Losses on Cattle Shipments.

At the opening of the cattle season the Montreal Trade Bulletin, in writing on the prospects of the cattle export trade for the present year, took a decidedly pessimistic view of the situation. In its latest issue, May 30, it says: "Recent experience has quite justified the position it then took on that point, and the shipments of cattle from that port since the opening of navigation have met with a succession of adverse marks in Great Britain that has been simply a record in the history of the trade, cables having been received from Liverpool, Glasgow and London during the last few days advising sales of cattle which show heavy losses, ranging from $10 to $15 per head, and in some instances even deeper losses have been sustained, one lot dropping about 44 per cent. The high rate of ocean freight, combined with the steep prices paid for cattle at the commencement of the season, and the heavy shrinkage in values on the other side, all contributed to bring about the present unfortunate state of affairs, which is being viewed by some of the shippers in a pretty serious light."

An improvement in the British market, however, would very quickly mend matters, although there are few prospects of an immediate change in that direction. Bad as the Canadian cattle have fared in the British market, American shipments have done even worse, the recent losses on beefs shipped from American ports having ranged from $20 to $25 per head in a number of instances. An improved feature in the American market is that ocean freights at Baltimore have been reduced to 50c. per head. We regret exceedingly, says the Trade Bulletin, that our remarks at the beginning of the season regarding the probable results of paying such high figures for both cattle and freights should have been realized so early. It is expected that after next month the shipments of cattle will be much lighter, and then a more profitable period is anticipated.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

California Robins and Olives.

One feature of the effect of the severe winter on the coast of California is the great numbers of birds that usually winter further North. Wild pigeons are with us in countless flocks. The varied thrush or Oregon robin, called here "tree robin," has invaded us in hordes. Both this and the common robin make their winter home in this State, but we have never seen the Oregon robin so plentiful before, probably because they are all driven down out of the northern portions of their wintering grounds. This little city has been invaded by them, every yard and lot has its dozens, hunting the elusive olive worm. And now comes in a new factor that may ultimately cut a very large figure in the survival of this familiar bird—at least on this coast. Olive growing has been introduced into Placer county within the last ten years. Numerous olive orchards are just coming into bearing, and the robins seek an active part in harvesting the crop this season. The olive is late to ripen, not being fit to gather for the purpose of oil-making until December, consequently the robins have all arrived here in time to take a hand in the harvesting. The writer has already had the opportunity of tasting one, and any creature that could eat a ripe olive, and survive, ought to have a medal. It is a mystery how such a delicate article of diet as olive oil can be derived from such a vile-scented fruit as olive. It is stringent, sour, bitter, acid, greasy, and altogether damnable! It seems to suit the robin's palate, however, and the only full-bearing orchard here was robbed of $4,000 worth of fruit in three days, in spite of half a dozen guns, kept in constant use, and the death of over 1,000 of the birds in that time.—Forest and Stream.

A Wonderful Case.

A San Francisco dispatch states that a wonderful case is occupying the attention of the physicians at the City Hospital there. A month ago Michael Lane assaulted his wife with a pistol and a hammer. One bullet entered her brain, and another her jaw. The skull was fractured by blows in four places, and the scalp on the back of the head was laid open for a distance of four inches. Having inflicted these injuries, Lane choked his wife with a cloth until her breath had left her body. Then he leveled the revolver pistol at his own head and committed suicide. The tragedy was the sequel to a bitter quarrel between husband and wife. The latter, on discovering that the former had drawn from the bank $5,000—the savings of a lifetime—and lost the sum in speculation, reproached him bitterly, and he replied in the cowardly manner above detailed. But the wonder of the affair is that the woman did not die. When the surgeons reached her she was exhausted from loss of blood, and the exodus of brain matter amounted to nearly two ounces. Despite the apparent hopelessness of the case the doctors went to work, removed splintered bits of skull, cleaned the bullet wounds and used knife and needle with such skill that doubt gave place to hope and hope almost to certainty. The great difficulty encountered was that of draining and cleansing the track of the bullet through the brain—was overcome, and Mrs. Lane, instead of dying, showed promise of ultimate recovery. After days of delirium she has become quiet and docile. There are indications that her mind will remain at least partially blank, but her physical health may be fully regained. Mr. Lane is 52 years old and the mother of nine children.

A report has been received at Knoxville, Tenn., to the effect that Bud Lane, deputy United States marshal, shot and killed Kline, a distiller, in Campbell county, Ky., recently, in a dispute about a gallon of whisky.

LETTER FROM REV. ECKEL.

BRAIDFORD, Pa., May 13, 1890.

DEAR BROTHER PERRY—How often since I arrived at "Little County" I have wished I could take time to tell my friends, in and around Salisbury, something of my new home and surroundings, but I "haven't been able to." To-day I have decided just to take time.

I need not tell you how regularly Mrs. Eckel and myself read the ADVERTISER, the News and all Salisbury letters. We can not help feeling that Salisbury is home—indeed we always speak of it as such; and we feel that as a place to live—"There's no place like home." But we are fairly settled here, in a most comfortable home, among a most cordial people. Everything here appears in striking contrast to what we experienced on the Eastern Shore. Here we see nothing but hills or mountains. Our house is set on a hill. As I look out from my study window, I see mountains towering high in every direction. These mountains are wooded, are now bare, at this season of the year, and the hills are set with oil derricks, which look just like Bro. Cannon's wind mill, except that they are painted. The brown structures mark the site of old wells, perhaps now exhausted, the new ones set "face" "face." In some instances these derricks stand on vacant lots and in back yards throughout the city. There are at present, within the city, and its near vicinity, sixteen or eighteen thousand wells and new ones are being constantly drilled. Bradford has proven the most productive and enduring of all the oil fields of Western Pennsylvania. I would not venture to estimate the number of wells I saw in riding across the mountains the other day, but they stood close together, down the little valleys, up on the mountain tops, in the depths of every forest and by the bank of every stream. I thought of the millions and millions of barrels of oil representing millions and millions of dollars—what has been pumped out of this great reservoir, and wondered what had become of all the oil and the money and the men who reaped the harvest. You helped to burn up the oil. The Standard Oil Company kept the lion's share of the money and the men are everywhere—some rich, some poor. I meet men every day who make and lose millions. If these men had not lost millions this would doubtless be the richest city of its size in Pennsylvania today.

Increased Popularity of the Growler.

With the price of ice a cent a pound delivered at the doors of our residences, when purchased in chunks of fifty pounds or more, and considerably higher when small lumps are bought, there has been a good deal of diminution in the ice trade for the past few days, and the growler has become a household word. Many customers have been acknowledged by most of the ice companies in town. Perhaps the most noticeable result is the extra consumption of beer as sold by the growler. This fact has been pretty nearly doubled the growler business, said the proprietor of a Third Avenue saloon. "You see, people who give up buying ice have no ice water to drink at the table and they get mighty weary of warm hydrant water. I have had a dozen men come in with growlers at noon today whose faces I never saw before."—New York Sun.

Weak Woman.

The more sensitive nature of the female sex renders women much more susceptible than men to the numerous ills which spring from indigestion in the system. The nervous system gives way, sick headache is frequent, the appetite is lost, and other ailments peculiar to the sex cause great suffering. Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiarly adapted for such cases, and its use is highly gratifying for the relief it has afforded thousands of women whose very existence before taking it was only misery. It strengthens the nerves, cures sick headache and indigestion, purifies the blood, and gives the system a healthy action to every organ in the body.

A Well Filled Orchard.

A Dover special says: A strange freak in the fruit growing line is now attracting the attention of the farmers of this section. While all other fruit crops are even in the best kept and most skillfully cultivated orchards, hardly a peach can be found down on the bay shore, near Woodland Beach, stands peach orchard the trees in which are loaded down with finely developed fruit. The singular thing about this, in the estimation of fruit growers, is that while even in the best sheltered orchards, those surrounded entirely by woods, all the fruit was destroyed by the March storms, the fruit of this particular orchard remained and in every way exposed, has lived and thrived. The orchard contains trees of all varieties.

She Will Wed a Baron.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—It is current gossip among the members of the diplomatic corps here that Baron von Zedwitz is soon to marry Miss Lena Caldwell in this city. Baron von Zedwitz, who is now the German minister in Mexico, is in Europe on his leave of absence, and the Misses Caldwell are in Rome. They were all in this city together during the season of 1887-7, when the baron was the first secretary of the German legation, and deservedly popular in society. The Misses Caldwell were entertaining in society and attracting much attention at the time. Baron Zedwitz was at that time one of the admirers of Miss Lena. Miss Mary Gwendolyn Caldwell has since made her name well known across the continent by refusing the hand of Prince Murat of France.

Death of A Recluse.

Hiram Samp, who from being a rising lawyer of North-western Pennsylvania, and a man of the most flattering political prospects suddenly abandoned his profession and became a recluse of the most exclusive kind, died in his hut near Waterville, Pa., Friday, May 31, at the age of eighty-three years. He had lived the life of a hermit in a miserable hovel for fifty years. No reason for his singular retirement and wretched seclusion was ever known. He represented the Warren district in the legislature, and was known to the Senate the fall he took up the life of a hermit and was also to have been married to a daughter of Judge Lapham. Miss Lapham is still living, aged eighty years, having never gone into society since her strange abandonment by her affianced lover.

Literary Notes.

An article on "Fruit Bitters," by George Morison Wall, in Harper's Magazine, for June, will be accompanied by a plate portrait of the ex-Chancellor, engraved from the celebrated painting by Franz V. Lenbach.

Julian Ralph did have an American city in mind when he wrote the article on "The Best-governed City in the World" for the June Number of Harper's Magazine. The article relates to Birmingham, England, and Mr. Ralph's explanation of its municipal policy seems to justify the title. The illustrations, including a portrait of Joseph Chamberlain, are drawn by J. W. Alexander and Charles Graham.

UNVEILING OF THE LEE STATUE.

RICHMOND, Va., June 2, 1890.

My Dear Advertiser—For the past four or five days, I have been in the midst of all the joy that has been reading in your long list of exchanges. The Rev. S. H. Shepard of the Madison Express world, of course, says, parade crisis. I found Richmond absolutely riotous and almost blind for the decorations. The Rev. S. H. Shelly Nervous About His Fate.

Shaw Hill, Md., June 2.—John Shelly, colored, who is under death sentence, confined in a cell in the north-east corner of the jail in this town, and since his conviction has been ironed and chained securely to the floor. In this cheerless abode, with no furniture save one chair, the condemned man will be held until such time as shall be designated by the governor in his warrant to the sheriff for his execution. Although no steps have been taken, yet it is probable that an effort will be made to have the sentence commuted. The condemned man is completely overcome now that he is brought face to face with death, and spends much of his time in howling his fate, while his fellow-prisoners weep and pray over him. He expresses deep contrition for his crime, and says he did not mean to kill Butts. By a strange coincidence Shelly was born on the very day in 1868 of an execution in this county. The occasion was the hanging of a woman, the only one ever hanged here.

Remark and His Emperors.

The statement that the young German Emperor has warned Prince Bismarck "that if he does not stop his press utterings the result will be serious" may be taken with several grains of allowance. Although he has shown himself to be a dictatorial, effusive and somewhat rash young person, Emperor William is evidently not without shrewdness, and he must be aware that so despotically a threat to a man of Bismarck's eminence would inevitably arouse general indignation throughout Germany and inflict very serious injury upon the "monarchical principle" he is so fond of asserting. It cannot be ignorant of the fact that the stability of his throne is largely the work of Bismarck himself, and that if he provoked the man of "blood and iron" it would not be difficult for the latter to shake his power to its foundations. It is unlikely that either the Emperor, unless he loses his head entirely, or Bismarck will proceed to extremities—the Emperor because he dare not, and Bismarck, because, whatever may be his personal sense of irritation at the treatment he has received, he would not wish to do so to the detriment of the great structure of German unity which he may be said to have been both architect and builder.

I used two bottles of CUTICURA and I could see a change, and after I used six bottles I was cured. I had used six bottles of CUTICURA and one box of CUTICURA and I was cured of the disease. Dedication of Makemie Church.

On to-morrow there will be dedicated at Snow Hill a beautiful church edifice as a memorial to Francis Makemie, the founder of the first Presbyterian church in America. Makemie went to Snow Hill from Ireland in 1683. He had been elected Moderator of the first assembly and was one of the staunchest and most eloquent adherents of John Calvin. His arrival in this country was in response to a request from Col. Stevens, a member of the Lord Baltimore Privy Council to the Presbytery of Longh, Ireland. Makemie found the Presbyterians of the lower peninsula few and scattered. He founded five churches in that region—Snow Hill, Rehoboth, Manokin, Pitt's Creek and "Wicomico. Makemie's first church at Snow Hill was built in 1688. In 1796 a large brick church was erected in its place. The latter was in use eighty years, when experts declared that it was unsafe to occupy. It was then torn down, and in its place the church just completed was erected. Presbyterians in nearly all parts of the country and some in England—among the latter, Lady Fortright, who gave $5,000—contributed towards the building fund of the church. The edifice cost $30,000. It is of brick, with brownstone trimmings. The interior is finished in hard woods, and the seats are arranged in semi-circles. Five magnificent windows commemorate the virtues of deceased Presbyterians.

"Christ, the Teacher."

The Peninsula Methodist says in speaking of the commencement of Delaware College: Rev. Thomas E. Martindale, of Salisbury, Md., preached the baccalaureate sermon at the Delaware College commencement, in the oratory of the college, Sunday night last. This discourse received the highest commendation from every one who heard it, and ministers and laymen of other denominations unhesitatingly pronounced it the best sermon delivered from that platform in many years. Brother Martindale, at his best, with the theme, "Christ, the Teacher," founded upon the text, "Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." He dwelt upon the quietness and peace of the central figure, and delivered with faultless elocution, a sermon surpassed by the most brilliant pulpit orators of our land. The deep spiritual impression made was plainly marked. The Church and Conference at present are not proud of such a masterly effort, upon which only favorable criticism has been made.

Cut Down the Weeds.

The vacant lots in Salisbury which have been uncultivated since the fire of 1880 seem to have been given over to the exclusive production of weeds. Just at this time quite a number of these lots are ornate with a luxuriant growth of noxious plants. The chief use of these vegetable growth is to harbor flies and insects, and to present an unsightly appearance to the central figure, and delivered with faultless elocution, a sermon surpassed by the most brilliant pulpit orators of our land. The deep spiritual impression made was plainly marked. The Church and Conference at present are not proud of such a masterly effort, upon which only favorable criticism has been made.

An Eccentric Lady's Death.

Mrs. Adeline Trader died last Tuesday afternoon at her home, near Salisbury, aged about seventy years. Her remains were interred Sunday morning in the family burial ground, on the farm where she resided. Rev. William Munford, of St. Peter's Parish, officiated.

Mrs. Trader was a sister of the late Christopher Trader, with whom she lived all her life, neither having ever married. A peculiarity of this woman's life was her self-imposed seclusion from the world. She kept almost of current history by devoted perusal of the newspapers, but studiously shrank from meeting people. Only a few servants and one or two favored friends were permitted to come into her presence the last years of her life. In fact, she had become a recluse long before her death.

An estate of $12,000 or $14,000 falls to the inheritance of about seven cousins, who are the nearest of kin to the deceased lady. Most of them live in this county.

"Musie Hath Charms," etc.

That most interesting and independent, the ideal dancer, is not infrequently the innocent source of much of our passing amusement. His gregarious nature, his love of the good things of life, his superstitious religion and fear of the devil, his quietness and reserve, and his fondness for music, invest his being with an irresistible attraction. His slavery to the charms of music is universal; and he is a performer in his controlling passion. To master a banjo or a mouth-organ, affords him the greatest felicity. When his performances draw around him respectability, then his happiness soars to the zenith of the seventh heaven; the beatitude of his earthly existence is complete. His buoyant soul lifts "this mortal coil" off its feet. His fervor is infectious, and few of his kind can resist the magic of his inspiration.

"Musie hath charms to soothe the savage breast," was demonstrated a few evenings ago on the pavement in front of the Advertiser's building, near the door of the office of the Wicomico News. A typical colored youth came along and soon excited interest by playing on a mouth-organ several familiar songs. His feat was a master of no mean pretensions. Along with him was a companion of his own kind, whom the boys dubbed "Minty," and whose soul the music had filled with ecstasy. His feet were impatient to give expression to the emotions of his heart. He needed only an invitation, which was forthcoming. Immediately he sprang to the pavement, and to the rhythmic notes of the instrument he fairly raved in mad delight. He seemed to float on the voice of the music. His movements were matchless in grace and were filled with a passion and perfect harmony. With a hurried zigzag he would circle around, then pause on one foot in front of the musician, lift the other in mid-air, and with a measured beat "sashay" to and fro. His excess of rapture culminated in exclamation.

Remembered His Friends.

It was about thirty-two years ago that Orsini and his fellow-conspirators made their attempt upon the life of Louis Napoleon. When Orsini's bomb exploded before the Emperor's carriage a French detective named Rossi rushed up to the carriage for the purpose of rendering assistance to the occupants.

The Emperor, however, mistook Rossi for one of his assassins, and, opening the door of the coach, he dealt Rossi a blow between the eyes, knocking the fatal, detective clean off his feet. But Rossi was amply rewarded as soon as the mistake was discovered; he was provided with money enough to support him in another part of his life. Rossi has just died, and up to the end he was wont to tell with pride of how he was once knocked down by the Emperor. Louis Napoleon made a practice of rewarding those who had served him in his early adventures. He married his waif-orphan to a young man, (Leon Bure), whom he made keeper of the priory purse, and the sons of this union were created, respectively, Count d'Oreux and Count de Varenne, each receiving estates worth $25,000 a year.

The man who was keeper of the chest at Ham while Napoleon was prisoner there was subsequently promoted by Napoleon to the governorship of the palace of St. Cloud. Bonaparte, who provided the clothes in which Napoleon made his escape from Ham, was rewarded with an annual pension of $2,500; and the country parson, who used to come every day to the chateau at Ham to play chess with the royal prisoner, was created Bishop of Arras.

Remembering these things, is it at all remarkable that the people who have the young Duc d'Orleans in custody should be particularly kind and obliging to him?—Chicago News.

Sold Out to the Lottery.

NEW ORLEANS, June 23.—The house today, after debating the proposition at length, passed the lottery bill submitting to the popular vote a constitutional amendment extending the charter of the Louisiana State Lottery Company for 25 years in return for $1,000,000 a year. The vote stood 69 to 29, just enough to carry the bill, as it required a two-thirds vote, and the house consists of 98 members. The bill is reasonably certain to pass the senate with the same two-thirds majority. It cannot be voted by the governor, but goes before the people in April, 1892, and will have to receive a majority of all the votes then to become a law.

Cancer of the Lip Cured.

I suffered from Cancer on my lip that defied the skill of the best physicians of the State. I had it burned out, but the operation only made it worse, causing it to spread over more surface and eat deeper in. I finally had it burned out again, and used Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) to heal it up and drive the poison out of my blood. The effect of the specific was magical! It healed up the Cancer entirely without leaving a scar as a reminder. This was over four years ago, and since then there has been no sign of a return of the Cancer. I will therefore answer any enquiries in regard to my case.

A PROMINENT DANGEROUS CURER.

"Eleven years ago I was suffering from an attack of White Swelling. A great many prominent physicians attended me but failed to effect a cure. I commenced using Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) and after using it for a few months I was entirely cured, and since then have had no symptoms of its returning. I feel that the cure is entirely due to the curative properties contained in S. S. S. I can cheerfully recommend it as a medicine to all suffering humankind." Paul W. Kirkpatrick, of Kirkpatrick & Wafford, Drugists, Johnson City, Tenn.

Deceptive.

Apprentices are often deceptive, and many a man is misled by trifles. The peacock strut with its head in the air as though it were the monarch of creation—while the valuable and honest watch-dog carries his head low. In the grain field the light hawk is the tallest, while the well-filled heads hang down.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she clung to its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and seemed imminent. For three months she consumed incessantly and could not sleep on taking first dose that she slept all night with one and a half hours' rest. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Write W. C. The Squirrel Rats in Memphis.

Speaking of squirrels reminds me of a squirrel park that is in Memphis, Tenn. Perhaps you have never seen it. In the very heart of the city is a square containing a thick growth of live oaks and a great cool fountain playing. In the trees and over the grounds scampers hundreds of squirrels, so tame that they will eat from your hand. How delightful to step from the hot and busy street into this shady retreat, cold with the moist air that blows past the fountain.

What Does It Mean?

"100 Does One Dollar" means simply that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most economical medicine to buy, because it gives more for the money than any other preparation. Each bottle contains 100 doses and will average to last a month while other preparations taken according to directions, are gone in a week. Therefore be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier.

Our Resources.

In a recent speech Congressman Atkinson, of West Virginia, said: "If all the port of entry on both oceans were today blockaded so that no vessel could enter them bearing the products of other countries, and war should be declared against us, we could, with our present facilities, produce every munition of war, and every article that we might need for our sustenance for a thousand years."

Keep Busy.

The secret of success in life is to keep busy, to be persevering, patient and untiring in the pursuit of calling you are following. The busy one may now and then make mistakes, but it is better to risk these than to be idle and inactive. Keep doing, whether it be at work or seeking recreation. Motion is life, and the busiest are the happiest. Cheerful, active labor is a blessing. An old philosopher says: "The firefly only shines when on the wing; so it is with the mind; when once we rest, we darken."—Elmore.

Drop of Comfort.

The drop of comfort was very low in the doctor's office when Mrs. Purdett presented to the judge when he called upon her the other evening, and he helped himself sparingly in consequence. Kind Mrs. Purdett noticed this and hastened to reassure him. "Don't be afraid, take all you want. There's a whole deniged full in the next room."

Ay, Really?

Standing before a clergyman who was about to marry a rustic was asked: "Will you have this woman?" The man stared in surprise, and replied: "Ay, surely! Who, I kummed a-pupus!"

Get well and stay well.

But how shall we do it? Though, for that matter, there's no secret to it. As many a man understand very well. If you're low-spirited, gloomy, depressed, if nothing tastes good and your nights bring no rest, if your stomach is foul and your mouth seems much foul, and so on, you become that they call you a "growler."

Be sure that the trouble is due to your liver.

And the blood is as sluggish as sometimes a river. Because when it's filled with all manner of stuff. Clear it out and the current runs smoothly enough.

Go to the drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It is a sure cure for the low spirits and general depression a man feels when his liver is inactive and his blood impure. This remedy makes a man well.

Miscellaneous Cards.

There is a great commotion among the Jewish population of Boston, caused by an order recently issued by the board of health forbidding the killing of fowls within the thickly settled sections of the city, except in places specially assigned for that purpose by the board of health. The Jews put great reliance on poultry for their sustenance, and it is probable that they consume as many chickens as all the other people of Boston put together. The poultry that is consumed by others than the Jews is generally killed outside, but all the fowls intended for Jewish consumption have been killed in this city.

The reason for this is to be found in the Jewish law. The meat of no animal or fowl that has not been killed by a person authorized by the rabbi to slaughter each animal or fowl can be eaten by a Jew, nor can it be eaten after having been killed for over two days. The consequence is that the people of this race prefer to buy their own fowls or animals alive and have them killed by the proper authority. It is calculated that somewhere like 5,000 chickens are brought into Boston alive every week for Jewish consumption alone.—Boston Herald.

As English Veterans.

There is a great deal in the paper on the fact that Sir Provo Wallis has entered the twentieth year of his life. He entered the British navy as a midshipman, at the age of sixteen, and has since that time been a member of the navy. He has a unique distinction here as the sole survivor of the naval life of the time of Nelson, but his remarkable career has attracted the attention of the public. He was born in Nova Scotia, and as senior officer commanded the Shannon when she sailed out of Boston harbor after the historic fight with the Chesapeake, towing the captured vessel with Lawrence's body to Halifax. He was made commander of the ship in that memorable battle fought seventy-eight years ago, yet he still lives in fair health and in possession of his faculties.—New York Times.

Juvenile Murders Guiltless.

Some little sensation was caused recently by the execution in front of the gate of La Roquette of two juvenile murderers, aged respectively 17 and 21. They had strangled an elderly conderger in broad daylight in the Rue Bonaparte, with a view to robbing her. President Carnot disclaimed from sparing their lives, with a view to dispel a current but deep rooted impression among the youth of the dangerousness of death is unlawful to guillotine "infants." The one hardship in their case was that fifty-nine days were allowed to elapse between their conviction and execution, and the day they were executed they were in a commotion of their punishment. They had their fate with courage.—London Telegraph.

The girls engaged in the escapade are daughters of highly respected people.—Charleston World.

The Latest Hair Cut.

What is the latest thing in a hair cut? I haven't been officially notified of any new fashion from the pompadour cut. But one of my men told me the other day that he had heard there was going to be a revolution in the cut. He said that the old-fashioned cut was going to turn. That is, straight across the back, the hair about the ears to be left thick and long and combed over on the temples—hooked over. That was the sort of cut your father had when he was cutting your mother. See? I don't know where my man got that idea, but he is always getting an idea somewhere.—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

The Season Has Changed.

On Saturday, April 13, two red tulips and one yellow one timidly folded their leaves in the big bed in City Hall park. On Saturday, April 20, every one of the thousands of other red and yellow tulips in the bed had followed the example, and the whole bed was a glorious blaze of color. Folks used to say that the tulips were blooming in this latitude until the first day of June, but we do those things better in these days.—New York Sun.

The Price of Pork.

When pork at 19 o'clock April 13 is worth $4 more than the same pork at 11 o'clock of the same day, it would certainly be an occasion such as a high tide demand have about as much to do with the market price as has the nebular hypothesis.—Chicago Times.
