ICAN NOT AFFORD IT.

Mr. St. John entered the fashionable dry goods store of Loring & Brothers to see one of the proprietors.
He had stepped out for a moment, one of the clerks informed him.
And withdrawing to an obscure corner, he stood watching, with a half-amused, half-compassionate look upon his handsome face, the streams of gaily-attired women that flashed past him, gazing with envious admiration upon the rich fabrics of every hue and texture, that were suspended from the ceilings and spread out upon the broad counters.
Many of them were known to him, but he was in no mood to meet the sparkling glance and gay sallies that he knew would be showered upon him if he made them aware of his presence; for Mr. St. John was rich and a bachelor. He had been so flattered and besieged by ambitious mannisms with marriageable daughters as to make him almost resolve to always remain one.

So he stood back in the shadow, marking with curious eyes unconscious betrayals of the natural disposition, like glimpses of feminine human nature and which the dear creatures would not have had him observe for the world.
As he stood there, the two Misses Parker came in, charming and brilliant girls, in whose society he had passed many a pleasant hour.
They were lavishly in their purchases.
As Mr. St. John contrasted their suiting countenances with the careworn face of their father whom he met in the street scarcely an hour before, hurrying from one friend to another to borrow money to pay a note on the point of being protested, their lively chatter rang harshly on his ears.
Isn't it lovely? exclaimed one of the sisters, looking up some costly trimming. I suppose you will send when he sees the bill, but he would if it were half as large.

To be sure he would, responded the other.
—And I'm not going to let the Dayton girls outshine me, you may be certain. It's my belief that they give the party simply on account of St. John's return from Europe. I suppose they are trying to catch him for Georgia. — Did you ever hear anything so very ridiculous?

Never! Such horrid taste as the girl has in dress too! She showed me the new silk she is going to wear. Would you believe it? It is blue! And she is as dark as an Indian.
That's for the benefit of Mr. St. John.
It is his favorite color. I met him on the street yesterday. How tall and handsome he has grown!

Yes, and he is so rich! Pa says he is worth half a million, if not more.
Here the two girls passed along out of sight and hearing, quite unconscious of the proximity of the subject of their remarks.
Good heavens! was Mr. St. John's inward reflection; are all women so heartless so wrapped up in vanity and display?

He was about to quit the store in disgust, when his attention was arrested by a low and gentle voice, which aroused a host of vague but pleasant recollections. He turned eagerly in the direction whence it proceeded; and as his eyes rested upon a shower, neatly attired lady, they lighted up with pleasure.
A woman would have noticed that the beauty, though neat and fresh, was not of the latest style, and the mantle of last season's fashion, but men rarely observe such things. All that St. John saw was the graceful form, the fair and gentle face of the wearer.

Sweet Rose Lennox! he thought, she looks so lovely and fragrant as her name.
Can her fresh and guileless nature be so perverted as to care for nothing but outward show?

In the meantime, Rose made a few simple purchases, quite unconscious of the eyes that were following her every look and motion.
Is that all, Miss Lennox, said the clerk
All, today.
If you were thinking of getting a dress,
I can show you something that will suit you.

As I cannot purchase, I will not trouble you, was the low and quiet reply.
No trouble at all, Miss, said the clerk, unrolling the goods, and spreading it out upon the counter.
It was a heavy lustrous silk—brown, with a glint of gold in it, not unlike the color of the soft hair that shaded her forehead.

It caught the eye of the Parker girls, who were passing, and they gathered eagerly around it.
Isn't just the dearest thing I ever saw!
exclaimed the oldest, enthusiastically.
Why don't you get it, Rose? You have nothing for the party next Thursday, and it is just what you want.

Only four dollars a yard, suggested the clerk—gathering up the silk in heavy folds so as to display its lustre and beauty.
There was not the slightest touch of envy or regret in the soft blue eyes that rested admiringly upon it.

It is very pretty and quite reasonable, too—but I cannot afford it.

These words were spoken quietly, and with such an entire unconsciousness that she was admitting anything painful or humiliating, that with the wonder it aroused in the hearts of her companions was mingled an involuntary respect, though it was evident they could not have imitated, and but vaguely comprehended.

St. John made inquiries in regard to Mr. Lennox the next day, and learned that he had sustained some heavy losses, but was still supposed to be doing a good business.

Pretending on former acquaintance, he resolved to call at his house.
Despite the adulation he had received, and his really fine personal advantages, St.
John was no coxcomb, and well knew that with a girl like Rose Lennox he must stand on his individual merits. So, not venturing to call for her who was uppermost in his thoughts, he was shown into the family sitting-room, where Mr. and Mrs. Lennox sat, with their eldest children.

Rose was among them, and the blush that mounted to her cheek, the bright smile she gave him, as their eyes met, spoke a warmer welcome than even her father's extended hand and cordial greeting.

But having testified by looks rather than words, her pleasure at seeing him, Rose left the entertainment of their guest to her parents. And, disappointed as St. John was he could but admire her utter unconsciousness that his visit was intended for her, and absence of all desire to attract his notice.

As he conversed with her father, his eyes wandered to the place where she sat, saw her every expression of the face, young face, even to the quivers of the golden-brown lashes that shaded the rose-tinted cheek, especially the sweet womanly charm of her low, quiet tones and gentle movement.

The richest party robe never looked half so lovely as that simple home dress of brown muslin, worn with no ornament, save a dainty ruffle at the wrist and throat.
You will be at Mrs. Dayton's to-morrow evening? he ventured to say as he took his leave.

No, I am not going.
A shade of disappointment crossed St.
John's face almost immediately followed by a gleam of satisfaction as a happy thought struck him.
The next evening Rose was sitting in the parlor, quite by herself.

Her mother was upstairs with the youngest children, and her father preparing to go out.
Mr. Lennox looked in upon her a moment, as he passed through the hall.
Do you regret your decision in regard to the party, my daughter?

No, in no way, returned Rose, smiling brightly into that rare face.
Mr. Lennox laid his hand lovingly on her head.
My blessing! if I pass successfully through this crisis it will be owing to the strength that you have given me.

Are things to him any brighter, papa?
A great deal brighter, my child. You know I told you that I could retrieve my losses, if I had time. Mr. Hart, my principal creditor, has offered to give me six months. It was owing to something that Mr. St. John said to him. He is a noble hearted young man. God bless him!

The heart of Rose glowed, this wish, as her father hurried away. For the first time regrets mingled with her thoughts, as they reverted to the gay gathering, from which she had been debarred.
I suppose he will be there, she murmured.

A gentleman to see Miss Rose, said Katy opening the door.
Rose lifting her eyes and the object of her thoughts stood before her.
Not sorry to see me, I hope? said St.
John, taking her unresisting hand in his.
Sorry? Rose turned her eyes around that he might not see how softly radiant they were. Oh, no, she faltered, I—I was only surprised. I thought you would be sure to be at Mr. Dayton's this evening.

A few minutes later, and saw how quietly the head of Rose reposed upon St. John's shoulder, as though it was the most natural resting place it could find.

Rose was as modest as lovely.
I don't see how you came to choose me, Paul, when surrounded by so many stylish and beautiful women?
Who would so gladly do their best to displease my fine fortune returned St. John laughing.

He then told Rose of the little scene he had witnessed in the store of Loring & Brothers, and he had repeated, then and there, to do his best to win her, who when tempted to expenditure beyond her means had the strength of mind to say, I cannot afford it.

Have we a Right of Common?
In the case of Davaston vs. Payne, it was held that no "right of common" existed in a highway; and that no defect of fence or hedge in the adjoining close would bar an action of trespass by him for damage done to it.— And this decision has never been reversed, but its binding force and effect has everywhere been recognized as the common law. "The owner of the soil," said the court, was entitled to the "pasture," and no one else.—
The public had a right to pass and repass, but no other privilege remained to them, although purchase, or delinquency to their exclusive use. If so, it would seem to take away all right to pasture on land which was never purchased, or dedicated to the public use. The same case has been held to apply to the cattle of a stranger which escaped into the land, by defect of the fence, across the road, and where they had no right to be.

At common law "the owner is bound to prevent his cattle from trespassing on the land of his neighbor," and it is material how he does it, whether by herding or otherwise. But do it he must. He has no right to require those he can exclude his neighbor.
It is said that if a "man turn his cattle into land where he has no right, and they escape, and stay into my field for want of fences, he cannot justify, or excuse himself for his cattle's trespassing in my field," and thus has been held to apply to "pasture fences," also, established by statute. Chancellor Kent implicitly admits the position to its full extent in his comments on American Law.

Now we have seen that the common law may be changed by what way, or how, it need not here be enquired into. How soon after the settlement of Maryland the running at large of horses, cattle, hogs, etc., became the subject of legislative enactment is not known to the present writer.— Whether "Bacon's Laws of Maryland" contain any provision on the subject, or none at all, is unknown.
"Kitty," in his laws of Maryland," commences with the year 1639—and in the case passed in that year appears on relating to the "height of fences."

What it was, or its provisions beyond this, the edition is silent. But in the same year "hog stealers, markets, and fence burners" are mentioned. "Horse-steals," too, seem even then to have become a "nuisance" for an act was passed against their "unreasonable increase." This act was continued in 1741; and in 1749 we have a glimpse at what they were aiming, and had been; for the act distinctly says to "prevent people driving away horses into the woods." In 1639 "fence burners," and "the multiplicity of horses, mares &c," were included in one act. In 1794 the act was extended and "horse-rangers," for the second time were brought to notice as a class formerly, and even then sanctioned by law. In 1712 this act was extended. In 1815 we meet with the first distinct law upon this whole subject, which we have seen commenced in '92 some twenty-three before. And here we may date the commencement of all the "fence laws" which have been enacted from that time to the present.
By this act "enclosures by fence or otherwise within the intention of the act" were to be "five foot high; and from and after the 1st day of May till the 10th day of November "all owners of any horse, or horses, mare, colt, and geldings shall keep them within good and sufficient enclosures, fenced ground or pastures, upon the pains or penalties following, viz: after being twice warned of their having broken into the pastures, corn-fields, or other enclosures, they were to be shot if found there;—if the owner not known, they were to be advertised and could be used. In the 6th section "horse-rangers" were to be "licensed," and in the 8th were empowered "to take up, mark, and otherwise dispose of any unmarked horse, mare, bull, or cow over the age of three years." It has been said that every word of the statute of frauds cost a subsidy, and it may well be said of this act that it has cost a curse for every line. The act itself is evidently partly declaratory, and partly penal.
It took away nothing from the common law provision making it the duty of every man to keep his stock on his own enclosed grounds. It only declared what the common law meant by "enclosures." It left the quality as it found it—it regulated the height only.

It did not prevent the old action of trespass, nor take away its penalties.
It left the common law where it found it that every man could only common upon the Lord's lands whose cultivated lands would winter the stock he turned out. But it did change the penalties of the common law—it made them cumulative—it put redress in the hands of the injured party where none existed before. It made the statement of the owner conclusive proof, which was not the fact before.
Moreover, the restrictive clauses upon the "horse-rangers" do not suppose a right of common—they only describe what animals were nuisances and ought to be abated. And in this, it only changed the form of the common law remedy by making it more certain and effectual. It placed a better class of men in office, whose superior knowledge and standing would add strength to the law and security to the owners of stock. It did not touch the question of where they were to exercise their office—that was left to that law to whose rights and privileges they were entitled by grant from the proprietors of the State. Hence, we conclude it abridged the rights of the proprietors—it infringed upon his right to the cattle of any age pasture upon his own lands which were not disposed of by him. It changed the old common law, in that he could not by permission, or license, surcharge," it with animals of a certain class.— And in doing this, it declared that he had "no commons" which he could let to the indiscriminate use of the public by which his gra-sses could be injured in their rights.

A further inference is to be drawn from this statute, and that is, that this stock thus protected was deemed to have escaped there by accident, or to be such as were there without the knowledge of the owner. The tenor of the act evidently supposes that those under three years were too young to be "driven into the woods"—their marking that if there, the owners could be found to whom they were to be returned. Hence, their being allowed in the neighborhood, afterwards extended to the Court House door, and to a paper on either shore.
This was evidently the intention of the framers of the statute.

Again, this act did not by implication even restrain the "horse-rangers" from driving the cattle above three years whether they were marked at large in May or December, marked, or unmarked. If so found no careles-ness availed their owners anything—they were the property of the "horse-rangers" who found them to "kill, or dispose of" as he might please. He was amenable to no one for his acts.
The spirit of after times indeed has dispensed with their services but it has not changed the principle that no "right of common" then existed in any one, Lord or tenant, foeder, or freeholder. The principle then was that he had no such right by the "common law" to "grant" for himself; that he had not, nor could not. If these deductions be true then we apply the well known maxim, "contemporanea expositio est fortissima in lege" aided with approval by our Court of Appeals And this brings us to our fence laws of the present day. A careful examination of them will, perhaps with a single exception, show them to be based in principle upon the act of 17-15 which was to keep cattle till and not out.

In 9 counties there is no fence-law at all; 7 have one relative to "joint and division fences only; 1 county is divided; 2 have one for outside fences; in 2 counties only is an action for trespass on unenclosed or waste land prohibited. The inference from all this is that the common law remedy exists undisturbed and unimpaired for all outrages upon the lands of proprietors in this State. That there exists to-day "no right of common." That these "fence laws" where they exist only provide a more direct and summary mode of redress, and were intended for that purpose and that alone.— That they never were intended to touch, or abridge the rights which the people derived under their original "letters patent," and that in those counties where no right of common exists at all, it does so precisely as the statute of limitations is construed, it does not interfere with the contract it takes away the remedy for its enforcement. But this is not all. In those counties which have a fence law at all there is a distinction made between various kinds of fences, post and rail, worm, and stone fences—only a small able upon no principle at all. But, again, if a fence law is valuable—its right of common exists it is because they are "solely for the good of the whole" not for a part. That such partial laws are in conflict with our constitution in spirit if not in fact will not be controverted. In article 34 section 31 "General Laws" are to be enacted when they can be made applicable. In the "bill of rights" it is asserted that we are "entitled to all property derived from, or under the charter granted by Charles 1st to Cecilius Calvert." The application of these principles to the question discussed is too obvious to escape notice.

We therefore leave it.

And in conclusion it may be remarked that "custom and prescription" cannot be relied on to prove the negative of the question we have been discussing. "Custom, says an author of weight, must be proved from time immemorial—"It must be certain and compulsory." "Prescription must show a legal origin." "No right can be claimed by custom, or prescription which in its origin however ancient, was unlawful or unreasonable. It is "personal usage." It must be "adverse." These propositions control our "fence laws" as well as "rights of common." The inference then from the whole investigation may be summed up thus: no right of common and no authority for it by any fence laws wherever they exist.

May 18, 1871. X.
The Early Days of Delmar.
The autumn of 1869 found him a shabby almost ragged applicant for employment at the stage-door of the Opera Company. Repeated rebuffs failed to baffle his desperate perseverance.

One day the director, hearing of the anxiety to which his subordinates were subjected by Delmar, determined to abate the nuisance by one of those cruel coup-de-main of which Frenchmen are pre-eminently capable. The next night during the performance, when Delmar called he was, to his surprise and delight, shown into the great man's presence.

"Well, sir, what do you want?"
"Pardon, Monsieur. I came to seek a place at your theatre."
"There is but one vacant, and you don't seem capable of filling that. I want only a soubrette."
"Sir, I am prepared to fill the position of a premier-jeu among your singers."

"Monsieur, if my clothes are poor, my art is genuine."
"Well, sir, if you will sing for me, I will hear you shortly."
He left Delmar alone, overjoyed at having secured the manager's ear. In a few moments a surly fellow told him he was wanted below, and he soon found himself with the manager upon the stage behind the green curtain.

"You are to sing here," said the director. "There is your place. In one moment the curtain will be rung up. I am tired of your importunities. I give you one chance to show the stuff you are made of. If you discard this opportunity, the next time you show your face at my door you shall be arrested and imprisoned as a vagrant."

The indignation excited in Delmar by this cruel rebuff instantly gave way before the reflection that success was a matter of life and death with him, and that perhaps his last chance lay within his grasp. He forgot his rage; every nerve became iron; and when the curtain was rung up, a beggar with the bearing of a prince advanced to the foot lights, was received with derisive laughter by some, with glances of surprise and indignation by others, and with a sad and patient smile on his countenance, graciously saluted the brilliant audience.

The courtesies of his manner disarmed hostility; but when he sat down to the piano, ran his fingers over the keys, and sang a few bars, the exquisite voice found its way to every heart. With every moment his voice became more powerful. Each gradation of emotion was rendered with an ease, an art, an expression, that made every heartstring vibrate. Then he suddenly stopped, bowed, and retired. The house rang with bravos. The dress-circle forgot its reticence, and joined in the tumult of applause. He was recalled. This time he sang a grand l'air couquise with the full volume of his voice, aided in effect by those immense gestures of which he had so cleverly discovered the secret. The audience were electrified. They declared that Talma was repossessed. But when he was a second time recalled his tragic mood had melted, there were "tears in his voice" as well as on his cheeks.

After the fall of the curtain, the director grasped his hand, loaded him with compliments, and offered him an engagement for a year at a salary of ten thousand francs. He went home to occupy his wretched attic for the last time, and, sitting on his knees, poured forth his soul in prayer.—Atlantic Monthly.

The Gubernatorial Nomination.

The politicians of Maryland are very much exercised over the all important question of who shall receive the nomination for Governor. There are several candidates in the field and the contest is waxing hot. Baltimore is clamorous for Pinckney Whyte, and some of the Western counties are going it strong for our present Governor. On the Eastern Shore, Dr. George R. Dennis of Somerset, Judge Carmichael of Queen Anne's and Lemuel Shovel of Worcester are candidates.

We think the fight will be between Bowie, Whyte and Carmichael.

Random Notes.

The season for strawberries is about over in this section. We were favored with a fine rain last Wednesday evening. A few whads are still brought to our wharves. The controversy between the Bachelor and Miss Chapman, has been brought to a close. It is time for the season at the Park to begin. Will the Brass Band play there this summer? A large crowd of people came to town last Monday to see the "Fair," and if we are not mistaken, many of them saw, and fought the "Tiger." Morris & Cathell have purchased a thirteen acre lot from Col. Leonard, on which they design cultivating strawberries. Tighman Goldborough esq., of Cambridge, has been paying our town a visit this week. Whortle-berries will soon be ripe. Yesterday the temperature was cool and pleasant. Rev. O. O'Brien Strayer, will preach in the M. P. Church to-morrow morning and night.

The Largest.—Mr. Columbus Anderson, sent an Early Rose potato to this office last Thursday, that measured 10 inches in circumference.

Todd & Hamner, foot of Old Bridge have reduced Shoulder Bacon to 8 1/2 cts. Middling 12 cts. Potomac Herring $9. per bbl.

Apology.—Owing to the sickness of our Compositors, we cannot present the usual quantity of reading matter this week.

Improvement.—The church building on Division Street, owned by the Baptists of the New School, is being repaired. We are glad to see this evidence of prosperity among our Baptist friends.

Funeral of a Knight.—Last Sunday, the remains of Mr. George Moore of Quantico, were interred with Pythian honors. Over one hundred Knights were present, from the Quantico, Salisbury and Riverton Lodges.

Fatal Disease.—The disease known as Bilious Dysentery, has been raging in our community for the past ten days with a daily effect. So far as we can learn, there have been six deaths from this disease this week—all children.

Ice Cream & Cake.—We have been requested to announce, that Mrs. G. L. Brady has recently opened an Ice Cream Saloon where she now resides, over the store room at present occupied by B. L. Gillis; and that she is prepared to sell fresh cream and cake every evening.

Appointment.—His Excellency Oden Bowie, has appointed J. C. Bush esq., a Justice of the Peace for the body of Wicomico County, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the decease of Charles Whitlock esq. Mr. Bush has taken the oath of office, and now occupies a room on the first floor of the Advertiser building.

The Festival.—Owing to the very warm weather and the sickness in the community, the festival held in the Church Room on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week, was not very largely attended. Those who did attend, speak very highly of the refreshments and the elegant treatment they received at the hands of the ladies conducting the festival.

The best and probably the safest imitation of real hair now in the market is that made from linen thread.

Miss Minnie Jones, a Genesee school-marm, whaled her uncle during school hours the other day. The uncle was unruly.

A Western editor, who doesn't know much about farming any way, suggests that for garden-making, a cast-iron back, with a hinge in it would be an improvement on the spinnal column now in use.

A local report of the period: "Mr. Collins of Hartford bought a ferocious watch-dog. Mr. Collins came home late that night. His wife says that his trousers can't be mended. The dog's skin is for sale cheap. Mr. Collins hopes to be able to sit down in a few weeks."

A clergyman was lately depicting before a deeply interested audience the alarming increase of intemperance, when he astonished his hearers by exclaiming: "A young man in my neighborhood died very suddenly last Sunday while I was preaching the gospel in a boastful state of intoxication."

A minister once gave a commentary to an old boot lady who was well versed in the Scriptures. He thought she would enjoy the explanations of her favorite passages. Calling on her a few days afterward he said, "Did you like the book I gave you?" "Ay, mon, it's a gude book, and the Bible explains it amazingly!"

The new express train from Plymouth to London will probably be the fastest train in the world in the part of its journey which lies over the Bristol and Exeter and Great Western Railways. Leaving Exeter at 10:30, it is timed to reach Paddington at 2:45; including a stoppage of five minutes at Bristol, and the inevitable vexations ten minutes at Swindon the journey of 194 miles will occupy four hours and a quarter.

The Irish limited mail, hitherto considered the fastest train, occupies six hours and thirty-five minutes between London and Holyhead, being at the pace of only 170 miles in four hours and a quarter. The fastest train on the Great Northern Line is between London and Peterborough, 76 miles, which is done in one hour and thirty-seven minutes; but the Great Western's accelerated express will run from Swindon to London, 77 miles, in one hour and twenty-seven minutes.

Mrs. Maria L. Blaine, who died recently in St. Paul, Minnesota, at the residence of her son-in-law, Major Robert C. Walker, U. S. A., was the daughter of Neal Gillespie, Jr., of Indian Hill, Washington county, Pennsylvania, and was born at the old stone mansion erected by Neal Gillespie, Sr., on the family estate as far back as 1773. The house is still standing on the banks of the Monongahela opposite Brownsville, and is said to be the first stone house erected on the western side of that river. Another granddaughter of the older Neal Gillespie was the wife of the Hon. Thomas Ewing, another was married to Henry Stanley, late Attorney General of the United States, another was the wife of Mr. Van Trump, now in Congress from Ohio; another was the mother of the late John K. Miller of Ohio; and still another was the mother of Henry Miller and his several brothers, well known as men of wealth and character in business circles at Columbus. Mrs. Blaine's husband, Ephraim Lyon Blaine, was the grandson and heir of Colonel Ephraim Blaine, Commissary-General of the Revolutionary army, and died over twenty years ago. She leaves five children, one the wife of Major Walker, and another the present speaker of the House of Representatives.

Jesse's Exposition.

Being a Letter from Mr. Jesse R. Grant to the White House.

See here, Ulysses! It's just too bad for you to write so to your dad! Better your big words! "Nepotism!" Better to get your cat-skin. And read what comes of children who are saucy to their dad, like you! I didn't think you'd light on me. 'Cause old Bill Stoms won't let me be!

"peddle in office!" Suppose I do? Look here, Ulysses, we're all afloat. The Grant's and the Blaine's are here! There's plenty of pickings left to you, so leave me mine—don't be a Jew! And don't go ranting of "bribery." 'Cause old Bill Stoms won't let me be!

My name's not something too, you see. So why not lend it, and pocket a fee? I don't hold shares in Seneca rock, Nor nabble with Corbin in good old stock; I have got as much as a finger's Much less an elbow—in Sam Domingo! Yet here you come snoring indignant at me.

'Cause old Bill Stoms won't let me be!

"So caused clumsy!" Well, yes, it was! And makes a dickens of an ugly buzz. But who'd a thought that old Dutch swab, Could take me in with a put-up job? Face it Ulysses, I'm just an old man. I'm afraid to venture like you, bold: And that's the way I got caught, you see. For I took old Bill Stoms in with me.

I had nobody my cards to stock, As you have—Freddy and Orr. Babcock: No nice snappy pigeons to do my sporting No Cameron, Chandler Coaling Morton. I had nobody but old Bill Stoms. Who tried to keep me from sharing the crumbs.

And so we quarrelled, we did it, And that's the short and the long of it.

I swear, Ulysses, you hain't done much Better than I did with the Dutch. I'd never quarrel with Charles Schurz; For when he hit from the shoulder in hurts I'd never played clapper to Sumner's bell. I'd a packed Ben But a off to—Well, Well, I ain't you, and you ain't me. And a lucky thing for Stoms it was!

As for this gauger business, Ulysses, The real facts of the case are this: The fellow gave me—besides the fee—Some prime old Bourbon (for you and me) And some nice peach, and as much as a mile. And Stoms—the mean cuss—tried to trick Your poor old daddy out of the barrel. And that's the secret of all this quarrel.

I read you the card, by express, You'll find it hard to beat I guess, As for old Bill, to fix his flint, I'll give you just this little hint. (Perhaps you'll think it worth a stake): The fellow in the house makes: Tip him a soft place, then you'll see How quick Bill Stoms will let me be.

Its Cure, Its Preventive.

BY J. H. SCHENCK, M. D.

MANY a human being has passed away, for whose death there was no other reason than the neglect of known and indisputable means of cure. These means are the Schenck's Consumptive Cure, which has cured thousands of the most advanced cases of this terrible disease. It is a simple, safe, and reliable remedy, and its use is the only way to prevent the disease, or to cure it when it has taken root. THE BLUE LAWS.

Many of our readers who have often heard of the Council of "Blue Laws," have probably never had an opportunity of perusing that famous code. The statutes copied below, from an ancient volume relating to the history of the American colonies were enacted by the people of the "Dominion of New Haven."

The governor and magistrates convened in general assembly, are the supreme power under God, of this independent dominion.

From the determination of the assembly no appeal shall be made.

The Governor is amenable to the voice of the people.

The Governor shall have a single vote in determining any question and a casting vote, when the assembly shall be equally divided.

The assembly of the people shall not be dissolved by the Governor but shall dissolve itself.

The judges shall determine controversies without a jury.

No quaker or dissenter from the established worship of this dominion, shall be allowed to give a vote for the election of magistrate or any other officer.

No food or lodging shall be offered to a quaker, Adamite, or heretic.

If any person turn quaker, he shall be banished and not suffered to return on pain of death.

No person shall abide in the dominion; he shall be banished, and suffer death of his return.

Priests may be seized by any one without a warrant.

No one shall cross a river, but with an authorized ferryman.

No one shall run on the Sabbath day, or walk in his garden, or elsewhere, except reverently to and from meeting.

No one shall travel, cook victuals, make beds, sweep houses, cut hair, or shave on the Sabbath day.

No woman shall kiss her children on the Sabbath or fasting day.

The Sabbath shall begin at sunset on Saturday.

To pick an ear of corn growing in a neighbor's garden shall be deemed theft.

A person accused of trespass in the night shall be judged guilty, unless he clear himself by his oath.

When it appears that an accused has confederates, and he refuses to discover them, he may be racked.

None shall buy or sell lands without permission of the selectmen.

A drunkard shall have a master appointed by the selectmen, who are to deliver him from the liberty of buying and selling.

Whoever shall publish a lie, to the prejudice of his neighbor, shall be set in the stocks, or be whipped ten stripes.

No minister shall keep a school.

Every rateable person who refuses to pay his proportion to support the minister of the town or parish, shall be fined by the court 21 and 42 every quarter, until he or she pay the rate to the minister.

Whoever wears clothes trimmed with gold, silver or bone above 2s. per yard, shall be presented by the grand jury, and the selectmen shall tax the offender 300 l. estate.

A debtor in prison, swearing he has no estate, shall be let out and sold to make satisfaction.

Whoever sets a fire in the woods and it burns a house, shall suffer death; and persons suspected of this crime shall be imprisoned without benefit of bail.

Whoever brings cards or dice into this dominion, shall pay a fine of five pounds.

No one shall read common prayer books, keep Christmas, or set days, mince pies, dance, play cards, or play any instrument of music, except the drum, trumpet and Jew-harp.

When parents refuse their children convenient marriages, the Magistrates shall determine the point.

The selectmen on finding children ignorant, may take them away from their parents and put them in better hands at the expense of their parents.

Adultery shall be punished with death.

A man that strikes his wife shall pay a fine of two pounds.

A woman that strikes her husband shall be punished as the court directs.

A wife shall be deemed good evidence against her husband.

No man shall court a maid in person or by letter, without first obtaining consent of her parents: 5 l. penalty for the first offense, 10 l. for the second; and for the third, imprisonment during the pleasure of the court.

Married persons must live together or be imprisoned.

Every male shall have his hair cut round according to a cap.

[Note.—The above laws were originally printed on blue paper, on which account they were called the "Blue Laws."

Something About Yourself.

Supposing your age to be fifteen or thereabouts, you can figure up to a dot. You have 180 bones and 500 muscles, your heart is five inches in length and three inches in diameter, it beats 70 times per minute, 4,200 per hour, 100,800 per day, and 36,720,000 per year. At each beat a little over two ounces of blood is thrown out of it, and each day it throws out and discharges about seven tons of that wonderful fluid. Your lungs contain about a gallon of air, and you inhale 24,000 gallons per day. The aggregate surface of the air cells of your lungs, supposing them to be spread out, exceeds 20,000 square inches. The weight of your brain is three pounds; when you are a man it will be eight ounces more. Your nerves exceed 10,000,000 in number. Your skin is composed of three layers, and varies from one-fourth to one-eighth of an inch in thickness. The area of your skin is about 1,700 square inches, and you are subject to an atmosphere of 24,000 square inches of air. Your skin contains 8,500 sweat pores, or perspiratory pores, each of which is like a little drain the mouth of which is an inch long making an aggregate of the entire surface of your skin about 165 feet, or a little more than the length of the body of a man.

Selected Poetry.

From the Toledo Blade.

BETSY AND I ARE OUT.

Draw up the papers, lawyer, and make 'em good and tight.

For things at home are cross ways, and Betsy and I are out.

We who have worked together so long as man and wife.

Must in single harness and rest for our natural life.

"What is the matter?" says you. I want it's hard to tell.

Most of the years behind us we've passed by very well.

I have no other woman—she has no other man.

Only we've lived together as long as we ever can.

So I've taken with Betsy, and Betsy has taken with me.

And that's the way we've lived, and that's the way we'll live.

Not that we've had each other any terrible time.

We've gathered 'round this for years, a little at a time.

There was a stock of temper we both had for a start.

Although we never suspected 'twould take us two apart.

And now we're here, and here we'll stay, and here we'll stay.

I hold my own opinion and Betsy another; but Safe in the hands of good men and easy to get at.

And the next time I remember, I started in a joke.

But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.

And when we were each other's "bush" we were mad.

And the next time I remember, I started in a joke.

But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.

And when we were each other's "bush" we were mad.

And the next time I remember, I started in a joke.

But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.

And when we were each other's "bush" we were mad.

But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.

And when we were each other's "bush" we were mad.

And the next time I remember, I started in a joke.

But full for a week it lasted, and neither of us spoke.

And when we were each other's "bush" we were mad.

PRIMARY MEETINGS.

THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF WICOMICO COUNTY, are requested to meet on SATURDAY JUNE 24th inst., at 2 o'clock P. M., in their respective Election Districts, at the usual places of meeting, for the purpose of selecting three delegates from each District, to meet in Convention in SALISBURY, at the COURT ROOM on SATURDAY, JULY 1st, to nominate three Delegates to represent Wicomico County in the State Convention, which will meet in BALTIMORE, on WEDNESDAY the 19th day of JULY, when candidates for Governor, Comptroller and Attorney General are to be nominated. The people are earnestly requested to turn out and select good men. By order of the CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

Hon. Isaac D. Jones for Attorney General.

The State Convention that meets in Baltimore city on the 19th day of July, is likely to be one of more than ordinary significance and importance; for not only are candidates for the highest offices in the State to be nominated, but new issues, the offspring of Radical legislation, will necessarily force themselves upon the Convention. But under every and any emergency we may fear no evil, for the Democratic Conventions in this State are generally characterized not only by a spirit of accord and harmony, but also by practical foresight and wisdom in the selection of good men as standard bearers; and we are warranted in the belief that the July Convention will do its whole duty, by allowing capability and not availability alone, to be a controlling consideration in all its nominations—and that in meeting new issues, no "Departures," only such as obedience to law may dictate, will be suffered to supplant those vital elements of the "Old Maryland Democracy," that have grown up with our manhood. It is true that all political organizations are but the pretenses of a higher law; they are all at the mercy of the law-making power, whether that power overrides the Constitution or not; and if we wish to be "truly loyal" and willing subjects, claiming allegiance and seeking protection under a Constitution, which, if it has been invaded by vandalism, still demands an obedience, and why should we not cling the more tenaciously to the good that remains? For notwithstanding its tattered and torn condition, it still contains the original boundaries. Still bears the impress of greater minds, and the fashioning of purer hands. The "Ohio Democracy" has taken the initiative in framing a platform to suit the times, for the amendments that have been engrained upon the Constitution of the United States by the party now in power have made it not only incumbent, but politic for that party to pursue such a course, and the Democracy of Maryland may be compelled to accept a "foreigner" to meet the "inevitable" boldly and fearlessly, and to respect, so far as respect is required by law, the new order of things. To avoid then the "shoals and quicksands" that menace danger, we must have experienced Pilots; and to maintain our strength and retain the confidence of the people, we must still cling to those Democratic cardinal principles that form the very groundwork of our Institutions, and underlie the foundations of our Democratic Constitutional Government. But we will not presume to even foreshadow the policy of the July Convention; neither will we arrogate unto ourselves the ability to dictate to a body, that we are confident, will be made up of the best material in the State. But like many of our sister counties we have our preferences among those who have been named for Governor, Comptroller and Attorney General—but our favorite will not prevent us from loving the unimpaired reputation of some of our neighbors, by demanding all three—and if our modesty forbids us from holding, we will not prevent us from presenting the name of Wicomico's distinguished one the Hon. Isaac D. Jones for Attorney General. And in doing so we give expression to a sentiment common to every Democrat in Wicomico County.

It is true, Mr. Jones was born and educated in a section that now forms part of our county; but we are not influenced by local feelings alone when we are found advocating his claims—higher motives than those of mere sectional pride, ought to control the action of conventional bodies. It is becoming too common in our politics, to consider first a man's geographical position—his fitness is an after consideration. In this connection it would be well for us, in canvassing a candidate's claims first to inquire as to his qualifications; and in bringing forward Mr. Jones' name for the high and responsible position of Attorney General, we are controlled solely by the honest conviction that he is eminently qualified for the place. As an officer of the State, has he not discharged his duty faithfully and truthfully? Has he ever been found wanting in the maintenance of the rights administered by the Commonwealth? Against the greatest legal minds in the country, he has contended with a vigilance and an ability that have won for him the well earned reputation of being one of the ablest lawyers in the State. Untrammelled by factions or combinations—pure, honest and upright in his profession, he has won for himself a name that but few lawyers enjoy. Have not the voters and taxpayers of Maryland cause to thank him and honor him with a renomination, when through his efforts mainly the State has gained immense pecuniary advantages in matters that have been a subject of irritation and embarrassment? It matters not whether Mr. Jones be an Eastern Shoreman or Western Shoreman; but inquiry should be, has he discharged his duties faithfully—does his record merit our approval?

The verdict of Wicomico County is that he has done his whole duty, and in honor and in justice he ought to be renominated. His equals as a lawyer have not been named, and shall the experiment be attempted of filling the highest office in the gift of the people with a second rate lawyer, whose availability and not capability will alone insure his election? As an unflinching and uncompromising Democrat, he is the peer of many who are seeking to displace him; and as an honest lawyer and a Christian gentleman he deserves the appellation of being exceptional.

Wicomico is proud of the honor of urging his claims with all the influence at her command. She may be considered presumptuous, but her presumption is not the offspring of a distempered brain, but is founded in reason and established in strength—a power that has crushed Radicalism in our county—that has made her the "Banner County," and can say to our friends when the struggle comes—put down Wicomico's majority at one thousand. Should her voice then, be unheeded? We trust not. Let "fitness" control the action of the July Convention in all the nominations, and our humble petition will be granted.

TEXAS.

A TERRIBLE STORM ON THE GULF. Galveston, June 6.—A terrible storm has prevailed here, commencing Saturday noon, wind southeast, forcing the waters of the Gulf on the island, covering to several feet deep the southern part of the city. About two miles of the G. H. & I. R. R. was washed away two miles above the city. The bridge across the bay is safe. The steamship Alabama, of the Morgan line, with a cargo of cattle and sheep, from Rockport to New Orleans, went ashore twenty miles west of here on Sunday night, and will probably be a wreck. The bark Virginia, from Cardiff to Galveston, with a cargo of railroad iron, went down about six miles east of here on Sunday night. The crew, consisting of fourteen men, were rescued yesterday from the masts, where they had been lashed since 8 o'clock Sunday morning. Many buildings have been washed away from the lower part of the city, or the Gulf beach, but no lives were lost. The velocity of the wind on Sunday night, at 10 o'clock, was thirty-nine miles per hour. Six inches of rain fell since Saturday, 2 P. M. The storm also prevailed to a great extent at Houston, doing damage there. There have been heavy rain storms at all the telegraph stations in the interior.

Massachusetts.

THE INDIANS IN BOSTON. Boston, June 6.—The Indian Chiefs visiting Boston were given a grand public reception to-night in Tremont Temple, when the crowd overflowed the capacity of the hall by hundreds. Governor Claflin presided, and in a few opening remarks introduced the strangers. Mayor Gorman then introduced them to Boston, Little Raven and Buffalo gave speeches, through their interpreters, and the latter expressed great satisfaction with his experience in Boston and elsewhere, and hoped justice would govern their treatment by the white race. The delegates leave tomorrow.

WASHINGTON.

NAVY.

Lieutenant Commander F. W. Diaken has been ordered to torpedo duty. Pay Inspector James D. Murray has been detached from the Washington Navy Yard and ordered to the Naval Academy 1st of July. Pay Inspector Calvin is detached from the Naval Academy 1st of July, and ordered to settle accounts. Paymaster W. Goldsborough, from special duty at the Naval Academy, ordered to the Washington Navy Yard. The United States steamer Narragansett, Commander R. W. Meade arrived at Rio April 30. All well on board.

THE RECEIPTS FROM INTERNAL REVENUE.

sources of the first six days of the month of June of the present year, compared with the same time of June, 1870, show a falling off of nearly $5,000,000. This is attributed to the operations of the new law.

INSPECTORS OF STEAMBOATS.

Mr. Belknap, recently appointed Inspector General of Steamboats, has arrived here, and taken the oath of office. Tomorrow there will be a meeting in this city of all the supervising inspectors of steamboats, to consider the new Steamboat law, and the proper method of putting it into operation.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE—THE GROWING CROP OF COTTON.

Rumors having been circulated that the Department of Agriculture had issued a very short crop of cotton in 1871, it is proper to state that no estimate of the growing crop has been made officially, and no report concerning it has been issued this season. An estimate of comparative acreage and a statement of the condition of the crop will be made in about two weeks.

Miscellaneous Foreign Items.

The death of the artist, Peter von Hess at Munich, has been followed by that of Heinrich von Mayer, painter to the Duke Maximilian of Bavaria, and for many years his friend and companion. He was 64 years old.

One effect of the Prussian occupation of the Champagne district has been to increase enormously the exports of brandy to England. The bonded stock of brandy there now amounts to nearly 13,000,000 gallons, the bonded stock to the end of last quarter amounted to upward of 4,500,000 gallons more than the previous year, and these enormous imports will continue on the same scale.

Prince Charles of Roumania, attended the opera of "Manzoniello" at Bucharest, on a recent evening, and at the revolutionary tabling scene the people in the pit became intensely excited, leaped to their feet, and made such furious threats against the Prince that he turned pale, and quitted the theatre in great agitation. Roumania does not seem very pleasantly disposed towards its rulers just at present.

Quite a number of self sacrificing persons who went to the new African Goldmine with the intention of making large fortunes in a week or two by picking up gems of the first water, have abandoned diamond digging for journalism, and no less than five periodicals are already issued there. Diamond type may be more profitable than diamond cutting, but it is a question whether digging for gems of another sort would be more productive than either.

Clergymen are not safe in Missouri, it would seem. Recently the Rev. Michael Jones, of Kansas city, was returning home very late at night, and being halted by two suspicious-looking persons, whom he thought were robbers, he started to run. They fired upon him, and brought him down with a shot in the leg, so serious as to require amputation. They proved to be policemen, and Mr. Jones will sue the city for the villainous and murderous character of its guards.

Escape of a Convict.—A special telegram to the Richmond Dispatch, dated Covington, June 4th, says: While the westward mail train was here last night, two negro convicts got out of a car window and took to their heels. One of the guard pursued shooting at them six times. He captured one, but the other made his escape. The guard thinks he hit him once. They are still hunting for him. There were twenty convicts and only two guards.

The Valley Railroad. A despatch to the Richmond Whig, dated Lexington June 5th, says: The largest and most enthusiastic meeting yet held here was held to-day in the interest of the Valley Railroad. After many eloquent speeches, resolutions were passed to take a vote of the county to increase to subscription to $500,000.

The New York Times states that the statement that a certain Henry W. Caldwell, a grocer of Indianapolis, has received $1,000,000 for a claim that he held against the Trinity Church property, proves, on investigation, to be entirely unfounded. At the Trinity Church vestry no such person has ever been heard of.

An officer from Fort McPherson, Nebraska, reports that two white men and one negro were scalped near that post on Saturday by Indians. One of the men is dead. The others are expected to survive.

Ned McLeander, a negro, was executed in Rockingham, N. C., on Friday last, for the crime of rape, committed upon the person of Mrs. Sallie L. Usher on the 21st of June, 1870.

CANADA.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT—THE DROWNED JOURNALISTS. Paris, Ontario June 6.—The stone abutment and iron girder bridge over the river Neath, three miles west of Paris, gave way last night, precipitating twenty-four freight cars into the creek. No one was hurt. This will necessitate the transfer of passengers at the break for two or three days, but will cause little delay.

Montreal, June 6.—The bodies of the unfortunate journalists, Spaight and Lodge of the Montreal Gazette, who went over the Lehigh bridge on the Queen's birthday have been recovered. The funeral took place to-day.

Missouri.

St. Louis, June 6.—The Times states that the Missouri Railroad is about to pass into the hands of new owners, with M. K. Jessup of New York at the head. The plan is to bid the road off at a sale to take place in August, under the second mortgage, and thus wipe out the third mortgage of $800,000 of stock and the floating debt, which amounts to two or three millions more. If the scheme works, the Illinois, Missouri and Kansas Association will save the Times, purchase the road with $20,000,000 capital and paying a dividend upon that sum for seven or eight millions a little more than a third of its real value.

RAILROAD AFFAIRS.

St. Louis, June 6.—The Rev. Robert C. Cather, of England, has had a conference with a number of prominent churchmen of this city, with a view of inducing the leading men of the various Evangelical denominations to become members of the International Council of the Christian Moral Science Association, established in Great Britain. Several clergymen and laymen are enrolled as members.

Louisiana.

THE GREAT FLOOD AT NEW ORLEANS. New Orleans, June 6.—The water is standing one inch below the highest point reached. The people continue moving from the overflowed district. The President of the Gaslight Company states that if the water continues its present height two days longer they will be unable to supply gas. The city authorities and charitable committees continue the distribution of food, etc., to the needy in the flooded quarters.

DIED.

Being an Artist
It requires time and study to become an artist; quite as much as is devoted to music, or any other study, and it is singular that people will devote time, study and money to music, while drawing and painting is scarcely thought of. The ear is cultivated to the fullest extent; the eye, which is, perhaps, the principal medium through which we recognize beauty, is sadly neglected, being left to wonder at the inventions of others.

People think nothing of beginning with the musical gamut, and puzzling over the mysteries of music for years, that they may be able to perform respectably; but novices, who have not the first idea of art, too often think that they can go to an artist and learn to paint a fine large picture after a dozen lessons. Without the trouble of going through the A B C of the art, they expect to become artists. It seems impossible for them to comprehend the years of toil and study by which the artist himself has acquired his knowledge.

While music is a very pleasurable accomplishment, it is usually only an accomplishment, and cannot be made of much utility as art. This latter has its value. It is both pleasurable and profitable, if one wishes to make it so, and if young people would but give it as much attention as is given to music, they would find therein as much pleasure and more profit.

The drawing, as taught in the common schools and academies, is at present of little value, for unless one has a special talent for this, he will never accomplish much. To learn to draw, one wants a competent teacher, and, as in music, he should begin at the beginning. In Europe, art pupils are restricted for years to the use of the pencil and crayon; until they have thoroughly mastered the three great principles of art—form, light and shade—when they are allowed to pass into color, which they then manage with comparative ease.

Let those, then, who desire to become artists, do as masters of art have had to do; study and practice drawing, first with a competent art teacher, and then with the great teacher, Nature, from whom one never learns false harmony, either in lines or colors. You may cheat your artist teacher and yourself, and be persuaded that you have actually painted a very handsome picture, after having taken only twelve lessons; but you cannot cheat Nature, for she ever builds up before you the true standard, in all its beautiful harmony, which, with many trifles, you attempt to imitate, and though for years these trials may be failures, yet, if you have the desire and the courage to persevere, you will overcome many of the difficulties, and at last be rewarded with a tolerable imitation.—P. Fisher, in the Art Review for May.

The Original Mrs. Partington.
The names of certain great characters are so well known to fame that often little or nothing else is known about them. Homer is in danger of having been born in seven different places at once. Shakespeare's early history is equally unauthoritative. Nobody really knows who old Parr was—some skeptical people believing that after all he was only some old humpback who pretended to be a great deal older than he really was. And who was Mrs. Partington? The old lady's maltreatment of the English language is proverbial. It may not be uninteresting to know something of the old lady herself. The original Mrs. Partington was a respectable old lady in Sidmouth in Devonshire. Her cottage was on the beach, and the incident on which her fame is based is best told in a passage from the speech of Sydney Smith at Taunton, in the year 1831, on the Lord's rejection of the Reform Bill: "The attempt of the Lords to stop the progress of reform reminds me very forcibly of the great storm at Sidmouth, and of the conduct of the excellent Mrs. Partington on that occasion. In the winter of 1824 there set in a great flood upon that town—the tide rose to an incredible height, and the houses rushed in upon the beach, and everything was threatened with destruction. In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house, with mop and pail, trundling her mop, squeezing out the sea-water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic Ocean. The Atlantic was roused.—Mrs. Partington's spirit was up. But I need not tell you that the contest was unequal. The Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. She was excellent at a mop or a pail; but she should not have meddled with a tempest." This speech is reprinted in the collected edition of Sydney Smith's works; and as this, we believe, the first time of Mrs. Partington's name being mentioned, the immortality she has earned must be set down as due to Sydney Smith.

"I wish I had your head," said a lady one day to a gentleman who had solved for her a knotty point.
"And I wish I had your heart," was his reply.
"Well," said she, "since your head and my heart can agree, I don't see why they should not go into partnership."

"The world is filled with debates, contentions and divisions of opinions; and no matter what cause you espouse, or what opinion you profess, either in civil or religious life, it will have the enemies."

MA. L. H. MILLER,
Dear Sir:—In justice to you we add another testimonial to the superiority and just reputation of your Safes. The unfortunate fire of Friday night last, was so destructive as to leave nothing of our entire stock of business property except the safe and its contents, which was in the back part of the second floor in the hottest part of the fire, and was severely tested. The appearance of this safe shows the order through which it has passed, and when opened this morning, in presence of a number of gentlemen, its contents, all my valuable books and papers, were handed me as good as put there before the fire. The test was a severe one, and I am surprised that my books and papers did not show some damage; but the perfect condition of our safe shows plainly that the powers of endurance you claim for the safe have hardly been called into requisition. Your safe is justly entitled to the confidence of the business community, and we shall take pleasure in recommending them to all waiting a perfectly reliable article.
Remain, yours truly,
ELHART, LOWENBACH & CO.

One Thousand Dollars is offered for a Safe that has been as severely tested as the above, and the contents in as perfect condition. Salesroom: Our safe and iron works, 265 Baltimore Street.

These extracts are then forwarded to this country to be used expressly for the manufacture of this Bitters. There is no alcoholic substance of any kind used in compounding the Bitters; hence it is free from all the objections incident to the use of a liquor preparation.

SEASON OF 1870-71.
MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS.
Important Improvements.
Patented Jan. 21st, and August 23, 1870.

Reduction of Prices.
The Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., have the pleasure of announcing important improvements in their Cabinet Organs, for which Patents were granted them in June and August last. These are not merely meretricious attachments, but enhance the substantial excellence of the instrument.

They are also enabled by increased facilities for manufacture, to make, from this date, a further reduction of prices on several leading styles.

Having completed and added to their former facilities a large new manufactory, they hope hereafter to supply all orders promptly.

The Cabinet Organs made by this Company are of such universal reputation, not only throughout America, but also in Europe, that few will need assurance of their superiority.

They now offer FOUR OCTAVE CABINET ORGANS, in quite plain cases, but equal according to their capacity to any other make, for $50 each. The same, Double Read, $65. Five Stops, with Knee swell and Tremulant, in elegant case, with several of the Mason & Hamlin improvements, $125. The same Extra, with new Vox Humana, Automatic Swell, &c., $160. Five Octaves, Three Stops, Seven Stops with Supracone, a splendid instrument, $225.

A new illustrated catalogue with full information and reduced prices, is now ready, and will be sent free, with a testimonial circular, presenting a great mass of evidence as to the superiority of these instruments, to any one sending his address to the Mason & Hamlin Organ Co., 154 Tremont St., Boston, or 520 Broadway New York.

DOITY'S WASHING-MACHINE.
LATELY MUCH IMPROVED—AND THE NEW UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

Improved with Rowell's Patent Double Cog-wheels, and the Patent Stop, are now unquestionably far superior to any apparatus for washing clothes ever invented, and will save their cost twice a year, by saving labor and clothes.

The former Editor of this paper, who purchased a Washer and Wringer, testifies as to their value:

"We can knowingly recommend these machines to be just what their manufacturer represents them. We have had them in regular use in our own family for over six months, and we find that all the really hard labor and drudgery of washing is entirely dispensed with by their use. Washing is a neat and pleasant employment for a lady with one of Doity's Washing Machines and Wringers, and we have thought that a millionaire, with no dependent heirs on whom to bestow his fortune, would become one of the greatest benefactors of his race by endowing a fund with which to give one of these washing machines to the thousands of overworked washerwomen which we have in our land. Notice the liberal offer made by Mr. Rowelling in his advertisement. There is no deception in this offer, and we have thought to guarantee its fulfillment to the letter. Let every family which can possibly do so buy Doity's Washing Machine and Wringer."

PRICES—A Fair Offer.
If the Merchants in your place will not furnish, or send for the Machine, send us the retail price, Washer $14, Extra Wringer $9, and we will forward either or both machines, free of freight, to place where you wish to sell; and so sure as we are they will be liked, that we agree to refund the money if any one wishes to return the machines free of freight, after a month's trial, according to directions.

No husband or brother should permit the drudgery of washing with the hands, fifty-two days in the year, when it can be done better, more expeditiously, with less labor, and no injury to the garments, by a Doity Clothes Washer, and a Universal Clothes Wringer. A LECTURE TO YOUNG MEN.
Just Published, in a Sealed Envelope. Price 6 cts.

A LECTURE ON THE NATURE, TREATMENT & PREVENTION OF SPERMATORRHOEA, OR SEMINAL WEAKNESS, INVOLUNTARY EMISSIONS, SEXUAL DEBILITY, AND IMPEDIMENTS TO MARRIAGE, GENERALLY, AND TO THE PHYSICAL, MORAL, AND MENTAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE YOUNG MAN.
By DR. J. C. CULVERWELL, M.D. Author of the "Green Book," &c.

This world-renowned author, in this admirable Lecture, clearly proves from his own experience that the most serious and dangerous diseases of the young man, and the cause of all the physical, mental, and moral debility, are derived from a diseased condition of the system, and that the only safe and reliable remedy is that which he has discovered, and which he has named "The Green Book." This Lecture will be found of great value to all young men, and to all who are interested in the health and happiness of the young.

Send under seal, to any address, in a plain sealed envelope, the name of the person to whom the Lecture is to be sent, and the name of the person to whom it is to be delivered. Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents. Address the Publisher, CHAS. J. KLINE & CO., 27 Bowery, New York, Post Office Box 498.

SIMMONS

The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uncertain, and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is made worse by rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constipated, sometimes alternating with lax. The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved.

BETSY DESTROYS THE PAPERS.

SEQUEL TO "BETSY AND I ARE OUT."

BY THE REV. PETEROLIM V. KAPIT.

I've brought back the paper, lawyer, and fetched the parson here.
To see that things are regular, settled up fair and dear.
For I've been talking with Caleb, and Caleb has talked with me.
And the amount of it is we're minded to try once more
to agree.

So I come here on the business—only a word to say (Caleb is staking his life, and couldn't come to-day).
Just to tell you and parson how that we've changed our mind;
And the amount of it is we're minded to try once more
to agree.

And now if parson is ready, I'll walk with him toward home.
I want to thank him for some things; 'twas kind of him to come.
He showed the Christian spirit, stood by us firm and true.
We wouldn't have changed our mind, squire, if he'd been so kind.

Then—how good the sun feels, and the grass and flowers!
Something about how lawyers makes me feel fit to swear.
I want to state particular to that man.
But I don't want to know, parson, about such chances of plan.

Well, been some days a-waverin' a little, Caleb and me.
And I wished the hateful paper at the bottom of the box.
But I guess 'twas the prayer last evening, and the few words you said.
That that of the law between us, and brought things to a head.

You see, when we came to division, there was things that wouldn't divide.
There was our twelve-year-old baby, she couldn't be divided.
To go with one or the other, but just kept whimperin' and cryin'.

"I'll stay with papa and mamma, and where they go I'll go."
Then there was grandpa's Bible—he died on our bed.
We couldn't have the old Bible, and should it go or stay?
The lawyers said that Caleb's mother's, her sampler on the wall.
What a sweet old woman worked in—Tephens, and Eunice, and Paul.

It began to be a hard then, parson, but I grew harder still.
Till of Caleb established down at McHenry's place;
Three dollars a week 'twould cost him; no mending and board at the Widow Mechanic's, a woman that was fair hair.

Still we went on a-talkin'; I agreed to knit some
And make a dozen striped shirts, and a pair of waxen socks.
And he was to cut a door-way from the kitchen to the shed.
"Say a climbing steps much, in a frosty weather," he said.

"Eighteen to the pen at last, I felt a sickening and looked at him with the air, in the Spring of sixteen."
"Two then you dropped in, parson," wasn't much that was said.
"I'll be there, I have another," but the thing was killed stone-dead.

I should like to make confession, not that I'm going to say.
The fact was all on my side, that never was my way.
But it may be true that women—how 'tis can't be said.
Are a little more aggravatin' than men know how to be.

Then, parson, the neighbors' meddling—it wasn't fourth only.
And the church a-laborin' with us, 'twas worse than any toll.
And I thought, and so has Caleb, through many a year.
If I'd kept to their own business, we should have got along.

There was Deacon Amos Purdy, a good man as you know,
But but a gift of labor to except with the sayre and how.
Then a load came over in peace time from the Wilbur neighborhood.
"Season of prayer," they called it; didn't do an atom of good.

I'll tell you about the heifer—one of the kindest and best.
That brother Ephraim gave me, the fall he moved out West.
I'm free to own it riled me that Caleb should think I'd sell it.
She died of convulsions—a cow that milked four gallons a day.

But I needn't have spoke of turnips, needn't have been so cross.
And said hard things, and hinted half 'twas all my own fault.
And I'll take it all back, parson; that fire shan't ever break out.
Though the cow was choked with a turnip, I never had a doubt.

Then there are points of doctrine, and views of a future state.
I'll bring the millennium sooner, dispute! about when it's due.
Although I feel an assurance that mine's the Scriptural view.

But the blessed truth of the Bible, I've learned to think, don't lie.
In the texts we hunt with a candle to prove our doctrines by.
So that that come to us in sorrow, and when we're on our knees.
But if Caleb won't argue on free-will, I'll leave alone the decrees.

One notion of Caleb's, parson, seems rather misty and I wish it if it comes convenient, you'd change a word with him.
It don't stand to reason, and for gospel it isn't clear.
The love love better in heaven for having quarrelled here.

I've no such an expectation; why, parson, if I two you needn't have worked so faithful to reconcile false views.
I hold another opinion, and hold it straight an square.
If we can't be peaceable here, we won't be peaceable nowhere.

But there's the request he made, you know it, parson.
Bole! laid under the maple that his own hand set out.
And he to lay beside him when my time comes to go.
As he said, "I don't mind me; but 'twas that construng me so."

And now that some scales, as we think, have fallen from our eyes.
And things brought so to a crisis have made us both more wise.
Why, Caleb says, and so I say, till the Lord parts him and me.
We'll love each other better, and try our best to agree.

A Natural Spring of Ink.
The Californians, who over justly boast of the superior resources of their State, are now priding themselves on a natural fountain of indelible ink. The hot spring from which this ink arises, has received the very lively name of the "Devil's Punch-Bowl," although we have no reason for believing that his Satanic majesty, or his followers, indulge in ink as a beverage. The real devil's punch-bowl generally contains an alcoholic mixture. But whatever it may be called, this spring issues from an opening in the ground about seven feet in depth, and the black and thick fluid boils up some three feet above the surface.
The ink is not when it first spouts from the earth, being of a temperature of 195 degrees Fahrenheit. The people of the vicinity use it as ink, and it is confidently asserted that its marks, either upon cloth or paper, are perfectly indelible. If the manufacturers of indelible ink from nitrate of silver, etc., desire a continuance of their incomes, they should buy up and suppress that natural ink fountain.

The Word Farewell.

If ever a latent feeling of love and friendship assumes a tender reality, sweeping the innermost depths of the soul, and kindling sadly sweet emotions in two warm hearts it is as memory lingers upon the parting hour, and we whisper that little, that expressive word—"Farewell."

Have heart that has buffeted the storms of life, and did not tremble for the issue when troubles came, how powerless at last to check the rising tear or suppress a sigh as you uttered and adieu to a friend who had shared your joys and sorrows—your little playmate in childhood's happy days when the earth seemed a paradise of winning confidence, innocence and truth.

As one who stands in death's silent chamber and while gazing on a dead face upon which the sad word "deceased" is written by ivy fingers, and is ready to forget and forgive all the follies of a misapprehended life, and even draw the "soft mantle of charity" over the record of an enemy who had wronged you, even so when we come to part with those who only had a small share of our affections, and readily forgive any difference that existed, or hard feelings that blunted the warm current of our regard. If, then, such are our emotions upon saying adieu to some ordinary associate, how much more intense the feelings of regard when the eye is resting upon the features endeared to us by a thousand hallowed remembrances, and the hand clasps hand perhaps never again to feel its warm pressure, never again to hear the kindly voice, or welcome the smile that gladdened us of yore.

But is the mere fact of parting that gives up pain? Ah, no; rather is it the question that intrudes itself upon us, how, when and where shall we meet again? We are loose to say, good-bye, for knowing how fragile the tenure we hold upon earth's dearest joys, and that death is ever near, lurking in the fairest flowers, we cannot always banish an apprehension for our safety and happiness, however groundless that apprehension may be, and when presentiments of evil and danger, almost amounting to superstition, will sometimes take possession of the most buoyant and fearless heart.

How will it be at the next meeting?
Reader, you may well ponder this, you have some dear one who is going from you to call your wife at no very distant day and she is going from you, or you from her!
Have you pledged a vow of constancy, that nothing can turn aside? Or will time and distance have taught you that "absence conquers love"? What is your next thought? When? Will it be a week, a month, or a year? Will it be when care and trouble have left deep furrows upon your brow, and your eye has lost its lustre, and your cheek its wonted bloom? Or will it be when you shall have added new laurels to the history with which your life began? Or when you have gathered a wreath of glory to crown maturer years? And lastly, where? Solemn thought! for you are now treading upon sacred ground—your spirit is borne upward to the better land! Will you meet at last in heaven, where no adieu is spoken—no farewell word can linger upon the quivering lips—no tear can dim the light of a loving eye—no throb of pain ever reaches the soul?

Breathe that word tenderly when you say—"farewell!" Seal it with a prayer, and god it with a wish that heaven may guard and bless your friend. Then, when death shall still the throbbing pulse, and the "clouds of the valley" conceal from mortal gaze all that remains of that loved companion, be your trust that those you have so tenderly cherished here below, now wrapped in the fadeless drapery of eternal rest, have gone to receive their reward.

WE FARE—As the trials of life thicken and the dreams of other days fade one by one in the deep vista of disappointed hope, the heart grows weary of the struggle, and we begin to realize our insignificance. Those who have climbed to the pinnacle of fame, or revel in luxury and wealth, go to the grave at last with the poor mendicant who begs by the wayside, and like him are soon forgotten. Generation after generation, say an eloquent writer, have felt as we feel, and their fellows were as active in life as ours are now. They passed away as a sopor, while Nature was the same aspect of beauty as when the Creator commanded her to be. And so it shall be when we are gone. The heavens will be as bright over our graves as they are now around our path; the world will have the same attractions for offspring yet unborn that it had once for ourselves, and that it has now for our children.

REAL MEAN.—A little girl of eight years came home from school one day, and said in great eagerness to her mother: "Ma, what do you think of Minnie? She says something dreadful!"

"What is it?" inquired her mother.
"Nothing, I hope, but what a little girl's mother may know."

The child then told her how she had been urged to join in some mischief she had been especially forbidden to meddle with.
saying: "I told her, ma, that God would be displeased if I did so—my mother says He would; and then she answered, 'Oh, I can ask God to forgive me when I get thru'! But I told her I should be ashamed to ask Him. If I should be ashamed to do a wicked thing, and then think I was going to just because he is so good? I think it's real mean!"

Mean, indeed! Little Laura, you are right. It is a great shame to venture upon any wrong thing, and then presume upon forgiveness. Besides, God never forgives in that way. He is not so easy with a sinner as that, and who ever supposes such a thing does not know God aright.—Little Pilgrim.

"KARE," writes a note, the substance of which is that a girl may be sure a man loves her sincerely when he sits in her presence for an hour without speaking.

Eugenie at Chiselhurst.

During the last six months a plainly dressed, graceful lady, accompanied by three or four attendants, might have been met any day walking in the lanes in and about Chiselhurst. Few of those meeting her and failing to recognize a familiar face would have suspected that one short twelve-months since she was an empress and wife of a ruler over a great and powerful nation. With the resignation of royalty, she has abandoned every appearance of state. Every Sunday she walks to the little catholic chapel, whatever the weather may be, and in the rarest time in the world to see her riding in a carriage. Her attire is of the simplest, and she may sometimes be seen walking in a plain coat dress. She neither visits nor receives visitors in any number, and indeed carries her seclusion so far, that when solicited to be present at a concert in the neighborhood, given for the benefit of her distressed subjects of former years, she declined. For years the Empress has been the leader of fashion, and the least peculiarity of manner or dress, whether intentional or not, has been faithfully copied by every lady who pretends to belong in the slightest degree to the world of fashion. Even now her manner of walking, with the body slightly bent forward, and the small stick which she frequently carries, is imitated by the ladies of Chiselhurst, and a reflex of it may be traced far beyond that so-called district. The feelings of the inhabitants towards the Empress and the young Prince have, after the first curiosity, subsided into respect for her wish to keep herself quite private, and she now attracts no more attention than any ordinary lady. The only effect has been to bring down a few people from London on Sunday mornings, who visit the chapel for the purpose of gazing on royalty.

THE MORAL OF LACINA.—A correspondent of an English magazine, warmly advocates tight lacing from a novel point of view, namely, that by the "discipline of the corset" the "roughness of the uncultivated nature is subdued; a valuable lesson of self-abnegation is taught; patience and endurance of pain and inconvenience for the sake of others is inculcated, and the crude spirit tamed and civilized!"

The writer goes on to say: "The corset is an ever present monitor, indirectly bidding its wearer to exercise self-restraint.
If you want a girl to grow up gentle and womanly and feelings, lace her tight. Instead of the anti-corset party looking upon tight laces as people devoid of brains and heart, let them see in a well corseted waist the evidence of a well disciplined mind, well regulated feelings, and affections." These are the only views of an English writer—whether man or woman, we know not—in this nineteenth century. We would be unwilling to believe, however, that many English men or women were of similar opinions.

They have just had a baby show in St.
Louis. Over one hundred infants were on exhibition, including seven pairs of twins and one batch of triplets. The babies were graded in three classes—babies under six months old, babies over six months and under one year, babies under two years and over one year, twin babies, triplets.
A silver cup was given to the best babies of the three first classes, a pair of goblets to the twins, and a set of silver knives and forks to each of the triplets. The first premium was awarded to a four-months old cherub weighing thirty-seven pounds. Some of the mothers objected to the awards, that they were given in all cases to boy babies, but there was no riot in consequence.

A LATE PARIS letter says the favorite disguise to escape from that city is the dress of a woman. Young men dress as young ladies. Old men put on grandma's spectacles, white bonnet, and gray hair.
One of the graveyards of Paris is outside the fortifications. It was recently noticed that attendants at funerals going to this cemetery had increased at an astonishing rate. Watch was set, and it was found that the majority of persons who went to the graveyard failed to return. Horsemen are now placed around the graveyard, and persons disposed to wander beyond it are brought back.

A young man was caught straining his sweetheart to his bosom, the other night, justifies himself on the ground that he has a right to strain his own honey.

An exchange mentions a case beyond the ordinary occultist. It is that of a young lady who instead of a common pupil, has a college student in her eye.

It is said that New Jersey watering-places are rapidly filling up with mosquitoes, and never before were they so thoroughly organized and confident of success.

"Do you like novels?" asked Miss Fitzgerald of her backwoods lover. "I can't say," he replied, "I never ate any; but I tell you I'm death on possum."

"Mr. Smithers, how can you sleep so? The sun has been up these two hours?"

"Well, what if he has?" said Smithers, "he goes to bed at dark, while I'm up till after midnight."

TUESDAY.—The Bible is read of Sunday in all the thirty thousand pulpits of the land. In all the temples of Christendom is its voice lifted up week by week.
The sun never sets on its gleaming page.
It goes equally to the cottages of the plain man and the palace of the king. It is woven into the literature of the scholar and colors the talk of the street. The bark of the incontinent cannot sail the seas without it—no ship of war goes to the conflict but the Bible is there. It enters men's closets swingles in all the grid and cheerfulness of life. The affianced maiden prays God in Scripture for strength in her own duties; men are married by Scripture. The Bible attends them
