. F. P. Adkins rendered quartette selections. Rev. Dr. Reigart delivered the address to the graduates and Hon. William F. Jackson delivered the diplomas to the graduates. Mr. Claude Dorman rendered a solo and Miss Nellie Lankford gave a beautiful instrumental selection.

After the exercises, refreshments were served and a pleasant social evening was enjoyed by the guests.

Improvements To Store.

Mr. G. M. Fisher, the jeweler, has recently made many improvements to his store on Main Street. The partition has been moved back, giving 100 square feet more floor space; three eight-foot counter cases and an umbrella case have been added. Forty four new jewelry trays have been added to the counter cases. These improvements give Mr. Fisher a very attractive store, besides enabling him to make a much better display of his stock.

THANKSGIVING DAY

A Century Ago—World Has Changed More In Last 100 Years Than In 1000 Years Before—Marvelous Events.

A hundred years back may seem a long while ago, but when you remember that there are men living today whose fathers saw General Washington, a century does not seem so long a time after all. And up to the time of Washington a hundred years did not mean very much to the human race. The world moved very slowly. When Washington died, in 1799, people were using the same sort of appliances and doing the same things in the same way that they did 1000 and even in 1600. In former years, if a man could have returned to earth at the end of a hundred years, he would not have been very much surprised at any of the changes that had taken place during his absence. But if Washington or Franklin, or even Thomas Jefferson, who died less than a century ago, were to come back to earth now, he would not know where he was. The world has changed more in the last one hundred years than any thousand years that have gone before.

To get some idea of the wonderful changes that have taken place, let us go back to Thanksgiving Day in 1610 and note how many, many things our great grandparents did not have which we have today. It will not only astonish us, but it will also make us realize how much we have to be thankful for.

In the first place, there was no Thanksgiving Day in 1610, except in New England. It was only a little over forty years ago that people all over the United States began to celebrate the day. Before that, it was not live in Boston or very close to it; he probably would never have eaten a Thanksgiving dinner. But even those who were fortunate enough to live in New England, did not have anything like the variety of good things for dinner that we have today. Of course, they had turkey and pumpkin pie and onions and cranberry sauce and potatoes; but they did not have tomatoes or corn or peas or string beans or beef or asparagus or any of the other canned vegetables that we are accustomed to eating during the winter months. There were no canned goods of any kind. There were no tin cans. Neither were there any cars to bring fresh fruits and vegetables—like strawberries and tomatoes and lettuce—from the South and from California. In fact, there were then no such places in the United States as Florida and Texas and California. They were all of them waste places or foreign lands. They belonged to England and Spain and France and Mexico.

Oranges, bananas, pineapples, grape fruit, olives, Malaga grapes and other tropical fruits which are so familiar to all of us, were never seen in the markets of 1610. Boys and girls of that day only heard about them from travelers or read of them in books. Dinners were cooked in fireplaces. There were no ranges. There were no gas stoves, no oil stoves, no coal stoves, no cook stoves of any kind. Housewives had no baking powder, no yeast cakes, no self rising flour, no granulated sugar, no flavoring extracts, no ground spices, no cocoa, no potted meats, no catsup, no prepared breakfast foods, no soda crackers, no macaroni. All the coffee had

TAILORED COSTUMES.

At All Times Smart and Always Admit of Variation.

Changes of Fashion, Becoming More Rapid Year by Year, Entail Great Amount of Attention.

Year by year the changes of fashion come more and more rapidly, and those who wish to keep themselves informed about them must give to the subject no small amount of attention. Of late the difficulties of the situation have been further complicated by the fact that there are not so many hard and fast rules as formerly. To have a complete knowledge of the latest modes does not mean that the art of good dressing has been mastered.

No woman in these days can be chic unless she studies her own individuality and knows just which styles among the many available are best suited to her. So widely varied are the models supplied that she need never wear anything unbecoming. Such liberty of choice means added responsibility, a thing that all except

USE OF ARTIFICIAL ROSES.

Their Popularity at the Present Time Allows Them in Almost Every Conceivable Position.

Everywhere they appear, these little clusters and wreaths of tiny pink roses, like Crimson Ramblers, but in silk tissue or rice paper. You may gather a big bunch of them at the waist of your princess gown on the left side and thus remove the old-fashioned effect, or you may border with them the chiffon tunic over your silk undershirt, specially if both are in harmonious shades of pink. In double rows they edge the necks of evening gowns and form mock ruffles, with shirred chiffon inserts, on the lace covered silk skirt.

On hats they form loose festoons around the brim or are piled mountain high in the front of the capuchin bonnets. Now that curls are favored once more in our coiffures they are inter-twined with these pink rosebuds or the roses are sewed on pink ribbon and used in hair effect.

On white and pink silk parasols they follow the line of the hemstitching or define the ruffle, and then the handle is of tinted ivory, with a carved rosebud on the very end.

They take the place of buckles on satin evening slippers and on the wide silk girdles and appear at the center of Irish lace jabots.

And they are the very best of solutions for the girl whose clothes need that indefinable "toning up" which gives them more prettiness and charm.

DAINTY CORSET COVER.

Underwear of Lawn or Nainsook Is Trimmed With German Val
Lace and Ribbons.

For the girl who can do neat sewing, but cannot fit or shape, an easily made underwaist is cut on the straight breadth of material.

This is cut deep enough to reach from waist to bust and full enough to slip on overhead when the ends are sewed together.

Trim top of lawn or nainsook with rows of German val insertion, set a half inch apart. Three rows as insertion and a lace edging are a good effect. For simpler waists the one row of insertion and lace can be set on top of the material, avoiding the cutting out.

Turn up bottom of cover for a casing or finish with lace beading or with a row of insertion stitches on each edge, to be used as a casing.

Rows of embroidered dots or eyelets or delicate vines in satin stitch embroidery are pretty worked in the spaces between insertion. To finish insertion stitch on right side by machine, using a fine, close stitch and No. 100 cotton. Cut away material, leaving about an eighth of an inch on each side of stitching, turn back and stitch again on right side. Trim off frayed edges.

This corset cover is held on by ribbon bands over shoulder or more dainty bands of insertion, cut to button on top of shoulder with tiny lace buttons.

SIMPLE AUTUMN MODEL.

the very strong minded avoid when they can, but every woman who takes the trouble to exercise her new privileges with discretion should win the gratitude of all who have the pleasure of looking at her.

Even in the strictly tailored costumes, which are more influenced by conventionality than most other feminine garments, there is enough diversity of design to meet the needs of all types of women. Autumn models shown so far are most reassuring after all the alarming prophecies that have been rife during the last few weeks.

The coats are mostly short, but they are shown in different lengths, and there are some reaching halfway down the skirt that will be liked by women of conservative tastes. They may close in a straight line up the center of the front or may have one of the many fanciful crossover arrangements that have been in vogue during the spring and summer, but with the coming of the high waist it is natural that the long revers carried down to a low fastening should be consigned to oblivion.

Many skirts have semicircular side gores that fall into slight ripples, and those that have horizontal bands only appear to be confined by them.

Mary Dean

Laundering Curtains.

Soak lace curtains overnight in a tub of lukewarm water to which are added two tablespoonsful of ammonia and one-quarter cake of laundry soap shaved fine. Drain off the water, but do not lift out the curtains, as the water will make them heavy and liable to tear. Pour in again slightly warm water prepared in the same way. Move the lace about and squeeze it, then drain and put in a third sudsy. Drain and lift carefully into a rinsing water and then into a bluing water. Pass through a wringer, lay over a line until dry, then fasten into curtain frames to stretch. To launder muslin curtains, wash them carefully, starch and iron on the wrong side to make them look like new cloth.

A Pillow For Baby.

A dainty baby pillow is made in this way: A plain center of the material is left quite large enough for the baby's head and a circle of oval eyelets worked, which are run with pale blue or pink ribbon tied at the top in a soft bow of loops and ends. A wreath of small flowers worked solid can also be embroidered just beyond the circle of eyelets. If one wishes a more elaborate pillow. Finish the pillowcase with a hemstitched hem, on the edge of which fine narrow valenciennes lace can be whip-ped.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have been troubled with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nausea, pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), flatulency, headache, giddiness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peptic is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. It will cure you of indigestion, and you will be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A. B. C.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach. But in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A. B. C.

Long Stroke Motor

Every day is adding new laurels to the splendid efficiency and every performance of the 1911 Moline Long Stroke Motor.

Enthusiastic reports are coming in from those who have received 1911 cars, substantiating the fact that the remarkable record made by the Moline in the recent Tour was an epoch-making triumph for the long stroke motor in this country. One who has driven the 1911 Moline says it has no equal (regardless of price) in the motor stroke class. This gratifying experience is naturally due to the many features not obtainable in a short stroke engine. Briefly these are:

Greater power development. Smoother, quieter operation.
Greater flexibility. Economy in gasoline.
Longer life, because of fewer revolutions of engine. Easier in control, especially in crowded thoroughfares.

Other advantages are fully explained in our 1911 Catalog. Easy to Buy The most important thing you want in an automobile is DEPENDABILITY. What better proof of dependability can be asked than the record of the 1911 Moline in the recent Tour, the severest run ever made with an automobile? The next thing is STYLE. The grace and beauty of the car pictured here tells its own story. And then you want a modest PRICE. $1,600 for four-passenger Toy Tonneau, $1,650 for five-passenger Touring Type. Point by point the 1911 Moline compares with cars costing from $600 to $1,000 more.

Several second-hand makes of cars for sale at reasonable prices. The "Excelsior Auto-Cycle," $225 to $310. Used machines (all makes), $50 up.

PLANNING THINGS

"Mother," said Lucy, with characteristic impulsiveness, "Jennie Darton is in town for a week or two, and I want her to come out and let us have a good old gossip. I want to ask her before all the other girls learn that she's here, for then she will have so many engagements that it won't be possible to get hold of her. What do you think?"

"Ask her, by all means, dear," answered Lucy's mother. "I always like to see your friends, and I always loved Jennie. Let's have her to Sunday tea."

"That will be lovely, you dear, sweet mother!" was Lucy's enthusiastic response. "I'll tell her to come early, so we can have a nice, long talk. You boys," turning to her three brothers, "must make no engagements for next Sunday, unless I tell you Jennie's not coming. And we won't have an elaborate meal, mother. Just tea and thin bread and butter and cookies and little candies—just afternoon tea in the parlor."

"If it's going to be a parlor buns-terrible, or a lapest of any kind just count me out," spoke up Brother Harry, promptly. "None of those shaly things for mine!"

"Me too!" said Ben. "I don't stand for tray-and-tea-fights," explained Jimmie, "because just as soon as I get a cup of tea in one hand and a sandwich in the other I have to sneeze."

Now, it is Lucy's pride that her brothers, contrary to the habits of some brothers, nearly always are present at her functions, big and little. Further, they make themselves beautifully agreeable and add to the glory of the occasion. So, with a sigh, she capitulated and agreed to have the meal properly set on the table. But she still clung to her basic idea of simplicity, following her mother to the kitchen to discuss the question of food unhampered by masculine suggestions.

"We'll just have cold meat, a simple salad and plain ice cream and cake, with hot tea," she decided. And "I'd just as soon stay to help you out, Miss Lucy," spoke up Angie, the nice colored maid who has been in the family so long that she is almost one of it. "I'd a heap rather stay in and fix things nice than have you give a poor spread."

"All right, Angie," answered Lucy, who detests an ill-served meal and fairly loathes waiting on the table. "Then we can have tea and coffee and the salad served as a separate course, but that's all the difference we'll make. I'm determined on a simple meal. If we decide to have more we'll find ourselves asking a lot of people, and I want a nice, long talk with Jennie. Mother, what kind of cold meat would you suggest?"

"You're quite determined on cold meat," asked her mother. "I always think at least one hot dish is nice. Creamed chicken or fricasseed veal wouldn't be much more trouble than cold meat, if Angie's going to be here to serve it. And—"

"The young gentlemen, they certainly do love fried chicken," said Angie. "And I could make hot biscuits and strawberry shortcake just as easy as preachin'. And hot coffee certainly do go down fine with fried chicken. And asparagus on toast is lovely with new potatoes, creamed."

"There you are, Lucy!" said her mother. "Now, what do you want? Cold meat, light meal, and not a bit more troublesome than plain cold beef and potato salad. And when it comes to young men like Doll Jones and Ransom Davis and—"

"I hadn't thought of asking them," put in Lucy, a little coldly. "I thought I told you that I just wanted to have a nice, long talk with Jennie."

"Well, I don't know any surer way of getting a nice, long talk with her than by having other people about to talk to the other people. Jennie knows all those boys, and will love to meet them, and you ought to have some more girls, to provide for the extra men and our own boys. And you could think up some funny limericks for the place cards, and—"

"And have a regular formal dinner, with cards and candles and flower petals in the finger bowls, and all sorts of pretty gimcracks," said Lucy, sarcastically.

"Exactly," cried her mother, with growing enthusiasm. "That's the kind of party I really love, daughter; I dislike these little, spindling tea parties as much as the boys do. There's nothing like a round table, with shaded lights and flowers and plenty of good food, too, to make things go swimmingly."

"You just invite about twenty young people for a week from Sunday, instead of next Sunday, and leave all the rest to Angie and me—all that, but the limericks for the place cards and the ordering of the flowers. White and green and red would be a good color scheme, and, of course, we'll have the salad and the dessert to match, with olives and salted almonds and pretty candies."

"Run away and write the invitations, and then forget all about the party until it's time to dress for it. We've got it all settled, Angie and I!" Lucy hesitated helplessly for a moment, as she has done before upon similar occasions. For a moment a little frown disfigured her forehead. Then, when she remembered how popular her dinner parties always had been, and recalled how Ransom Davis, in particular, liked fried chicken and strawberry shortcake, the frown melted into a smile.

Fluffing the Hair. To make the hair which goes over the pompadour fluffy, some girls resort to the device of rough combing it underneath, which means running the comb backward over the hair, and then sprinkling powder over it. Underneath where it does not show when the hair is done up. Combing and powdering in this manner undeniably has a drying effect which makes for fluffiness, but both are too disastrous to the hair to be indulged in, for the rough combing breaks it, while the powder badly clogs the pores.

A LITTLE THING

A little word. Just letters three. One syllable. Short as can be. So tiny, seems. Beyond one's power. Yet it can wreck. The biggest plans.

It nullifies. The highest praise; On surer things. It puts new phases. A promise great. It brings to naught. It alters even. The finest thought.

There's not a word For meaning ridged, Can bear it in. The unabridged; The grandest plans. Off feel its cut. That mean and mealy Little "but."

MANY COATS.

"There's a fellow that puts a different color coat on almost every day."

"He must be a millionaire."

"No; he's a painter."

His Motive. When her husband used the mallet He must be a millionaire. The disgrace of a divorce.

Useless Law. "The copyright law is nothing but a hold-up game on the part of the government," remarked the would-be humorist.

"Why," rejoined the writer who had arrived, "I thought it an excellent law."

"Well, it isn't," answered the other. "Why, I never copyright my jokes, and no one ever steals them."

Friendship's Tribute. Gladys—Did you see what the society column of the Daily Bread said about Nina Gillard the other morning? "She moves with ease and grace in our most exclusive circles!"

Maybelle—Yes, I read it. It's dead certain that the editor who wrote that had never seen her on roller skates.

The Sarcastic Answer. He had one hand tied up in a cloth. "What's the matter?" queried the party with the rubber habit. "Burned my fingers," replied the victim.

"How?" asked the other. "Heaping coals of fire on an enemy's head," was the answer.

His Homecoming. Neighbor—What was that loud noise I heard early this morning? Lady Next Door—I guess it was the dawn breaking, you heard. Neighbor—The dawn breaking! Lady Next Door—Yes. It generally breaks with a crash in our front hall.

Exactly. "Wasn't King George about to go on an ocean voyage at the time of King Edward's death?" "Yes, but he had to give it up in order to mount the throne."

"Postponed on account of reign, eh?"

A CRAZY MAN.

"I want a divorce from my wife." "On what ground?" "Insanity."

"How long has she been that way?" "She isn't that way; I was to marry her."

Changed. With lemons going up and up To heights we never knew, you May believe she loves you if She hands a lemon to you.

Doomed. "I see that Hamilton, the man-bird, smokes cigarettes." "Then it is a race between the flying machine and the cigarette as to which gets him first."

Sympathizing With the Landlady. "And what would you say if you had a boarder that wouldn't eat no canned stuff at all?" "I'd say he was uncanny."

The Way It Looked to Him. "Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge of the defendant in a case of assault and battery. "I think I must be guilty, your honor," answered the defendant.

"You think so?" said the judge. "Don't you know?" answered the prisoner. "It's like this: The plain-plain and I were the only ones in the room, and the first thing I knew was that I was standing up, and he was doubled up under the table. So I guess you'd better call it guilty."

A CORRECTION.

In our editorial of last week on the lighting question, it was intimated that another Electric Lighting Company would compete for the town lighting. We called attention to this as we had been authoritatively told, but not by any of the officials of this company, that such a bid would be submitted. In our editorial we stated that such a bid, in our opinion, would not be looked upon as genuine competition. The official of the Company whose name was connected with this proposition tells us that the Company is not in a position to make a bid for the town lighting and would certainly not under the circumstances make any bid at all for the business. If the information had come to us from any other source than it did, we would never have placed any credence in the rumor that this company would be a bidder at this time for the City's lighting, for the character and standing of the gentlemen in charge of this company's affairs is too high to believe that for a moment they would consent to allow the use of the Company's name for the purpose of making it appear that there was real competition when there was none.

OUR FIRE ALARM.

Hear the loud alarm bells
Brass bells.
What a tale of terror now their tattle
In the started air of night
How they scream out their affright
Too much hurried to work
They can only shriek, shriek, Out of tune.

We are not aware of the place where Edgar Allan Poe obtained his knowledge of fire alarm as made by the ringing of the fire bells, but if he had lived in Salisbury and heard the one which cries out the alarm here, his description would be very much in place. It seems very crude to those who are not in love with the old custom of crying out fire alarms, to be startled on all occasions when there is a fire or only the suspicion of one. If it can be done with the same degree of safety and convenience, and not at too great an expense, an up-to-date system of fire alarms should be put in the City.

THANKSGIVING.

Patience Time has ticked off the days of 1910 one by one until he has reached the time when every one of this nation is called upon to give thanks to his Creator for the blessings which he has enjoyed and for the helpful chastenings received—for men must not think that corrections from above in the shape of so-called misfortunes and disappointments are not for the best, but rather view them in the same light they view corrections and punishments of their own children given in order that they may grow into better men and women.

This country, as a whole, has much cause for thanks free, as it is from the horrors of war, unswayed by any deadly plague, its finances and general prosperity good. All can give thanks that the United States has been cared for and protected.

Thanksgiving, however, appeals more to the private giving of thanks than those offered for the public welfare, and thousands will gather in their homes on next Thursday for the annual feast, when the table will be loaded with good things to make the hearts of those glad, who, during the year have lived away from the old home, and have returned on this day to gladden the hearts of the fond parents at home. Let it be hoped in every home in the land, material things of the day will not be lacking, and that deep down in every heart will be felt the blessings which they have enjoyed during the year, and that thanks will be given reverently and devoutly to Him "from whom all blessings flow."

Let not those who have been unfortunate in their worldly matters, nor those upon whom sickness has fallen, nor those who mourn the loss of loved ones, be forgotten, while the more fortunate ones rejoice around the family circle. To these should be given help and sympathy. We should remember that the greatest minds, the kindest intellects, the finest sensibilities and the noblest souls have found in those who have passed through the hard and rough school of adversity. This course of training is hard to bear while the chastening rod is laid upon the back, and anything that we can do to make the burden more bearable, is but our plain and simple duty, and is only loaning the help and sympathy that we may, at any time, ask others to return to us. The selfish heart can never be a really truly thankful one, and every one should try and make some unfortunate sufferer being more happy and contented on this day.

FLOWER HORTICULTURAL

To Be On Public Exhibition Next Week.
Many Societies Represented.

For five days, beginning November 28th, the Fifth Regiment Armory, on Bolton Street, Baltimore, will be transformed into a flower garden, when the Maryland State Horticultural Society and kindred bodies hold their annual exhibition and annual meetings. The exhibition promises to surpass anything that has ever been held by the organizations, as the entire space in the large armory, including balconies and company rooms, will be given over to the displays.

The societies which will have space for exhibits and who are in charge of the exhibition are: The Maryland State Horticultural Society, the Ocular and Forage Crop Breeders' Association, the Maryland Bee Keepers' Association, the Maryland State Dairy-men's Association, the Farmers' League of Maryland and the Maryland State Grange.

The county vice-presidents of the State Horticultural Society are urging upon the farmers of their counties the benefits to be derived at their participation in such an annual exhibition, and the exhibitors of fruit, vegetables, grains and flowers this year will outnumber by far the ones who filled the big armory with their products last fall.

A 30-page booklet, showing the prizes which will be awarded for the winning exhibits, has been distributed and shows an increased amount of prize money to tempt the display of Maryland's best products.

Tuesday's Proceedings Of County Commissioners.

Commissioner Taylor reported that he had contracted with Lafayette Bounds to work the road from Allen to Collins Wharf, in Trappe District. A request was made by G. W. Mitchell to have a piece of Snow Hill road worked near the six mile house. Referred to Commissioner Ward with power to have the work done.

G. W. Walston and others asked the Board to join them in working the road from Mt. Herman Church to Parker's Chapel. Board agreed to relocate the road and furnish man and grader to do the necessary work if residents would furnish teams and do balance of work. Patrons agreed to this proposition.

Messrs. Benjamin Ward, Frank Parker and others asked the Board to shell a piece of road lying about one-half mile north of where the line road leaves the J. H. West road, recently shelled and extending to the new road built to connect with Melan road. Referred to Commissioner Truitt and Engineer Clark.

The Board took up the matter of final ratification of report made by S. A. Graham, J. W. Freemy and W. C. Mitchell, L. E. Williams and Fred Twilley having filed objections the report was laid over indefinitely.

Mr. John E. Johnson was directed to have Jones' Branch, on the new Snow Hill road, filled and proper drain pipe put in. Commissioner Messick reported that he had contracted with Roberts, Conway & Co. to deliver 200,000 bushels of shells at Salisbury.

Engineer Clark reported that the examiners were ready to report on the Hebron Quantico road. Report of G. E. Jackson, H. W. Jones and M. K. Morris on widening and straightening of road from Wango to Powellville was filed.

Thanksgiving Services.

Union Thanksgiving Services will be held this year at Division Street Baptist Church and Rev. Dr. Walter R. Graham will preach the sermon. These Union services have been held in our city for many years, the pastors of the different churches presiding in the sermons in turn. These services are always well attended by our people and much enjoyed. A collection is taken for the poor, which is divided equally among the churches participating.

The program is as follows:
Organ Prelude.
Chorus by Special Choir.
Doxology.
Invocation by Rev. Mr. Oney.
Hymn.
Scripture reading by Rev. Mr. Beale.

Prayer by Rev. Dr. Martindale.
Hymn.
Reading of President Taft's Proclamation and Announcements by Rev. Mr. Hewitt.
Offering for the poor of the several churches.

Champion Strawberry Shipper.

Statistics compiled by the Pennsylvania Railroad this week show that Bridgeville, Del., is the largest shipping point for strawberries in the United States, having shipped in the past season 4,600,000 quarts of strawberries. Selbyville, Del., still ranks second in the list of strawberry shipping points, while Georgetown has slipped up nearly to third place.

County Superintendent Follows has been making official visits to the schools of the county during the past two weeks. He has so far visited quite a number and expects to complete this line of work by December 1st.

WHAT TO SERVE ON

Thanksgiving Day. Many Appropriate Courses May Be Prepared Several Days in Advance.

In the days of the Puritans, when the whole family walked to church and sat for three hours at a long service in a cold building, and then very likely walked home again, three can be no doubt that they were glad to see the Thanksgiving table well laden with good things to eat, and they probably fell upon them with voracious appetites. But the modern housekeeper who takes pride in preserving the best traditions of her country is quite likely to overfeed the family while doing it. But, fortunately, it is quite possible to have a generously abundant Thanksgiving dinner, with a proper respect for the custom of the country, and yet not provoke the whole family to indigestion. Here is a simple yet sufficient dinner menu, which ought to satisfy the appetite even to a voracious and jolly flock of young people.

Clear Soup.
Radiishes. Olives. Celery.
Roast Turkey. Oyster Stuffing.
Mashed Potatoes.
Cranberry Jelly. Giblet Sauce.
Glazed Sweet Potatoes. Baked Corn.
Custard Jelly. Chopped Pickle.
Salad of White Hearts of Lettuce with French Dressing.
Cream Cheese. Wafers.
Mince and Pumpkin Pie.
Coffee. Erie Cheese and Hot Crackers.
Black Coffee. Nuts and Raisins.

The soup should have been made a few days in advance, so that it only needs to be made very hot before serving. Since the turkey is the principal feature of the dinner, he must be just as nearly perfect as the cook can achieve. For the stuffing use rather soft bread crumbs, moistened and seasoned with melted butter, salt, pepper, a hint of onion and sage if desired. Many cooks nowadays leave out the sage and thyme as detracting from the flavor of the meat. Chopped parsley or celery, oysters, mushrooms or chestnuts are used to vary the stuffing, according to the family taste. If oysters are used they are cut in two with a knife and added to the warm stuffing just before it goes into the turkey. Chestnuts must be boiled to remove the shell, then boiled again until tender enough to chop fine.

Glazed sweet potatoes are made by boiling the potatoes until very tender, then slicing lengthways. Put the slices in a pan, cover with bits of butter and sprinkle lightly with sugar and bake until nicely browned in rather a warm oven.

For the baked corn use a can of graded corn or else chop the ordinary canned corn. Butter the baking dish and put in half the corn; flavor with butter, salt and pepper; then add the rest of the corn and cover with a thin layer of bread crumbs and more seasoning and butter. Bake until thoroughly heated and well browned.

Mince-meat may be made some days in advance of its use. Here is a good rule for it; Three pounds of finely chopped boiled beef, add a pound of suet, three quarts of chopped apples, a quart of stoned raisins, two cups of currants, a quarter of a pound of thin citron, one cup of molasses, a tablespoonful of salt, three cups of sugar, two cups of older, two nutmegs, grated, teaspoonful of cinnamon, the juice of two lemons and two oranges and the grated rind of one of each. Sherry or brandy and various fruit juices and canned fruit may be added at the discretion of the mixer.

On this dinner as a basis many different menus may be built. If more elaboration is desired, a fish course and an entree may be added. Many other vegetables may be used, and rice and pea soup may be used instead of the pie or in addition to them. Cranberry jelly is made by boiling the berries, straining and boiling again with sugar. Pour into a mold and allow to stand over night. Barely water enough to cover the berries should be used and sugar of equal amount to the pulp will be needed. Older makes a nice dinner jelly, boiled with sugar, whole cinnamon and cloves, then poured over a tablespoonful of dissolved gelatine. Stir and pour into a mold. It should be made the day before.

If the cook is also the hostess, she will find it a great help to prepare a good many things beforehand. The following vegetables may be cooked in advance without harm: Cauliflower, flower, squash, turnips, and sweet-tash. They should be kept in a cold place until needed then reheated with plenty of seasoning. Many vegetables may be heated a second time in a white sauce. The turkey should be placed breast downward in the pan and cooked rapidly in a hot oven to preserve the juices, which long cooking dries away.

Lynch, Tull and Elderfield were elected as a board of censors. Dr. Todd was appointed as a delegate to the State Society with Dr. Freemy as alternate. It was decided to hold a meeting of the society every two months, at which meeting papers will be read and matters of general interest to the profession discussed. Among those present were: Drs. Brayshaw, Lynch, Tull, Elderfield, Freemy, Brotomarkie, Morris, Collins, Burris, Potter, Truitt, Wallis, Dick and Todd.

$100 Reward, $100.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that is failed to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. WHAT MANNER OF MAN IS THIS?

Even the Winds and the Waves Obey Him.

On the Atlantic, Nov. 13.—Pastor Russell of the Brooklyn Tabernacle is a household name. He declares that he greatly enjoyed his visit to Great Britain, where he preached in twelve of the principal cities, including three Sundays in London. He greatly admired the reverential sub-strata of religious thought in Britain. Whether or not the people are really more holy than their brethren in the United States and Canada, they are, he says, as a rule, more reverential in their demeanor—in their attitude toward Divine things.

Pastor Russell considers public thought in Great Britain to be at least twenty years behind that of the States in respect to the Bible as a Divine revelation. This is "much in their favor," he says. The Evolution theory and so-called Higher Criticism of the Bible, he says, wrought great havoc amongst the clergy and educated people of America. He finds in Great Britain, the same destructive sentiments at work, but they have not yet reached the masses with such force and poisoning power. Faith in God and in the Bible as his Word Pastor Russell has specially sought to inculcate. He feels greatly encouraged and hopes to see his friends and the public of Great Britain soon again, as they request.

His love for our British cousins has not, however, diminished his love and interest in the people of America. If Americans are less reverential it may also be said that many of them are more independent and more courageous in their convictions respecting the Truth. The British friends should, he thinks, cultivate an independence of thought; while American Christians, losing none of their courage, should cultivate a spirit of reverence for God, for his Word and for all holy things.

Pastor Russell is enjoying his usual good health and continues his literary work on the sea, as on the land. A representative of the American Free Association and a stenographer accompany him. Pastor Russell's address for today was from the following text:

"What manner of man is this? For even the winds and the waves obey him."—Matthew 11, 23.

This text is taken from the Gospel narrative of the storm on the Sea of Galilee, which Jesus was asleep in the hinder part of the vessel, until the sturdy seamen, appalled by the storm, cried to him, Master, carest thou not that we perish? Then the Savior arose and rebuked the storm and there was a great calm. When the fishermen disciples beheld this they said, What kind of person is this that even the winds and the sea obey him?

The speaker declared that although more than eighteen centuries had passed, the same question is going round of most civilized peoples of the world—"What manner of man is this?" Some of the best thinkers and noblest hearts of all nationalities, Jew and Gentile, agree that Jesus of Nazareth was a most wonderful man. It is still agreed, as in the days of his presence, that "never man spake like this man." Some, indeed, called him a deceiver. Others said that he was under the control of evil spirits. Others, going to the opposite extreme, declared that this great Jew was Jehovah himself, who, for the time, was masquerading as a man.

"Wonderful Words of Life."

Pastor Russell contends that the greatest of all Jews told the truth about himself, as well as about other matters. When he prayed to the Father with strong cryings and tears in Gethsemane (Matthew 26, 39), he was not shamming. He was not perpetrating a fraud and deceiving his disciples then and since.

We have great sympathy for the fellow-countrymen of Jesus who, failing to understand him, caused his execution, considering him a menace to their institutions. His wonderful words, his wonderful words of life, of which it is recorded that the public declared, "never man spake like this man," and in general his wonderful personality, seemed really incongruous with his general demeanor. Not claiming to be Jehovah, not claiming to be his own Father, as some now teach, but, on the contrary, declaring, "My Father is greater than I," he nevertheless claimed a special relationship to God; and this he demonstrated by such miracles as the one of our lesson. Had he done and said these things as a member of one of the popular sects of his day, he would have been revered. Had he joined in with the Pharisees and winked at their interpreting the Law in one way for the people and in another manner for themselves, he would have received much honor from the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant. But he antagonized all these by his humility in mingling with the common people, accepting some of them as his special disciples and sending them out as his representatives. This specially branded him as foolish in the eyes of the worldly-wise. This specially discredited him, not only as a man and a teacher, but particularly as one who claimed to be the Messiah, the King of glory who was to set up an Empire. We can well see why worldly-wise people of that day or this day would consider such a person a fraud, a pretender, a deceiver. Appearances were against him.

Jesus declared that the Father sent him and that he delighted to come in obedience to Jehovah's will, to be his agent and servant in the outworking of a great plan for human redemption. Those who deny all of this, and who have awakened so much confusion amongst Christians, and have made the Gospel of Christ impossible to the Jew, should give an account of themselves and explain by what authority they contradict the Great Teacher.

The Father is greater than I," and when they claim that the death of Jesus was merely a farce, and that he was Jehovah merely stepped out of the body of Jesus and perpetrated a fraud and pretended to be dead and aroused his disciples so to think and so to teach, and pretended later to be raised from the dead—those who thus teach and who thus confuse the minds of all Christians and Jewry, should explain away, if they can, the plain statement of the Apostle that God raised up Jesus from the dead by his own power on the third day.

"Art Thou a King Then?"

Picture the Great Teacher walking with his twelve Apostles, a nondescript crowd of those who heard him gladly—not many great, not many learned, not many rich, not many noble. Hear him telling them—those who acknowledge themselves to be ignorant and unlearned (Acts 17, 18)—that, if faithful to him, he would "grant them to sit with him in his Throne." "Judging the twelve tribes of Israel." The statement surely seemed fraudulent, and he had not the heart to condemn the Jews who so misinterpreted him. St. Peter did not condemn them, but could only say, I, your brethren, that in ignorance ye crucified the Prince of Life, as did also your rulers (Acts 13, 15-17).

Can we wonder that the learned Jews of that day were confused? They did, indeed, hear of his miracles—his recovering of sight to the blind and of strength to the withered hand of the impotent man; and, in the case of Lazarus, at least, they had demonstration of his power over the dead. They perceived that these miracles were having an influence upon the masses—that they detracted from their own position amongst the people. They knew that many of Jesus' sayings were wonderfully wise and that his criticisms of their own inconsistencies were remarkably sharp. Yet withal, they said, we know that he is a fraud, because of his peculiar claim to be the Messiah and the Son of God. This claim of his, discountenances all of his teachings and mighty works. It cannot be true that he is the Messiah that our nation has waited for these more than sixteen centuries. God would surely send Messiah a sufficiency of demonstration of glory and power to convince the most intelligent of our nation, the Scribes and Pharisees and Priests. What the all dissent from, repudiate and denounce, must be false.

For the Good of the Nation.

The Jewish wise men of eighteen centuries ago concluded that a man who set the masses agog with anticipation of himself as the Messiah-King, yet was without an army and without financial backing for a campaign, would present their nation to the Romans in a ludicrous light. As a result they might have taken from them, at the word of the Emperor, the civil and religious privileges and rights they were enjoying. They took counsel and determined that in the interests of the peace of the nation this golden-tongued miracle-worker should either be exposed as a fraud or be killed. They tried first to expose him by trapping him in his language in the presence of his followers and the multitude. But his intellect was keener than theirs and the thrusts they made at him rebounded to their own discomfort and established his own standing in the estimation of his followers and in the eyes of the people. One of these efforts to show up the hollowness of his claims and their fraudulence and to discourage his followers is worthy of particular notice, as it furnishes us the key to the sentiment of the rulers and also the key to the real facts of the case which those rulers failed to discern.

The Kingdom in Your Midst.

The influential Jews said, Let us question this fraudulent Messiah respecting his pretensions, not with a hope of correcting him, but with a view to opening the eyes of his followers to the weakness and fallacy of his teachings. Then they will see the hollowness of the hopes they are entertaining and their foolishness in leaving their various avocations to become his followers, in the hope of sitting with him in his Throne. They will see that he has no prospect of ever securing a Throne and that they are merely deluded by him in such expectations. They inquired of him, When will your Kingdom appear? How long will it be before you sit upon your throne and have your followers with you in the Throne? How long before this Messianic Kingdom will rule in Palestine and extend from its borders to the ends of the earth? After you have answered us these questions we will ask you others respecting your financial support and resources—your own qualifications, and your subordinate officers; the arms for your soldiers and the supplies necessary for such a world-campaign as you are about to begin, according to your teachings.

The Great Teacher's brief answer entirely silenced every objection. His questions, had these men been "Israelites indeed," would have been so deeply impressed upon them that they would have followed up the matter with an entirely different line of questioning than at first contemplated. But they were insincere. Hence when their questions, intended to entrap the Teacher and Master, were answered and foiled they merely acknowledged their defeat by their silence. The answer was not, as imperfectly translated in our Common Version—The Kingdom of heaven is within you, hypocritical Pharisees, but, My Kingdom, the Kingdom of heaven, of which I am the King, will not appear at all. It will be an invisible Kingdom—it comes not with observation or outward show. Ye shall neither say, Lo, it is here, nor, Lo, it is there; for it will be everywhere in the midst of you, amongst you, invisible but all-powerful (Luke xvii, 20-22).

Truly, what manner of man was this, and what manner of message and Kingdom was his, so different from anything the Jews had ever expected? Can we wonder that only a comparatively small proportion of them were in the heart attitude to receive this message respecting a Spiritual Kingdom? We cannot wonder! Even his most intimate disciples did not grasp the depth of his teaching until, after his death and resurrection, they, at Pentecost, received the special enlightenment foretold for the servants

God Sends No Soul to Hell

By Rev. Dr. M. LICHTNER.
Pastor Maple Avenue Methodist Church, St. Louis.

Modern Christianity has happily grown away from the old traditional doctrine of hell. The church no longer believes in a place of literal fire and brimstone, into which all unbelievers are cast for an eternity of torment. Even the most rigid orthodoxy allows wide latitude of belief in the whole problem of future punishment. The English courts decided that to express a strong faith in universal restoration was permissible even among the clergy of the established church. In this country there is even greater liberty. One may almost say that there are as many varieties of opinion as there are preachers. There has been a consequent confusion of thought and great obscurity of teaching in this matter.

Two general considerations ought to be emphasized: Reason is helpless to solve the mystery. Arguments based either on the justice of God or his mercy fail before our limited data. The greatest field of undiscovered knowledge is God. Men are always intellectually presumptuous when they begin to question the operations of deity in a world beyond their ken.

In the second place, there is an utter inadequacy of revelation. The references in Scripture to the condition of the wicked after death were evidently intended to be merely illustrative and not descriptive. The fact is that these references are contradictory. Hell cannot, for example, be at once a place of "outer darkness" and a place of blazing flame.

The fact is that God never intended that we should see clearly behind the veil the curtain would have been lifted. In the absence of any clear revelation Christian honesty must refuse to be dogmatic. And in this particular matter Christian honesty must be fearlessly agnostic. One can only rest on certain broad principles which are clearly taught—the wisdom of right living, the danger of evil. A certain law of retribution is written deeply into life itself. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

We approach the whole problem from a new point of view. There is no rational philosophy of life that does not involve a doctrine of hell. And the modern man has found such a doctrine. It is not dogmatic, but it is positive. It does not paint lurid pictures of physical or mental torment, but it sounds clearly and distinctly a note of tragic sadness. And this modern doctrine, like many other modern conceptions of life, finds its source in the classic literature of Israel. In the cry of Hosea, "My God will cast them away because they did not hearken unto him," in the heart-breaking cry of David over the defection of Absalom and his awful death; in the lament of Christ over Jerusalem and in the stern words, "Ye did it not unto one of these little ones," one catches the keynote of life's supreme tragedy, the sin against love. This is the sin of sin. There is an old Latin motto, "Love conquers all," but its idealism is unwarranted.

Love may and often does retire in utter defeat from some of the holiest battlefields of human life. It is possible for sin to vanquish love. But such sin brings speedy vengeance upon itself, born not of God's arbitrary decree, but of its own nature. To sin against love is to render love powerless to redeem. Tennyson tells the whole story in a sentence of striking force, "He who shuts love out shall be himself shut out from love!" And love lost means hell.

It is from this standpoint that the deliberate rejection of Jesus the Christ is the ultimate in the possibilities of sin. I do not mean the failure to accept any doctrinal formula concerning him. I do not mean even the denial of his unique nature, his essential divinity. That is purely a matter of intellectual assent. By the rejection of Christ I mean something deeper and more vital. Whatever may be one's creed Jesus is for all men the expression of the love of God. To turn one's back on that love and wander in the far country in an alien environment, to deny that love in the failure to serve one's fellows, to refuse his invitation to a life of stainless purity, self sacrifice and unselfish service, is to sin against love in its highest and purest aspect. To reject the love of God in Jesus of Nazareth is to make that love powerless to help and to save. And that is hell!

To the modern man, then, hell is not a place of future torment; it is a present attitude of soul. Science tells us that from its standpoint death is simply the lack of correspondence with one's environment. On his spiritual side man's environment is God. The supreme tragedy is man's failure to correspond with that environment. God is love. To live apart from him is hell.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

Life is too short to miss a kindness, too long to cherish hate. Take care of your living and your dying will take care of itself. It's finer being a small bunk of sunshine than a big bank of fog. Some meetings are arranged on the theory that misery loves company. It's no use being poor in spirit annually at the time of tax assessments. The heart is bankrupt already when it counts on the profits of love.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Labor Saving Cleanser.

The labor of housework may be materially lessened and better results obtained by the use of kerosene instead of soap, powder or polish. It is a foe to soil and grime, which disappears under its use as it by magic.

To Wash Windows—Add one-half cupful of kerosene to a gallon of cold or tepid water. Wash with one cloth, wipe dry with a second, and then rub lightly with a third. The result will be windows of a brilliancy and transparency not to be obtained by any other means. Mirrors and chandelier globes may be treated in the same manner.

To Polish Hardwood Floors and Woodwork—Wipe the surface with a cloth slightly dampened with kerosene, then rub lightly with an old soft cloth.

To Whiten Clothes—Three table-spoonfuls of kerosene added to the clothes while boiling makes an excellent bleach. Care must be taken to use only hot water for rinsing and bluing the clothes after the use of kerosene.

This cleanser has the additional value of being excellent for the hands, both softening and whitening them.

Not Sorry For Blunder.

"If my friends hadn't blundered in thinking I was a doomed victim of consumption, I might not be alive now," writes D. T. Sanders, of Harrodsburg, Ky., but for years they saw every attempt to cure a lung racking cough fail. At last I read Dr. King's New Discovery. The effect was wonderful. It soon stopped the cough and I am now in better health than I have had for years. This wonderful life saver is an unrivaled remedy for lung, cold, laryngitis, asthma, bronchitis, whooping cough, and all other weak lungs. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. TONY TANK ROAD

To Be Completed This Week 'And Open To The Public—Fine Highway.

The new tar Macadam road from the City Limits to Tony Tank Mills will be completed this week and thrown open to the public. This road was originally built of shells, jointly by the County and by private subscription. About one year ago the road had gotten in bad condition and was temporarily repaired by the County Commissioners. Last spring it had gotten in such bad condition that it was considered dangerous and the county was compelled to take up the matter of making permanent improvements upon it, so it was a part of the state road system being a link in the road from Salisbury to Allen. The County officials induced the state to take it over at once, and assume the responsibility of rebuilding it. This was done last July. The improvements have consisted in plowing up the old shell bed which had worn through in many places, shaping it up and rolling it into the grade; after putting on a small quantity of shells to strengthen the foundation bed. Over this bed was spread three inches of crushed stone and raked to a uniform surface, then treated to coating of tar asphalt, then surfaced with fine stone. Those who have seen the road say it will compare favorably with bituminous work. This road was built at the expense of the State and will in the future be kept up by the State. Mr. Clark, the county engineer had charge of the work just as he has had of all the other State work in the county. It was a relief to the county to have this work taken over by the State.

KELLY

Miss Manda Pryor held a Social Saturday evening. Quite a number of people were present. Seven dollars was netted.

Mr. James Tarr, aged about 68 years, who stayed with his daughter, fell into the fire while his daughter and her husband had gone to Salisbury. They left a small boy to attend to him until they came back. Mr. Tarr went the boy to the store for some medicine. During his absence Mr. Tarr, in some manner, fell into an open fire place. He was burned so badly that he only lived a short time. Burial in the family grounds at Mr. Joshua Hostetler's. He was well known and will be missed in this community.

Well, the election is all over now, and the sun will rise and set as usual. Some are glad while some are sad.

Mr. Marion D. Collins killed a large goose hawk which measured four feet and three inches from tip to tip of wings. He was after chickens but got fooled as he was killed at a blind made for that purpose.

Miss Ella Parsons spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Marion Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Matthews and little son, Ralph, spent Sunday with Mrs. Mary E. Dixon.

to be roasted and ground at home. Housekeepers then had very few of the conveniences that they have today. They had no running water in the house or stationary washbats or clothes wringers or washing machines or wire clothes lines. Neither had they refrigerators or ice cream freezers or eggbeaters or waffle irons or meat grinders or carpet sweepers or ammonia or borax or gasoline or moth balls or fly paper or fly screens. And they had no matches, and they had no electric lights or gas light, and no kerosene.

There were no sewing machines in 1810. All clothes were made by hand. There were no ready-made things of any kind; not even shoes or hats. Nearly every family spun its own wool and flax and made its own thread and yarn and cloth. The clothes for the boys and girls and the men and women were made at home. So, also, were the carpets, the candles, the soap, the mattresses, and the chairs and tables. There were no furniture factories; no ready-made desks or bookcases or bedsteads or anything else. Such things as were not made at home were made to order by the shoemaker or the hatter or the tailor or the cabinet maker. Clothing stores, shoe stores, hat stores, furniture stores were unheard of.

In 1810 nobody wore rubbers. That was because there were no rubber goods of any kind—over shoes, waterproof raincoats, rubber balls, pencil erasers, hot water bags or anything of that sort. There was no garden hose, no fire hose. There were no water mains there were no fire engines. When a house caught fire men put it out, if they could by throwing buckets of water on the flames.

Fireplaces were the only means of keeping a house warm. There were no furnaces no coal stoves. Here and there a wood burning stove but that was a rare luxury. Steam heating and hot water heating were undreamed of. So also were kitchen ranges and hot water boilers. There were no bathtubs; there was no plumbing and the towns had no sewers. And not only had they no sewers but they also had no street cars. Even horse cars were unknown. All city travel was done on foot or by means of horses and carriages. And if any one ventured out at night he carried his own light with him—a lantern with a candle in it; for there were no street lamps. Electricity and gas and coal oil had not yet come into use. The moon was the best light a town could have at night.

Of course there were no airplanes or automobiles or motor cycles in 1810. Neither were there any bicycles nor any trolley cars and there weren't even any railroads. The locomotive had not yet been invented and the steamboat was being tried for the first time as an experiment.

All travel was done on horseback or by stage coach and those who crossed the ocean did it as Columbus did—in a sailing vessel. It was a three days journey from Philadelphia to Washington. Now you can make the trip in three hours. It took nearly a week for a letter to go from New York to Boston—as long a time as it now requires to send a letter to San Francisco or to London and the cost was six times as great. There were no postage stamps. The person who received a letter paid for it in cash according to the distance it had come. And there were no envelopes and no letter boxes. Letters were simply folded the corners held together with sealing wax, and the address was written on the outside of the letter.

As there were no railroads news traveled only as fast as a horse could run or a ship could sail. There were no wires to carry messages for there was no telegraph and there was no telephone. Consequently there were not many newspapers and such as there were did not have much news to print. Most of them were issued only once a week and such news of the world as they contained was from several days to six months old. All printing was done by hand on wooden presses.

The paper was made from rags. All the writing was done with quill pens—the bony end of a feather pinched from a goose. There were no steel pens no gold pens; no fountain pens no manufactured lead pencils no blotters no typewriters. Pictures in books of persons or places were all made from sketches drawn by hand and engraved in wood. There were no photographs no cameras no kodaks. There was no such word as photograph. Those who wanted portraits of themselves were obliged to hire an artist to paint their pictures.

But we must remember that in 1810 our great grand parents were perfectly satisfied and contented without any of these things. They thought themselves very well off with what they had and those who observed Thanksgiving Day made it a special point to offer earnest thanks to Providence for their many blessings.

Surely, therefore if they could find cause for thanksgiving how much more thankful ought we to be in the midst of the blessings of the age in which we live.

An American Mediterranean

THOUSANDS of Americans are now engaged in a bigger task, in one sense at least, though calling for less physical labor, than the digging of the Panama canal. They are making a new sea. Already the work is practically completed and the new American sea, or as it might better be called, the American Mediterranean, is as clearly defined as a body of water bounded in part by another body of water can be.

Sea entirely surrounded by water are not unknown, as for example the Caribbean sea, which with the coming of the new one, of which it is a part, will achieve the distinction of being a sea within a sea within a sea. The new sea which Americans have pre-empted will, however, have more definite limits than the Caribbean. It reaches from the ill-fated Bermuda on the north, from which come every Easter millions of blossoms, to the northern coast of South America on the south, and from the coast of the United States and Mexico on the west to the eastern boundary of the West Indies on the east. That in brief is the extent of the American Mediterranean, which approximates in area that of its European predecessor, whose popularity, among Americans at least, it is rapidly usurping.

The parallel, indeed, is striking. Just as the Mediterranean is Europe's winter playground, so is the new sea that of America. Like the Mediterranean, its waters are warm and blue. The civilization of its islands is both ancient and modern. And corresponding to the Riviera is the Florida coast. In many respects the new sea far surpasses its older rival. Its numerous islands make it a most alluring cruising ground, while the attractions for the sportsman are unsurpassed. Romance, too, is everywhere.

The making, or pre-empting, of this new sea has not, of course, come by way of treaty or seizure. Its accomplishment has been largely social. Whether or not Cuba is ever actually annexed to the United States, the fact remains that socially speaking the whole of the West Indies has already been annexed and pre-empted. In this annexation was laid the beginning of the movement which, through the enthusiasm of yachtsmen, tourists and permanent winter visitors, has resulted in the creation of the new sea.

For its achievement a large share of credit must naturally go to yachtsmen, since they in the role of Argonauts first appreciated the attractions offered. Ten or a dozen years ago nine out of every ten persons owning yachts big enough to make the passage made a European winter cruise. Now four-fifths at least go to the new American Mediterranean, and while it is an almost daily occurrence to read that Mr. So and So has sailed on his yacht with a party of friends for a cruise in these waters, the report of a clearance for Europe is rapidly becoming a rarity. The annual race of power boats from New York to Bermuda has had a marked effect on the trend of winter cruising.

At any rate it is estimated on good authority that more than ten million dollars are spent every winter in such cruises by New York yacht owners alone. Of course not every one can visit the new sea in his own private yacht, since the cost of such a cruise may vary from $2,000 to $50,000 or $75,000, depending on the size of the boat and the length of the cruise, for of all costs luxury the steam yacht is certainly entitled to first place.

As a result has come a new and novel development which has been called the "co-operative" yacht, by means of which a person who neither owns a yacht himself nor is acquainted with anyone who does can make his winter cruise to the American Mediterranean under conditions of comfort and safety superior even to those enjoyed by the owner of the largest yacht afloat. And this, too, at only a very small fraction of the cost. This new achievement is made possible by several of the largest Trans-Atlantic steamship lines having adopted the practice of diverting from their regular winter service one or more of their largest boats to be used for winter cruises of two weeks to the waters of the West Indies. The cruises are not a mad dash from point to point, but cruises in every sense of the word, just as one would make them in a yacht.

Next to visitors of this class come the owners of small sail boats who may elect to put in the whole winter making various short cruises from a fixed base. They, of course, see only a small part of the territory, but are nevertheless extremely numerous, their small white sails always dotting the horizon.

Society, too, has made the American Mediterranean with its center at Havana a fixture, and in so doing brought about a queer reversal of affairs. Years ago Saratoga springs during the summer was the mecca of wealthy Cuban visitors who came to take the waters and for the horse racing and gaming of all descriptions which then flourished unrestricted. Now a Cuban in Saratoga is a rarity, and instead American society is going each winter in rapidly increasing numbers to Cuba and other islands, where, as well as at the Panama canal, numbers of new hotels of the most modern kind are being built.

When it comes down to the romantic atmosphere the visitor to the American Mediterranean need concede nothing to the European traveler. He finds it in chunks. The climate, the palms, the lure of the pearl fisheries and the little brown divers, the mysteries of Voodoo worship and its weird rites, traditions of pirates and buried gold, all these furnish enough romance to satisfy even the most demanding. And as has been said, the whole area is literally a sportsman's paradise. Even the enthusiastic baseball fan can see the great American game played by experts.

Aside from the communal winter cruises, the Panama canal has undoubtedly had a marked effect in drawing Americans to the winter playground. Indeed, in one sense it has achieved the result which caused consternation on the part of a certain man, who, on being told that the Pacific ocean was lower than the Atlantic, immediately demanded that the digging of the canal be stopped at once lest on its completion the whole Atlantic would be sucked through into the Pacific. It is in part due to the concentration of interest in the canal zone in particular, and the adjacent territory in general, that so many visitors have been drawn to the American Mediterranean. Indeed, it now seems certain that before long the effect of this drawing power will be felt in Europe, with the result that it will be to the American and not to the European Mediterranean that many foreigners will make the winter cruises which are proving so popular here.

ARNOLD KELLER.

A Theory.

"Infant prodigies are hard to understand," said the man who is easily impressed. "I don't think so," replied Miss Cayenne. "As a rule they are simply young people with highly imaginative parents."

Of course, you understand there wouldn't be so much bargain-counting advice floating around if it were really worth anything.

What Hunters Teach Animals.

If proof were needed of the part played by sportsmen in this education of the wild, we have it in their occasional limitations when confronted by dangers of another kind. No number of fatalities keeps these game birds away from the telephone wires; no lengthening death roll warns the woodcocks and other fly by night to avoid the fatal lantern of the light-house. Not all the centuries of havoc have taught the larks to build their nests out of reach of scythe and sickle. Only the noisier menace of dogs and guns has brought acquired experience. In this the true sportsman has his consolation, for if difficulty be the essence of sport then that difficulty is likely to increase.—Fall Mail Gazette.

A "Practical" Ghost.

London Society relates "one of the few instances in which a ghost is recorded to have played a really practical part. It happened in thirty some years ago, when an Englishman who was taking a solitary walking tour in the interior of the island suddenly became aware that a friend of his who had died some time before was walking by his side. A little further on he came across some brigands who were evidently lying in wait to attack him. They looked at him and then remarked, with evident surprise, 'Why, there are two of them?' and immediately hurried away, thinking it was not safe to attack them." The writer does not tell what happened then, but leaves one to draw his own conclusions.

The German Lawyer's Outfit.

"The black robe and the cap belong to the outfit of a lawyer in the German metropolis," writes an American tourist from that place, "and when the lawyer attains the dignity of judge the collar on his robe is changed from silk to velvet. When this law providing for the 'guard of dignity' was passed the prescribed dress for practicing attorneys included a white necktie. Years ago this custom ceased to be observed because, as lawyers tell me, it was expensive and troublesome. There is one judge in Berlin, however, who insists on the proper dress, and lawyers who appear before him must expect, if neckties be black, to be turned away with the remark, 'Your cravat is too white.'"

Sounded Like "Fire!"

Some years ago a man banged furiously against a locked door in one of the upper corridors of a hotel at Saratoga Springs and shouted "Meyer, Meyer!" It was a warm Sunday afternoon and most of the guests were in their rooms, many of them napping. Immediately there was a great commotion in the house and panic-stricken, scantily dressed people rushed through the halls and down the stairways. When the cause of the alarm was ascertained the proprietor told the man who had shouted that if he wished to remain in the hotel he would have to call his small boy John while his visit lasted, and "John" the boy remained to the season's end.

Unexploded Asia.

David George Hogarth, the geographer and explorer, said that in western Asia there are vast areas on which no European foot is known to have trod nor even any European eye to have looked. The greatest unexplored area lies in Arabia. Almost all the southern half of Arabia is occupied, according to native report, by a vast wilderness called generally Ruba al Khali, "Dwelling of the Void." No European has ever entered this immense tract, which embraces some 600,000 square miles. It would take a bold man to venture out for the passage of either 800 miles west to east or 500 north to south in the lathern zone of the world's greatest heat.

Indebtedness.

Delightfully Irish and liberal at the same time is a double view of Luther which the famous Father Mathew expressed when he was in London in 1845. He was speaking in the street, and somebody, Katherine Tynan says in her biography of the great apostle of total abstinence, tried to stir up the crowd against him.

"What good can come to you from that man?" sneered the speaker. "He is only a popish monk."

Whereupon Father Mathew's Irish blood rose, and he demanded hotly: "And what do you mean by saying no good can come from a popish monk? Have you not received Christianity from a popish monk—the reformation from a popish monk, Martin Luther?"

Little Tom's Choice.

A certain small Tom was going out to luncheon by invitation. His mother was anxious he should behave well, but, wisely recalling that simplicity is the essence of all true politeness, gave him but one caution: "Act, Tom, as if you were at home. Take what you want with a 'Yes, please,' and decline anything with a polite 'No, thank you.' Be as honest as at our own tables," trusting that with his confidence established the continual home sowing of precept and example would bear its fruit.

At night Tom reported results. "I guess I did all right, mother, though I got a laugh on me once."

"What was that?" inquired his mother.

"Well, we had baked apples, and when it came my turn to be served Mrs. C. said, 'And now, Tom, what apple do you want?'"

"You told her, of course," interpolated his mother as the boy hesitated a little. "Tom, now, I have often explained that it is good manners to give a choice when one is asked."

"Yes, mother, I told her, and she was the laugh," I said, "The one I want is gone!"

In Search of Health

By GEORGE M. DAVIS

Bayard Drillham walked down the main street of the village of Perch Harbor with his head slightly tilted to one side.

When acquaintances of Mr. Drillham met him walking down Le-Salle street in Chicago with his head at that angle, or when his office force observed him inclining his neatly parted hair toward one shoulder, he never so slightly, they noticed themselves deftly, swiftly, for they knew the sign—Mr. Drillham was in a bad temper.

Originally he had started out in life possessed of the average good nature of his kind, but many things combined to foster latent irritability. He had been an only son and money had surrounded him from the cradle. He had been fawned on in college and catered to by people in general and business success had also been his.

There was little wonder then that, at 35, Bayard Drillham should have grown into the way of thinking all things must move at his bidding; that the very universe must jump at his call. And in Perch Harbor he had struck a snag in the smooth running of his life. His city newspapers arrived or did not arrive according to their own sweet will, apparently, and though he had been ordered to the small Wisconsin town by his physician for a month's absolute rest he could not shut himself off entirely from news of the world and the market. If he could not be there in the thick of the fight with the other brokers, he at least must keep tabs on them. And he was heading with blue fire in his eyes for the tiny little news depot the town boasted. Behind the counter was the shock-haired boy to whom he had given his order a few days after arriving. Mr. Drillham fixed on him his stoniest glance and experienced a feeling of considerable elation at the knowledge of the forthcoming verbal flogging, for ill health had reduced him even to such a mental state. The boy stared back with interest for to his untutored sense this immaculately clad man with the square chin and clear-cut features and keen eye was worth looking at.

And in a low, even voice Mr. Drillham started in. "If you people used an ounce of sense," he ended, with some heat, "or showed the slightest desire to accommodate your customers, you might do a decent business, but as things go now—why, I got my paper on only three days this week!—you'll be in the bankruptcy court in a month! There isn't any system, not even human common sense of the most ordinary garden variety!"

Bayard Drillham was not conscious that he had ceased speaking. In the door behind the shock-headed boy, with one hand pressed against the casing, a woman had suddenly appeared and stood facing him, head thrown back. As he looked at her, a living, breathing incarnation of wrath, it dawned on him that, after all, she was only a girl, in spite of the superb carriage, the Juno shoulders, the entire air of sufficiency. Her eyes burned dark beneath brows lined by a delicate and ink pencil, her teeth were sunk against her scarlet lips. Afterward Bayard remarked that if she had suddenly buried a sheet of thunderbolts at him he should not have been in the least amazed. What she did do was to move swiftly forward, so that only the counter separated her from the irate customer, and her rich voice was vibrant.

"One would suppose," she said, "that your own supply of common sense would teach you that you are wasting your complaints on a boy of 15 who earns $3 a week and doesn't care a tuppence whether the business succeeds or fails! Why don't you come to headquarters?"

"And that is—?" stammered Drillham.

"Myself!" flashed the girl. There was a deep color rising in her cheeks and, strangely enough, her lip quivered. She bent over a pad of paper. "If you will repeat your order to me," she said, in an expressionless voice, and Drillham meekly did so, his head whirling. Never in his life had he been caught up so sharply or so coldly set in his place.

A sense of his foolish petulance swept over him like a hot wave and his sick nerves quivered. Yet how could he explain to this girl, an utter stranger, that she mustn't mind, because really he was half an invalid? And why should it make any difference to him what she thought of him? Yet he writhed as he stood there. His order ended, watching her. Suddenly she lifted her eyes as with an effort. She was very pale now and he felt as if there was a hint of appeal in her gaze. Was there, on earth, any other creature of such varying aspects and moods?

He glanced around the little shop desperately and bought an armful of magazines at random. The shock-headed boy waited on him and the girl retired again to her tiny office, but bent over the desk. Still dazed, he left the shop and dropped into the drug store. He had made friends with the queer old proprietor.

"Who is she?" repeated the old man as Drillham lighted the cigar just purchased.

"Say, that girl's all right! Her dad owned that store, no-account he was, but he worshiped Judith. The only thing that kept him at work at all was that she wanted to go to college, and he had to earn that money. And in the middle of her second year he up and died, and after the funeral, when she found that store was all she had in the world, why, she just naturally started out to run it. That was three months ago. Of course, she isn't much on business, but she gets along."

"She impressed me as being decidedly able to take care of herself," Drillham found himself saying a little curtly.

The old man laughed. "Judith's got a way with her," he said. "She always carried her head high. But I've seen her cry over a robin with a busted leg when she was younger and lordy, but she can run from a cow! She's a real girl after all!"

Bayard Drillham walked back slowly to his quiet boarding place. He was trying to imagine Judith White frightened, appealing, tremulous, and could not. Yet as he pictured her face, tempestuous, haughty and commanding, he remembered suddenly that odd little quiver to her lips, and her pallor. It was a curious combination.

It was so curious that the following day found him back in the little shop, where he demanded more magazines, quite unabashed at the memory of his yesterday's purchases. The boy was away and Judith herself waited on him, cool, reserved, polite. She wore dark blue, with white collar and cuffs, knew she looked as if she were dressed for a part in a play. Somehow his attempts at conversation, while frankly met, never got anywhere, and he found himself going out when he most decidedly wished to stay in.

And for many days the little scene was repeated. He told himself it was merely an idle curiosity to see if he could catch the goddess of her guard, to find if she really were like other girls. A mad idea of hunting up a broken-legged bird possessed him. And each day brought him more firmly under thrall of her deep, dark eyes, her aloofness, her superb ability to care for herself.

Never had Bayard Drillham so patiently tried to make friends with any man, to say nothing of a woman, for all his life he had fled from them and never had he encountered such an impassable wall. So constantly were his thoughts centered on the amazing girl in the stuffy little shop that he forgot to think of himself and his illness and the result was that health sought him out. Yet he stayed on in Perch Harbor. Once he said to her half fiercely, "Do you intend to waste your whole life here?"

"Why, not?" she had countered indignantly. "I was born here! I belong here!"

Judith was paler these days, and one morning Drillham, vaguely worried, entered the shop only to find it empty. There was no sound, and he stepped to the door leading to her little office. There with her head down on her outspread arms was Judith. As he looked her shoulders heaved.

With one bound Bayard Drillham was beside her, drawing her to him as one draws a weeping child. "What is it, Judith?" he asked terrified.

"What has happened?"

The fact that instead of repelling him she half clung to him in a limp and a despair added to his terror.

"Oh," she gasped hopelessly, "I've had to give up! I'm beaten! I've fought and been concealed enough to think I could do things, but I guess you were right! There's been no system or common sense in the way I've run the business, and now I've run it into the ground! The store'll be closed to-morrow!"

Bayard Drillham looked down at the tear-stained face with a great thrill of unutterable happiness. His goddess was only a girl after all!

"Confound the store!" he told her. "I've wanted to marry you all along and never dared say so before! Can't you care a little? Won't you go back with me, dear?"

"I've cared ever since I was so angry at you that first time," confessed Judith unexpectedly.

The Brighter Side.

One of the easiest things in the world is to form the habit of grumbling. The occasional discontent at one's lot soon develops into chronic pessimism, a state of mind that sheds gloom around and completely overshadows the natural brightness of every normal, healthy being.

There's an old saying that puts the matter in a nutshell: "If you can't have what you like, like what you have." Try to see the good that may lie far beneath the surface of your lot, but in the effort to unearth it there will be developed a greater strength to withstand the harder knocks of the world.

The grumbler is a very unwelcome person. He is in a constant state of displeasure with everything in general and with himself in particular; it is a reputation that few of us envy or covet, and one that if care be not used in the daily attitude toward life, will grow upon us until we are the slaves of a disagreeable habit.

RESIDENCE DESTROYED

By Fire. Furniture All Saved. Home Of J. Ernest Moore.

The home of Mr. J. Ernest Moore, on Broad Street, was destroyed by fire on Monday afternoon. This fire caught in the rear of the dwelling near the chimney. Those who arrived early on the scene noticed a slight blaze on the roof at this point which would have been easily extinguished at this time even by a fire brigade of buckets. As the fire department was expected every moment no attempt, however, was made to put out the blaze. As the minutes passed on and still no engine, it was seen that the fire was gaining much headway as to endanger the house and as it had soon gone beyond any control, except that of the fire engine, the numerous spectators joined in an attempt to get out all the valuable and furnishings of the house. These were all moved out, even to the mantle pieces and some of the window sashes.

Then, just when it looked as though not only this but, property adjoining, must go unless help arrived at once the horse drawing the engine and hose put in its appearance. The horses used for drawing the engine had been at work on the streets in Camden and the delay was caused by their absence.

The house was practically destroyed causing a loss estimated at about $3000. It is understood that this is partially covered by insurance. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that the fire would have caused little or no damage if the horses had been in their stables when the fire bell rang, their absence at this time causing a loss to some one of close to $3000. After the arrival of the fire department they did exceptionally good work, and that the house was burned was not due to any negligence on their part.

MOST PROSPEROUS

Are The Farmers. But Mechanics Are Apace. Sh's Ravages Excel Nation's Resources.

Most favored and prosperous of all men are the farmer and the mechanic. It was the opinion expressed in the Thanksgiving Day sermon preached in Central Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Thursday morning by Rev. De Witt M. Bennham. While the farmer and mechanic are prospering, the preacher urged that they should not forget that there is a moral and religious side to the elements which sustain this nation's life. "National resources, however rich and varied," continued Dr. Bennham, "cannot contend successfully against the ravages of sin."

The condition of the farmers has vastly improved and is improving. He is receiving fine prices for his products; he is paying off the mortgage on his farm; he is putting money into the savings banks; he is buying good securities; he is rebuilding and refurnishing his house; he is pulling down his old barns and constructing bigger ones; he is making use of the telephone to communicate with his neighbor; he is getting his mail by rural free delivery; he takes a daily newspaper; he subscribes for several magazines; he stocks his shelves with good books; he has a trolley line in the vicinity of his farm; he influences the State to make appropriations for better roads; he buys an automobile; he makes use of the most approved type of farm machinery; he studies chemistry, so as to know what fertilizing agencies to employ; he sends his son to an agricultural college; he organizes a local grange; he supports a lecture course and a reading club; he gives his children the advantages of a higher education; he builds pretty stone churches to take the place of the ancient wooden box in which his ancestors worshipped; he pays his taxes, and puts up a brick schoolhouse. And we can no longer talk about the poor farmer. He does not need our sympathy.

And down in the city this farmer has a brother who is a mechanic. And this mechanic is no longer a "wage slave." He is an employee in a big factory. He works nine hours a day and looks forward to a time when he will work but eight hours. He manages a machine which can almost think and which has the fingers of a hundred men. He lives well, dresses well, has wholesome food in spite of the high prices. Not a day passes in which there is not meat on the table. His wife and children are neat and respectable in appearance. He occupies a good house, which he is gradually paying for and expects some day to own; with sanitary plumbing, bath room, hot and cold water, furnace heat, gas and electric light. He attends lectures and concerts with his family and is a worker in the church. He takes a pride in the city, is abreast of the times, and when he votes, as he always does, he votes right.

"We are solving the problem of ignorance by means of the public school. We have superb advantages in this respect. From the kindergarten to the State University we care for the education of the youth. But what of the problem of sin? Are we meeting and solving that problem effectually? How are we to impart the religious convictions without which no nation is secure? What text book shall we use? There is but one text book worthy of the name, and that is the Word of God, It is the Bible. And it is not to be used in the public schools it must be used in the private schools, and in the Sunday Schools, and in the homes of the people. It must be taught and studied, preached and practiced. It must be made to live again in the lives of our citizens."

CLOCK WEIGHT FALLS.

Court House Damaged. Weight Stopped By Vault.

The weights on the bell of the town clock on the courthouse broke loose from their heavy cable Monday morning and crashed through the building. They were up in the top of the clock tower, suspended about three feet from the floor when they broke loose, going through two floors and two sets of steps leading to the courtroom on the second floor. Immediately under these steps is a fireproof safe used in the register of wills' office, the weights hitting directly on top of the peak of it, which stopped them.

The damage to the courthouse is estimated at over $500. The accident occurred between seven and eight o'clock, before the regular attendants at the courthouse had arrived. This clock bell is used as a fire bell and the weights fell in the exact spot on which a person would have to stand to ring the fire bell.

THE COOPER—PERRY

Marriage To Take Place Today At St. Peter's Church, This City.

One of the most prominent weddings of the season will occur today at St. Peter's Protestant Episcopal Church at one o'clock when Miss Louise Waller Perry, only daughter of County Treasurer and Mrs. Thomas Perry will be united in marriage to Mr. Mark Cooper, a prominent young business man of this town.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. David Howard and the church decorated in evergreens and chrysanthemums. The bride will wear a handsome gown of white satin, with hand embroidery and pearl trimmings. Her veil will be fastened with pearls and she will carry a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

The wedding will be one of the attractive rainbow color scheme. The maid of honor, Miss Nell Waller, of Princess Anne will wear a blue satin gown covered with gold spangled net.

The bridesmaids will be gowned as follows; Miss Mary Lee White and Miss Lettie Leatherbury in yellow messaline, draped in chiffon, with gold trimmings. Miss Beattie Dashiell, of Baltimore, and Miss Wilkie Lowe in pink messaline draped with chiffon and gold trimmings and Miss Joan Leonard and Miss Mary Tighman in green messaline, draped with chiffon and gold trimmings. They will all wear huge black velvet picture hats, trimmed with willow plumes, black velvet slippers and carry chrysanthemums.

The bride will enter the church on the arm of her father who will give her away. A large gate of flowers leading to the altar will be opened for the bride party by Master William Cooper, little nephew of the groom and little Miss Lucy White.

The groom's best man will be Mr. William Perry, of Wilmington, N. C. brother of the bride. The ushers will be Mr. John Wetter, of Baltimore, Mr. Charles Cooper, Mr. Thomas Perry, Jr., Mr. Howard Quark, Mr. G. Vickers White and Mr. William E. Tighman. Immediately after the ceremony the couple will leave for a southern trip. After their return they will reside on William Street.

Miss Perry entertained the wedding party at her home on William Street Friday evening at a progressive supper. The guests were seated at small tables, decorated in rainbow colors.

EIGHTH ANNUAL MEETING

Of The Peninsula Produce Exchange. The Year's Business. Election Of Officers.

The Eighth Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Peninsula Produce Exchange of Maryland was held in the Pocomoke Opera House, Pocomoke City, Md., Wednesday, November 23rd, 1910.

The Secretary's report on the year's business again shows an increase over this business of previous years, especially was this so in number of packages handled through the Exchange, there being a gain of fifty per cent over 1909, the heaviest previous year. Gross sales this year up to November 15th amounted to $434,447.36, an increase of $59,373.36 over the same period of last year. Net earnings this year have so far amounted to $309.06.

Altogether this is considered a very good showing, considering the fact that Irish potatoes, looked upon as our largest and best paying crop, sold very low during the whole season.

The following officers for the year 1911 were elected at this meeting: President, Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md.; Vice President, E. E. Nook, of Stockton, Md.; Secretary, Treasurer and General Manager, W. O. Cullen, Pocomoke City, Md.; Sales Manager, H. W. Merrill, of Philadelphia, Pa. Mr. Merrill has had considerable experience along this line having been in the Produce and Exchange Commission business for practically his whole active life, and we feel that the Exchange has done well to secure his services.

The following Directors were also elected: E. E. Nook, W. T. Groten, C. J. Byrd, F. E. Matthews, R. W. Adams, I. H. Hall and R. C. Peters.

This organization now numbers among its members nearly two thousand shippers and is constantly adding to its ranks. From present indications there will be an increased acreage of the different crops planted during the seasons of 1911 and the officers and management look for another and greater increase of business in the coming year. The farmers understand that this is their exchange and that they are going to get for their goods shipped through the same all that they will bring and they therefore increase their acreage year by year feeling sure that the market will be found to accommodate their increased output.

THE WEDNESDAY RECITAL

At Uman's Opera House Will Be A Lending Entertainment Of The Season In Music.

Mr. Walter G. Charnbury, of Baltimore, the pianist, who will play at the recital at the Opera House next Wednesday evening, November 24th, has received some very flattering newspaper notices of the numerous recitals which he has given. The following are a few extracts selected at random:

"Mr. Charnbury rendered an exceptional program from classic and modern masters in a highly artistic manner. He is possessed of ample technical equipment, and rare pianistic talent, and his readings were serious and showed a thoughtful understanding of his difficult program," from the Baltimore "American" April 24, 1910.

Mr. Charnbury was obliged to give two encores in response to enthusiastic demands," from "Musical America," December 11, 1910.

"Walter Charnbury, pianist, is highly gifted, and played delightfully," from "The Musical Courier," December 8, 1910.

"Mr. Charnbury has developed a splendid technique and fine gifts of interpretation and his work at the recital was enthusiastically received," from the Amherst, Massachusetts, "Record," June 22, 1910.

Mr. William A. McLeran, baritone, also of Baltimore, who will assist Mr. Charnbury at the recital, has also received many newspaper notices of a very complimentary character on the quality and sweetness of his voice. The recital certainly promises to be the big society event of the season here, and matrons and maids are working hard to make it a big success. The patronesses will be: Miss Irma Graham, Mrs. E. Stanley Tondue, Mrs. Gardiner Spring, Mrs. S. A. Graham, Mrs. I. W. Gunby.

RATINE THE LATEST.

A Fabric Finding Favor For Late Fall and Winter Suits.

Seen, Meets, in Gray and Black, Though Blue With a Striped Effect Has Gained Much Popularity.

The question of what to wear in the street has been uppermost in the feminine mind and has been answered by Paris.

The novelty of the winter for tailored suits is ratine.

A rough material is this new favorite. It is raised wool in plain or different colored threads and comes in stripes or in a diagonal weave. Gray, brown and corbeau blues are dominant in the fashionable color world of tailored suits.

Velvet place in black is shown in our illustration. Buttons in straight lines trim the sleeves and cuffs, with sim-lated buttonholes of silk braid. The revers and cuffs are of violet moire. The smartness of velvet in strict tailored lines is here shown, and there is no possible denial of its chic effect.

Dark blue cheviot trimmed with blue satin is a suit for less formal occasions. A sailor collar of satin rolls back over a tiny vest of chambray. Insets of satin and bands of braid are used on coat and skirt, and two ornaments of braid fasten the jacket.

Then there is the long cutaway coat held at the front in a high line. The rolling revers are a continuation of the sailor collar. Turned back cuffs are strapped and trimmed with huge buttons. Stitching gives the smart tailored finish to the whole. With this suit are worn shoes with cloth tops that match the gown—a detail to which the Parisienne pays strict attention.

A coarsely woven cheviot in peacock blue will also prove smart.

The cutaway effect is suggested, but with a double coat, which is brought about by the extended skirt of the jacket that reaches in front to the hem of the skirt. Long, supple revers should be fastened over a broadcloth vest of gray. Let black satin extend from the yoke back in a square collar. The skirt is kilted and hangs in straight lines.

For afternoon wear a long black velvet coat trimmed with soutache braid and silver lynx is good. Loose sleeves are edged with the fur, and a short high collar protects the throat. Buttons fasten the oddly shaped front line. These velvet coats are much in vogue, to be worn with little velvet frocks.

A tailored suit for business wear is always looked for by the active woman. It would be well to have long revers cross to one side and held by buttons and motifs of braid. These ornaments should appear again on the side of the skirt. Gray and black ratine is the fabric of which this serviceable suit is made. For a practical suggestion it sounds a friendly note to our women.

In the morning or the afternoon hours woman has been well cared for by the designers of Paris. As characteristic of lines and tendencies, these suggestions stand for the most reliable and the best.

A novel handkerchief case consists of two squares a little larger than a folded handkerchief of cardboard, padded and covered outside with cretonne and inside with silk, with a buttonhole edge or a band of gilt galloon. The handkerchiefs go between these, and the case is held together by a circle of silk rubber with a lace edging. This case is very convenient for traveling, as it holds a number of handkerchiefs and does not take up the space of the ordinary handkerchief case.

NEW MATERIALS.

Needleworkers Can Find Relief In New Stuffs That Have Made Their Appearance This Year.

The needleworker who is tired to death of the same old linen and canvas for fancy work will welcome the new and attractive materials which have been brought out this year for the working of such articles as pillowcases, table covers, centerpieces and boudoir sets.

One of these is an ecru fabric, closely resembling rep, but cross ribbed with a much finer cord. The ground is the color of unbleached linen, but it has irregular lengthwise stripes of a darker ecru shade.

Another material is apparently rather loosely woven, but is kept firm by the arrangement of the cross threads in a honeycomb weave. Still a third has a slightly irregular plain weave.

Soft white canvas cloth in a basket weave is another novelty, and so is brown linen for the purposes of embroidery.

All of these materials may be had plain or stamped in various designs at any notion or fancy work shop, and offer endless possibilities for the larger and freer forms of embroidery.

PREVENT OILY SKIN.

Excessive Use of Powder Does Not Conceal It, but Washing the Face With Alcohol Has Good Effect.

When one's skin is oily do not try to conceal it by excessive use of powder. It makes the face pasty and clogs the pores.

There are various drying lotions that are excellent for this condition. Wiping off the face with pure alcohol has a drying effect on the skin. Various good lotions are sold for this purpose, but a teaspoonful of borax in a basin of water is excellent.

If you fear pure borax try this lotion: One tablespoonful of powdered borax, two tablespoonfuls of glycerin and a quart of camphor water. Dip a soft linen cloth in this and mop the face several times a day.

Do not make the mistake of using spirits of camphor, which is diluted in alcohol and much stronger. Camphor water is made by letting two ounces of gum camphor stand in water for twenty-four hours. The lump can be used repeatedly, as its size is little decreased.

Collars Made of Milk.

Imitation celluloid collars made of goat's milk are used in Paris by artists, tradesmen, waiters and coachmen. The milk collars are said to be as serviceable as the celluloid and to have less polish, which makes them a great improvement. In preparing the milk for collars the curds are drained off the whey and subjected to high pressure, resulting in a substance that looks very much like celluloid. Milk curds have been used in Europe for many years for the making of billiard balls, combs, imitation bone knife handles and collar buttons.

Black and White Eton.

Among the new eon suits sent out by the Paris dressmakers may be noted cream colored moire suits with square black sailor collars of mouseline de soie, and also black satin suits with white cloth sailor collars, finished with a double row of gilt buttons down the front of the short jacket. In black and white fabric combinations white silk with a black velvet stripe has been seen.

A LINEN FROCK.

This morning frock is of very dark natural color linen, with trimmings of heavy lace in the same tone. The sleeves, bodice and bib are bordered with the lace, and there are also a yoke of lace and a little gathered under-edge of batiste in self tone. The skirt is a simple five goared affair, with center and side panels, bordered by the lace and caught together by crocheted buttons and loops. These trim the bodice also. A toque of rough brown straw, girdled by a band of brown velvet, which ties in a large flat bow at the back, is worn with this frock.

SWINDLING SCHEMES AND THE MAIL.

United States Postal authorities for several years have tried to check the operations of swindlers by debarring their literature from the mails but found, in spite of this that the companies flourished and grew in number all the time. This week the authorities have adopted a new course which, if continued, will force all large swindling concerns out of business.

This new method of dealing with those who are using the mails for the purpose of getting in touch with thousands all over the land with the idea of selling them stock in some bogus enterprise or stock swindling scheme, is the arrest and prosecution of the promoters and officers of bogus corporations. The arrest of the brokers in New York city who are credited with having swindled the credulous public out of close to $100,000,000 has caused all those engaged in this business to sit up and take notice, and according to reports has already resulted in making many of these swindlers back up and get out.

If this policy is continued these men will be driven out of business and millions of dollars saved each year to the citizens of this country. Legitimate enterprises will have more chance to get money needed to carry out their plans. This country at the present time is filled with these bogus corporations and swindling schemes and there is hardly a section which has not felt the effect of their operations.

THE ADVERTISER in an editorial some time back took occasion to warn our people against investing their money in things of which they know nothing at all about, and urged them not to be misled by the alluring but false statements made by hired promoters of these swindles, and it now desires to renew this warning, and advise all to be content with investment nearer home, where they know something about the conditions and know the men who are in control.

BETTER ARRANGEMENTS FOR FIRE.

The lesson of the fire which destroyed the home of Mr. Moore is one that should not be forgotten, and steps should be taken at once to see that such a thing does not take place again. To the fact that the houses were working on the streets in a distant part of the town is due the destruction of more than $3000 worth of property and the loss to some one of that amount. It is not a matter of whether the Insurance Companies bear this loss or some private individual, for the payers of premiums on policies will have to bear all losses in the way of increased premiums and many occurrences of this kind will cause our rates to materially increase.

All are well aware of the fact that in using these houses for the working of the streets the Mayor and City Council are trying to save the tax payers money, but we believe that this plan is the poorest of economies and that Salisbury can not afford to be without adequate fire protection at any time. If houses are needed on the streets, then the City should own and keep enough to be sure that if fire at any time, occur, no delay will ensue in getting the engine and hose trucks to the scene of danger. There are several advocates of the city's purchasing a chemical engine that could be rushed at once to the danger point, and it is claimed that a great number of fires could be quickly extinguished by this method. It is at least worth a thorough investigation.

There has been some unjust and unmerited criticism of the members of the fire department for the fire on Monday. No reasonable man, familiar with the circumstances, can blame the men for not getting the engine to the fire when there were no horses to pull it. Salisbury has a good force of the fire roll, who serve the City as nothing, and who do excellent work. These men should receive the credit of all for their civic pride and as well as encouragement at all times.

CARE AND CAUTION

Should Proceed Hand in Hand With Every Gunner. Look Before Firing.

Although the gunning season is still young more than the usual number of shotgun accidents to hunters, city and country alike, has already been reported. From day to day the press records the killing of men and the serious wounding of others, and these accidents are due chiefly to carelessness of the hunters themselves.

It is a most distressing act for one to shoot a fellow-man, even though their intention be far from inflicting upon him the slightest injury. It is still less pleasant to have to make amends to relatives for the "accidental" maiming or, worse still, cutting off the life of a loved father, husband or brother. Yet it can not be denied that a large number of gunners who take the woods and meadowslands nearby Salisbury, as well as other places, are too often wholly thoughtless of the possible results of a hastily fired shot.

Warren's traditional order to his men at the battle with the British at Bunker Hill, "Don't fire till you see the whites of their eyes," might well be paraphrased "Look first and shoot afterward," as a motto for every man who carries a gun these November days to paste within his hunting cap.

Mrs. Mary A. Trader.

In the death of Mrs. Mary A. Trader this week Salisbury loses one of its oldest residents. Mrs. Trader, who had recently celebrated her 92nd birthday, enjoyed remarkably good health up to a short time previous to her death and was quite active for her age until her fall last year at which time she injured her limb. Mrs. Trader's memory ran back to the early days of Salisbury when it was nothing more than a small struggling village with all the houses built on one street, containing only one small country store and a blacksmith shop. Less than a month previous to her death she had a reunion at her home in honor of her 92nd birthday at which time her six living children were present. Her children and their ages follow.

Thos. A. Trader, with whom she resided at the time of her death, 78 years; S. L. Trader, 71; A. P. Trader, 69; J. H. Trader, 68; Wm. A. Trader, 65; and A. A. Trader, 64. There are 18 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren. The funeral took place on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The remains were interred in Parson's Cemetery.

Death of Mrs. Melson.

Mrs. Ellen Melson, widow of John W. Melson and sister of W. L. Sirman, died at her home on Jewel St., Delmar, Friday afternoon, in the 60th year of her age. She leaves three daughters—Mrs. Wm. J. Downing, of Salisbury; Mrs. S. T. Smith, of Laurel and Mrs. J. L. Ellis, of Delmar and two sons—William S. Melson of Delmar and L. A. Melson, of Wilmington. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church and a well known resident of Delmar. Funeral services were held at her late home on Monday morning, and was largely attended. Interment was in the Methodist Episcopal Cemetery.

The "Book Tea" a Success

The "Book Tea" given at the Nurses' Home last Friday under the auspices of the Superintendent, Miss Shiel, and the Board of Lady Managers was a great success. The tea was given for the purpose of gathering together a library for use in the convalescent room. The ladies of the town who visited the tea contributed 138 books to the library. Miss Shiel and Board of Lady Managers want to thank the public for their very generous contributions for this very worthy cause. Miss Shiel will be glad at any time to receive bound stories or popular novels from anyone who has finished reading them, and have no further use for them. The books will be a source of great satisfaction to the patients in the Hospital.

Public Announcement of the Summer Session.

The authorities of the Johns Hopkins University take pleasure in announcing that a summer session of six weeks will be held at the University from July 8th to August 16, 1911. Ever since its beginning the University has opened single lectures and courses of lectures to the public. For the last twenty years special courses of lectures on various subjects have been given for systematic study in the subjects selected. The extended plan of college courses for teachers is now in the second year of operation.

First Triplane Now Being Constructed.

In the basement of the office building of the House at Washington, skillful mechanics are constructing what is said to be the first triplane in the world, equipped with double engines. R. L. Floyd, a son of Representative John O. Floyd, of Yellville, Ark., recently obtained permission from the Superintendent of the Capital Grounds to have the machine constructed in the House building. It is expected to be finished in a few weeks, when a series of experimental flights will be attempted in that city by the younger Floyd.

Tilghman—Laws.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Laws, at Wango, on Wednesday November 22d, at eleven o'clock when their daughter, Miss Louise, became the bride of Mr. Theodore M. Tilghman.

The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. In one corner of the spacious parlor was an arch of evergreen under which the ceremony was performed by Elder Poulson, in the presence of only a few of the nearest relatives and friends.

The bride was becomingly attired in a blue traveling suit with hat and gloves to match and carried white carnations. The groom wore the conventional black.

Immediately after the ceremony an elaborate wedding breakfast was served after which they left, amid a shower of rice, on the one thirty five express for northern cities.

Many beautiful presents were received.

Arrested For Robbery.

Salisbury, of late, has been the scene of robberies almost nightly. Various places of business have been broken into. Among the places entered were the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway warehouse, several restaurants and other places on lower Main Street. The restaurant of Bennett and Turner has especially received the attention of the party committing these robberies. Last night Mr. Bennett got Deputy Sheriff and Constable Frank Waller to hide inside after closing. About two o'clock in the morning the robber arrived and entered the restaurant, to receive a hearty welcome on the inside. He was overpowered after putting up a hard fight and lodged in the county jail. The officers believe that in the arrest of Byrd Disharoon, the party caught, they have solved the mystery of the many robberies.

Fourteen Victims of New Football.

A total of fourteen dead and at least forty badly injured was the price paid for football by its followers in the season just closing, despite the use of new rules, which were brought into being in an effort to reform the game and make it less perilous to the players.

That the new rules were successful in keeping down the number of victims is shown by a decline as compared with the previous year. In the season of 1909, twenty three players died and sixty four were seriously hurt. Two years ago there was one less death attributed to the game than this year.

Airship Carries Freight

Phil O. Parmelee, of Michigan, one of the Wright brothers' aviators, made the fastest cross country flight ever made in a biplane, flying from Dayton direct to Columbus, maintaining an average height of 8,000 feet.

The air line distance as given out by the Wrights is 65 miles and the flight was made in 66 minutes. Parmelee carried $1,000 worth of silk for a dry goods firm, and it is said that this is the first time that the biplane has been put to such commercial use.

May Be Sixteen Sick Middies.

Despite official announcement that there had been no new cases of typhoid among the midshipmen and that the general situation had improved, it is learned that three more midshipmen who had been on the suspected list have developed typhoid and will be conveyed to the Naval General Hospital, Annapolis, where the other eleven boys are now confined.

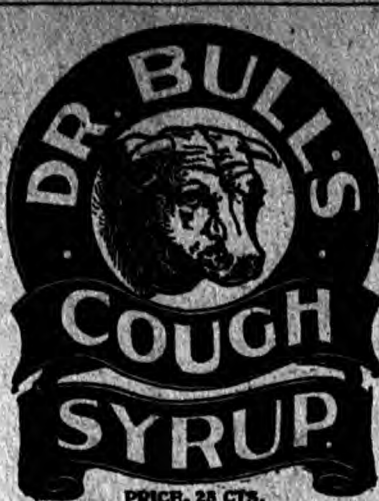

Monday Will Be Observed.

As December 26th, Christmas Day, comes on Sunday this year, some question has arisen as to whether the day would be celebrated on Saturday or Monday in the suspension of business. It has been decided, however, that Monday will be observed, and places of business, including stores, banks, postoffice, courts, etc., will all be closed at least a portion of the day. The same is true of Monday, January 2nd, as New Year's Day also falls on Sunday.

—Capt. Richmond Pearson Hodson of Merrimac fame in addressing the National Society of Patriotic Women, warned against cocktails. Alcohol, he said, was undermining the strength of the nation, and if its ravages were not checked, "before our grandchildren have left the scene they will hear the hoof of the yellow man's horse."

—Holly is said to be very scarce this year and the dealers are already having trouble to fill orders. Fruiting trees, says one dealer, become less and less each year from the fact that a fruiting tree once trimmed rarely affords another crop, and the cutting of timber too much exposes the holly trees, causing the leaf to yellow.

—Samuel J. Tilden, aged 43 years, the oldest horse in the United States, was taken from his native home in Ochestown, Monday of last week, to the Home for Aged Animals in Baltimore. The horse has been in the family of Joseph Gust, of Ochestown, since birth, and Mr. Gust, who is now 76 years old, wept bitterly on parting from the faithful animal.

—A committee composed of Governor Crothers, Senator Isador Rayner and John Walter Smith and Congressmen J. F. O. Talbot and J. Harry Covington met in Senator Smith's office in Baltimore to formulate plans and issue invitations to leading Democrats of the county to assemble in Baltimore for a conference to map out a plan of campaign that will redeem the party's pledges and establish it firmly in national confidence. An effort will be made to hold the conference in December or January.

—Deer hunting licenses issued by the State Game Warden in Michigan indicate that there are in round numbers 28,000 Nimrods in the northern part of the State on trail of venison. All but 6000 of them are in the Upper Peninsula. Most of the hunters are residents of Michigan. So far only 127 permits to ship deer out of the State have been issued. Basing this estimate on the relation of deer killed to the number of licenses issued in other years, the Warden believes about 6000 will be brought to earth during the open season. As each hunter is entitled to two, this means that nine tenths of the hunters will be disappointed.

—At Hallwood, Va., ten miles below the Maryland boundary line, there is in operation a factory for reducing Irish potatoes to a finely pulverized condition, like wheat flour. Thousands of barrels of potatoes have been thus pulverized this year and the product shipped in barrels to starch and yeast factories in distant parts of the country. Other towns on the Eastern Shore are seeking for factories like the one at Hallwood and if they can be secured farmers will be glad to grow the crops needed to supply the material to run the factories. Such a factory insures a market not only for the large potatoes, but for the small ones as well. The potato meal, as it is also known, is largely used in the manufacture of sausage.

—The well prepared Bazaar and Supper for the benefit of St. Peter's Episcopal Church will be held next week, Wednesday and Thursday in the Advertiser building. Dolls, aprons, and fancy work of many attractive articles will be on exhibition.

Do not put off washing to wait a sunny day in order to avoid mildew. Dry your washing any day with hot air from a PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER. Absolutely smokeless and odorless.

It gives just as much heat as you desire. It is safe, odorless and smokeless. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back, so the wick can be quickly cleaned. Burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and can always be easily unscrewed for reworking.

An indicator shows the amount of oil in the font. Filler-cap does not need to be screwed down, but is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain. Finished in Japan or nickel, strong and durable, well-made, built for service and yet light and ornamental. It has a cool handle and a damper top.

FLIES IN THE OINTMENT CHANGE THE ODOOR THEREOF

Spurious Additions to the Word of God Condemned.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 20.—The Wise Man declared that a fly in the ointment would cause it to stink. We apply this suggestion to the Word of God, the precious ointment which God has supplied. Certain flies (falsehoods) creep into it during the Dark Ages, which are now passing away, and repudiation on the part of many of the best and wisest people in the world. All will admit that it is sinful to tamper with the Word of God—to either add to or take from it or to twist or pervert its meaning. Why is it, then, that ministers of the Gospel, who know that certain passages of the Scriptures are not to be found in the older manuscripts, fail to show to the people the truth on this subject? And if these ministers are not fully informed, whose fault is that? Would it not be preferable that they should abstain themselves from some of the fairs and festivals and social functions, in order to inform themselves?

On what pretext are the clergy a specially privileged class, except for the purpose of giving their flocks reliable information along religious lines? And what is their commission from the Lord, except that they "should feed the flock of God, which he purchased with the blood of his own dear Son?" If the flock have been feeding upon certain Scriptures supposed to be genuine, and if they have been made sick thereby, and if their shepherds now know that these Scriptures are not a part of the Divinely inspired Word, why should not God's people be informed of the facts and be stopped from eating poisonous elements introduced by the Adversary?

Poison in Our Bibles. The more others are silent, the more we must speak. We cannot see God's sheep spiritually sick without warning them respecting their spiritual food. Not only have we received many misinterpretations of the parables and symbols of the Bible, but into our Bibles themselves certain false statements have been injected—long centuries ago. All well-informed ministers of the Gospel know that our New Testament was not translated from the writings of the Apostles, but from copies thereof. These, copied over and over again, no matter how carefully, were liable to errors. And in addition, as we might expect, occasionally, a bold transcriber would add a few words to make the record conform to the better to his conception of what it ought to be. This went on for centuries before the art of printing came into use.

The New Testament was translated from the Greek into the Latin language, and was known as the Vulgate. From that Latin translation sprang our various English translations—the Douay or Catholic edition, published in 1609 A. D., and the King James Bible, or Common Version, published in 1611 A. D. The latter was merely a revised translation, to assist in which revision other previous translations were used, and we are assured that the text was diligently compared with the Greek text. But until lately there were no ancient Greek manuscripts with which to compare it. The Greek manuscripts with which it was compared numbered only eight, none of which dated earlier than the Tenth Century. Today, however, we have three very old Greek manuscripts of the New Testament, namely, the Alexandrian MS., the Vatican MS., and the Sinaitic MS. Of these, the Vatican MS. was the first to come to the attention of modern scholarship. It is in the Vatican Library, appearing on its catalogue as far back as 1475 A. D., which manuscript scholarship accredited with having been written in the fourth century. Next came the Alexandrian MS., which is supposed to have been written about the middle of the fifth century. It is now on exhibition in the British Museum. Finally, we have the Sinaitic MS., which is in possession of the Russian Government. It was found by Constantine Tischendorf in a Mt. Sinai Convent, from which it takes its name. It is accredited with a date as early as 350 A. D. Of these three oldest MSS., of the New Testament known in the world, the Vatican and Sinaitic are the oldest.

Assuredly nothing should be considered as part of the original Scriptures that is not found in any of these three oldest MSS. Why should we not tell this to the people? Why should we not inform them that some of the most confusing texts of the Bible are not found in these old manuscripts? Is it not a sin to preach doctrines as from God which have no part in these early MSS.? This is our thought. From time to time it will be our pleasure, as well as our duty, to teach the common people what the clergy already know on this subject. Moreover, the Bible Students Association of Brooklyn has arranged for the importation of copies of the New Testament bound in cloth showing the variations between the readings of these old Greek MSS. and our Common Version. The usual price of these is $1.00; but, in order to give to the people, in large quantities, they are able to supply them postpaid at 50c. each.

Consider Now Our Text. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned."—Mark xvi, 15. One of the most important of these interpolations or poisonous additions grafted upon the Word of God is in the sixteenth chapter of Mark, all of which, from the ninth verse to the end of the chapter, is spurious—frankly so. It is additional to anything that St. Mark wrote, as evidenced by the fact that these verses are not found in any

Of the three oldest Greek MSS. of the New Testament, the Vatican, Sinaitic and Alexandrian, it would never do to add a fly without a certain amount of covering of truth to support it. But notice our text and what a wrong thought it gives—inconsistent with the remainder of the Scriptures. Its intention is that the preaching of the Gospel to every creature will result either in his believing it and being baptized, and thus being saved, or in his disbelieving and being damned. And this word "damned" carries with it, in the light of other misinterpretations, fire and brimstone, torment and torture, shrieking and woe indescribable. This is all wrong—contrary to the authentic Scriptures.

The authentic Scriptures inform us that this Gospel Age is one in which God is gathering from the world a "little flock" of footsteps followers, saintly and elect, to constitute the Bride of Christ—his joint-heirs in his coming Kingdom. They show that not all are expected to know this message at the present time; not many wise, great, learned or rich, but chiefly the poor. They assure us that to have the hearing ear is a special favor, saying, "Blessed are your ears for they hear, and your eyes for they see." St. Paul tells us that the world in general is blind and deaf to the message now sent forth (Romans xi, 7), and the experiences of eighteen centuries corroborate this. St. Peter tells us (Acts xv, 13) that God's work in the present time is not the conversion of the world (which certainly is not being accomplished), but that he is now taking out of the world a people for his name (to bear the name of Christ, as his Bride). The authentic Scriptures everywhere teach us that the poor, blind, deaf world, which has never yet heard fully and clearly of "the only name given under heaven or amongst men whereby we may be saved," is not on this account condemned or damned. They tell us that the whole world was born condemned, because children of Adam and Eve, in his condemnation, but that God has provided in the sacrifice of Jesus a redemption for Adam and all his race. They tell us that, as a result, in God's due time, Christ, as the true Light, the Sun of Righteousness, shall enlighten every man that cometh into the world. They explain that God is now calling out a special class while the darkness is upon the earth and the gross darkness upon the heathen, and that the Sun of Righteousness, which is to enlighten the whole world, will not arise until the elect Church shall first have been gathered out. They tell us that the time is now at hand, when the families of the earth will be blessed through The Christ—Jesus, the Head, and the Church his Body or Bride. They tell us that then "all the blind eyes shall be opened and all the deaf ears shall be unstopped" (Isaiah xxxv, 5). They tell us that then the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in his beams, flooding the whole earth with the light of the knowledge of the glory of God. They assure us that that will be the period of Messiah's reign, for which we pray every Kingdom shall be done unto every man as he desireth.

By the time the Apostles died the Church had become established, had regular meetings, pastors and teachers, the Gospels and Epistles, and some of them had begun to develop the fruits of the Spirit. Thus the early Church naturally outgrew the tongues and miracles and entered a larger sphere, just as a child loses its swaddling clothes in favor of more suitable attire. For God's people today to desire to go back to speaking with tongues, etc., such as was practiced, not very profitably, in the early Church, would be like an adult person desiring to be dressed and treated as a babe. It is our understanding that the speaking with unknown tongues in religious meetings, which is gradually spreading over the world, is a deception being practiced upon earnest children of God, who are deceived by the fallen angels—the demons of the Bible. They are thus enslaved to error and have their attention drawn away from the Truth. To what extent the ministers of Christ of today are responsible for the deception of these poor people is not ours to determine. Had the earnestness of the last verses of St. Mark's Gospel been duly pointed out from every pulpit, as soon as the old MSS. were known, some, at least, might have been spared from this snare—some who, under misunderstanding, have been hindered from proper expectations in respect to God's Word and led improperly to expect the power of tongues and miracles suggested in this spurious passage.

Unbelievers Damned Already. Our word damned, from misusage and the bad theology of the Dark Ages, has a superfluous odor, whereas its plain, simple meaning is the same as the word condemn. Adam was damned or condemned 8000 years ago because of his disobedience. And all his children, by heredity, share his weakness and thus share his condemnation. But Adam is not condemned or damned to eternal torture nor to Purgatory. The Bible distinctly says in so many words that his sentence, his condemnation, his damnation, is to death. "In the day that thou eatest thereof, dying thou shalt die" (Genesis ii, 17, margin). After his disobedience, God said, "Unto the earth for thy sake. Thorns and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread until thou return unto the ground from which thou wast taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return" (Genesis iii, 17-19).

This general sentence has rested upon all of Adam's race from that day until now. As St. Paul declares, By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world and death (not eternal torment nor Purgatory) passed upon all men, because all are sinners (Romans v, 12). Jesus came to redeem two classes—the Church and the world—the Church class to be his "Bride" and to share his heavenly, spiritual Kingdom with him; the world to be blessed and restored to human perfection and to an earthly Eden, world-wide—God's footstool made glorious. The Church and household of faith, willing to walk in the footsteps of the Master in the dark, have been called during the past nearly nineteen centuries. Soon the worthy ones, the "little flock," will enter into the joys of their Lord, at his Second Coming. The marriage of the Lamb shall come, for his Wife will have made herself ready (Rev. xix, 7). Then the world's salvation will be due to begin. The Times of Restitution will be the thousand years of Messiah's spiritual reign as King of kings and Lord of lords. Fleshly Israel, we are assured, will then be restored to Divine favor and become the special and active agents of the Messianic Kingdom in the distribution of the Divine favors to all the families of the earth. In the end all the incorrigibly wicked, who love iniquity rather than righteousness, will be destroyed.

Thus, as the Apostle declares, the sacrifice of Jesus constitutes a satisfaction for our sins (the Church's sins) and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world (I John ii, 2). Nonsectarian, Spurious Context. Let us briefly notice another absurdity in the addition to God's Word found in the last twelve verses of St. Mark's Gospel, fraudulently added and not found in any of the oldest Greek MSS. Notice the statement, "These signs shall follow them that believe: in my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues. They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover" (verses 16, 17). The majority of Christian ministers and their congregations seem not to be troubled by the fact that they do not have these evidences of their relationship to the Lord, and they do not attempt to heal the sick, to speak with tongues, and would not dare to drink any poisonous thing. But there are certain conscientious people, the very cream of all the Churches, who are greatly perplexed by these words because they know that they are not true in their experience. With them, therefore, it is a matter of feeling doubtful about their own salvation, or a question as to the reliability of the Bible as a whole. They need to have the result, which we now seek to give them. They need to know that these are not inspired words, but poisonous and injurious additions made during the Dark Ages. They may, consequently, look elsewhere in the Scriptures and find the proper assurances of their relationship with God being demonstrated by the fruits of the holy Spirit in their lives and in their hearts—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, brotherly kindness, love.

Miracles in the Early Church. This spurious passage of our text is used by many ministers who know, or ought to know, of its falsity. But they have a certain theory, every theory, to the effect that the miracles and unknown tongues of the early Church were lost by reason of unfaithfulness to God, and that Christians today should seek for their recovery. Not having any Scriptures to support their claim they use this interpolation and allow their hearers and readers to believe it to be the inspired message. To what length have people gone in support of human theory! The first principle of preaching should be to preach the Truth, the whole Truth and nothing but the Truth. Every theory which requires bolstering up by spurious passages should be abandoned, and will be abandoned by those who are honest truth-seekers, "Bereans."

Our Lord performed miracles. So did his Apostles. And so did those of the early Church upon whom the Apostles laid their hands. But no others have this gift. Consequently, when the Apostles were dead and when all those upon whom they had laid hands of blessing were dead, these miracles in the Church were at an end. We all see the propriety of this. Miracles were appropriate at the beginning for the establishment of the Church and, for a time, were necessary for their encouragement. In their early meetings they had no source of information aside from the Apostles, whom they rarely saw or heard. They had no Bibles—no copies of the Gospel nor of the Epistles. They needed the very arrangement which God provided—tongues and interpretations of tongues, etc., to draw them together and to instruct them until, in due time, the canon of Scripture would be completed that, through it, the man of God might be thoroughly acquainted with every good word and work (II Tim. iii, 16, 17). By the time the Apostles died the Church had become established, had regular meetings, pastors and teachers, the Gospels and Epistles, and some of them had begun to develop the fruits of the Spirit. Thus the early Church naturally outgrew the tongues and miracles and entered a larger sphere, just as a child loses its swaddling clothes in favor of more suitable attire. For God's people today to desire to go back to speaking with tongues, etc., such as was practiced, not very profitably, in the early Church, would be like an adult person desiring to be dressed and treated as a babe. It is our understanding that the speaking with unknown tongues in religious meetings, which is gradually spreading over the world, is a deception being practiced upon earnest children of God, who are deceived by the fallen angels—the demons of the Bible. They are thus enslaved to error and have their attention drawn away from the Truth. To what extent the ministers of Christ of today are responsible for the deception of these poor people is not ours to determine. Had the earnestness of the last verses of St. Mark's Gospel been duly pointed out from every pulpit, as soon as the old MSS. were known, some, at least, might have been spared from this snare—some who, under misunderstanding, have been hindered from proper expectations in respect to God's Word and led improperly to expect the power of tongues and miracles suggested in this spurious passage.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths. There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, brain failure, or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go out through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root if you do you will be disappointed.

NO AILING WOMEN.

A Little Sound Advice Will Help Many A Sufferer in Salisbury. No woman can be healthy and well if the kidneys are sick. Poisons that pass off in the secretions when the kidneys are well, are retained in the body when the kidneys are sick. Kidneys become inflamed and swollen and worse troubles quickly follow. This is often the true cause of bearing down pains, lameness, backache, side ache, etc. Urine poisoning also causes headaches, dizzy spells, lassitude, nervousness and rheumatic pain.

When suffering so, try Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy that cures sick kidneys. You will get better as the kidneys get better, and health will return when the kidneys are well. Let a Salisbury woman tell you about Doan's Kidney Pills. Mrs. Jennie A. Collins, 312 William Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "Several members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from White & Leonard's Drug Store, and have received great benefit. I know that this remedy is a reliable one for kidney disorders and I am certain that no one suffering from these troubles will make a mistake in giving it a trial."

Have You Tried?

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? We can furnish positive proof that it has made many remarkable cures after all other means had failed.

Women who are suffering with some form of female illness should consider this.

As such evidence read these two unsolicited testimonial letters. We guarantee they are genuine and honest statements of facts.

Cresson, Pa.—"Five years ago I had a bad fall, and hurt myself inwardly. I was under a doctor's care for nine weeks, and when I stopped I grew worse again. I sent for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, took it as directed, and now I am a stout, hearty woman."—Mrs. Ella E. Alkey, Cresson, Pa.

Baird, Wash.—"A year ago I was sick with kidney and bladder troubles and female weakness. The doctors gave me up. All they could do was to just let me go as easily as possible. I was advised by friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier. I am completely cured of my illness, and I am nearly sixty years old."—Mrs. Sarah Leighton, Baird, Wash.

Evidence like the above is abundant showing that the derangements of the female organism which breed all kinds of miserable feelings and which ordinary practice does not cure, are the very disorders that give way to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Women who are afflicted with similar troubles, after reading two such letters as the above, should be encouraged to try this wonderfully helpful remedy.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No sick woman does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine. Made exclusively from roots and herbs, and has thousands of cures to its credit.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health free of charge. Address Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

By Rev. JOSEPHUS STEPHAN.

Pastor Mount Auburn Methodist Church, Salisbury, Md.

Jesus lived in an age that was far worse than this. It was an age in which half the people were in slavery and many in poverty. While it is true he condemned and denounced wrong as no other dared to do, we can never find him advocating systems or laying down rules and methods for the government and direction of society. He made no specific instructions as to the nation's industrial questions. And there were many of them then. Unjust as was the taxation of the Roman government on Palestine, Christ paid it and was silent.

There were slavery and the great crimes that marked the decaying Roman empire, and yet we find him advocating no revolutionary reforms in the government.

Of course Christ by his silence did not condemn efforts which may be made to meet existing evils or to discourage practical measures of relief for current disorders. But we must insist on the principle of the Christ that no relief measure will in itself cure the disease without a revolution of the individual character.

Christ worked on the individual. Present day reforms are based on the principle that happiness depends on the external.

The answer to the hostile and critical attitude maintained by organized labor toward the church can be easily found. This attitude grew largely out of a misunderstanding on the part of wage earners, who in their bitterness attribute partisanship to the church.

The industrial system of today is a subject for much criticism not because of its combinations and its organizations, but because of the code of ethics maintained between them, the principles of which are no better than the days of savagery, when a club took the place of numbers and when the objective was different.

How can we call the industrial system of today Christian? For the Christ said right makes might and not the opposite. The weak go down, and the strong rise, and the Golden Rule has no place in the movement.

Organized labor and organized wealth struggle and alternately grasp each other by the throat. And in none of their relations and in none of their achievements is the spirit of Christ.

There is no fraternity.

A famous French statesman said twenty-five years ago that the social question was one on which serious minded people would waste no time. But today that question is the most serious in the modern world. We may close our eyes, but that does not change the social fact of lowering clouds of social unrest about to break upon society in a terrific storm.

I am heartily in sympathy with the agreement made by the American Federation of Labor to have this subject discussed by the ministers. I believe that every Christian pulpit ought to declare its convictions because of the doubt so sincerely entertained as to their real sentiments and the strictures these wage earners place upon the church.

It is because of this unsympathetic attitude between labor and the church that socialism is growing. Today there are 25,000,000 Socialists, possessed by untold enthusiasm and publishing tons of literature. In this estrangement socialism is becoming a religion instead of politics.

It is not only a worldwide movement, but a world old movement. Centuries ago, ever since the beginning of political history, the fight of the subjected commenced, down to the present day of struggle, to get equal industrial opportunity.

The world has come up from slavery and from serfdom to wage earners and the present scale of freedom, which promises a more perfect democracy.

What part has the teaching of Christ in the industrial struggles today? In the first place, it is the function of the church to get to the sources of unrest, to study the social problems of its environs instead of the social not of the church and the ancient Jews. The church should aggressively interest itself in the practical reforms. It should not only pray to the Lord to keep the child from harm in dangerous machinery, but it should pray to legislatures and capitalists as well.

The church must insist on Christ's methods and bring about a greater sense of brotherhood of man. Not until this is an actual fact will the spirit of industrial warfare change.

URGES SINGING AT HOME.

Rev. Dr. Conwell Recommends Singing of Grace at Family Table to Philadelphia Baptists.

The Rev. Dr. Russell H. Conwell in an address on "The Influence of Music in the Home," delivered in the Baptist temple, Philadelphia, expressed himself as follows:

"Sing the blessing which you offer at the table. Begin when there are but two of you, the husband and wife, who set up the home, and then when the children arrive they will become accustomed to singing grace from infancy. I knew of one family in Kentucky blessed with ten children, and they all sang together at the table. The music of it was so pleasing that neighbors opened their windows and persons passing the house loitered before the table to hear."

Shall Women Vote?

If they did, millions would vote Dr. King's New Life Pills the true remedy for women. For banishing dull fagged feelings, backache or headache, constipation, distending colds, imparting appetite and toning up the system, they're unequalled. Every wife, every mother, every girl should have a box at all druggists.

Wise Little Miss.

Educated miss are not altogether uncommon about the capital and its office buildings, but Congressman Rodenberg of Illinois says that those that inhabit his room are more learned than any others. "You know my word is good," said Rodenberg, indicating that the story he was about to tell was a bit shaky. "Well, when my secretary and I were looking over the seeds that came to us from the agricultural department, we were on the verge of doing some tall musing at the miles that gnawed a hole in the corner of nearly every package. Now, you know, the large envelopes contain several smaller seed packages, and I want to tell you our first gave place to admiration when, after opening several of the large packages, we found that none of the small packages in any of them had been touched except the packages of lettuce seed. I'll wager something pretty that there isn't another member of congress who has more in his room than are trained as well as that."—Washington Correspondence St. Louis Star.

THE SALISBURYS DIM.

SALISBURY Village Files Charges With Utilities Commission.

Citizens of Easton, Md., through Martin M. Higgins, the Mayor of the town, filed with the Public Service Commission Tuesday a formal complaint against the Easton Light and Fuel Company, which supplies gas and electricity for the village. Defects in the service, quality and candle power are alleged.

Accompanying the complaint of the Mayor comes a notice of a resolution passed by the City Council of Easton calling upon him to make charges with the Public Utilities Commission, and the City Council, in turn, is backed up by the signature of most of the prominent men of Easton.

With a view to emphasizing the quality of service alleged to be given, it is stated that when Music Hall, the only town hall in Easton is lighted, the candle power of the lights in the homes of the villagers is so diminished as to be practically worthless. The owner of Music Hall is prevented from renting it through the difficulty in securing lights because of this condition.

Have Two-Dollar Gas.

Filled with the complaint is the following schedule of charges:
Gas—For lighting, $2.00; heating, $1.50.

Electric Lights—Ten-candle power, per month, 60¢; sixteen-candle power, per month, 75¢; twenty-five-candle power, per month, $1.00.

Such charges, it is claimed, justify the people in expecting a good quality of gas and electricity sufficient for all the needs of the people.

Say Gas Mains Are Clogged.

It is asserted that the material used in generating the lighting is so inferior that the gas mains and the burners are badly clogged. Moreover, it is charged that the lights are turned off too late in the evening and turned on too early in the morning. Instead of a flat rate for electric lighting, the town asks for a meter for each home, so that the quantity of electricity used may be measured and the charges made in accordance. Furthermore, objections are made to rentals for gas meters. It is claimed that the Company exceeds its franchise rights when it makes such charges.

The price paid for the lighting is declared to be greater than it ought to be for the kind of service rendered. The Commission is requested to take hold of the subject as early as possible and adjust it.

Arranging For Peabody Concert In Salisbury.

Frederick R. Huber, head of the concert department of the Peabody Conservatory of Music of Baltimore, Md., was in this city Saturday arranging an appearance for the concert company representing the conservatory. Mr. Huber is one of the most prominent of Baltimore musicians and has gained distinction, both as a concert pianist and recital organist. Although a very young man he is the director and organist of St. Patrick's Church of that city, and teacher of the piano at the Peabody. He is also pianist for the opera class of the conservatory, which will give Boito's "Medea" this season, and was formerly organist of the celebrated Beach Choir, under the direction of Harold Harbord.

The concert will be one of the leading events in Salisbury this winter. It will be held under the auspices of the Wicomico High School and will doubtless be well patronized.

AND NOW THEY CURTYS.

Pretty Old English Custom Is Being Revived in Society. Children Are Learning It.

It was a curtsy, then a bow, only a nod, but now—it is a curtsy again. Away back in the days of old England, when Sir Walter Raleigh spread his costly coat across a muddy pathway that Queen Elizabeth might step upon it and avoid soiling her dainty slippers, men and women walked with an airy grace and spoke in the language of flowers. It was then that the curtsy came to pass. Poets sang of it and playwrights doted on it.

But there came a change. Wars, perhaps, caused men to forget their manners, and then only women kept up the pretty custom.

Gray haired women of Baltimore can scarce remember when their mothers and grandmothers bent their knees and stopped before persons they respected. A lady of 70 was asked yesterday if she had ever seen a curtsy and she said she had, but it was done by the oldest of the old negro "mammas."

But the "budding" misses are learning the pretty custom of their great grandmothers. Now, when little Dorothy goes to school she greets her teacher with the cheer, "Good Morning" and sometimes adds the recognition which only kings and queens usually command.

Schools For Teaching.

There are schools for courtesies in Baltimore. Parents like the idea, think it pretty and are doing all they can to cultivate its use.

Some little girls say they twist their ankles in trying while others declare they strike the toes of their shoes, but they do not know the proper form. It should be the personification of grace, with a dash of humility thrown in. The best authorities say that there should be no spread of the arm or fancy curves, but it should be short and to the point.

The smile, the beautiful climax to the "symphony"—that is the indispensable requisite. A curtsy without a smile might even be a gentle rebuke.

It would not be surprising to see courtesies cropping out on the street soon like the Austrian felt hats, the peach basket bonnet and the hobbie skirt. It will be necessary to explain how the "hobble" and the old-fashioned bow will go together.

"THE ROUND-UP"

Coming To Academy Of Music, Baltimore, Week Of November 28th.

The attraction at the Academy of Music, Baltimore, for one week beginning Monday, November 28th, will be the return of Klaw and Erlanger's massive production "The Round-Up." The theatrical annuals of Baltimore do not record such a towering success as "The Round-Up." It is the great American play of the hour. The appearance of twenty mounted Indians riding along a ledge of rock far above the stage level is a thrill indeed, but it is surpassed in the great incident at the end of the third act when "Slim" Hoover, the Sheriff, and a troop of cavalrymen are shown in an actual hand-to-hand fight with a band of Apache Indian marauders escaped from their reservation.

In the last act a group of cowboys are shown riding bucking broncos. This too, is a novelty never before seen in what is termed an indoor attraction. The bracing and vigorous atmosphere of life in the open is preserved with startling fidelity and truth. The magnitude of this production is such that it can only be played in a few cities in the largest theatres.

So great is the demand for seats from those living at a distance from Baltimore that a special bureau has been established for the expeditious handling of mail orders, which when sent with cash or money order and accompanied by addressed stamped envelope, receive immediate attention. There will be no advance in prices. Evenings and Saturday matinee: 25c, 50c, 75c, $1 and $1.50. Popular Wednesday matinee: 25c, 50c, 75c and $1.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The promoters have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that is failed to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

No. 8—Lies west of No. 7 and contains 6 acres. Price $1,500.

No. 9—Consists of 15 acres, dwelling and outbuildings, and lies directly in front of Mr. James E. Lowe's new residence, on Quantico road, and is very valuable property. Price $4,350.

No. 10—Is west of No. 9, contains 5 acres and has already been sold to Mr. Woolford Johnson.

No. 11—Is west of No. 10, contains 10 acres and is a very desirable lot. Price $2,500.

No. 12—Is west of No. 11 and situated at the beginning of the Stone road leading to Quantico. This tract contains 10 acres and the price is $2,500.

No. 13—Is directly in front of Mr. Stanford Oulver's, on the Quantico road, and contains 8 and 45-100ths acres. Price $1,800.

No. 14—Consists of 3 acres just outside the corporate limits of Salisbury, lying between South Division Street extended and the N. Y., P. & N. railroad. Price $750.

No. 15—Consists of something over 3 acres immediately adjoining No. 14. Price $750.

No. 16—Consists of 3 acres lying on the east side of South Division Street extended, about three-eighths of a mile from the corporate limits. Price $600.

No. 17—Contains 10 acres and is immediately adjoining the corporate limits of Salisbury, lying along the N. Y., P. & N. railroad, and is known as "Huntingtown." This tract will be sold in acre lots of $300 each, or will sell the entire piece to one party. Price on application.

All of the above properties were originally bought for their exceptionally good location. Each and every one of the above-named parcels of land, except No. 17, are fronting on prominent highways that have already been improved under the specifications of the Shoemaker law, and are especially desirable to progressive parties wishing to build homes in good neighborhoods.

Ancient Pueblo of Acoma

THE pueblo of Acoma, in New Mexico, is weird and strange and out of the way. A half day's journey from the pueblo of Laguna, which is on a transcontinental line of railway, Acoma is as remote from civilization as it was when discovered 300 years ago. Probably not over a dozen white men call at Acoma in the course of a year. It is a hard trip over there, across the hot desert, and the Acomans, who belong to the Queres tribe, are none too hospitable to the stranger. Unless you have a pull with the governor, the Pook Bah of the pueblo, you might as well make up your mind to stay good-by just as soon as you have said hello, because you'll be given to understand very plainly that you are not wanted. This isn't from any special unfriendliness on the part of the Acomans, but they simply prefer to be left alone and figure that they have worried along pretty well without white assistance for several hundred years and will be able to do so for several hundred years more.

There's not much of anything of interest before you reach Acoma. You are beginning to nod in the wagon when suddenly you are aware that there has seemed to shoot up out of the plain a wonderful mesa, on the top of which is a town, looking not unlike a sprawling sort of castle. The mesa is in the southwest corner of a four mile wide and ten miles long and open from the northeast only. The general altitude of the basin is about 7,500 feet and the mesa shoots up from 200 to 250 feet right out of the desert, the sides being either vertical or overhanging.

The top of the mesa consists of about 300 acres of denuded rock, what induced anyone to build a town there is one of those little mysteries that even the archaeologist will have a hard time making clear to you. But in all probability the pueblo was built there for purposes of defense. As you approach the mesa you understand how easy it would be for the Acomans to defend themselves against any attack that might be made upon them.

The main trail is plainly defined. It winds across the desert and brings you up against the base of the mesa between a couple of big groups of sandstone 200 feet high, guarding the pass like giants. The trail slopes upward from these giants and mules and horses can make the ascent to the top. There are two other trails, but they are for foot purposes only and unless the visitor has a clear head and is a good climber he doesn't want to tackle either one of them, as the paths are cut in solid rock and in some places are merely footholds in the side of the precipice.

Long files of Indian girls are passing up and down these three trails all day long, carrying water from the springs on the plain below. There is no water on top of the mesa except that which is collected in the vast communal basin scooped in the sandstone. In time of drought this basin is as dry as a bone and all the water that is used by the Acomans is brought up from the plain below in the gaily decorated water jars that are balanced on the heads of the Acoma maidens.

The town itself, when once you have reached the top of the mesa, is something never to be forgotten. It is built after the style of most pueblo villages, all the houses being of adobe. Some of them are three stories in height, the upper floors being reached by the ladders which are always leaning against the walls and which add a picturesque effect to the scene. There are three long rows of buildings, with tan-lan communal houses. The streets and alleys are narrow, and when looking down them one always gets the wonderful effect of distance, for the vision leaps right off the edge of the mesa and out on the plain, no matter which way you look. Some of the houses are built right on the edge of the cliff, and as nearly all the Acomans sleep on the roof, especially during the summer months, it is a wonder that some of them do not roll off or step off when walking in their sleep and dash themselves to pieces 300 feet below. When the stranger wakes up in the morning after his nap on the roof of one of these dwellings and finds himself on the verge of such a tremendous descent, he is apt to plead for sleeping quarters that are less airy.

The Blue Rose Has Come. That long-sought-for, lovely, the blue rose, has been developed at last, and to the intense interest of the gardeners and flower lovers who visit the spring flower show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural society and the National Association of Gardeners at Horticultural hall recently. Three plants have been put on display, says the Philadelphia Record. The color obtained is the best blue that has ever been produced. It is on the violet shade, and the rose is a Rambler type. The tiny buds in heavy clusters are of bright red hue and show the blue only on blooming.

Most of the inhabitants were away in the fields when the trail was destroyed, but a few were left on top of the mesa, where they starved, the legend says. The survivors moved to the other mesa and built the town of Acoma, and today the Enchanted Mesa is shunned by the Acomans as if evil spirits resided there. JOSEPH WALTER FRESTIN.

The friends who late Beside the sea
Tripped back and forth
So daintily
Are kissing good-bys
To the foam,
And packing all
Their trunks for home; They'll tell of Lovely times they've had,
Of fish they caught,
And of how glad
They were when night
Came with the moon,
And they could sit Outdoors and spoon
Beside the ever
Spongy sea;
And they'll believe
All this they tell—
After their steamer
Bites are well.

WHY HE LINGERED.

Wise—Old Boomer has been hovering at death's door for nearly a week. Sharpe—Guess he can't find the key-hole.

From Day to Day.

One day a mighty scarehead tells How Zepplin's great airship flew, Next day we read how a gay breeze Sidelined and tore the thing in two.

In Spite of It.

The foolish season isn't really due yet, but in the east they are passing around the question: "Does it hurt a girl's chance of marrying if she graduates from a college?"

Perhaps it might be well right here to paraphrase Speaker Cannon's reference to the handicap of a university education—a great many girls are marrying in spite of it.

A Safe Lead.

"I hear Lem Boggs Sundayed with ya, deacon?"

"Ya-as."

"Goin' to lose yer darter, eh?" "I reckon, but not to Lem. Zeb Higgs Mondayed, Tuesdayed, Wednesdayed and Thursdayed with us. I judge Zeb is the luckyman."—Success Magazine.

Her Own Orthographer.

"Have you an unabridged dictionary?" inquired the professor, who was writing a letter.

"Certainly not," replied Mrs. Cumrox. "I examined one and saw at a glance that the book is intended for people who don't know all about orthodoxy and etymology."

He Had More.

The Old Gentleman—For heaven's sake, young man, point that gun the other way and be careful how you handle it. First thing you know it will go off.

The Young Hunter—Aw, dat's all right. I don't care if it does; I got plenty more cartridges.

More Natural Facilities.

"So you like the seashore better than the mountains?"

"No, indeed; I prefer the mountains."

"Then why are you goin' to the seashore?"

"Because it is easier there to get in to the swim."

BOOMING THE BUSINESS.

Jim—I wonder why that girl always tells a fellow when he kisses her that he needs a shave?

Jack—Her father is a silent partner in the barber shop next door.

How It Happened.

"Tut, tut and out," he muttered low, And sadly dropped his chin. "A friendly deal went in the air, And I was taken in."

The Angel Crab.

Borrowby—The scheme would be a howling success if I could secure the proper backing, and— Grimshaw—The only backing I am going this year is out—Fuck.

At Times.

"A farmer's life is often hard, isn't it?"

"Yes; at times it is harrowing."

Quite a Ratter.

"She spoke to me very coolly." "You ought to be grateful to her. It's a hot day."

Choosing a Heroine

By LITTELL McCLUNG

Copyright, 1909 by Associated Literary Press.

They were standing ankle-deep in the snow at the entrance of the Chapman grounds.

"And so you have chosen Miss Maltney as the model for the heroine of your new book?" asked Esther Chapman after a pause.

"Yes, I have," Crane Hartigan replied, slowly, "I've patterned my leading character after Miss Maltney, not because there are any sentimental relations between us, but because she is such a fearless, buoyant young woman, and fits so admirably into my story. To me she is the personification of womanly dash and courage."

"I don't suppose such a quite home-body like me would—"

Hartigan never heard the rest, for down the glistering road, sleigh bells jangled clear in the frosty air.

"Oh, here they come now!" Esther exclaimed, stepping out into the road. "Won't it be dandy riding in that big, toboggan-like thing? I suppose Miss Maltney will be in the party?"

There was no need for reply; the sleigh, drawn by four horses, came in sight over the hill. The moonlight revealed Miss Maltney perched up fearlessly beside the driver waving a welcome to the man and the girl by the roadside. The horses were lifting their hoofs high—evidently they enjoyed kicking up the snow clouds. A shone like crystal mist in the starlight. With a flourish, the driver brought them to a standstill in front of the Chapman home.

"All aboard for the ice palace on the moonlight trail!" cried Miss Maltney exhilaratingly.

Hartigan assisted his companion up into the sleigh. "All ready!" he sang out, leaping in himself.

Then, with a crack of the whip, the horses were off again. As they whirled along through the snow Miss Maltney was a perfect battery of wit and hilarity, keeping everybody's spirits at top notch.

"No wonder Crane took her for a heroine model," thought Esther Chapman. "She is certainly splendid."

But suddenly, as swiftly as an echo flies, every volley of laughter ceased. In rounding a sharp curve, one of the horses slipped and fell to its knees. The driver, with a tug, brought the animal to its feet again. But the jerk had been too violent, and the man was thrown headlong from his seat into a snowbank by the road.

The horses, frightened by the mishap, and feeling no hand on the lines, bolted and broke into a run. In a few seconds they were going at breakneck pace, the sleigh swinging from one side of the road to the other and being almost overturned with every lunge.

Miss Maltney, instead of trying to gather up the reins, gave a scream of terror as she clambered off the high seat, and dropped back into the body of the sleigh.

"Jump! Jump for your lives!" she cried.

But the warning came too late. The horses were going too fast for anybody to risk a leap from the vehicle. The moment Miss Maltney sprang from the driver's seat, Esther Chapman, who had been in two or three runaways and who knew horses as she did people, leaped to her feet. In a flash she pulled herself up over the back of the front seat and reached for the lines that dangled across the dashboard.

Hartigan saw what she was attempting to do and he followed her, gaining the point of vantage a second later. Already Esther had the lines in hand, and as Hartigan planted his feet against the front of the sleigh, she thrust them between his fingers.

"Full! Full with all your might, Crane!" she urged.

Hartigan thrust himself back with all his weight, but the speed of the horses did not diminish one hoof-clatter. In another second Esther had gripped her hands on his, but their combined efforts didn't have any effect except to keep the plunging horses in the middle of the road.

"We've got them now, all right, if we'll keep a steady grip!" the girl cried into Hartigan's ear.

She was right. The strain soon began to tell on the runaways. One of them let the bit slide back into its mouth and broke from a run into a heavy gallop. This checked the speed of the other three. Hartigan now pulled on the reins with renewed strength, and in 200 feet every horse was going at a trot. In another hundred they were brought to a standstill just in front of a slippery curve.

Hartigan, leaving the lines in Esther's hands, leaped out of the sleigh, ran forward, and grasped the bit.

The animals were trembling violently, as horses often do after they have run off with a vehicle behind them. He let them stand for a few minutes until some of the nervousness had worn off. Then, with the help of the other men in the sleigh he turned them around.

At this moment the driver, panting for breath and covered with snow, came running up. He was overjoyed at finding nobody killed or injured. Esther and Hartigan were almost overcome by expressions of admiration for their presence of mind and quick action. But Hartigan knew that their success in stopping the horses was due to the girl, and he felt a peculiar joy in giving all the credit to her.

"She just told me what to do," he explained, "and if it hadn't been for the joy of us now might be en route to the hospital!"

Miss Maltney, who had sprained her ankle in the leap into the back of the sleigh, was taken home first. Hartigan and Esther were then left at the Chapman house, whose large windows gleamed through the snow-laden branches. On the steps of the big veranda Hartigan stopped.

"Esther," he said, "I've learned one thing to-night."

"What is that?" she asked.

"That real courage seldom shows itself unless it is needed, and then it is worth a thousand times more than that superficial quality we call 'dash.' I have chosen a new model for my heroine. She is the dearest, bravest little girl in all the hemisphere, I think!"

The girl's eyes gleamed. "I think I understand," she answered, quietly, "and I am so glad."

"But there's one thing about it all that troubles me," frowned Hartigan. "I wish more than anything else that my heroine would live out the last chapter in real life!"

"What does she do in the last chapter?" ventured Esther.

"Why, my dear girl, as the story isn't an Ibsen tragedy, she finally weds the fellow who loves her. Would you, dear?"

But at that moment a considerate man in the moon veiled his face with a cloud.

THE REWARD OF POLITENESS

Not Always What Might Be Expected by Those Who Make Room in a Street Car.

"Sometimes," said Mr. MacWhackleton, "we entertain angels unawares, and then again sometimes we entertain people who turn out to be far from angels, as witness what may happen to us when we try to be civil to somebody in a street car."

"Here are two persons sitting comfortably side by side with ample room, the two occupying the space of about two persons and a half, and then in comes another passenger who stands up in front of these two, holding on by a strap. Then presently these two move along a little, away from each other, making a little space between, enough to give the newcomer room to sit down on the edge of the seat, making not the most comfortable sitting place in the world, but one better than none."

"The newcomer, he or she, as the case may be, accepts the seat thus offered and for a minute or two sits in it quietly, well forward, without crowding or incommencing the two persons who had thus been polite, and then the stranger begins crowding back until he has wedged himself in between the two persons who had made room for him and got his back against the back of the seat, now making the situation uncomfortable for all three. But the newcomer has not yet got through with what he has set out to do."

"Now he manages to get one shoulder in back of the shoulder of the person sitting at one side of him, so displacing that person, and then the newcomer gradually but firmly inserts his other shoulder back of the shoulder of the person on the other side and dislodges him from the seat back, with the result that now the person for whom room had been made sits with his or her, as the case may be, shoulders both back against the back of the seat, thus occupying now a full seat space, while the two persons who had politely made way are now both forced forward and made to sit uncomfortably on the edge of the seat."

"It is occurrences like this that make us slow to entertain people, because they make us so doubtful as to what they will turn out to be."

One.

Uncle Silas (sarcastically)—I suppose you never had a dissatisfied summer boarder.

Uncle Hiram—One.

Uncle Silas—O, you did have one, did you?

Uncle Hiram—Yes; he was a fellow that wrote letters for the county papers, and he was sore when he found out that there wasn't any chance at our house for that kind of material.

Don't aim so high as to overhoo the mark entirely.

Saved by Father's Breath.

Extricated from beneath a load of hay, to all appearances dead, a 12-year-old boy, Fred Crockett of Potter's Bar, Middlesex, England, owes the preservation of his life to the breath which his father blew into his lungs. The boy was swinging on the end of a cart of hay standing unhorsed by the side of a rick, when it suddenly overturned, completely burying him. Some children gave the alarm, and the boy's father hurried to the rescue. Some time elapsed, however, before the boy was dragged from under the hay, apparently dead. The father adopted a method of revival which he had used on animals in extremity. "I drew his mouth into a mine," he explained, "and blew with all my strength, getting my wind into the boy's lungs." A neighbor took turns when the father's breath was exhausted. After ten minutes they noticed a twitching of the muscles of the child's face, and the heart was felt to beat. For two days he remained unconscious at the cottage hospital.

Bowling Alleys

OPEN

Tuesday, Oct. 25th.

After a week of hard work by experts, I will open my alleys to the public next Tuesday. They are in better shape than ever and ready for tip-top games.

Ladies Free.

An innovation this season will be the bowling for ladies, who will be allowed the use of one alley Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 2 to 5 p. m., without charge. It is desired to have more of the ladies in town participate in this exercise.

QUALITY or CHEAPNESS?

Which is more satisfactory? I am not willing to do inferior work to compete with men who will neither carry out their agreements nor do satisfactory work. I aim to produce Original Decorative Effects at fair and reasonable prices, and my work is always satisfactory, both from the mechanical and from the artistic standpoint.
