STC Bowling League to Picnic at Ocean City

The STC Bowling League, after enjoying a very successful year, will terminate Monday, May 12, 1958. A picnic for all bowlers and substitutes (excluding guests who participated in the league during the year) will be held the following Monday, May 19. The affair is scheduled to be held at Ocean City, Maryland, students leaving the school via privately-owned conveyances. However, in the event of inclement weather, the event will take place in the Salisbury Municipal Park.

At the picnic four trophies will be awarded to the persons attaining the highest averages both first and second semester. The first place team will also be recognized at this time.

Mrs. Barbara Carstens, current manager of the league will be graduated this June. Any woman student wishing to take over this job is asked to contact Carole Kirkwood, president of the WAA.

Science Club Officers '58-'59

The Science Club has announced its slate of officers for 1958-59. They are: President, Joe Evans; Vice-President, Mary A. Purns; Secretary, Thelma Hackert; and Treasurer, Jim Jones.

Campus Golfers to Receive Instruction from Golf Pro

This spring something new has been added to the men's athletic program. The MAA is sponsoring, for all men interested, a chance to play golf. Instruction will be given by Jack Slayton, golf pro from the Elks Club. Reduced rates are to be made available. Those men planning to participate to date are Tom Fallin, Murray Smith, Bill Livingston, Charles Muir, Jack Rush, Gene Carstens, Ken Bridges, Irv Marsh, Robert Sherwood, Tom Parker, Jack Mesick, George Hurley. Practice is to begin soon.

Senior Life Saving Tests To Be Given by STC Student

Jack Rush, local water safety instructor in affiliation with the Red Cross, will give tests to those swimmers who wish to apply for their senior life saving certificate. Anyone who is interested should contact him so arrangements can be made to take the test at Johnson's Lake before the summer vacation begins.

Those who have indicated interest thus far include Barry Meeks, Adrienne Nock, Jack Potter, Tom Towers, David Byrd, Gene Carstens, John Brenner, and Tom Lewis.

Campus Groups Make Plans For End-of-Year Activities

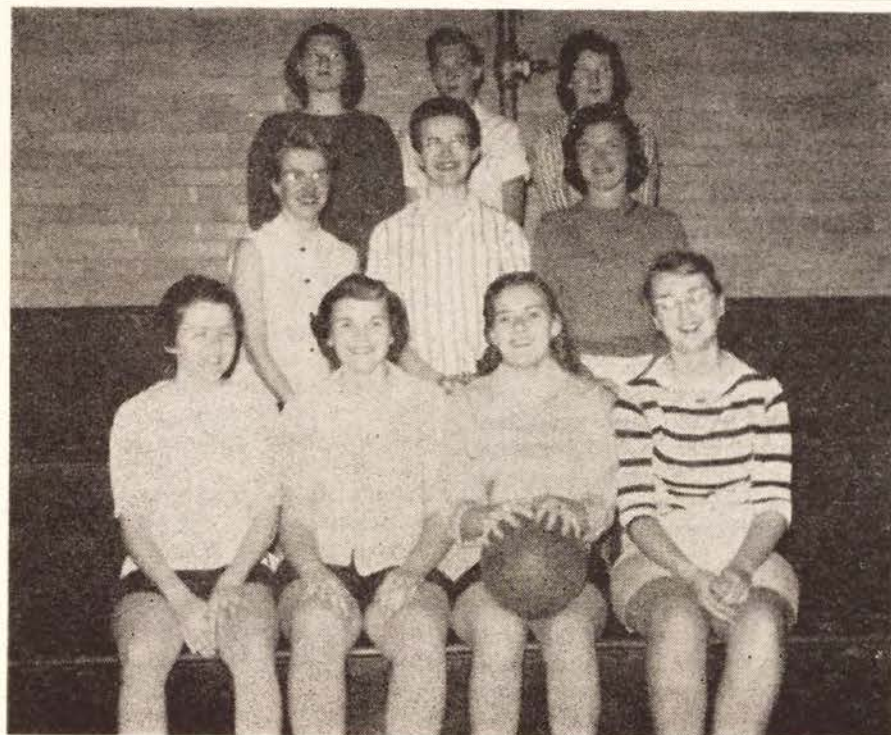

A custom which seems to have sprung up on campus is that of end-of-the-year activities held by the various groups at STC. This year again sees plans being formulated by the organizations and clubs for culminating events.

The College Chorus will have a banquet on Tuesday evening, May 13, at 6:00 P.M. in the college dining hall. Following the dinner there will be a short program of entertainment, presentation of awards, and an introduction of new officers; Joanne Little, President; James Davis, Vice-President; Becky Forsythe, Secretary-Treasurer; Phil Moore, Librarian. Special guest will be Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Frampton, Dr. and Mrs. Devilbiss, Dr. and Mrs. Willis, and Dr. Marice Fleming. There will also be several members from first semester present: Rebecca Matthews, Joan Hayman, Carol Knapp, and Mary Evelyn Doepp.

The Philosophy Club is planning a culminating event in the form of a buffet supper. This supper, on Thursday evening, May 15, will precede the last discussion of great philosophers for the school year. Both the supper and discussion will be held at the home of the club's advisor, Dr. William Wroten.

On May 21, the WAA has planned a banquet which will be held in the college dining hall. Sponsored by the WAA it is open to all women students

Editorially Speaking

There is a subject here on campus that is constantly under criticism and discussion by upperclassmen. It is that subject of education courses and their value in actual teaching. There seems to have been built up on the part of students a general attitude of negativism toward any course with the label education.

This is not entirely without foundation. Many times the student finds himself confronted with the same or similar material in all education courses. Many times the student feels that the course is theory-laden and barren of practical implications.

The story of experience is that the value of these courses is not to be realized until applied in the field of actual classroom teaching. But even then perhaps revision of the course offerings in education is necessary. At any rate an evaluation is needed.

This evaluation should not come only from the administration and college faculty, but also, and even primarily, from those who have had the opportunity to reap any possible benefits. This implies evaluation by the students doing practice teaching and by recent graduates now active in the teaching profession. This "looking at ourselves" could be a test of the value of the present set-up and a guide-post for suggestions for any probable improvement.

It is realized that the program at STC is determined by the state. But the fact still remains that an evaluation of education courses as they now exist is needed. Through this a more complete student understanding of the education program should ensue.

Something for Bea

By Joanne Cathell

"She always wanted a bright red sweater, always did", the tiny decrepit man uttered afresh to the bright young thing known as a saleslady.

Reaching deep into his pocket, he pulled out a worn five dollar bill and gave it up to the girl. "No, don't mess with fixing it up fancy . . . just put it in a bag, just a bag. Got to get over to the hospital by time to visit . . . it's for Bea . . . she's my wife, you know. Always did want a red sweater, but it's got to be bright, she said. Never did get around to getting it. Thought it just make her happy and to get well sooner if she saw it. Yes, a bright red, that's what she said."

Smiling sadly at the girl as she handed him the sweater, he then shuffled out of the store and toward the bus stop. Clutching the sweater to his chest, he glanced up just in time to see the hospital-bound bus pull out. After waiting fifteen anxious minutes for the next bus, he climbed aboard and from his last quarter, paid the fifteen cents fare.

His thoughts were with Bea all the time. But then they always were. Such plans they had when they were first married! Such things he had promised her! The plans — where had they gone? The promises — what had become of them? But still it was a happy life they had. Hadn't Bea told him about how wonderful it was just to be his wife and to share all their little joys and, then too, all their sorrows? But now she was going to have one of her wishes. Oh, he knew it was nothing grand like the things he had promised in their youth. It might make her get well sooner though so that she could wear it and show it off to the neighbors. Nothing must happen to Bea. Why, how could he

Ann Bozman, Jerry Baker, and Jo Synder were recent house guests of Becky O'Rourke.

Joyce Bennett will visit the University of Maryland campus on the week-end of May 10.

Janet Hart was a bridesmaid in the recent marriage of Miss Madeline Birch of Secretary, former STC student, to Mr. Franklin Marini of Cambridge.

Linda Magilis was a guest of Helen Mae Ellis at her home in Bishop, Maryland, on the week-end of May 3.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Tillie Worthington to Mr. Paul Butler.

Grace Zaghi attended a dance at Villanova in Philadelphia last week-end.

Connie Mears was a visitor at the University of Maryland May 3 and 4 at which time she attended a dance.

Jane Hart had as week-end guests on April 26 her mother, Mrs. Harry Hart, and her brother, Mr. Lester Hart, from Norrisville, Maryland.

Lines Penciled in the Margin Of a Lecture Program

I endure an inward rage
 As he prattles from the stage,
 And my intellect deplores each dull conjecture.

His behavior aggravates me,
 And his voice infuriates me
 And I loathe myself for coming to this lecture.

Oh, I wish it were the style
 To go fleeing up the aisle
 When a speaker is a bigot or a bore.
 If it were, I'd shout with glee
 From the second balcony,
 And I'd gallop gaily to the nearest door!

But it's not the coming fashion
 To declare one's inner passion
 Though I'd be the first to try it, if it were),

So I sit here, boned and staid,
 Looking prim and undismayed,
 Just as though this nincompoop and I concur.

STC Stomps Wesley by 9-4

By TOM FALLIN

Under the tutelage of the poor man's Casey Stengel, Charley Muir, STC romped to a 9-4 win over Wesley Jr. College. It was a relatively easy triumph for the Gulls as Bill Langford and Tom Dorman combined hurling stunts, allowing but four hits.

On this outing the Gulls bats began to talk as Wesley pitching was rattled for 11 hits, Earl (.800) Reddish, Stan Bozman, and Dickie Taylor accounting for seven of them.

"Casey" Muir's managerial superiority was displayed by a two-for-two pinch hitting performance by Messrs. Alderson and Carstens.

The fielding gem of the afternoon was produced by Tom Dorman in a knock-down, flat-on-back, line-drive-snarling exhibition in the fifth inning. Agility? Superb!

The Gulls grabbed four runs in the top of the second stanza, when Stan Bozman was hit by a pitch, Murray Smith singled, Dickie Taylor doubled, Earl Reddish doubled, and a Wesley infielder contributed a timely miscue.

Wesley tallied once in the second, and then tied it up in the fourth on a hit, a walk, and a pair of errors.

STC came back with the tie-breaking runs in the fifth, and added three more in the sixth to clinch the victory, Tom Dorman getting the win.

The "Inmates" Capture First Place in Intramural Contest

On April 26, the final game in women's intramural basketball was played between the "Inmates" and "The Ladies-in-Black." Victorious in this game, the Inmates became the winning team in the tournament. With Pat Lloyd as coach the "Inmates" included forwards Joan Cowan, Betty Lee Shawn, Judy Windsor, Jerry Blazek, and Carole Kirkwood and guards Norma Culver, Rebecca Matthews, Jerry Baker, and Rose Mae Lewis. Captain of the squad was Joan Cowan.

The final ranking of the teams was:

Sport Beat

Let's take a short glance at the National League. There isn't any trouble when it comes to picking the pennant winners. That should be Milwaukee in a breeze. They are loaded in every department with good hitting and strong fielding.

The team that should finish second and give the Beavers their hardest time is St. Louis and they are currently resting in the cellar, no thanks to Stan Musial. The Cards haven't been getting the solid pitching they were expecting and outside of Musial no one is getting on base.

Then there is Cincinnati—a team loaded with power and weak in pitching. The Redlegs usually score a lot of runs but it seems their pitchers don't appreciate the fact. The Reds should make third place.

The biggest story of the Philadelphia

Phillies is Robin Roberts. If Robbie hits his old form the Phillies should make the first division. Their brightest star this moment is Richie Ashburn who trails only Musial in the batting race.

Then comes the dear old "Bums" and the name should be changed to "has beens." Every dog has his day and the Dodgers have had theirs. About the only thing they have is a new city and plenty of fans. They supposedly have a new ball park but it could be called different names and probably will, especially by pitchers.

Then comes the San Francisco Giants led by Willie Mays. Willie will have trouble leading them any higher than sixth place. They should have stayed in New York. To see the World Series then all they had to do was to cross the river; now they have to cross the country.

At the bottom of the league we have two teams who will probably fight it out for last place. Hitless and pitchless Pittsburgh, except for Bob Friend, and the clawless Cubs of Chicago. The Cubs can boast of two good ball players in Dick Drott and Ernie Banks. But two good players aren't enough, unless you're pitching horseshoes. Anyone who will go see these two play each other late in the season is a real baseball fan or crazy.

get along without her? Fifty-three years together.

The screech of the brakes of the bus interrupted his thoughts. At the hospital at last. Still clutching the sweater, he walked into the fancy lobby and started up the hall to ward C. That's where Bea was. And there was that nice doctor, the one watching out for Bea, coming down the same hall.

"Hi Doc, I'm just going down to see Bea. I brought her a present . . . a sweater. Bright red. She always wanted a bright red one. What's wrong? Don't you like it? Bea will like it . . . Doc . . . won't she? It's red . . . just like she always wanted."

"Your wife won't be needing the sweater. She passed away a few minutes ago. She was calling your name. I's very sorry."

It was a dreary rainy day. But then rainy days are often dreary. And even more so on this day of the funeral. Behind him the tiny man heard one of the few people who had come to pay respect to his wife whisper, "My ain't it a shame she's all laid out in that awful red sweater. It's so bright it don't look fitting."

And he thought to himself as a smile came over his face, "You got your red sweater Bea, and you look more beautiful than an angel in it."
