The Senate's recommendation that the deadline for submission of final grades be extended to three business days after the last final can not be accepted. This change would adversely affect the University's ability to communicate vital information to students who may be in or on the verge of academic difficulty in a timely fashion. The current University practices afford students opportunities to improve their situation in a special session, to plan for the following semester, and time to deal with the possible financial aid issues. Moreover, the current policy allows the University time to make the seats of academically dismissed students available to the incoming transfer students.
