He will to-morrow receive the mi-

Courier Extraordinary of Wednesday morning.

A letter from London, dated the 10th inst., says, the Prince Regent receiving on the preceding day, a courier with information of the approaching return of the emperor of Russia to his capital.

Prince Joseph and Prince Lucien conducted business yesterday with the emperor.

Marshal Suchet, it is said, is about to depart for Lyons, whence he will go to Chambrey.

Some trouble lately broke out at Florence, but the presence of the French restored order.

A courier from the Duke of Wel-ington arrived at Vienna on the 10th inst., and occasioned long conferences.

Milan, April 24.
It is said that the troops which were in Tuscany, have obtained advantages over the king of Naples.

Even appears that they push their conquests as far as Spoleto.

The last accounts received this morning, announced that the Austrians have entered Civita Vecchia.

There they formed the garrisons in concert with the Pope's regiment of Swiss Guards, and the hundred

Swiss.

Smigalia, April 24.
This day 12,000 Neapolitan infantry, and two regiments of cavalry arrived here. It is believed that King of Naples intends to march towards Rome, whether it appears the Austrians have directed a corps in haste, by the mountains, in order to take possession of that capital.

Three regiments of volunteers have been reviewed by king Joachim, Ancona, which is still his headquarters.

Two small vessels arrived yesterday at Portsmouth from France—one had twelve French officers on board, who had white cockades, and said to have come from La Ronde, where the Royalists are incessant. The other vessels came in under the white flag with four more sailors.

OFFICIAL ARTICLE.
Vienna, April 26.

The Declaration of the 18th of March is known in France, as is evident by the article inserted in the Journal de Paris of the 5th of April.

This Declaration is the unanimous expression of the wishes and suffrage of the nation. The article which tends to refute it presents us with the most scandalous abuse that ever been made of the faculty of speech, and of human reason among enlightened people.

The development of the principles which dictated the act of the 13th of March, will demonstrate to the French nation that it never will speak the sacrilegious language which its oppressor attributes to it.

It will separate its real dignity, and open to it the most honourable way still to the restoration of Europe.

The Congress has not deliberated on this proposition. It has proscribed this man, and cannot and will not, to find farther asylum among civilized nations, still less can they govern them. Such is the principle of the act of prescription denounced against him. It is founded upon justice, as well as the legitimate rights of nations; it is, therefore, irrevocable.

Assistance has been offered to the French nation and its Government which is still offered. It may nobly reject this assistance, by rejecting its bosom the principal of the act. It cannot do without it, as it shall bear the yoke of a man who seeks to dishonour it, by making it guilty of two-fold perjury.

Europe—a treaty had reconciled us to him. Buonaparte, in arro-gating to himself the supreme power, made it violate both. He drags it into the horrors of civil anarchy and military despotism. It is possible that he dares promise France liberal institutions, the empire of the laws; it is possible that this same man can make the effort to promise to foreign nations, that he will respect their rights, and not interfere in their affairs. He who pretends to make the emancipation of the French nation result of his leaving the island of Elba, and his arrival in France the titles with which he dares to invest himself, the authorities he has seized upon, the delusions (prestiges) with which he surrounds it, those which he is preparing to support it—all these crimes, if legitimated by the assent of the European powers, would threaten social order with complete destruction, and nations with the yoke from which they have just been delivered.

No—no experience has been lost for Europe—after so many years of suffering and calamity, none will be lost for France. She knows the countless evils which the monstrous despotism of a single man has caused to weigh upon her, as upon the rest of the universe, while her nations feel what they owe to their dignity, as members of the European family, and to their internal prosperity as to individual states.

This sentiment having become common to all people and all governments, created a new moral force in political combinations, which alone made the grand alliance, pres-per, and enabled it even to conquer the general peace at the gates of Paris. This force exists; it is indestructible, because it is composed of the most powerful motives, (springs of action) and of the dearest sentiments—those of religion, patriotism and national honour.

The treaty of the 30th of May, laid down the basis of the restoration of the public law of Europe, and it established by its consequences, a happy concord between the progress of the spirit of the age, and the perfecting of the institutions, calculated to guarantee to each people the enjoyment of its glory and its liberty. The Congress of Vienna was on the eve of completing the work of the reconstruction of the political system of Europe. The same congress in the line of conduct which it has followed, proves that all interests have been maturely weighed; and its labors afford the consoling result, which insures to nations the inalienability of their independence. It is no longer the will of the strongest which stifles the voice of truth, and crushes the most legiti-mate resistance—it is the right of each—it is the general interest—it is justice and political reason (reason d'etat)—no longer armies which decide.

Europe desires peace—she has doubtless need of it. But she will not think she has obtained it, till it shall be founded on the immutable principles inherent in each state, and on the common interest of all to maintain it. She is resolved not to be reduced to place it under the perpetual safe-guard of armies. She cannot do this, being demoralized.
But can this France, represented by Addresses—this France, governed by a man whom perjury and the infraction of all Treaties have conducted to the throne—can this France, as long as this man shall speak in her name, pretend to inspire that confidence, which is the first basis of political transaction?

It is with States as with individuals—their credit results only from their actions.

Europe has declared war against Buonaparte. France can and ought to prove to Europe, that she sufficiently feels her own dignity, not to choose the sovereignty of this man.
The French nation is powerful and free—her liberty and her greatness repose in herself, and are necessary to the balance of Europe. The peace of Paris and the congress of Vienna have proved it.

It is in this intention, and in this hope, that the declaration of the 13th of March, has been made. If this act is founded on a supposition it is solely from that which is derived from the esteem which Europe has so justly given to the French nation—it has judged her—it knows that she is too enlightened, in respect to her true interests—too full of the principles of honour, to think her subjected to the will of an individual, whose power is composed of the elements which bring on the ruin of states. We repeat it France has but to return to the principles on which social order is founded, in order to be at peace with Europe.

Ghent, May 3.
DECLARATION.
Louis, by the Grace of God, king of France and Navarre. To all our subjects—Greeting:
France free and respected was enjoying by our care the peace and prosperity which had been restored to it, when the escape of Buonaparte from the Island of Elba and his appearance on the French territory seduced to revolt the greater part of the army. Supported by this illegal force he has made usurpation and tyranny succeed to the equitable empire of the law. The efforts and the indignation of our subjects, the majesty of the throne, and that of the national representation, have yielded to the violence of a mutinous soldiery, whom treacherous and perfidious leaders have seduced by deceitful hopes.

This criminal success having excited in Europe just alarms, formidable armies have been put in march towards France, and all the powers have decreed the destruction of the tyrant.

Our first care, as our first duty, has been to cause a just and necessary distinction to be recognized between the disturber of the peace, and the oppressed French nation.

Faithful to the principles which have always guided them, the sovereigns, our allies, have declared their intention to respect the independence of France, and to guarantee the integrity of its territory.

They have given us the most solemn assurances that they will not interfere in the internal government, and it is on these considerations we have resolved to accept their generous assistance.

The usurper has in vain attempted to sow discord among them, and by a feigned moderation to disarm their just resentment. His whole life has for ever deprived him of the power of imposing upon good faith.

Despairing of the success of his artifices, he seeks for the second time to precipitate with himself into the abyss the nation over which he caused terror to reign. He renews all the departments of administration, in order to fill them wholly with men sold to his tyrannical projects; he disorganizes the national guard, whose blood he intends to lavish in a sacrilegious war; he begins to abolish rights, which have long since been abolished.

He convokes a pretended Field of Mars to multiply the accomplices of his usurpation; he promises to proclaim there in the midst of bayonets a derisive imitation of that constitution, which after 25 years of disorders and calamities, had for the first time founded on a solid basis the liberty and the happiness of France. Finally he has consummated the greatest of all crimes towards our subjects by attempting to separate them from their sovereign, to tear them away from our family, whose existence for so many ages has been identified with that of the nation itself, and is still to this moment the only thing that can guarantee the stability of the legitimacy of the government, the rights and liberty of the people, the mutual interests of France and of Europe.

In these circumstances we rely with entire confidence on the sentiments of our subjects, who cannot fail to perceive the dangers and the miseries to which they are exposed by a man, whom assembled Europe has devoted to public vengeance.

All the powers know the dispositions of France. We are assured of their amicable views and of their support.

Frenchmen! seize the means of deliverance which are offered to your courage. Rally round your king, your father, the defender of all your rights; hasten to him to assist in saving you, to put an end to the revolt, the prolongation of which might become fatal to our country, and by the punishment of the author of so many evils to accelerate the era of a general reconciliation.

Given at Ghent the second day of the month of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and fifteen, and the 20th year of our reign.

(Signed) LOUIS.
The Gazette of Florence announces that on the 7th of this month, Lord Bentinck sent orders to the different English commanders in the Mediterranean to begin hostilities against king Joachim by sea and land.

MARYLAND GAZETTE.
ANNAPOLIS, THURSDAY JULY 6, 1815.

SALE POSTPONED.
The Sale of the property advertised by David Carcaud, in the first page of this paper, is postponed until Thursday 24th day of August next.

COMMUNICATED.
Departed this life on Thursday the 29th of June, at half past 8 o'clock in the morning, Frances Hilton Harris, in the seventieth year of her age, after a long, painful and distressing illness of many years. She was kind, benevolent, affectionate and tender-hearted, and in the arms of death she was resigned; her countenance was as composed, placid, and tranquil as an infant's, and every appearance indicated a firm hope and confidence in a Redeemer's love. She expired without a murmur, sigh, or struggle for life. Her relations and friends derive the greatest consolation from a well founded assurance that her spirit has ascended on high, to be received into those mansions of bliss, prepared by our blessed Saviour, for his happy followers.

During her illness for years, and when her afflictions were the heaviest, her greatest fear was that she should offend her creator by her complaints or murmurings.

From the U. S. Gazette.
Extract of a letter from an officer on board the U. S. ship Independence, dated June 26, 1815.

We now lie outside of the light in the bay, all ready for sea. The ship has been tried, and proves rather wet; her lower ports are so near the water that it is necessary to stop them perfectly tight, to prevent the water from rushing in, so that you see in rough weather her lower deck would be entirely useless but as the provisions are consumed she will rise in the water.

Another unfortunate circumstance about her is, her being too crank, as the sailors term it, consequently the lee ports are entirely under water even with a light breeze. Whether all this can be remedied or not I cannot tell, at any rate we try it on Thursday next.

From the Eastern Star.
EXTRAORDINARY.
Three men from Kent-Island were lately fishing for Drum off Love Point, in about 25 feet water, and having been there a considerable time without success, at length (Haycock) one of the party felt something move his line, and upon drawing it in found he had bro't up a large earthen jug, and his hook, with the bait, within it; which being unable to extricate, he broke the jug in pieces, when to his utter surprise and astonishment, he discovered a large CATFISH fourteen inches in length, which had been enveloped in the jug, and swallowed his hook with the bait. It is supposed the jug was lost from some vessel, and having settled at the bottom in a perpendicular situation, the fish entered it when small, and being attracted by something in it, or not being able to find its way out, continued there till grown too large to get out at the mouth; and the bait having accidentally fallen into it, was seized with avidity by the fish. The jug must have been a long time at the bottom, as there was very long grass and several large oysters adhering to it.

Mr. Printer,
A stranger in passing through your city, has discovered one nuisance which your Grand Jury omitted in their late presentments—the worms which infest the trees. My reputation for it that you have not a worm in one of your trees three days hereafter, if the following simple experiment is made:—Bore into the trees, with an inch bit, from 6 to 10 inches—insert therein from 2 to 4 ounces of Sulphur, and immediately cork it close and your work is done.

MARYLAND GAZETTE.

SALE POSTPONED.
The Sale of the property advertised by David Carcaud, in the
first page of this paper, is postponed
until Thursday 24th day of August
next.

COMMUNICATED.
Departed this life on Thursday
the 29th of June, at half past 8
o'clock in the morning, Frances
year of her age, after a long, painful and distressing illness of many years. She was kind, benevolent,
composed, placid, and tranquil as
an infant's, and every appearance
indicated a firm hope and confidence
in a Redeemer's love. She expired
without a murmur, sigh, or struggle
derive the greatest consolation from
a well founded assurance that her
spirit has ascended on high, to be
received into those mansions of
bliss, prepared by our blessed Saviour, for his happy followers.

During her illness for years, and
when her afflictions were the heaviest, her greatest fear was that
she should offend her creator by
her complaints or murmurings.

From the U. S. Gazette.
Extract of a letter from an officer on board the U. S. ship Independence, dated June 26, 1815.

We now lie outside of the light
in the bay, all ready for sea. The
near the water that it is necessary
to stop them perfectly tight, to pre-
that you see in rough weather her
lower deck would be entirely useless
but as the provisions are consumed
she will rise in the water.

the sailors term it, consequently the
lee ports are entirely under water
even with a light breeze. Whether
all this can be remedied or not I
cannot tell, at any rate we try it on Thursday next.

Salem, June 27.
BLOODY REVOLUTIONS.
Capt. Smith, prisoner in Algiers, writes to his friends in this town, under date of April 12, that on the 23d of March the Dey was murdered by the military, and his First Minister raised to the sovereign power; that 16 days afterwards the new Dey shared the fate of his predecessor; and that all was still tumult and consternation, and further violences and plunder were expected. Capt. S. was anxious to see the American flag flying before the place, and had no doubt but the appearance of a strong squadron there would be the means of effecting an immediate peace.

ER, Esq. Governor of Maryland.

To one particular in our history be more interesting to the young generation, and the generation which sprung into being since the establishment of our country's independence, than that which arrayed one portion of our countrymen against the other. By a little inquiry, the causes may be easily discovered; and yet how great a portion of our fellow-citizens remain totally ignorant of them. We generally know that the country is divided into two great parties, Federal and Democratic, but whence the distinction had its origin, they seldom troubled themselves to inquire. They have heard that Washington was a Federalist, and Jefferson and Madison were Democrats; and if asked why they had a preference to the political notions of the two latter, they find themselves wholly unable to furnish a reasonable answer. True it is, in the latter part of his life, the character of the Federalists was against the character of the Democrats, and many were found to re-echo upon his retiring from public life that "he no longer possessed the power of multiplying evils upon the United States;" yet were wholly incapable of naming the evils of which he had been the author. They fancied they saw in his conduct a partiality for England, great to the prejudice of France, who had been our friend during the revolution, and hence they thought, at every heart in unison with the freedom and happiness of the people, ought to be high with exultation that the name of Washington from this day, (meaning the day left the presidential chair) was to give a currency to political iniquity, and to legalize corruption. These were some of the sentiments advanced by the earliest disciples of Jefferson, and as they never been disavowed by those who followed after, there is good reason for saying we believe in the sentiments of a great majority of that party. It has often occurred to us, when we have seen the influence of such opinions, like Jefferson, they believed in the Sampson of America, whose hair was shorn off by the British, and who was at all times, "to barter his country for gold, to gratify his curiosity," that they should ever ascribe to commemorate either his faults or achievements. What more particularly excited their animosity against him, than any thing else, was his ratification of Jay's treaty, which afterwards was the spring of such happiness and prosperity to the country. The ratification of this instrument, and the high and independent grand he took against the insolence of the French directors, and their agents, operated more than any other cause to create a democratic party. When this party had increased and selected great political philosophers as leaders, they threw off the mask, and their conduct, and waged war only against the principles of Washington, but all who adopted them. They were adopted by Federalists, because they were known to be consistent with sound reason; and have acted upon them ever since. Because they are the polar which will guide the country to peace and prosperity. Federalists uniformly disclaimed all attacks ment to foreign governments, and with that sage reflection of our great political father always in mind, that that nation which indulges a partiality for one foreign power in preference to another, becomes in some measure, its slave; have endeavored to establish a character which Americans should only be desirous of establishing, of being devoted friends to their own republican institutions. They opposed embargoes and restrictions on commerce, because they believed them, as experience proved, injurious only to ourselves; and they opposed the war because they believed it unnecessary. True our military and naval character stands higher than they did before, but has administration obtained one ostensible object for which war was declared? No. They have accumulated a debt upon the country, and imposed heavy taxes on the people, to support a war for "free trade and sailors' rights;" but in the treaty of peace they are entirely forgotten. Look at these things, fellow-citizens, and then ask yourselves whether the men placed at the head of our affairs are any longer entitled to your confidence, or their advocates worthy your support and suffrages?

Mediterranean Squadron sailed.
Boston, July 3.
The Squadron for the Mediterranean sailed yesterday, consisting of the following vessels, viz. Independence, 74, Com. Bainbridge, Capt. Crane. Erie, sloop, Capt. Ridgely. Chippewa, brig, Lt. Com'dr. Reid. Lynx, sloop, Lt. Storer.
The squadron has been detained some days past, in consequence of the Independence having been on trial, found rather crank with the heavy metal she had on board, which consisted of all 32 pounders—90 guns; long guns on the middle and lower deck, and carronades on the upper. The lower deck guns were cast considerably heavier than those on the middle deck, and have been taken out, and their place supplied by those on middle deck; and the middle deck has been supplied with 24 pounders in lieu of the former, which change has lightened her about 50 tons. The pilots left the squadron at half past 2 P. M. about 5 leagues from the light house, under a press of sail, standing to the eastward, with a good breeze at W. N. W. The Independence outtailed the remainder of the squadron, and spared them her light sails.—Success attend them.

CINCINNATI, June 16.
On Tuesday evening last Mr. U. riah Rose left this place on his return to his residence 9 or 10 miles from Brookville, accompanied by Mr. Coombs, one of his neighbours aged about 66, two of his daughters, two of his nieces and little son about 14 years of age, in a wagon. On arriving at Millcreek about 11-2 miles from this place, he found it considerably raised, but not sufficiently apprised of its depth, attempted to cross. The foremost horses had just got in the water, when he discovered their danger; but it was too late—all were immediately afloat and swept with the current. The old gentleman, Mr. William Coombs, one daughter, Anna Rose, and one niece Phebe Rose were drowned. The boy caught hold on some drift wood about 80 yards below, and there, with unusual presence of mind saved the other two, by catching the hand of one just discernible and the garment of the other as they floated by. The whole team were drowned and every thing lost.

From the Susquehanna Democrat, of June the 30th.
TORNADO.
On Monday last the town of Orwell, Bradford county, was visited by a violent tornado. Large trees were broken off, and many carried into the air—some were supposed to be nearly half an hour before they struck the ground. A school house was thrown down and the logs scattered about. A new house of Mr. Luther Chaffee, was carried from its foundation, thrown completely over, and left standing on the roof. Old logs scattered from their beds several rods and the timber scattered in every direction. The extent of the damage was not known when our informant came away, but supposed to be considerable.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.
DARING ROBBERY.
On Thursday evening last, about 8 o'clock, a gentleman of this city returning to town with his lady in a gig, on the Germantown turnpike, between the first and second gates was met by two foot pads, one of whom seized his horse by the bridle and the other presented a pistol to his breast and demanded his pocket book. Upon being informed that it contained nothing of value, he demanded his watch, which was delivered, and then the ruffians departed and permitted the gentleman to proceed.

When it is considered that this outrage was committed upon the most public turnpike leading to the city, less than a mile from the thickly built parts of the Northern suburbs, and within call of eight or ten dwellings, its audacity is almost unexampled, and indicates that the perpetrators of it must be possessed of no ordinary degree of contempt for the authority of the laws.

The first part of the Homilies appeared in the reign of Edward the sixth, and is supposed to have been written by Cranmer, assisted by Latimer. The second part, published early in the reign of queen Elizabeth, is attributed chiefly to Bishop Jewell. A copy of these homilies was given to every parish priest in the kingdom, who was commanded to read them diligently and distinctly, that they might be understood by the people. These discourses have ever been considered as containing the most unexceptionable summary of doctrine, and the richest treasures of scriptural knowledge and genuine piety.

POETS CORNER.

ON THE DOVE'S LEAVING THE ARK.

FROM MISS HUNTLEY'S POEMS.

STILL did an unseen Being guide
The lonely vessel o'er the tide,
And still, with steady prow, it braves
The fury of the foaming waves.
While fierce the deluge pours its stream,
The thunders roll—the meteors gleam, When Ocean's mighty cisterns broke,
And earth like a rent cottage shook,
And slowly as its axle turn'd,
The wat'ry planet mov'd and mourn'd;
Though trembling at the tempest's ire, Grasping in the lightning's fire, While holding in her firm embrace The remnant of a wretched race, Still o'er the waves the wandering ark, Roam'd like some lone, deserted bark,
But now the storm has hush'd its ire,
The warring elements retire;
And from his curtains dusk and dun Look'd forth, once more, the astonished sun.

What saw he there? Young Nature's face With smiles, and joy, and beauty fair?

No! not one feature could he trace
To tell him life was ever there; Save when that little bark was seen To show him where her pride had been,
But now from that secure abode A winged stranger went,
And from the casement opened wide,
A joyful flight she bent;

High mounting seem'd to seek the sky With forward breast and sparkling eye, Like captive set at liberty.

So went the dove on errand kind,
To seek a mansion for mankind, Though scarce her meek eye dared to trace The horrors of that dreadful place.

The waves with white and curling head Swept above the silent dead, The heaving billows' dashing surge Hoarsely swell'd the hollow dirge;

The heavy weight of waters prest
The mighty monarch's mouldering breast, The giant chief, the sceptred hand,
The lip that pour'd the loud command,
The blooming cheek—the sparkling eye,

Now shrouded in the sea-weed lie, But still the pensive stranger spread Her white wing o'er that Ocean dead,
And oft her anxious eye she cast, Across the dark and shoreless waste.

For evening clad the skies in gloom,
And warn'd her of her distant home,
The stars that gem'd the brow of night Glanc'd coldly on her wavering flight, In tears, the moon with trembling gleam Withdrew her faint and faded beam, And o'er that vast and silent grave Was spread the dark and boundless wave;

With beating heart and anxious ear,
She strove some earthly sound to hear, In vain—no earthly sound was near,
It seem'd the world's eternal sleep Had settled o'er that gloomy deep, Nor slightest breath her bosom cheer'd Her own soft wings alone she heard.

But still that fearful dove preserv'd With unabating care,
The olive leaf—the type of peace
All fragrant, fresh and fair.

With pain her weary wing she stretch'd Over the billows wide,
And oft her panting bosom dropp'd Upon the briny tide.

The image of her absent mate,
That cheer'd her as she strove with fate, Grew darker on her eye;
It seem'd as if she heard him mourn,
For one who never must return,
In broken minstrelsy.

Yet ere her pinions ceas'd their flight,
Or closed her eye in endless night,
A hand the weary wanderer prest And drew her to the ark of rest, Oh! welcome to thy peaceful home,
No more o'er that wild waste to roam.

When from this cell of pain and woe,
Like that weak dove my soul shall go,
And trembling still her flight shall urge,
Along this dark world's doubtful verge, O'er the cold flood, and foaming surge, Then may the shrinking stranger spy
A pierce'd hand stretching from the sky, Then near a voice in accents blest,
"Return—return unto thy rest!"

Long prison'd in a wayward clime, Long wounded with the thorns of time;
Long chill'd by the wild storms that pour Around that dark, deceitful shore, Enter—where thorns shall wound and tempests rage no more.

THE WEEKLY MONITOR.

Extract from a Sermon preached by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Chester, at the yearly meeting of the Children educated in Charity Schools in and near London and Westminster.

"When in the fulness of time it pleased the Almighty to reveal his Son, the Christian Teacher was called upon to discharge a superior duty, to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and to declare the glad tidings of salvation to all mankind. A Saviour had brought life and immortality to light. The grand aim, therefore, of every rational being, was no longer a perishable, but an everlasting reward—not time, but eternity. Hence, education, as the great means to this end, became of a more exalted and spiritual nature, its object was to make known unto man the purposes of his creation, to communicate a knowledge of the will of the Most High; that knowledge might lead to practice, and at length procure for him a glorious inheritance, eternal in the heavens.

"We are too apt to overlook or undervalue the importance of this instruction, because the full effects of it are not instantly and wholly perceived. But the awful truths of religion have seldom, if ever, been duly inculcated on the mind of youth without producing the most beneficial result, if not immediately, yet at some future period of life. The precept may for a time be forgotten; the passions may break through all restraints, whilst reason and conscience slumber or sleep. The voice of religion, however, though overpowered, is not often entirely silenced, but is heard at some favourable season, in the hour of stillness and repose, and before the day of repentance is finally passed. The seed, to all appearance dead, may yet produce a most abundant harvest.

"One of the main advantages which arises from the education of the poor, is the ability which it confers upon them to employ their leisure hours in a profitable and improving manner. Intermissions of labour find them for the most part listless and unoccupied. To avoid this oppressive tedium and languor, they are tempted to the receptacles of sloth or sin, where property is wasted, where health is undermined, and where bad habits are acquired and confirmed. Now had the same persons been able to employ their vacant hours in useful reading, had early instruction opened to them the Bible, the temptations of idleness might not have been felt at all, or, if felt, might have been resisted and overcome.

"Of the blessed effects which even a casual perusal of the Word of God may produce, we have a memorable instance upon record, in the life and conversion of the celebrated St. Augustine. He who was afterwards one of the most illustrious fathers of the Church, had been in his earlier years notoriously dissolute and abandoned. His attention, however, and feelings, were suddenly arrested by an awakening passage, which met his eye upon opening a page of the Sacred Volume. The impression thus excited, was durable, daily grew stronger, and at length wrought in him a deliverance from the captivity of sin. The same means may, in other cases produce the same effect. The consequences to be expected from every poor man's possessing his Bible are infinite—of a value beyond all calculation.

"There is scarcely any plan, however excellent, against which objections may not be raised, and it has been urged against this general instruction of the poor, that it disqualifies them from executing, as they ought, the inferior but necessary offices of life. What! can we conceive a situation, however humble, the duties of which will be less willingly performed, in consequence of that small and limited degree of knowledge, which these institutions impart? Is there any agricultural or mechanical employment, is there any domestic or servile occupation, which the poorest will discharge with less fidelity and skill, because the charitable have taught him to read and write? Will they be less faithful, because they know the grounds of their obligation? Will they be less satisfied, because they have learnt that their lot and the whole disposing of it are of the Lord? On the contrary, who, but for the hopes and consolations of religion, would contentedly submit to hardships, privation and toil? Banish the idea of God out of the world, and the whole system is disorganized; acknowledge his superintending Providence, and all things work together for good unto all men.

"If we wish to produce the full effects of a religious education, the materials must be prepared and the foundation laid, at a much earlier period than they commonly are. Much evil is occasioned, and much good neglected to be done, before the generality are at all aware of it. None but those who have watched the dawn of the human understanding are sensible, how early and how deep impressions may be made. Children reason not only before, but soon after, than is generally supposed. The work, therefore, if it is to be done to the best advantage, must be begun betimes. From an ignorance or neglect of this truth, all future endeavours are frequently unavailing. Parents, therefore, and preceptors, cannot too strongly be reminded, that the education of children should commence almost from their birth. The years of infancy are the most important, but the most neglected period of their lives. These form the heart, and stamp the character off the future man. And should the engagements and the cares of life devolve the parental charge upon another, yet surely the greatest caution and consideration are required, more than I fear are generally bestowed, in ascertaining the habits & opinions of those persons to whom children are entrusted, and from whose sentiments and principles they naturally imbibe their own. And here we cannot but express a wish, that an increased attention to the morals of youth may be shown, in our public schools, and seminaries of learning. A knowledge of the ancient languages and the acquisition of human science, both are and ought to be among the prominent objects of these excellent institutions. But let them not stand first in view. An elucidation of the Scriptures, and the inculcation of moral principles are entitled to a far higher consideration, to the principal share of our time and thought. Let not this opinion, however, either give offence, or be misunderstood. I mean not to affirm, that no anxiety at all is shown to the concerns of religion; neither do I think that they are less regarded at the present, than at any preceding period; but what I believe and assert, is, that a greater degree of attention is still called for in some cases, and that too much can hardly be bestowed in any. For the end is worthy of the means, an object which will always repay the utmost care and zeal. Too long has our youth been educated for the world, let us now strive to educate them for God."

POST'S CORNER

The following poetical Lines are taken from an original work, lately published, entitled, "Moral pieces in Prose and Verse, by Lydia Hanley, a young Lady of Connecticut."

CREATION—A Hymn.
 God spake—and Chaos heard his voice,
 And nature rose from sleep;
 And lo! this firm and solid earth, Sprang from the liquid deep.
 He spake—and Light's transparent ray Silver'd each sparkling wave;
 He spake—and twilight led the day To Ocean's silent cave;
 And Darkness raised his giant size, Deep frowning in his might,
 While thousand, thousand starry eyes Look'd from the cell of night.
 The Day-Star and the trembling Morn Seem'd hand in hand to move, While morning matins tun'd the harp Of Seraphim above.
 The Earth, with herbs, and plants and flowers,
 Luxuriantly dress'd;
 And herds & flocks were seen to move Upon her verdant breast.
 And Ocean spread its glassy wave,
 And peopled was the flood;
 And high upon the pathless air The wing'd musicians rode.
 But more to swell the song of joy And fill the boundless plan, Chd in the robe of innocence, Forth walk'd MAJESTIC MAN.
 Oh, had he lov'd the God that stamp'd His image on the clay,
 And had he kept his gentle law,
 How fair had been his way!
 But, whirling in a thoughtless course, Ingloriously he fell,
 And sadly does my song forbear That mournful fall to tell.
 For as a stream, whose restless wave Forsakes its parent source, Ungrateful man has found his way Embitter'd with remorse.

BOSTON, JULY 6.

CAPTURE OF THE CHESAPEAKE.

Report of the Court of Inquiry.

The Court are unanimously of opinion that the Chesapeake was gallantly carried into action by her late brave commander; and no doubt rests with the court from comparison of the injury respectively sustained by the frigates, that the fire of the Chesapeake, was much superior to that of the Shannon. The Shannon being much cut in her spars and rigging, and receiving many shot in and below her water-line, was reduced almost to a sinking condition, after only a few minutes cannonading from the Chesapeake, while the Chesapeake was comparatively uninjured. And the court have no doubt if the Chesapeake had not accidentally fallen on board the Shannon, and the Shannon's anchor got foul in the after quarter port of the Chesapeake, the Shannon must have very soon surrendered or sunk.

It appears to the court, that as the ships were getting foul, Capt. Lawrence ordered the boarders to be called; but the bugle-man William Brown, stationed to call the boarders by sounding a bugle, had deserted his quarters, and when discovered, and ordered to call, was unable from fright to sound his horn; that midshipmen went below immediately to pass the word for boarders; but these not being called in the way they had been usually exercised, few came upon the upper deck; confusion prevailed; a greater part of the men deserted their quarters, and ran below. It appears also to the court that when the Shannon got foul of the Chesapeake, Capt. Lawrence, his first lieutenant, the sailing-master and lieutenant of marines were all killed or mortally wounded, and thereby the upper-deck of the Chesapeake was left without any commanding officer, & with only one or two young midshipmen. It also appears to the court that previously to the ships getting foul, many of the Chesapeake's spar deck division had been killed and wounded, and the number stationed on that deck thereby considerably reduced; that these being left without a commissioned officer, or even a warrant officer, except one or two inexperienced midshipmen, and not being supported by the boarders from the gun-deck, almost universally deserted their quarters. And the enemy availing himself of this defenceless state of the Chesapeake's upper-deck, boarded and obtained possession of the ship with very little opposition.

From this view of the engagement, and careful examination of the evidence, the court are unanimously of opinion that the capture of the late U. S. frigate Chesapeake, was occasioned by the following causes; the almost unexampled early fall of Capt. Lawrence, and all the principal officers; the bugle-man's desertion of his quarters, and inability to sound his horn; for the court are of opinion if the horn had been sounded when first ordered, the men being then at their quarters, the boarders would have promptly repaired to the spar-deck, probably have prevented the enemy from boarding—certainly have repelled them, and might have returned the boarding with success; and the failure of the boarders on both decks to rally on the spar-deck, after the enemy had boarded, which might have been done successfully, it is believed, from the cautious manner in which the enemy came on board.

The court cannot however perceive in this almost unexampled occurrence of disastrous circumstances, that the national flag has suffered any dishonor from the capture of the U. S. frigate Chesapeake, by the superior force of the British frigate Shannon, of 52 carriage guns and 396 men. Nor do this court apprehend that the result of this engagement will in the least discourage our brave seamen from meeting the enemy hereafter on equal terms.

The court being also charged to inquire into the conduct of the officers and men, during and after the engagement, and thereupon having strictly examined and maturely considered the evidence as recorded, do find the following causes of complaint:—

First—Against Lieut. Cox, that being stationed in command of the second division on the main deck, he left his division during the action, while his men were at their quarters, and went upon the upper-deck, that when there, and the enemy boarding, or on the point of boarding, he left the deck to assist Capt. Lawrence below, went down with him from the spar deck to the birth deck; did not return to his division, but went forward on the gun-deck, that while there and the men retreating below, he commanded them to go to their duty without enforcing his commands. But as a court of inquiry allows an accused person no opportunity of vindicating his conduct, the members of this court trust that their opinion on the conduct of Lt. Cox may not be deemed conclusive against him, without trial by court-martial.

Second—Against midshipman Forrest, that he left his quarters during the action, and did not return to them, and now assigns no reason for his conduct satisfactory to this court.

Third—Against midshipman Fleishman; that he behaved in an unofficer-like manner at Halifax, assuming a false name at the office of commissary of prisoners when obtaining his parole, and was paroled by the name of William Brown.

Fourth—Against the crew generally; that they deserted their quarters, and ran below after the ships were foul, and the enemy boarded. But it appearing that they behaved well at their quarters before, and fired on the enemy with great rapidity and precision, the court ascribe their misconduct to the confusion naturally incident to the early loss of their officers, and the omission of the call for boarders in the accustomed manner.

Yet this court is very far from exculpating those who are thus crimined. It is unable to designate by name all the individuals who thus abandoned their duty, because most of the officers had recently joined the ship, some only a few days preceding the engagement, and of course could not distinguish the men. The court, therefore, respectfully submit to higher authority, the expediency of withholding the wages of the crew. The persons whom the court are able to designate by name, as deserters from their stations, are Wm. Brown, bugleman, Joseph Russell, capt. of 2d gun, Peter Frost, and John Joyce, seamen.

The court further find, that the following persons entered the British service at Halifax, viz: Henry Ensing, Peter John, Andw. Simpson, Peter Langrun, Magnus Sparling, Joseph Galla, Marien Anderson, Francis Paris, John White (boy), Thomas Arthur, Charles Reynolds, John Pierce, Andrew Denham, Thomas Jones, Charles Goodman, Joseph Antonio, Christopher Stevens, Charles Bowden, Charles Westbury, Joseph Smith, George Williams, and George Cor-

The court further find and report, that Wm. Wainwright, William Warrington, and James Parker, the last of whom was born at Salem, Massachusetts, were claimed by the enemy as British subjects, and sent on board the enemy's ships of war.

This court respectfully beg leave to superadd, that unbias'd by any illiberal feelings towards the enemy, they feel it their duty to state, that the conduct of the enemy after boarding and carrying the Chesapeake, was a most unwarrantable abuse of power after success.

The court is aware, that in carrying a ship by boarding, the full extent of the command of an officer cannot be readily exercised; and that improper violence may unavoidably ensue. When this happens in the moment of contention, a magnanimous conqueror will not complain. But the fact has been clearly established before this court, that the enemy met with little opposition on the upper deck, and none on the gun deck. Yet after they had carried the ship, they fired from the gun deck down the hatchway upon the birth deck and killed and wounded several of the Chesapeake's crew, who had retreated there, were unarmed, and incapable of making any opposition; that some balls were fired even into the cockpit; and what excites the utmost abhorrence, this outrage was committed in the presence of a British officer standing at the hatch-way.

WM. BAINBRIDGE,
President.

THE WEEKLY MONITOR.

SATURDAY EVENING'S LECTURE.

And above all these things, put on Charity, which is the bond of Perfection. Colossians, iii, 14.

CHARITY may be defined that disposition which inclines us to think and speak well of our fellow-creatures, and to deal kindly with them. Mere benevolence or good will, regards the beneficence of our actions, and our disposition to do good. Charity includes this, but respects more immediately the sentiments and affections which we feel towards others. Under the definition now given are comprehended various virtues to which in the ordinary intercourse of life we give different names. Thus it comprehends candour in our judgments, fairness in our actions, humanity and kindness in our whole behaviour. It also implies the absence of several of the blackest vices of human nature, malice, envy, falseness, deceit, cruelty, oppression, slander. Charity in this respect may be compared to a liberal fountain, giving rise to a large river, which in its course divides itself into several branches, and disperses health and plenty over the countries through which it runs. And as this disposition of mind which we are considering may properly be denominated the parent of many distinct virtues, so it may be remarked, that a small variation in the objects towards which it is exercised occasions its being called by different appellations. Thus, our love to mankind is termed benevolence; our love to our country, patriotism; our love to our friends, friendship; our love to our kindred or families, affection. Neither is it surprising that from the same simple original quality should proceed such various and extensive effects. We may observe in the natural world, that from the same seed arise many stalks, each containing many ears of the same kind that was sown. From a small seed ariseth a tree with a trunk, branches, and leaves, between which and the seed deposited in the ground, the most sharp sighted can trace no resemblance, and which produceth in its turn many seeds of the same kind. There is a likeness and analogy between these things and the principles of our minds; or perhaps the qualities of the latter admit still of greater and more surprising variations. The simple original qualities of our mind are probably not very numerous; but they are as it were, seeds sown by the same hand of the Creator, which gradually expand themselves, grow up and assume very various and distinct appearances. The simple quality itself requires some abstraction and attention to observe it like a small seed, scarcely visible to the naked eye, but its effects are obvious to every person.

As charity therefore comprehends so many virtues, and has such extensive influence on the conduct of life, but is impelling to that which is right, and is restraining from that which is wrong, it will be much more useful to consider it with respect to its effects and consequences, than to regard it merely in an abstract light. And to render what I have to say as practical as possible, I shall consider the influence of charity upon the mind and behaviour of a christian with respect to the world; with respect to his country, with respect to those with whom he is connected in the same city, neighbourhood, or society; with respect to those who differ from him in religious principles or opinions; with respect to his enemies; and with respect to the vicious and abandoned.

First—Let us consider the effect of charity with respect to the world. The survey of the narrowness of our present power and sphere of action, of the extent of our capacity of thought and perception, gives us the prospect of a contrast that is very wonderful. Our power of bestowing happiness upon others, or procuring it to ourselves is very limited; but our thro's can range from one region to another, & travel with the lightning of heaven. Before we can move those clogs of mortality which we wear, from one street to another, our imaginations are able to encompass the globe, or to visit the stars. We find that the desires and affections of our nature are not suited to our powers of action, but to our capacity of thought and imagination; and the man who entertained no wishes, inclinations, or propensities, but such as his present power could gratify or accomplish, would be scarce superior to a reptile notwithstanding his form. When we compare our connexions and acquaintances, those with whom we interchange mutual good offices, with the general body of mankind, they are limited within very narrow bounds, and confined to a very small number; but there is a strong law, the law of humanity, which connects us with all who are endowed with the same common nature. No impassable mountains, no innavigable oceans, no inhospitable deserts, are boundaries to intercept the force and authority of this law. Like the sun it extends its heat and influence to the utmost corner of the earth, and proves a connecting principle with all our fellow-creatures.

Suitable to this general and extensive law of humanity, christian charity requires that we wish well unto all, and offer supplications to God upon their account. "I exhort, therefore," say the apostle to Timothy, "that supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks be made for all men." (1. Tim. ii. 1.) By our neighbour, according to our Saviour's religion, is not to be understood, one who lives in the same country, who is governed by the same laws, or subject to the same polity; but every one who is endowed with the same nature. To every such person, whether Christian, Jew, Pagan or Mahometan, we are to abound in love, and to do good whenever we have an opportunity. A good christian, when he thinks of the miseries, blindness, errors, and vices which prevail in the world, will surely out of a pure heart, and a good conscience, pray to the Father of mercy to remove them, and in the fervour of his spirit, and the sincerity of his love, wish that all the kingdoms of the earth may become the kingdoms of our God; and of his son Jesus Christ. These invaluable relics of the piety of the reformers, owing to the difficulty heretofore of procuring them, are in the possession of but few—they are now rendered accessible to all who are desirous of obtaining them. The first part of the Homilies appeared in the reign of Edward the sixth, and is supposed to have been written by Cranmer, assisted by Latimer. The second part, published early in the reign of queen Elizabeth, is attributed chiefly to Bishop Jewell. A copy of these homilies was given to every parish priest in the kingdom, who was commanded to read them diligently and distinctly, that they might be understood by the people. These discourses have ever been considered as containing the most unexceptionable summary of doctrine, and the richest treasures of scriptural knowledge and genuine piety.

WASHINGTON CITY, JULY 14.

We this day lay before the public, documents lately received from England, relative to the killing and wounding of the American citizens imprisoned at Dartmoor.

Plymouth, 26th April, 1815.

We, the undersigned commissioners, appointed on behalf of our respective governments, to inquire into an report upon the unfortunate occurrence of the 6th of April inst. at Dartmoor prison: having carefully perused the proceedings of the several courts of inquiry instituted immediately after that event, by orders of admiral Sir John T. Duckworth and major general Brown, respectively, as well as the depositions taken at the coroner's inquest upon the bodies of the prisoners, who lost their lives upon that melancholy occasion; upon which inquest the jury found a verdict of justifiable homicide; proceeded immediately to the examination upon oath in the presence of one or more of the magistrates of the vicinity, of all the witnesses, both American and English, who offered themselves for that purpose; or who could be discovered as likely to afford any material information on the subject, as well as those who had been previously examined before the coroner, as otherwise, to the number in the whole of about 80.—We further proceeded to a minute examination of the prisons, for the purpose of clearing up some points, which, upon the evidence alone were scarcely intelligible; obtaining from the prisoners, and from the officers of the depot, all the necessary assistance and explanation, and promising, that we have been from necessity compelled to draw many of our conclusions from statements and evidence highly contradictory, we do now make upon the whole proceedings the following report:

During the period which has elapsed since the arrival in this country of the account of the ratification of the treaty of Ghent, an increased degree of restlessness and impatience of confinement appears to have prevailed amongst the American prisoners at Dartmoor, which, though not exhibited in the shape of any violent excesses, had been principally indicated by threats of breaking out, if not soon released.

On the 4th of this month in particular, only two days previous to the events which are the subject of this inquiry, a large body of the prisoners rushed into market square, from whence, by the regulations of the prison, they are excluded, demanding bread, instead of biscuit, which had on that day been issued by the officers of the depot; their demands however having been then almost immediately complied with, they returned to their own yards, and the employment of force on that occasion became unnecessary.

On the evening of the 6th, about 6 o'clock, it was clearly proven to us, that a breach or hole had been made in one of the prison walls, sufficient for a full sized man to pass, and that others had been commenced in the course of the day near the same spot, though never completed.

That a number of the prisoners were over the railing erected to prevent them from communicating with the sentinels on the walls, which was of course forbidden by the regulations of the prison, and that in the space between the railing and those walls they were tearing up pieces of turf, and wantonly pelting each other in a noisy and disorderly manner.

That a much more considerable number of the prisoners was collected together at that time, in one of their yards near the place where the breach was effected, and that although such collection of prisoners was not unusual at other times (the Gambling Tables being commonly kept in that part of the yard) yet, when connected with the circumstance of the breach, and at the time of the day, which was after the hour the signal for the prisoners to retire to their respective prisons had ceased to sound, it be-

WASHINGTON CITY, JULY 14.

We this day lay before the public, documents lately received from England, relative to the killing and wounding of the American citizens imprisoned at Dartmoor.

Plymouth, 26th April, 1815.

We, the undersigned commissioners, appointed on behalf of our respective governments, to inquire into and report upon the unfortunate occurrence of the 6th of April inst. at Dartmoor prison: having carefully perused the proceedings of the several courts of inquiry instituted immediately after that event, by orders of admiral Sir John T. Duckworth and major general Brown, respectively, as well as the depositions taken at the coroner's inquest upon the bodies of the prisoners, who lost their lives upon that melancholy occasion; upon which inquest the jury found a verdict of justifiable homicide; proceeded immediately to the examination upon oath in the presence of one or more of the magistrates of the vicinity, of all the witnesses, both American and English, who offered themselves for that purpose; or who could be discovered as likely to afford any material information on the subject, as well as those who had been previously examined before the coroner, as otherwise, to the number in the whole of about 80.—We further proceeded to a minute examination of the prisons, for the purpose of clearing up some points, which, upon the evidence alone were scarcely intelligible; obtaining from the prisoners, and from the officers of the depot, all the necessary assistance and explanation, and premising, that we have been from necessity compelled to draw many of our conclusions from statements and evidence highly contradictory, We do now make upon the whole proceedings the following report: During the period which has elapsed since the arrival in this country of the account of the ratification of the treaty of Ghent, an increased degree of restlessness and impatience of confinement appears to have prevailed amongst the American prisoners at Dartmoor, which, though not exhibited in the shape of any violent excesses, had been principally indicated by threats of breaking out, if not soon released.

On the 4th of this month in particular, only two days previous to the events which are the subject of this inquiry, a large body of the prisoners rushed into market square, from whence, by the regulations of the prison, they are excluded, demanding bread, instead of biscuit, which had on that day been issued by the officers of the depot; their demands however having been then almost immediately complied with, they returned to their own yards, and the employment of force on that occasion became unnecessary.

On the evening of the 6th, about 6 o'clock, it was clearly proven to us, that a breach or hole had been made in one of the prison walls, sufficient for a full sized man to pass, and that others had been commenced in the course of the day near the same spot, though never completed.

That a number of the prisoners were over the railing erected to prevent them from communicating with the sentinels on the walls, which was of course forbidden by the regulations of the prison, and that in the space between the railing and those walls they were tearing up pieces of turf, and wantonly pelting each other in a noisy and disorderly manner.

That a much more considerable number of the prisoners was collected together at that time, in one of their yards near the place where the breach was effected, and that although such collection of prisoners was not unusual at other times (the Gambling Tables being commonly kept in that part of the yard) yet, when connected with the circumstance of the breach, and at the time of the day, which was after the hour the signal for the prisoners to retire to their respective prisons had ceased to sound, it be-

(Here follows a list of the prisoners killed and wounded, with a description of their wounds.)

London, 30th April 1815.

In my letter of the 10th inst. I informed you of the measures which had been adopted here in consequence of the late unfortunate event at Dartmoor prison.

I have now the honour to transmit the copy of a letter addressed to me by Mr. Clay and Mr. Gallatin, relative to that occurrence, and to the transportation of the American prisoners in this country to the U. States.

In the absence of Mr. Adams it becomes my duty to communicate for the information of our government, the result of the investigation at Dartmoor. I enclose a copy of the joint report of the commissioners appointed for that purpose, also of a letter from Mr. King to Mr. Adams, and of a list of the killed and wounded on that melancholy occasion.

I shall leave to Mr. Adams any further steps which he may deem it proper to take in this business. I cannot, however, forbear to notice the erroneous impression of the prisoners, that their detention so long has been owing to me. You are aware, sir, of my constant exertions during the war to effect their liberation. Immediately on the signing of the treaty of peace, at Ghent, I renewed my instances on that subject; proposing a condition, that all the prisoners who might be delivered over to me by the British government, should be considered as prisoners of war, and not at liberty to serve until regularly exchanged, in the event of the treaty not being ratified by the president. This proposition was declined in a peremptory manner.

On the receipt of the intelligence of the ratification from America, I lost not a moment in requesting the release of the prisoners, according to the terms of the treaty, and the number of vessels which I had hired, as mentioned in my letter of the 13th, and which are now on their voyage to the U. S. will show that the necessary steps were taken to provide for their immediate transportation to their country. The prisoners, also, were informed of these measures, and of the exertions which had been made from the commencement to return them to their homes with the least possible delay. Therefore, whatever may have been their uneasiness under confinement, and whatever hostile feelings they may have had towards me, as noticed in the report, and in Mr. King's letter, I must say with confidence, that I could not prevent the one nor have I deserved the other.

I have the honour to be, sir, your most obedient humble servant,
R. G. BEASLEY.
The hon. John Mason, &c. &c.

15 Dollars Reward.

Broke gaol on Sunday night the 3d July inst. a yellow man by the name Harry, who was committed for breaking the meat-house of Joseph Howard. Harry is about 23 years of age, 5 feet 4 or 5 inches high, well made, a pleasing countenance, & much of a scoundrel, his clothing not recollected; he is the slave of Richard Cotton on the head of South River, and is well known in that neighbourhood; his mother lives with William Cotton, and I am told he is harboured by her; he broke gaol with his sons on, and took with him a new rowl. The above reward will be paid to any person who will apprehend the said villain and deliver him to the gaoler of A. A. county.

Money is said to be the root of all evil—but, until lately, we must confess that we have been at a loss to know how this position could be established by any principles of reason. As money is now applied for political purposes, for corrupting the morals, and influencing the opinions, of those whose education has been from necessity extremely limited, there is no small degree of evil arising from it. We know that there are men whose understandings are so unimproved, whose intellects are so weak, that money will make a deeper impression upon them than any arguments which can be framed, and these are the men for whom the democrats provide such extravagant sums. In their electioneering campaigns more proselytes to their cause have been made by the efficacy of a few dollars, than by all the arguments which their feebleness could frame, or eloquence enforce. This, then, politically considered, is a sore evil, for it sometimes puts into office men neither qualified by education, nor moral principle, for the situations to which they have been elected. As bribery raises them into public notice, so sometimes does corruption govern all their public acts. The commonwealth may be ruined, and the people rendered miserable, by characters who have been elected by the sovereign influence of money, to preside over public concerns. The author of the sentiment we have quoted was doubtless acquainted with the vices which prevailed in the Roman empire during the last stages of its existence, and they could, as every body knows who has read its history, be traced in a greater or less degree to money. This engine, in all ages of the world, and among almost all nations, has been one of the most powerful that could be applied to influence the human mind, and govern human actions. Hence, as demagogues who have had nothing else to recommend them to public notice, have felt a desire of promotion in the state, they have made ample use of this cogent logic. From this application of money, there results unquestionably an evil to the world, for many who possess it in abundance, depend far more upon it for accomplishing their ambitious purposes than upon genius or moral integrity. When once they have effected their objects in this way, all idea of responsibility is lost, for they flatter themselves that the same means of success at one time will prevail at another. Thus then we see, when considered in this light, that money is a source of great mischief, and as we have known it at times to be applied, it has produced great injury to the state.

FIRE AT PETERSBURG.

RICHMOND, (Va.) July 18.
Endless and melancholy vicissitudes of sublunary scenes! Scarcely two weeks have elapsed, since Petersburg presented to the delighted eye a brilliant display of patriotic festivity. In every heart were feelings of joy—on every tongue notes of exultation. Sad reverse! A deep gloom has succeeded. Many, too many citizens of that ill-fated place have just seen their houses, their property, their all, an indiscriminate prey to the irresistible fury of the flames. The annexed letter, received yesterday forenoon in Richmond, gives only the outlines of the melancholy event:

"Petersburg, 4 o'clock,

Monday morning.

"Since 8 o'clock our town has been in flames. The fire broke out in John Walker's stables. All Bollingbroke street and Old street up to Reed's house are in ashes. The brick store is the only house standing from Bollingbroke warehouse to Reed's in Old-street."

It is verbally stated that about 400 houses have been devoured by the merciless element—and, which is more afflicting! that 28 or 30 persons have, whilst endeavouring to save property from a house in which the flames were already raging, been destroyed by the explosion of a large quantity of powder stored in that house. We fear this report will prove but too true, as it is ascribed to persons directly from Petersburg. A few hours will put us in possession of all the details of the direful calamity—a calamity which excites here a sympathy the more profound, as we have ourselves so often and so cruelly experienced similar visitations! The mass of distress attendant on such an event is beyond calculation; it is not only actual loss that must be computed. Vast columns of undulating flames, which ascended from the burning houses were seen on Sunday night from Richmond and its vicinity: we are even told that large masses of ignited matter were seen flying through the air, like meteors, to an amazing distance; if so, it was probably owing to the explosion.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser of July 21.

Yesterday arrived at this port the cartel ship Zephyr, with prisoners from Dartmoor, having left Plymouth June 5, the day that the Shakespeare sailed. An intelligent passenger who was unable to procure papers up to the day of his sailing, informs that the last intelligence from the continent strengthened the expectation of the speedy commencement of hostilities. We have yet no London dates subsequent to June 1.

The exchange of couriers between France and Austria, which was continued to the last date from the continent, was undoubtedly for some minor purpose, as it cannot be supposed that any negotiation is now carrying on, upon the question of war and peace.

From the Boston Palladium, July 21.

FROM SWEDEN.
We learn by an arrival yesterday from Gottenburgh, that the Swedes appeared determined to assist in de-throning Buonaparte again. All appeared tranquil in Sweden as to domestic affairs.

We regret to learn by a passenger in the last cartel from England, that the Hon. Mr. Bayard was unwell, and on board the Neptune, which ship is on her return to the United States. Mr. B. was appointed Ambassador to Russia, and the appointment gave universal satisfaction.

From the Boston Centinel of July 19.

Last evening arrived the brig Shakespeare, of London, a cartel with about 150 released American prisoners, in 41 days from Plymouth England. She was originally bound to the southward, but the prisoners being principally northern men her course was altered.

Plymouth papers to the 3d of June have been brought in her, they contain some interesting intelligence.

Hostilities had not commenced; but mighty preparations continued with augmented activity; and a general vindictive war against France was inevitable.

The U. S. ship Neptune, captain Jones, was at Plymouth, getting ready for sea, with Messrs. Gallatin and Crawford, passengers.

Plymouth, June 3.

London papers to the 1st say, that Buonaparte remained in Paris.

Nothing was said of his departure for the army; and the ceremony of the Champ de Mai, had been further postponed. Two frigates were prepared in France, with secret orders, ready to take of Buonaparte and his family in case of extremity.

Insurrections continue in the western and interior French departments.

The mails between England and France continued four times a week.

All Buonaparte's anxiety appears to be to fortify Paris; and some of the batteries were calculated to batter down as well as to defend the city.

Adm. Hotham has sailed with a squadron to take possession of Martinique and Guadeloupe.

Troops are continually embarking and sailing for the Netherlands.

The British Parliament had rejected the petition from Westminster, for peace, on account of its indecorous language.

TAVERN.

RESID D BALDWIN.
Respectfully informs the public, that he has opened a Tavern and Boarding-House, at that well known stand occupied for many years by Captain James Thomas. Its vicinity to the Stadt-House will at all times render it the most convenient resort to strangers having business to transact in any of the public offices. Those who may be inclined to patronize the establishment, are assured that the best accommodations are provided, and that the most unremitting attention shall be paid to his guests. This establishment having been always the resort of gentlemen from the Eastern Shore, it is hoped that they will continue to frequent it; and so far as attention, good fare, and moderate rates, can support the character of an establishment so well known, he pledges himself they shall not be wanting. # POETS CORNER

From the Norwich Courier.

ORIGINAL.

(We have been favoured with the following poetical piece, the production of a Lieutenant of the Navy, who is now no more.

ON THE DEATH OF A POOR GIRL.
O SWEETLY she smil'd—the parting gleam, That linger'd on her closing eye Broke through the world's unlovely dream, And spoke a sainted mortal nigh!!

She wish'd to die—for at her bed,
No parent pour'd the burning tear,
And not a friend had she, to shed A tribute o'er her lowly bier.

And early was she doom'd in youth, Disease and penury to brave;
But mild Religion's sacred Truth, Smooth'd her rough passage to the grave!!

Ye great! who never felt on high,
The sorrows that afflict mankind!
Could ye thus leave without a sigh,
The world and all its pomp behind?

Oh! how I wish it were my doom, Like her immortal thus to die:
To slumber in oblivion's tomb Unknown, unsought, by any eye—

Sage, that Creative Eye whose pow'r, Guided by truth's unerring ray, Gives the frail mortal of an hour,
To taste the joys of endless day.

THE WEEKLY MONITOR.

The following extract from the conclusion of a discourse on Habit, delivered by the late Mr. Buckminster, of Boston, is calculated to dissuade mankind from the dangerous practice of delaying to make that preparation of heart which is necessary to fit them for a permanent and blessed existence, until disease and affliction convince them that they are at the verge of death. It is a subject which was worthy the attention of so eloquent a divine, and which cannot be too often touched upon; for, as a beautiful moral author observes, there are some who "forget that to perform this great business well, requires all the strength of their youth, and all the vigour of their unimpaired capacities. To confirm this assertion, they may observe how much the slightest indisposition even in the most active season of life, disorders every faculty, and disqualifies them from attending to the most ordinary affairs; and then let them reflect how little able they will be to transact the most important of all business, in the moment of excruciating pain, or in the day of universal debility."

DEATH-BED REPENTANCE.

"It is impossible to dismiss this subject without considering a common topic, the inefficacy of a death-bed repentance. It is to be feared that charity, which hopeth and believeth all things, hath sometimes discovered more of credulity than of well founded hope, when it hath laid great stress and built much consolation on the casual expressions and faint sighs of dying men. Far be it from us to excite suspicion, or recal anxiety in the breast of surviving friendship, or to throw a new shade of terror over the valley of death. But better, far better, were it for a thousand breasts to be pierced with temporary anguish, and a new horror to be added to the dreary passage of the grave, than that one soul be lost to heaven, by the delusive expectation of effectual repentance in a dying hour. For, as we have repeatedly asked, what is effectual repentance? Can it be supposed that, where the vigor of life has been spent in the establishment of vicious propensities, where all the vivacity of youth, all the soberness of manhood, and all the leisure of old age, have been given to the service of sin, where vice has been growing with the growth and strengthening with the strength, when it has spread out with the limbs of the stripling, and become rigid with the fibres of the aged; can it, I say, be supposed that the labors of such a life are to be overthrown by one last exertion of a mind impaired with disease, by the convulsive exercise of an affrighted spirit, and by the inarticulate and feeble sounds of an expiring breath? Repentance consists not in one or more acts of contrition—it is a permanent change of the disposition. Those dispositions and habits of the mind, which you bring to your dying bed, you will carry with you to another world. They are the grave clothes in which it must come forth, at the last day to meet the sentence of an impartial judge. If they were filthy, they will be filthy still. The washing of baptismal water will not, at that hour, cleanse the spots of the soul. The confession of sins which have never been removed, will not furnish the conscience with an answer towards God. The reception of the elements will not then infuse a principle of spiritual life, any more than unconsecrated bread and wine will infuse health into the limbs, on which the cold damps of death have already collected. Say not, that you have discarded such superstitious expectations. You have not discarded them, while you refer any thing to that hour, while you venture to rely on any thing but the mercy of God towards a heart holy, sincere and sanctified—a heart which loves heaven for its purity, and God for his goodness. If, in this solemn hour, the soul of an habitual and inveterate offender be prepared for the residence of pure and spotless spirits, it can be only by a sovereign and miraculous interposition of omnipotence. His power we pretend not to limit. He can wash the sooty Ethiopian white, and cause the spots on the Leopard's skin to disappear. We presume not to fathom the counsels of his will; but this we will venture to assert, that if at the last hour of God ever interposes to snatch him from his ruin, such interposition will never be disclosed to the curiosity of man. For if it should once be believed that the rewards of heaven can be obtained by such an instantaneous and miraculous change at the last hour of life, all our ideas of moral probation, and of the connexion between character here and condition hereafter, are loose, unstable and groundless, are false, and the laws of God's moral government are made at once inexplicable, our exhortations are useless, our experience false, and the whole apparatus of Gospel means and motives becomes a cumbrous and unnecessary provision.

What then is the great conclusion on which we should deduce from all that we have said of the nature of habit, and the difficulties of repentance? It is this. Behold, now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation; if you are old, you may begin too late. Age, says the proverb, strips us of every thing, even of resolution. Tomorrow we shall be older, to-morrow, indeed, death may fix his seal for ever on our characters—It is a seal which can never be broken, till the voice of the Son of Man shall burst the tombs which enclose us. If then we leave this place sensible of a propensity which ought to be restrained, of a lust which ought to be exterminated, of a habit which ought to be broken, and rashly defer the hour of amendment, consider, I beseech you, it may perhaps be merciful in God to refuse another opportunity. It may be a gracious method of preventing an abuse, which will only aggravate the retribution which awaits the impenitent.—Make haste, then, and delay not to keep the commandments of God; of that God who has no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from their way and live.
