The CES Concert Series at FSU will present Grammy-nominated rock band Daughtry on Saturday, Oct. 10, at 8 p.m. in FSU's Cordts PE Center Main Arena.

Daughtry has scored four No. 1 hits, garnered four Grammy nominations, won four American Music Awards, sold more than 8 million albums and 18 million singles worldwide and sold out concerts around the world. Daughtry's self-titled debut was the fastest selling rock debut in Soundscan history, and its follow-up, "Leave This Town," marked the band's second consecutive No. 1 album. Also, Daughtry's third album, "Break the Spell," was certified gold within four weeks of its release. Daughtry's singles "Waiting for Superman" and "Battleships" from their most recent album "Baptized" broke into the top 15.

Daughtry was formed in 2006 after singer-songwriter Chris Daughtry's success as a finalist on the fifth season of "American Idol." The band's powerful mix of modern rock, hard rock, alternative and post-grunge has earned them millions of loyal fans around the world.

Opening for Daughtry is Washington D.C.-based rock quartet, Honor By August, whose infectious blend of atmospheric and anthemic choruses has drawn favorable comparisons to U2, Kings of Leon, Snow Patrol and Bruce Springsteen. The Washington Post has called the band "one of the most promising new talents on the East Coast."

MSO, Featuring Spanish Violinist Francisco Fullana, to Perform Masterpieces of Tchaikovsky and Sibelius

CES at FSU will present the always-popular Maryland Symphony Orchestra when it returns to the FSU Performing Arts Center Pealer Recital Hall for a Masterworks concert on Friday, Oct. 9, at 7:30 p.m.

Under the leadership of Musical Director Elizabeth Schulze, this year's performance will feature two classic masterpieces. Tchaikovsky's "Violin Concerto in D Major, Opus 35" is considered one of the most demanding works for the violin virtuoso. Jean Sibelius' "Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Opus 43," featuring surging melodies and glowing orchestration, is often regarded as the Finnish composer's most popular symphony.

Joining MSO is award-winning Spanish violinist Francisco Fullana, an emerging superstar who has performed in many of the great concert halls throughout Europe and the United States. A graduate of Juilliard, Fullana has amassed multiple international awards for his exuberant musicianship. His recent accolades include first prizes at the prestigious 2014 Brahms International Violin Competition in Austria and the 2015 Menetsugu International Violin Competition in Japan.

Preceding the performance, through the CES Inspiring Audiences program, Schulze will meet with ticket holders for a Prélude session during which she will share details about the evening’s musical selections. Prélude begins at 6:30 p.m. in the Pealer Recital Hall.

Next the ensemble will perform “Concertino” by noted German composer Carl Maria von Weber, which will feature Dr. Mark Gallagher, FSU professor of clarinet. “A Moorside Suite,” which is a sophisticated three-movement piece by English composer Gustav Holst, will follow. Theatre

FSU Theatre and Dance Presents Agatha Christie’s ‘The Mousetrap’

In FSU’s production of “The Mousetrap,” Sergeant Trotter, played by Kenneth Waters, questions the weekend’s hosts, Giles and Mollie Ralston, played by Matthew Clark and Maureen Groff.

FSU’s Department of Theatre and Dance is giving everyone a chance to test their detective skills with “The Mousetrap” by Agatha Christie. Performances will take place on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16 and 17, and Thursday through Saturday, Oct. 22 to 24, at 7:30 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee on Saturday, Oct. 17. News of a nearby murder casts a dark shadow over the weekend, and a snowstorm ends any plans to escape. As the snow grows deeper, so does the mystery. Secrets from the past cause a flurry. Another murder takes place. Everyone is a suspect, and in this deadly game of cat and mouse, only one person knows the rules.

Celebrated as the world’s longest running play, “The Mousetrap” delivers terrifying suspense and good humor.

Readings

FSU to Host Banned Books Reading ‘Celebrating the Freedom to Read’

Commemorating the books and their authors who have pushed boundaries for freedom of speech and press, FSU will offer an evening dedicated to reading books deemed too controversial and therefore banned or challenged. The English Honors Society Sigma Tau Delta, the Department of English and the Lewis J. Ort Library at FSU will host the event Tuesday, Oct. 6, at 7 p.m. on the third floor of the Ort Library.

The reading is held in conjunction with the American Library Association’s Annual Banned Book Week: “Celebrating the Freedom to Read.”

All attendees are encouraged to read a selection if interested. Examples of some challenged books include “The Absolutely True Diary of a Part-Time Indian” by Sherman Alexie, “The Kite Runner” by Khaled Hosseini and “The Perks of Being a Wallflower” by Stephen Chbosky.

For info, or if interested in reading at the event, contact Dr. Mary Anne Lutz of FSU’s Department of English at mlutz@frostburg.edu or Dr. Lea Messman-Mandicott of the Ort Library at lmessman@frostburg.edu.

Presentations

Fall Philosophical Forum to Focus on Police Legitimacy

In a discussion of the struggle for renewed police legitimacy, FSU’s Fall Philosophical Forum will welcome Dr. Jim Nolan, professor of sociology at West Virginia University and a former police officer, who will present “The Thinning of the Thin Blue Line: The Struggle for Renewed Legitimacy in American Policing.” The event, on Tuesday, Oct. 13, at 7 p.m. in the Atkinson Room (232) of the Lane University Center, is free and open to the public.

The forum is sponsored by the African-American Studies Program, the Department of Sociology and the FSU Honors Program.

Following decades of declining crime rates, there is a growing dissatisfaction with the status quo in American policing. The deaths of unarmed African-American men at the hands of the police in Ferguson, Mo., New York City, Baltimore and North Charleston, S.C., among others, have raised serious concerns about the use and misuse of force by the police. The public discourse on the issue of police legitimacy is polarizing, which some suspect has put the police in danger of retaliatory violence.

Nolan was a police officer in Wilmington, Del., for 13 years and was a unit chief in the FBI’s Crime Analysis, Research and Development Unit. His research focuses on urban policing, intergroup relations and the measurement of crime. He is the co-author of “The Violence of Hate: Confronting Racism, Anti-Semitism and Other Forms of Bigotry.”

For info, contact Dr. Michael Mathias at mbmathias@frostburg.edu or 301-687-3094.

To withdraw from a class or not to withdraw ... is a “W” right for you? Find out by speaking with staff from CAAR, Financial Aid and the Academic Success Network.

David Stern, an instructor in the Department of Communication, will give a talk on “Speaking and Presenting With Confidence” on Wednesday, Oct. 7, from 3 to 4 p.m. in Lane 113. This program will provide students with straightforward techniques and a basic structure that can be applied to class presentations and public speaking in general. Students will also learn about adapting to diverse audiences, finding and evaluating credible evidence, and dealing with stage fright and anxiety.

Points of Pride

FSU to Mentor Other Schools in Building Student Leaders

FSU students and local government officials confer in March at one of the Town Hall Meetings created as part of the Lead Initiative, which encourages students to become more engaged in the democratic process. FSU will now be mentoring other schools across the country in this initiative.

Last semester, FSU created a series of Town Hall Meetings for students and elected officials that focused on government at the local, state and federal levels. Thanks to conversations students began there, the city of Frostburg and the FSU Student Government Association have partnered to create a recycling program for off-campus student residents next semester.

The meetings began as a result of FSU’s participation in the National Initiative on Civic Learning and Democratic Engagement (Lead Initiative), a program run by NASPA, Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education, and FSU has been so successful that other schools are now looking to it for advice.

The Lead Initiative partners U.S. colleges and universities to share best practices in higher education on how to educate students into informed, engaged citizens of a democratic society. For the past two years, Patrick O’Brien, director of the Office of Civic Engagement, has been learning from colleagues at other institutions about what has worked on their campuses.

This year, FSU has been named a Lead Consulting Institution, which means O’Brien and other FSU staff will act as mentors for others in the Lead Initiative, sharing lessons learned at Frostburg with prestigious colleges and universities around the country.

The FSU Office of Civic Engagement leads the way in that commitment, fostering active citizenship through four pillars of civic engagement: Democratic Engagement, National Service, Service Learning and Volunteerism. It administers student and community service through programs such as AmeriCorps, ECHOSTARS and Read to Succeed and days of service such as Beautify the 'Burg. It also engages students in the democratic process. Using TurboVote, a web tool recommended by another institution in the Lead Initiative, students at FSU registered 235 new voters last year, and they are starting the process again this year.

This year, other institutions will benefit from some of FSU's best practices, such as ECHOSTARS, which stands for Empowering Communities – Helping Others – Service Through Action, Resources and Sustainability, the AmeriCorps program for first-year FSU students.

FSU's students will also continue to benefit from the Lead Initiative. In the next series of Town Hall meetings, O'Brien wants to foster a conversation about the presidential candidates and their positions on important issues in the 2016 elections, ensuring that students have the information they will need to cast informed ballots on Election Day.

For info about FSU's civic learning and democratic engagement programs, visit www.frostburg.edu/sci/civic-engagement-home or contact O'Brien at 301-687-4210 or pobrien@frostburg.edu.

FSU Engineering Student Preps for Future With Industry Experience

Jocelyn Williams is challenging the limits of what it means to be a busy student.

The FSU student and Frostburg native is a double-major in mathematics and FSU's collaborative mechanical engineering program with University of Maryland, College Park. She marked herself as a rising star in 2014 when she took on an internship with a major defense technology contractor, an added benefit of a prestigious scholarship she earned from the II-VI Foundation.

She received both the scholarship and the internship for a second time this year, winning the maximum award amount of $9,000 in a season the II-VI Foundation called "the most competitive yet in the history of the program."

The II-VI Foundation connects engineering, science and mathematics students with research opportunities and scholarships that uniquely require a nine-week internship in an industrial setting.

Williams credits the scholarship with motivating her toward taking on an internship. The internship itself, which put her to work with an antenna mechanical engineering group, helped her discover a new interest and revealed aspects of the field of engineering that most students are not as aware of.

Her internship focused on designing test fixtures for a variety of antennas, including some that could operate in outer space. She created mass simulators to test how antennas would interact with each other, as well as more in-depth materials with electronic components.

Her experience working in the industry as an intern could eventually lead her to a career with the company.

Williams also works at Chick-fil-A in LaVale and was recently promoted.

For info about FSU's President's Leadership Circle, call 301-687-7013 or visit www.frostburg.edu/clife/leadership/presidents-leadership-circle-plc. For info about the II-VI Foundation, visit www.ii-vifoundation.com.

FSU Alum Kelly Pearce Winner of Wildlife Society Award

Kelly Pearce M'12, a Ph.D. student in marine estuarine and environmental science at the University of Maryland, College Park, and an instructor in the Department of Biology and Natural Resources at FSU, was recently honored with the Student Achievement Award of the Maryland/Delaware Chapter of The Wildlife Society.

In his nomination letter, Dr. Thomas Serfass, chair of FSU's Department of Biology and Natural Resources, praised Pearce's dedication to using environmental education to achieve positive outcomes for wildlife conservation. Her master's research focused on assessing factors influencing river otter visitation rates to fish-rearing facilities in Pennsylvania, a topic for which she was awarded the Best Graduate Student Poster Award at the fall 2012 meeting of TWS' Maryland/Delaware Chapter. For her Ph.D. research, Pearce is studying river otters in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem as part of a human dimensions and ecological study designed to determine if the species will be useful for promoting aquatic conservation.

Pearce has given 10 scientific presentations at various conferences, including TWS' Maryland/Delaware Chapter and national meetings, the Northeast Fish and Wildlife Conference and Human Dimensions of Wildlife. She is the co-author on a peer-reviewed, recently accepted book chapter, "Status of the North American river otter (Lontra canadensis) in the United States and Canada: Management Practices and Public Perceptions of the Species" and has several other manuscripts in review. Pearce also conducts research on spotted skunks in Western Maryland through a grant awarded by the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, which she co-authored.
