ANNOUNCEMENT.—Mr. Editor: You are hereby authorized to announce James McCreary Jones, as a candidate for register of wills of Wisconsin county.

MANY VOTERS.

REGISTERS TAKE NOTICE.—The officers of Registration are earnestly requested to furnish us with a list of the voters in their respective districts as soon as possible after the list is corrected, in order that we will have time to publish the same.

MR. ISAAC COLE, Baltimore, writes: "I had a distressing Cough, which annoyed me day and night. I was persuaded to use Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and its effect was magical. I am entirely cured. I know others that used it with the same happy results."

MARRIED.—By Rev. P. F. August, Mr. Joseph R. Collier, and Mrs. Mary Tighman, October 14th, 1873, both of Wisconsin County.

We have only to say in reply to the several correspondents, who have taken upon themselves to pore out their wonder-ful effusions through the columns of the Eastern Shoreman, that hereafter we shall not feel called upon to answer any one who does not give his name. But as the fellow who writes over the signature of X. has reiterated an old slander, which has heretofore been circulated, for the purpose of injuring us, we will now say once for all, that whoever utters it, utters what he knows to be a falsehood, and he can be proven a villifier at an hour's notice, and we understand that Mr. Dashiell, has written a letter to the Eastern Shoreman to that effect, and if the Editors of that once respectable sheet, will be as ready to publish the truth, as they have shown themselves ready to publish slanders against us, their readers will have the truth in a nut shell, and they will learn that Mr. X. Beau Hickman, or whoever he may be, has written what he knows to be false, or at least he could have known if he had asked any one in this community that was acquainted with us.

Joy.

Joy comes to cheer our life,
To glid our paths with pleasure;
But grasp it as we may,
It will not last for ever.
There's joy in woman's love,
There's joy in fond caresses;
There's joy which all can have——'Tis wearing Tower Hill Dresses.

Which is the most beautiful, comfortable, and low priced clothing to be found in the City. Bennett & Co., Tower Hall, 518 Market Street, Philadelphia.

THE YOSEMITE VALLEY.—Of all the great sights in the natural scenery of the world, there are none which surpass in grandeur and beauty the attractions which the Yosemite Valley affords, and which only the last few years have disclosed to the appreciation of an admiring people. No one can furnish any accurate idea to another of the wonderful sights which nature has stowed away in this far-famed region. Even the traveler, who, face to face, looks upon all, needs days and days to fully comprehend and realize the marvellous scenes upon which his eyes rest. For comparison allow us to remark that the great fall of Niagara is but 163 feet high: what think you, then, of the "Bridal Veil" as it falls all glittering and foaming, all swaying in the wind from a distance of 690 feet above you! Then there is El Capitan, "a solid, seamless, cream-white mass of rock shining as though cut out of ivory," which towers 3,000 feet into the air—can you imagine at all how grand and impressive it must be! The Valley is full of mountains and cascades, the highest of the former extending skywards over a mile, and among the latter the Sentinel Falls plunging earthward from an altitude of 3,000 feet (5,280 feet constituting a mile). The Yosemite was given by the United States to California, for a grand National Park, and is eight miles long by two wide. Through it roams the Merced River, which, as it reaches El Capitan, grows all hushed and quiet as if from very awe, and then, as if powerless to do otherwise, shows the Great Chief how beautiful he is by reflecting his image from her truthful eyes. We might proceed and devote column after column to a description of this beautiful Valley, and yet never repeat ourselves say in adjectives,—but the account would be at least feeble, the ideas given but very faint—for words seem to be inadequate to all express what we feel the subject demands. The nearest approach to a visit there is the pictures afforded to us "stay at home" of this region—and such pictures are exceedingly limited. We have before us, however, a beautiful old Chromo, representing a view of the Yosemite from a very attractive standpoint. It embraces "El Capitan," "North Dome" and "South Dome," "Clouds Rest," the Merced River, the "Bridal Veil Fall," and many minor details beautiful in themselves which we have not space to mention. This Chromo was recently received by us from S. E. Shutes, publisher and proprietor of Wood's Household Magazine, Newburgh, N. Y. Price of Magazine, $1.00 per year; Magazine and Yosemite, $1.50. As a premium, the picture may be obtained by sending to the above address two subscriptions for the Magazine at $1.00 each, or by subscribing two years in advance, at $1.00 per annum. We take pleasure in recommending both the Magazine and Chromo offered in this combination, and our hearty endorsement to the publisher's reputation for promptness and fair dealing.

COMMUNICATED.

Tony Tank, October 24th, 1873.

EDITOR ADVERTISER:

Dear Sir:
I see that a writer in the Eastern Shoreman, calling himself X., says that you persuaded persons to vote for Levin Dashiell, against T. F. J. Rider, for Clerk of the Circuit Court in 1867. This I know to be false, for you were hard at work for Mr. Rider all day, and it was well known that you came to the Trappe that day for the sole purpose of keeping Mr. Rider up in the ticket, in consequence of the report that Mr. Dashiell was running on the Independent or Republican ticket, and it is a well known fact that you lost votes in consequence of your efforts against Mr. Dashiell, and if Mr. X., or any body else wants further proof of this fact it can be furnished by the score.

CHAPTER 191.
AN ACT prohibiting the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors in the several counties of the State on the day of Election.
Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That it shall not be lawful for the keeper of any hotel, tavern, store, drinking establishment, or any other place where liquors are sold, or for any person directly or indirectly, to sell, barter, give or dispose of any spirituous or fermented liquors, ale or beer, or intoxicating drinks of any kind, on the days of election hereafter to be held in the several counties of the State. Sec. 2. And be it enacted, that any persons violating the provisions of this Act shall be liable to indictment by the Grand Jury of the county where the offence is committed, and shall upon conviction before any Judge of any of the Circuit Courts of this State, be fined a sum not less than fifty dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offence.—and the fine shall be paid to the informer, the other half to the County Commissioners, for the use of public roads.

Department of Justice.

Hon. Allen G. Thurman, the able Senator from Ohio, has entered into the political canvass in that State with zeal and spirit. He is one of the most popular men in Ohio, and his aid and influence will be worth thousands of votes to the Democratic party on election day. Senator Thurman is known to be pure and incorruptible. His fingers are clean. His hands are unblemished. He is free from all association with the Credit Mobilier. He puffed none of that money. He did not vote for or accept the salary "grab." He attended to the legitimate legislation of the country. He advocated and defended the right. He denounced the wrong. Such a man can command the respectful attention of good men of all parties. They will hearken to his facts and arguments, and heed his counsels in the hour of national peril. This is shown by the immense audiences which attend when Senator Thurman presents his views to the public. One of his most forcible addresses was recently delivered at Waverly, Ohio, to more people than ever before listened to a speaker in that State. The opening of that speech is as applicable to the canvass in Pennsylvania as it is to the contest in Ohio. The Senator started with the declaration that "the Democratic party seeks to revive no dead issues," and remarked, "that is true." He also announced as true the announcement made in the Ohio platform that the Democratic party "stands by its principles, which are suited to all times and circumstances," and continued, "issues have been made upon measures and have been decided, and those are dead issues. But there are certain principles that are eternal. Measures and men may die, but principles last forever. And just so far as the Democratic principles are of that eternal character; just so far as they are applicable in all times and under all circumstances; just so far as they are the foundation of free institutions, just so far will they forever endure and forever command the affection of those who belong to that great party. But dead issues are one thing. We don't seek to revive them, and therefore of them I shall have nothing to-day to say." Senator Thurman then proceeded to arraign the Radical party upon live issues, and presented a bill of indictment containing, among others, the following counts: The Republican party is committed by its history to subsidized monopolies; it has squandered the public domain; it has fostered and protected corrupt combinations; it has promoted men known to be corrupt to positions of public trust; it has promoted and upheld carpet-bag governments of the Southern States, whereby those communities have been robbed outright of two hundred and forty millions of dollars. It has withheld the franchise and soundrolls who have disgraced the nation, instead of meeting out to them that punishment demanded by a decent regard for public morals. It has usurped civil authority and struck down officials chosen by the people, as in the case of Louisiana, a standing disgrace before the country. It deliberately planned and put through the salary grab steal, taking millions from the Treasury in violation of pledges for retrenchment and economy. In another portion of his speech Senator Thurman alluded to the Federal Department of Justice. States its sacred character and importance to the people, and then presented some facts in relation to its present management which are of a truly startling character. He began this branch of his subject by showing that the appropriations for the Department of Justice for the fiscal year ending June, 1872, were over $3,000,000, and that does not include the salary of one judge in the United States. Then the question was asked by the Senator, what was expended? To this the reply was made that the expenditures of that department for the fiscal year were $3,075,332; and in addition to that the Attorney General asked for a further appropriation in the deficiency bill of $300,000, making for that department in a single year over three and a third million dollars. The next inquiry naturally suggested was, how was this vast sum of money expended? To this Senator Thurman replied: "There was expended in Ohio $95,922, with a population of 2,600,000. What the expenditure in Arkansas was with a population of 484,000? It was $294,331, more than in the State of New York with 4,500,000. It was $76,000 more than was expended in the whole State of Ohio and Pennsylvania put together. Now, gentlemen, how comes it that in Arkansas there were expended $294,331 in one single year, as the judicial expenses of that State, which does not include the salaries of the judges? How came it? Why, Mr. Attorney General Williams saw that thing would have to be explained, and he tried to explain it in his report. He says: 'The expenses of the year have been large, being augmented by the act passed entitled An act to protect all persons in the United States in their civil rights, and furnishing the means of their vindication; all the expenses incident to the enforcement of the provisions of this act are chargeable to this appropriation. In some districts these expenses have been very heavy, and it has been only with the most rigid economy that the expenses have been kept within their present limits. A large sum has been expended for juries, and for witnesses, a larger sum than for the two previous years but I am unable to control it.' Senator Thurman then proves that these expenses could have been controlled and curtailed by the chief officer of the department of justice, but that no effort was made to reach such a result. The money was drawn from the public treasury, paid over to certain parties, and no further account taken of the matter. In order to make his arraignment plainer and stronger, Senator Thurman, presented the following comparison to the people of Ohio: "You have eighty Common Pleas Courts, in all one hundred and seventy-six Courts, that sit in this State, without counting the Supreme Court or the Superior Court in Cincinnati; you have in Ohio one hundred and ninety-six Courts, and they hold, in the course of the year, nearly or quite four hundred terms—without counting your Probate Courts. Now, in the State of Arkansas, in the western districts, where $293,000 were spent, there is but one Court of the United States, and that Court holds but two terms, and those terms need not be over three or four weeks each in duration, and yet, while the entire judicial cost of litigation in the State of Ohio, as shown by the report of your Secretary of State, is less than $200,000, where there are one hundred and ninety-nine Courts and four hundred terms of Courts, and the business of 2,600,000 people, the cost of this one Court, holding but two terms, exceeded the whole amount of litigation for the entire State of Ohio." This speech of Senator Thurman presents the Radical party of the United States to the people in its true aspect, that of an organization, which will pause at no obstacle to reach and retain power. Hitherto the Department of Justice has been free from political influences. But it now acts a full role in that drama, and this is one of the live issues which the Ohio Senator thinks the people of the country are called upon to consider. If the judicial, like all the other departments of the government is contaminated, then the people have no protection for "life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness."

Baltimore Advantages as a Grain Depot.

The transportation discussion, whatever may be the result, is beneficial in that it is the means of placing before the public a mass of most valuable information. The agitation of the farmers in the West, with their attempts at remedying the evils afflicting them, absurd as were some of their efforts at legislative tinkering, did good in that it compelled attention to the matter, so that transportation has become the great question of the day. As is usual in such emergencies, various nostrums are offered, which their respective partisans cry up as the one thing needful for the general welfare. The ease with which theorizing can be done leads to many notable discoveries, when some difficult economic problem presents itself; it is much easier to form new projects than to solve a difficulty by patient inquiry. And so we have all sorts of chimerical plans brought forward for consideration—the advocates of new water routes being the most persistent. The Mississippi river has its advocates as being the great natural outlet for the cereals of the West, and gigantic schemes of improvement are promulgated. Another project is the construction of great works by which the waters of the lakes can be pumped into the Ohio, keeping that always at depth for deep navigation. Several trans-Alleghany canal routes are presenting their claims, and they merit consideration, but the information collected goes to show that their usefulness would not be in the matter of grain transportation.

The great lakes present an unrivaled water route for the Northwest, and by tapping this route by the Erie Canal, New York drew the trade moving through this outlet to herself, and has become the great metropolis since. After controlling this trade for a third of a century, she finds it gradually slipping away from her, and this diversion into other channels has kept pace at the rate with which railroads have superseded canals. Year by year less cereals are carried by the Erie Canal and more by the railroads, and carefully compiled statistics show that the canal comes more and more into use for heavy cargoes and bulky products, while the grain crop seeks quick transportation.

While the Erie Canal will doubtless always move a large portion of the grain crop, New York will, however, find it impossible to retain the monopoly she has so long enjoyed. Her water route has a formidable competitor in the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals, which even now transport more than twelve or thirteen million bushels of grain annually, but with the continued use of railways for grain transportation, other cities, if they have the men in them, will draw to themselves a large portion of her trade. The business men of New York are fully aware of this, and are seeking to find some means to obviate it. The eminent names on the roll of the New York Cheap Transportation Association show that they are convinced of the pressing importance of the matter and intend to make an earnest effort. Their organization and committees comprise the names of the most eminent bankers, jobbers and importers in New York and they will not fail to test the thing to the uttermost. In this competition for trade Baltimore has marked advantages. Her geographical position is in every way favorable, but this is a theme that needs no more comment, for it has been dilated upon time and again, until one would think we thought no more was needed to make Baltimore a great city. Natural advantages are but means to an end, and are valueless without the men to take hold of these advantages and make use of them. But attention may profitably be called to certain special facilities.

The testimony of managers of freight lines before the United States Senate Committee on Transportation, while sitting in New York, showed that the great cost in grain transportation by railways came from handling. The manager of the Blue Line Freight Company, which runs cars on one hundred and twenty-four different roads, said: "The great trouble 'is at the destination. When a train arrives at New York with a large quantity of grain, the consumer must find barges to take it away, and this causes great delay. The difficulty is not moving the cars over the lines, but in discharging 'it.' And again: 'The vital point is the necessity of providing storage capacity at the East, so that property can be moved here and delivered with facility.'"

All the testimony agreed as to this being the great point of difficulty, so much so that one freight line manager testified: "We transship grain at Albany, instead of bringing it through to New York, on account of greater facilities for handling of the trains. There is more room there than there could be in the limited space obtainable in a large city like New York."

While New York, from her insular position, compelling her railways to make ferry connection with the city, is thus hampered, we here at Baltimore have absolutely unlimited facilities for handling a large grain trade, and that this is appreciated is shown by the fact that already trade is moving here in quantities almost beyond the capacity of our present facilities, and its volume will increase as rapidly as it can be accommodated. We already have a large grain elevator on Locust Point, and a smaller one at Canton. A new elevator of enormous capacity is building at Locust Point by night and day, a similar one is going up on the Canton side. The cars of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad run directly to the water-front, where there is room for ample facilities for handling grain at a minimum of expense, and at whose wharves ships of greatest burden can lie. Upon the Canton side we have a waterfront of inexhaustible limit, and by works of improvement, the importance of which the American alone pointed out, it has become the terminal point of a large railway system. We have a great trunk line extending to Cincinnati, St. Louis, and other points in the West, making the most direct route to the seaboard for a large area of country. An extension is making towards Chicago, when the road will offer itself to that great granary of the Northwest as the cheapest and most expeditious route to the seaboard. We have other railways extending South and West that will bring in large quantities of cereals, and there is a strenuous competition in railway enterprises that will doubtless result in the establishment of additional routes. We have lines of ocean steamers, which we can coal more cheaply than any portion the Atlantic coast, and only the stimulus of trade is needed for the establishment of others. With these advantages, if men and money are forthcoming, Baltimore can make herself the great grain depot for the West.

The Seneca Lake Region.

With the multiplicity of railroads which the traveler in this rapid age has liberty to choose from it is no wonder that new areas of pleasure tour are constantly opening before him. Romance and science, comfort and adventure, so far from being antagonistic really go hand in hand, and are indeed best appreciated by those who complain the most of dull and matter of fact modes of locomotion. We frequently hear of the delightful days of stage coaching which our ancestors enjoyed, and it is pleasant even now occasionally in a sequestered region so mount one of those lumbering vehicles, with its antiquated accompaniments of "boot" and baggage, and be rolled with sea-saw motion over a few miles of good country road. But we never found yet the most inveterate Lydia Languish willing to give up a Pullman palace car, and spend five to eight hours as of yore on the turnpike road between Baltimore and Washington. We do not believe that sublime scenery pulls upon her because plate glass windows shield her from the winds, nor that her sweet affections will run to waste because perchance she must by the electric telegraph. "Waft a sigh from Indus to the Pole."

In the old days of the stage coach we used to read a great deal about Harper's Ferry, the Wyoming Valley, and the Delaware Water Gap. Their charms still exist, but we hear not much more about them now than we do of Ballston Springs which survive only in the pages of "Salmagundi." The Connecticut river in these days was also a favorite resort of pleasure tourists, and Mount Tom and Mount Holyoke had a reputation scarce inferior to the Domes of the Yosemite. Not less lovely than of old are the twin mountains of Northampton and the silver winding river; nor has the Hudson lost its romantic interest. It is only because the immense extent of our country invites the traveler to wider realms that these familiar names of an earlier age sound somewhat antiquated now.

To real lovers of fine natural scenery, but who cannot afford a journey to the Rocky mountains and the giant pines of California, the railroad is a positive blessing. For a few dollars and in a few hours we may now visit scenes which our grandfathers could not have explored without heavy expense in week of toil. The old familiar names of our childhood, the haunts that we have already named, become more attractive as they are more accessible, and their varied beauties can be carefully studied in detail.

We know of no region which more delightfully repays a short journey from the Atlantic seaboard than the Seneca lake region, in New York State, and it is so sure to win upon the tourist that year after year he will wish to revisit it. The series of small lakes in New York, such as Seneca, Canandaigua, Oswego, Owasco, &c., are all distinguished by charming scenery and we select that of Seneca lake as a type because it is one of the more remarkable, and half a century ago it won the poetic tribute of Percival. "The New York Central and the Northern Central railroads are the two best modes of approach to it; both skirt its shores, and the Northern Central particularly for travelers from the South, is to be commended for its comfort, safety, and magnificent scenery."

For many a mile before reaching and after passing Harrisburg the Northern Central road runs along the banks of the Susquehanna river, and the eye is continually delighted by a wide expanse of waters, spanned by noble bridges and relieved by green and sunny meadows, woods and thrifty villages. There is scarce a mile even from Baltimore to Canandaigua of tame or uninteresting route, and it is especially beautiful in September and October, when the forests and the hill-sides are clothed in their autumnal glories. Making Canandaigua a halting place, one finds there a beautiful town, its principal residences, the abodes of wealth and cultivated people. A long and wide avenue, the main street of the village, divides it, and runs down to the lake, which was the visitor as it nestles in tranquil beauty among its hills.

There was a time of course when Canandaigua was a frontier town, and legends are told of the old "Holland Company," a wealthy Dutch corporation owning millions of acres, as some of our great western railroads do now. Many a year has gone by since the pioneer surveyors ran their lines over this region, and the prudent Dutch investors in Amsterdam drew dividends from the wilderness, and clinched their glasses of "Schneppas" in joy threat; but a princely mansion and grounds, the finest in Canandaigua, built by one of the former agents of this now forgotten guild, attests to the wealth and power of the once famous "Holland Company." As one of the seats of the United States courts in New York State, Canandaigua drew to itself a far superior grade of men than many other offits neighbor villages, and consequently a degree of aristocratic refinement and cultivation has always prevailed there, greatly to the envy of many richer towns.

Loveliest of its charms, however, is the lake; one of the smallest but one of the most beautiful of any of the New York series. It is but sixteen miles long, and its Indian name, Canandaigua, signifies "sleeping beauty." It is fitly termed from its quiescent charms, but as the little steamers which ply upon it quit Canandaigua they very shortly leave the gentle slopes of its northern shores, and wind among lofty hills, developing a grandeur of scenery which the now visitor is entirely unprepared for. One proud eminence stands alone, reflected in the azure flood with a strength of effect which many an artist has failed to copy with. This noble mountain, "Bare Hill," or "Canandaigua," in the Indian language, lifts its lofty crest far above the waters, and it was invested with a mysterious charm by the aborigines; this region being in part the dwelling place of the once powerful "Six Nations," and according to their legends it was the sacred mother of their race.

There, too at several points along the shores, are to be found those remarkable fissures or ravines, worn through the rocks in fantastic fret-work, by streams which in the course of ages have channeled grottoes or stupendous chasms and of which Watkins Glen offers the most wondrous example. But every portion of this sweet lake is so picturesque, and of such charming miniature as it hides behind the hills, and sparkles out into tiny bays, that the eye is ever delighted, and when once known the spirit often yearns to revisit its seductive haunts. Two or three small but good summer hotels, and numerous private lodges dot the shores, where one might happily dream away a summer. Many other scenes of great interest to the tourist may be visited in this romantic region, but of which a notice must be deferred to another time.

The Millionaire.

A recent talk about a change in the control of that rich monopoly, the Western Union telegraph Company, was well founded. Vanderbilt, the Napoleon of finance, is to become the moving spirit in that, as he has already become in railroad affairs. This aged man, now about 77 years old, is still hale and vigorous, and as fond of fast horses, cards, and good cigars as he was a quarter of a century ago, and is not satisfied to rest so long as there are other worlds to conquer. The telegraph company is to divide 8 or 10 per cent. on a restored capital of $40,000,050, after a division of the present stock as a script dividend of 15 or 20 per cent. on the present outstanding capital. Vanderbilt has made himself the possessor of about $100,000,000. This he has done by such combinations and merciless "corners" as a shrewd and unscrupulous Wall street capitalist can organize and command; and he has added to his millions by plundering the public and reducing great number to beggary who were probably more worthy, in every moral point of view, than the man who so persistently triumphed over them. He is now ready to do a good thing by building two more tracks for his Central railroad. With four tracks for that and his other connecting roads on the great through route between Chicago and New York, the freight trains can always keep their own tracks and the passenger trains can keep theirs, and thus avoid one great and constant source of "railroad accidents." It will take about half of the new forty thousand million dollars in the range of the New York Central to equip that road with two additional tracks. He will arrange for a lease of the Lake Shore road (from Buffalo to Chicago) at 8 per cent. on the capital of fifty thousand million dollars, the Central assuming the interest on the company's debt. Vanderbilt is, doubtless, one of the richest men in America; A. T. Stewart and Wm. B. Astor being the other two. Stewart has just made his will, which shows him to be worth a round one hundred million dollars Vanderbilt's wealth is probably about the same. Mr. Astor, relying less upon Wall street speculations and the ability to command profitable favors at the custom house, has so handled his immense patrimony by quietly investing it largely in real estate in New York city, as to actually treble it on his hands; and the result is, to-day, that this quiet gentleman, less prominent though his name may be in public prints, can buy out both Stewart and Vanderbilt, and still have as large a property, over and above their posessed separately! In other words, if what we privately hear is to be trusted, Mr. Astor is the owner of a fortune of three hundred million dollars. We think no other one person in the world owns more money than that. These millionaires could do a vast deal of practical good with their princely wealth; but they are, as a class, not of the limited number who have the faith to cast their bread upon the waters, or even to understand the joy that comes from making their suffering fellow mortals happy.

The Hired Girl.

There is one reason why we should regret to have the present troubles with domestic servants ended. It is because women derive so much pleasure from discussing the subject. Place two women together, and it makes no difference where the conversation starts from, it will be perfectly certain to work around to the hired girl question before many minutes have elapsed. We have seen an elderly housekeeper with experience in conducting the talk in the right direction, break into a discussion of Pythagoras and the doctrine of the transmigration of souls, and switch off the entire debate with such expedition that an unsophisticated listener would for some moments have an indistinct impression that the conversation referred to the inefficiency of Pythagoras as a washer and ironer, and to the tendency of that heathen philosopher to take two Thursdays out every week. And when a woman has an unusually villainous hired girl who buries up five or six dollars the week, mixes her hair with the biscuit and stuffs her relation with the sugar, it is interesting to observe how she glories in the superiority of her suffering to those of her neighbors, and how, as she tells of them she gloats over her misery and feels good about it. A woman who has a really competent servant is always in a condition of abject wretchedness on such occasions.

An Insane Inebriary's Work.

The quick and disastrous operation of an insane young man in Vt. are thus described by the Montpelier Watchman: "for a short time a son of Ebenezer Shaw, of North Bridgewater, has shown signs of being deranged, and on the 5th so much so that one of the neighbors was called to watch him through the night, previous to this he had told his father that he was going to set his neighbor's barn on fire, and that after that he should hang himself, and should not be to see another Sunday. While the man who was called in to watch him was making preparations to go up stairs where he was, he being about eight o'clock, he jumped out of the window and ran for the woods the man in pursuit, but not overtaking him. A few moments after Charles Montague's barn, connected with his house by a wood shed, was discovered to be on fire, and before help could be summoned all his building—house and nearly all its contents—were one sheet of fire. But, a short time expired before another barn, standing out in the lot, was also in flames and was destroyed. Soon a barn belonging to Isaiah Maxham was also in flames, and totally destroyed. From there, going across lots some one and one-half miles, he fired the barn of Lyman Cobb, and that, with an adjoining barn and contents, was also destroyed all that was saved being a four-year old colt, which Mr. Cobb succeeded in getting out of the stable. Messengers were sent to the neighbors as soon as possible, notifying them, and parties were hatched forth the young man all the night. On the afternoon of the next day Saturday, he was found one-half mile from the last burnt building, sitting in an orchard under a tree with his left wrist badly cut, the cords off, and a large gash in his neck, his face was burnt and his hair looked as though he had tried to cut it with his knife. Saturday afternoon he was locked in the county jail at Woodstock for safe keeping. Some of the time since that, he appears to be rational. Insanity is said to be hereditary in his mother's family. The young man is about twenty-two years old and has always been called a well disposed person."

Farm Work for October.

October has come with his many blessings and his many calls upon the husbandman for assiduous, yet agreeable, labor. In England, this is the prime month for making "Old October Ale," and in wine countries for the finest wine that vineyards produce, while in this country, cider making and whiskey distilling is pressed with all the energy that particularly distinguishes "young America." It is a very important month in many respects to all classes of farmers, whether purely farmers, planters, orchardists, or engaged in other branches of agriculture as a specialty, or even with those who diversify their products.

CORN.

Corn, if not already cut off, should at once, or the fodder will be lost. At the first frost and high wind will strip the blades and bear them away like the leaves of the trees. Shuck such as is dry, and put in the corn-house small quantities at a time.

HOGS.

The hogs should have corn or mash made of bran and meal allowed them twice a day, and about the last of the month, such as are intended for the shambles, ought to be penned in clean stables, pens, so arranged as to have a sleeping and eating apartment, with a pen attached where they can have coarse material for converting into compost—their own deposits. Keep the pens clean allow them good beds of leaves or dry straw plenty of water, rotten wood or charcoal once a week also a little salt and sulphur frequently, and vary their food, such as corn or the cob, corn meal, cooked vegetables with bran and meal, well with boiled rye or corn, pumpkins raw, etc., etc.

If you would add lustre to your accomplishments, study a modest behavior. To excel in anything valuable is great; but to be above conceit on account of one's accomplishments is greater. Consider, if you have natural gifts, you owe them to a divine bounty. If you have improved them, you have only done your duty, and there seems little reason for vanity. Modesty is at all times becoming.

Twenty-eight years ago a Buffalo man said to his wife: "Minerva, I'm going to Tim's after a bad cold." That was the last seen of him till the other day, when he came in the house with a bad cold, and said he'd fix that bad cold.

An Irish clerk had been told to clear the court of a nuisance: "Now, guard that inn," he said.

ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF A VALUABLE HORSE. Capt Wm. M. Ruark left his Horse on Thursday Evening hitched to a post on Camden St. The animal being a gentle one, was not taken loose from the carriage. But becoming impatient pulled his halter loose, and started towards home about dark, when passing over the mill dam of Thos. Humphreys Esq., he walked down the steep bank to drink water, and the sudden declivity forced the carriage down on the horse and down he went into the pond and before assistance could be procured he was drowned. A large crowd assembled soon as the horse was heard pawing in the water, who pulled him out, and rendered what assistance they could, but it was too late he was dead. The carriage was not injured further than such damage as water sobbing is likely to effect.

BURGLARY.—Last Sunday morning between three and four o'clock, the house of Mr. S. G. Malone, about two miles from Salisbury, was entered by a vagrant who has been wandering about the country for some time, and from the depredation which he committed we would suppose he had been secreted about the house the greater portion of the night. The facts, as related by Mr. Malone, are as follows:—About 9 o'clock he was awakened by a noise at his bed-room door as of some one trying to get in. He called three times, but received no reply, started to the door, but before he could open it the party had fled. He then took a light and searched the premises thinking that he might have secreted himself till all should be quiet, when he might easily make his escape. On searching he found that four jars of preserves had been opened and from all about four gallons taken out. The contents of a trunk found scattered about the floor; on the kitchen stairs an old pair of pants, badly torn, and full of vermin, was found; two pairs of old pants, that had been hanging in the kitchen for some time, were gone. These we suppose he donated in the place of those he left up the stairs. This raid upon the quiet and retirement of a farmer's home we think should be sufficient grounds for some action to be taken to rid the county of those houseless, prowling vagabonds, several of whom are wandering about Salisbury, and its vicinity.

Doing Right. Amid the hard struggles of life It should be the aim of each man, To triumph o'er trouble and strife, And do as near right as he can. Life's pathway is rough for us all, Who travel thro' darkness to light; But buy a good suit from TOWER HALL, And then you'll be doing quite right.

CUMBERLAND GAP CAVE.—A correspondent, A. L. S., says in reference to this remarkable formation, described in our issue of September 13, that after General Morgan's retreat from that spot, the cave was explored for a distance of four miles by confederate soldiers, and a new opening was discovered, 3 miles from the one mentioned by H. B. N. The place has never been thoroughly investigated, but chambers, far surpassing in grandeur that described by our earlier correspondent, have been found. In penetrating the rock, it is found that the new entrance leads for 6,000 yards through sandstone; and in this section of the cave, vast quantities of human bones of gigantic size were found, some of skulls being large enough to put on over a man's head. It is intended, during the current month, to thoroughly explore the cave. —Scientific American, 4th inst.

Alas! poor Uncle Sam. Verily thou must be made of money. Thou lookest pale and thin of visage, and emaciated in thy once portly corporeity. Alas, nepotism is thy bane, thy curse! How long canst thou bear the constant plucking of dollars from thy body corporate? Alas! swindlers and rascals are now floating over thy domain, and when they lay thee down upon thy bed of death the noble nephews at Washington will fight o'er thy cold and clammy corpse in scramble for "spoils," in a universal "grab" for thy town house, for thy villa, for thy farms and orchards for all thou leavest behind, except thy honored flag, which the buzzards will rend in twain, to the delectation of those rapacious nephews whom thou didst trust with the faithful guardianship of thine estate.

MY ATTENTION having been called to a report now being industriously circulated by designing parties to the effect that William Birckhead, Esq., our worthy Candidate for Register of Wills, had purchased a one-half interest in the SALISBURY ADVERTISER, I pronounce the same a base fabrication. I am sole proprietor of this paper, and personally responsible for all articles of an editorial or local nature. As proprietor of the organ of the Democratic Conservative party of Wisconsin County, it became my duty to support the Democratic Conservative ticket, and this I should have done if William Birckhead had not received the nomination for Register. I must return my thanks to the contemporaries of the "Bachelor" for first seeing this report right before the people.

LEMUEL MALONE.

The So Called Reform Movement, And What It Means.

The political gathering last Tuesday ostensibly to organize a party of reform unmasked itself fully, and completely to every one who witnessed the proceedings of that party. By the aid and assistance of the leaders of the radical party in this county, a meeting was organized, a platform adopted and a ticket nominated. This true harmony existed, and enthusiasm such as new departures always arouse, were speedily demonstrated by those who seemed to be ashamed of their own actions.

It was laconically said by the bell-ringer in reply to the inquiry what was to be sold, "That the auction was at the Court Room, where the Democrats were to be sold out to the radicals." Old Jim, though hined to ring up the meeting, truthfully proclaimed the real purpose of that gathering, for mongrelism is the bone and sinew of the reform that seeks office at the sacrifice of office and principle.

O, morals, O, times, exclaims the true reformer, when in seeking to "reform party excesses and blunders" as are charged in their resolutions, democrats are compelled to go over to the enemies camp, and then in utter betrayal of former friendships, stand cheek by jowl, offering to batter away for a mass of potage, the party to which they owe allegiance, and from whose store house they have drawn the substance of their influence and greatness. The times are indeed sadly out of joint, when reform cannot be inaugurated in our own ranks without the help of those whose reformation means only a destruction of democratic principle. Well may the young brothers receive the cordial embrace of radicals, for to radicalism it is a surrender of the old landmarks, which have been for years the dividing lines between the white man and the negro. To make common cause with radicalism is only to invite the rampant and vicious of that party to aid in remodeling democratic principles, and to establish by the preponderance of their votes for those who are after us, a standard of competency for officials in Wisconsin County. When the negro vote is to fasten upon us approval or disapproval of their judgment in the election of their officers then indeed will be presented to the democratic party of Maryland the humiliating spectacle of negro supremacy in Wisconsin. "If cliques, rings or combinations" do exist as is charged in their resolutions, let those who labor for the good of the party and not its enemies, first check these evils in their own ranks, before they will be felt among the people and their advice regarded. Open rebellion and public affiliation, with the avowed enemies of our organization, will insure in the end to no ones benefit, but repeat with defeat, not only on the fountains of the strife but the party also. Reform in politics is earnestly desired by all good men and we do not claim a monopoly of virtue for the democratic party, still we think that the reformation we desire cannot be found in radical channels. And, if the radical party was in the majority in this county the question of reform would be an argument used only among democrats, for in the election of competent men to fill offices the radical party has never displayed remarkable wisdom, or regarded in the least the interests of the people. The hue and cry is only raised in democratic Counties like Wisconsin, when the reform of a few avengers is at once engrained upon the radical up tree, while the poison thus engrained may effect the whole atmosphere by the name savor of office; viewed as stepping stone to power; it is regarded as the shortest route, and promises to bring into their camp a swarm of job workers. To many and I may say a majority of the democratic party this reform movement is mere bosh. It means nothing but rule or ruin, it is gammon of the basest order, and to those to have been betrayed into this conspiracy against the democratic party, by men who have never been democrats, we would say "quit yourselves like men and come back."

COMMUNICATED.

OBITUARY.—Departed this transitory life, September 13th, 1873, Harry B. Phillips, son of Elijah, and Maggie Phillips, in "Spring Hill" neighborhood, Wisconsin County, aged nearly sixteen years, is illness was of short duration, being confined to the period of three days, his disease was Typhoid fever, and the pain that he endured was very severe, when God terminated his sufferings, and his spirit fled to its Maker from whence it came. He was a boy of superior qualities, and possessed of a well balanced mind, and the mental faculty which he possessed, was well cultivated. Death leaves a shining object, and those who have such glowing appearances of attaining to something noble are the ones whom God calleth away. Surely he clasteth those who die more rapidly than the old, the average duration of the human race is constantly diminishing. The deceased was a boy of respectability, and esteemed by all who knew him, for his generosity and hospitality, and will be greatly missed in the community. As a son, he was kind and obedient, as a friend he was generous and entertaining, and as a scholar none more obedient, always endeavoring to obey the commands of his teacher, and as a schoolmate he was affectionate to all, and his death will be sorely lamented by each of his schoolmates, to whom he was closely attached. He leaves fond and devoted parents, to mourn his loss, and a long train of relations and friends, and will be greatly missed by all of his schoolmates. The writer of this humble tribute was the teacher of the deceased for the past year, and it pains me much, to chronicle the death of one of my favorite scholars, and this is the last tribute of respect that I can ever pay to my dear Pupil, who no doubt rests in heaven. May each of his schoolmates prepare to meet him in that beautiful land, where they will never be separated throughout the annals of time. May each of his schoolmates consider the shortness and uncertainty of life, and prepare for death.

Farwell brother God has called me, To a brighter world than this, But in joy I hope to meet thee In that blessed land where all is bliss.

His funeral services took place at Sharpstown, under the auspices of Rev. H. T. Melvin, who improved the occasion from Ez. 14th chap. 16th and 17th verses, after which the body was interred in the grave, there to rest 'till God shall bid it rise, and come forth. I truly sympathize with the bereaved parents, but may they not sorrow as those who have no hope, but be willing to submit to the will of God, who doeth all things well.

Stick to the Ticket and Don't Trade.

We were amazed to hear a friend of ours say the other evening that there is a disposition among some of our political friends to trade off some of our candidates for a vote in favor of others. This was the first intimation of the sort that reached our ears and we cannot vouch for its correctness and only hope it is not so. Every man on our ticket is entitled to the earnest and hearty support of all his political friends at the ensuing election and to withhold it from any one, or to trade one off for a vote for another, would be acting in exceeding bad faith. Vote the whole ticket, just as it comes from the Printer, and let there be no cutting or slashing on our side of the house. Our political friends on the other side have good cause to pursue such a course and would be justified in adopting it, but if it be resorted to at all, let it be confined entirely to the ranks of the opposition. Make all the votes you can for our candidates, and again we say, stick to the ticket and don't trade.— Maryland Union.

The Philadelphia Base Ball Club has been knocked about so severely, of late, that it begins to look as though it would not be the Champion, after all. The Boston Club is very close behind it, now, in the showing 'for the season.

Agricultural.

The Cultivation of Wheat

We propose to offer a few plain observations and suggestions upon the culture of wheat, one of the chief staple crops of the civilized world.

In the United States alone, nearly three hundred million bushels of wheat is produced annually, being over seven bushels for each man, woman and child in the country. The same acre devoted to wheat should be made to produce twice the amount. England has, by improved culture, brought up the average per acre from fourteen to twenty-eight bushels within a few years. This can be accomplished as easily in America—and then we might be called the granary of the world, which is said now—but we in truth do not grow at present much more than we consume, and not as much as we would require, were it not for the immense mass of Indian corn as bread, and in other forms as a substitute for wheat, especially in the South and Southwest. Mr. Harris, of the Agriculturist, in his "Wheat and Talk," says, "There is little danger of our over production of wheat as the population increases and the increasing consumption will keep full pace with the increased production."

The question is, how shall each individual increase his wheat crop? In the first place, we have a favorable locality in the Middle States and naturally a favorable soil, neither too stiff nor too sandy, for the production of the largest quantity of wheat per acre.

To attain this desirable point, we recommend either a heavy crop of clover, plowed under deep when it is in blossom, and when it is in seed, cross plowed and kept light by frequent harrowing until seeding time; or sow the wheat after a crop of tobacco which was highly fertilized, and when the crop was early enough to be out of the way in time to prepare the land for sowing the wheat by the 15th of October. Or, as Mr. Allen declares to be an excellent plan, pasture or mow the first crop of clover and when the second crop is ripening its seed in July or 1st of August, turn under, and keep the land mellow and clean by frequent tillage with the harrow until time to sow the grain. "By this means, you are improving the land, perpetuating your clover crop without re-seeding, and increasing the chances of good wheat crops." As to summer-fallow, which he deems they very best and surest plan to secure a big crop, we do not, because it requires too much labor and loss of pasture. It may do in countries where labor is cheap and stock are soiled, but not here. By summer-fallow, is meant plowing in spring, sowing in peas, buckwheat or rye, to be plowed under before any seed is formed, and then continued clean cultivation until the wheat is put in. We certainly oppose as a general rule, rotating corn with wheat; it seldom pays. The corn crop is a very poor preparatory one for wheat.

SEEDING.
No matter which of the above preparations of ground may be resorted to, let the land be in nice order; and at the last harrowing, sow some sort of phosphoric fertilizer, rich in nitrogen or ammonia. Be not niggardly in the use of it, though in this manner it may be useless excess. Three hundred to four hundred pounds well ammoniated is enough. What we desire to say, just here is that if a man has only money to spare for the purchase of a ton of fertilizer, he had better put it all on three acres than on six. The ground prepared and fertilized, sow the wheat with the shovel plow to cover it, if it be not possible to get a drill—but by all means use a drill—"The Farmer's Favorite" is considered the best; and if used, the fertilizer, can be sown at same operation, which saves the hand sowing where the wheat has to be broadcasted. It does not do to cover wheat with the harrow, it should be plowed in lightly or drilled. The drill system is undeniably far the best.

From three to five pecks of good seed is enough for an acre; the first quantity for land, prepared as we have recommended, and sown from the 15th to 30th of September, and the latter quantity if sown on similar ground after the 1st of October. On corn ground, or badly prepared land six, or eight pecks would not be too much as much seed is lost, never comes up, or if it does, it perishes in winter.

TIME OF SOWING.
We think the best time is from the 20th of September to the 10th of October. We like early sowing, unless the fly is very prevalent in the neighborhood. We dread the smut and rust which usually accompany late sown wheat more than we do the fly. The loss by the first is irreparable; but if the fly destroys our wheat, we have a chance to put the land so expensively prepared in some other crop the same year, and get back our outlay.

SEED WHEAT.
Select the best, and pass it through the revolving screen, to get rid of all small and imperfect grains and weed seeds, then soak or steep it in strong brine (chamber lye is best) for a few hours, drain it by rolling it with well slaked lime or plaster, and sow soon after. Some prefer a steep of pickle of weak lye and covers it with lime-water. When in the pickle, stir it often and skim off all the grain and impurities that rise on the top. The same pickle will answer by replenishing as it gives out. All varieties of wheat do not suit all soils or all localities; those sorts that are present seem to be most prolific on the Falls-Tappanbrook, Smooth Amber, French, White Chaff Mediterranean, Lancaster County White and the old Blue Stem White, where it is found pure. The great aim in selecting seed wheat, should be to get that which, under the same characteristics, to wit: Purity of seed, when it all comes, clean, early ripening, an abundant yield, hardiness in winter, regularity of growth, thin straw, a strong chaff, stiff and short straw.
