Good Work By The Civic Club

Club I't Wednesday afternoon at the | shiell, Jennie White and Juanita Reese. Washington Hotel, at which the members talked over the evident success of 'Clean-up Day" as reported by the committee in charge of this work. Many loads of rubbish were hauled away, showing plainly the interest of the householders. The Boy Scouts were pressed into service and willingly gave several hours of work. As a mark of appreciation the club entertained them at a social held at Mrs. G. W. Maslin's the following Saturday afternoon.

At the meeting on last Wednesday the treasurer was instructed to give the sum of $250.00 to the town commissioners to be used for watering the streets, the commissioners having definitely promised to have this work begun the first of June. Additional galvanized wire baskets were also ordered to be placed on the street corners. These are to receive waste papers, but not garbage. The members of the Civic Club extend their thanks to all who have assisted them in their work. Special mention is made of the improvement in and around the Court House square, and it is hoped that they may be able to interest others.

The cooperation and interest of every one is needed to make our town cleaner, Mackall he has a fine, clean, capable ignored. It was charged that the "fire" more attractive and sanitary. Rummage Sale On June 5th

Plans for the rummage sale to be held on Mr. J. T. Taylor's lawn on Saturday, June 5th, for the benefit of the Volunteer Fire Department, are about completed and it is to be hoped that there will be a hearty response from the people of this town. If you expect protection for your homes you should do everything possible to help raise the money for the purchase of an engine for the local fire company.

The committee in charge requests that you have your rummage ready by Thursday, June 3rd, when wagons will call for it between that date and Saturday, June 5th.

No position in the gift of the Governor has been so vigorously disputed as the one held by Mr. Zouck. Some were sure he ought to give way to a new man. Others were just as positive that the Governor would, in displacing him, make a serious mistake. In both elements were the Governor's closest political and personal friends. The arguments of neither element are believed to have influenced him anything like as much as the idea that he, personally, could not work with Mr. Zouck.

G. O. P. Leaves Liquor Issue To Candidates-Plank Not Approved

The Republican State Convention, which met last Tuesday afternoon in Ford's Opera House, Baltimore, was and approved by the Board of Educaunable to reach a decision as to the referred the voters to the announcement made, or to the party's candidates for Senator and Representative. A plank modeled after that adopted by the Democrats and sponsored by Congressman Mudd was rejected.

D. Lindsay Sloan, of Cumberland, chairman of the rosolutions committee, in reporting the platform, made a speech in which he said that while he had longstanding views on the liquor question, he did not care "whether candidates were wet, dry or damp, but cared only whether they were Republicans."-Other issues, he said, were paramount I at this time in the nation's affairs.

Except the reference of the voters to the candidates' stand, the platform consisted of reaffirmation of the principles of the Republican party; statement S that a more detailed announcement of planks was deferred, in view of the approach of the national convention, Tr which will adopt a platform for the E party throughout the country; and indorsement of the candidates for Senator and Representatives, with a pledge that Tr if elected they will stand for constitu- Tr tional Government and economy.

The convention also ratified the choice of Gen. Leonard Wood as the Presidential preference of Maryland Republi- El cans, according to the recent primary. General Wood was given 116 votes as against 13 for Senator Hiram Johnson. Only two counties were carried by the Su latter-Allegany and Washington. The Te unopposed nomination of O. E. State Superintendent Not Named

The State School Board, at its annual Pa meeting last Wednesday, elected Dr. Henry M. Fitzhugh, of Westminster, Int president and Dr. John M. T. Finney, of Baltimore, vice-president. Action on the election of Dr. M. Bates Stephens was postponed. The fact that Dr. Stephens was not re-elected Wednesday, the last meeting day before the end of his term, was taken to indicate that the board was not ready to return

Officials and others specially interested in the county schools were given a hearing by the Board Wednesday in the parlors of the Rennert Hotel, Baltimore. Flattering tributes were paid to Dr. Stephens' work as State Superintendent of Education in Maryland. Dr. Stephens' reappointment is, of course, the big question at issue. Very recently the Russell Sage Foundation Oyster Licenses..... issued a very unfavorable report on Maryland's schools. MARYLAND DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM IS

By the enactment of the Federal Reserve law, an inadequate financial system was abolished and replaced by a system that has proved invaluable during peace and indispensable during war. It prevented panics, notwithliquor question, and in a brief platform presented to the Board of County Com- standing our country passed through its greatest financial crisis, and enabled us not only to finance ourselves but our allies as well. The Republican party bitterly fought this great reform act and yet they now ask that its administration be placed under their control. Rural credits have been established and productiveness of the country enlarged by the enactment of the Farm Loan law. A tariff law was enacted so just in its provisions that it has met with more general approval than any other in the history of such legislation; and the law providing for a tariff commission has put tariff legislation on a business basis, promising in a large measure to remove it from the field of party politics. The accomplishments of the Democratic Administration have extended to more than threescore of constructive legislative enactments and administrative reforms, affording long delayed relief to the farmer, the merchant and manufacturer, the laborer; in fact, to all the people.

Other Accomplishments Listed. Among these are:

Laws to restrain gambling and manipulation of marketing grain and cotton.

The Agricultural Extension act, which has proved of inestimable value to the agriculturalist.

The Good Roads act, under which, with appropriate aid from the States, adequate systems of highways are being developed and constructed throughout the country.

The establishment of the Federal Trade Commission, to prevent unfair trade practices.

The Webb Export act, extending the facilities for the promotion of our foreign commerce. A revision of the anti-trust laws, making them more effectual as a preventive of monopolies. The act bringing into existence ar

American merchant marine, which will insure us an enlarged foreign trade. The Workmen's Compensation act.

The Eight-Hour law. The Child-Labor law.

Provision for the election of Senators by the people. And the War Risk Insurance ac

We, the Democratic party of Maryland, in State convention assembled, dent Wilson. The seven years past under Woodrow Wilson's lead, in wealth of achievement for a better America, a better world, and in the spirit of honor, peace and enlightenment of the universe, far exceed any period in human history. President Wilson, has established a new international creed, a new morality; has destroyed the old, the cruel methods of diplomacy, and likewise of conquest by arms of the weak and the defenseless nations. He has brought the national greed and selfishness, centuries old, of the European nations, but not without a struggle, to yield to his teachings that the new way to cure an age-old trouble concession. Credit For Victory Given. All people of the United States of all parties and creeds, almost without exception, did their full duty in the World War, and all are entitled to share in the glory of the success of that unprecedented enterprise. Nevertheless, while in no way reflecting upon the patriotism, and worth of others, the responsibility for the conwar, was primarily the President's and the Democratic party's. Under his guidance we, a peaceful nation, in a few months became the first naval power in the world, and with incredible swiftness trained and transported an army overseas that turned the fortunes of war and carried our flag to the Rhine.

The record of achievements during his management of the affairs of government is unsurpassed in the history

Indorses League Of Nations.

This convention indorses the efforts of the President to perfect the League of Nations. We demand the immediate ratification of the treaty of peace without nullifying reservations. We deplore the fact that for partisan reasons twice the length of time occupied in negotiating the treaty has been wasted by a Republican Senate, with the result that it has been unable either to ratify or reject or amend the treaty, so that the same could be returned to the President for further action. We recommend the action of Senator Smith in his support of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations in the Senate. We indorse the official service of Senator Smith and of Congressmen Linthicum, Coady and Benson, and earnestly commend them to the electorate of the State for re-election. We believe that our other Congressional nominees, T. Alan Goldsborough. Thomas S. Klinger and Frank W. Mish, will render faithful and notable service in Congress, and we urge the citizens of their respective districts to send them to Congress, to replace Congressmen Andrews, Mudd and Zihlman, who belong to a party now in full control of both the House of Representatives and the Senate, and can point to no act passed of benefit to the people at large, and that has made no effort to reduce taxation, to reduce the cost of living, to reconcile the differences between capital and labor, and which has utterly failed to recognize and deal efficiently with any of the domestic or foreign problems that confront the United States.

Volstead Act Resolution.

The Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, having been declared ratified, we believe that while this provision remains in the Constitution it must be upheld.

We further believe that the lawabiding people of this country will never be satisfied with the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment under the terms and provisions of the present enforcement law, known as the Volstead act, which was passed by the Republican Congress over the veto of the Democratic President.

We, therefore, favor the enactment by Congress of such laws, under the Eighteenth Amendment, as will permit the making and use of home-made wines and cider and the manufacture and sale of beer in original package for home consumption only and to that end we urge the repeal or modification of the Volstead act.

MARYLAND NEWS

Hagerstown.-Dayton Robinson, 23 vears old, Big Pool, is in jail here awaiting trial before Justice Leonard P. Snyder, Clearspring, on the charge of assaulting his father, Cyrus Robinson, 83 years old, a veteran of the Civil War. It is alleged that young Robinson drove his father from his own home at the point of a loaded revolver, when the aged man refused to give him money. The son was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Rohrer during services at the Green Spring Chapel, the arrest creating a tremendous sensation in the sanctuary. Young Robinson's wife and his mother, the latter about 40 years old, left the church at the same time, the mother taking sides with her son.

Cumberland.—Alton Flannigan, a farmer of Rawlings, this county, is in a serious condition at the Allegany Hospital as the result of a copperhead snake bite. Flannigan, who works on his mother's farm at Rawlings, was shucking corn in a field near his home when suddenly a copperhead, about four feet long, sprang from beneath a pile of corn and sank his fangs into Flannigan's arm just above the wrist. His arm has swollen considerably and various parts of his body also are affected. He is not yet out of danger, but the physicians anticipate his ultimate recovery.

A $600 KERMANSHA

By R. RAY BAKER

(C. 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) His brow corrugated in a dark frown, Armen Doomborijian stood at the window of his business place and watched Doctor Azaad Boyajian march past on the opposite side of the street, head erect, shoulders back, twirling a Armen's black eyes followed the other until he arrived at a bazaar near the end of the block. The doctor did not enter the bazaar. Instead he passed through a doorway which opened on stairs giving access to rooms over the store.

Armen was not angry. He just felt sad; or rather, he was just plain jealous. For he knew Azaad was calling on Araxia Altoonjian, whose father was proprietor of the bazaar and whose home was above it.

Slowly Armen walked toward the tire length with a few steps; because it was only a niche. It appeared that the construction of the various buildings on the street had been started at either end of the block, and that they had failed to meet in the middle. In order to avoid wasting building space a little coop of a building ten feet high and twice as wide had been fitted between the two walls. For space was expensive on the Midway of this Lake Michigan summer resort. The contents of the coop, however, rivaled that of many large bazaars in intrinsic value, for it was filled with Persian rugs, so full that Armen found difficulty in making a path in his worried pacing of the floor.

As he paced the floor Armen stopped now and then to caress one of his beloved rugs which he had hung from the ceiling-rows upon rows of them. This scheme of display was not satisfactory, but it was the best he could devise in his cramped quarters.

"I love you," he whispered to the rugs. "Next to Araxia and my mother, far away in Armenia, I love you best."

Finally he seated himself at the rear of the store and concerned himself with reflections on his unrequited love. He hoped no customers would appear, because he wanted to think of things more ethereal than business. His sales this week already netted him $1,000, and that was sufficient. Armen was accumulating a neat sum in the bank. Dr. Azaad Boyajian was the fly in Armen's cintment. Before the other came back from college with his degree Armen had been making progress in his love affair in spite of Araxia's aversion to his occupation. He had almost persuaded her that the rug business was art, and she had even promised to look over his assortment some day.

everything. He liked Araxia, and he low a cow to be kept on the island. was a professional man. He opened an office and set out after a practice. This many of the converts which he made came slowly; in fact, the doctor appeared to be having little more than no success. But this had no effect on Araxia's admiration. He was a professional man, which it was better to be, even though a financial failure, than a rug merchant, no matter how successful. Besides, Azaad was handsome and strong, albeit he had a very excitable nature, which Araxia excused as temperament. Armen himself had a rather attractive physiognomy, but he was short of stature.

So things began to go against Armen. Instead of calling twice each week on Araxia, he was allowed to see her but once, while the doctor went three nights-and they were not professional calls. Then, before long, Armen was left out entirely, for Araxia | being hated or feared, but cannot always found some excuse when he asked if he might call.

Only yesterday Araxia had been invited into the rug shop when she was walking on the other side of the street. She had grudgingly consented to enter the coop and had looked over the rugs not only without enthusiasm, but with marked disdain in her demeanor. Armen had fairly raved to her about a new Kermansha which had just become a part of his stock, but she had thrown cold water on his fervor with the remark:

"Oh, sure Armen, it is nice to look at but one of these (pointing to several hanging near the back of the store) would be just as good to walk on. You can't talk rugs to me, Armen. I've seen so many of them, and when I have a home it will have bare as one body; now they turn to the floors or old-fashioned carpets."

This made Armen tear his hair, fig- dark backs are presented to the be uratively. The Kermansha was worth holder, they almost disappear against 2000, while "those" referred to by Ar- the shore or in the clouds. It would Armen was glad of the excuse to get away from the shop and the vicinity of Araxia's home. He rolled the rug carefully-almost tearfully, for he was loath to part with it-and went out to the street.

It was necessary to go past the Altoonjian apartments, on the other side of the street; and he resolved not to look in that direction, for fear he might see his idol in company with Doctor Azaad. Just as he was uttering a sigh of satisfaction because he had got past without yielding to the desire to look, he heard a cry and automatically turned to ascertain the cause.

A tall, well-built young Armenian had stumbled from the stairway of the Altoonjian building and was shouting "Help! help!" And as Armen watched, back of his store, traversing its en- the alarmist went racing up the street in a panic, while a series of screams sounded from the rooms of the ba-

St. Columba, Even in Fanatical Age, Carried His Aversion to Womankind to Excess.

Iona, which is one of the Hebrides group of islands off the coast of Scotland, long ago suffered the distinction of being a land without women.

During the middle ages the island was given to St. Columba, the patron saint of Argyle, by Christian, the king of the northern Scots. The holy man built a chapel with his own hands and established a mission station from which to send out missionaries to the heathen Picts. Then, in order to make sure that his island was a holy place, he decreed that no woman should set foot upon its shores. He carried this prohibition against the weaker sex Then Azaad came home and spoiled even to the length of refusing to al-

> A difficulty arose in the fact that among the heathen had wives and refused to be separated from them. To obviate this difficulty another island a couple of miles away was set apart as a home for the wives of the faithful. On Iona a watch tower was built, from which the island of females was constantly watched to see that no woman left it. Legend says that post of watchman was in great demand among the brothers.

> Later the good saint left Iona, and an abbess and nuns moved in. It is a curious fact that when, many years after St. Columba had gone to his reward, a pilgrimage was made to the island of Iona, about two-thirds of the 4,000 pilgrims who went there were of the sex that does not mind stand indifference.—Niksah in Chicago Daily News.

A Communal Mind.

Certain things in animal life lead me to suspect that animals have some means of communication with one another, especially the gregarious animals, that is quite independent of what we mean by language. It is like an interchange or blending of subconscious states, and may be analogous to telepathy among human beings. Trained Nurses Popular.

That trained nurses are being employed in increasing numbers shows that employers generally are recognizing their services. Previous to 1919, only 66 industrial firms employed trained nurses. Today more than 871 industries have nursing services. The industrial nurse has proved to be a good investment. She is a teacher of hygiene, and health education means prevention of accidents, which in years gone by have cost industry many thousands of dollars.

To Strengthen Steel.

Cincinnati is one of six places in the world where steel is strengthened by being boiled in oil. Recently at a plant in Cartliage, a steel shaft weighing 30,000 pounds, the largest piece ever subjected to the new method, went through the process of being strengthened. It was a "hollow-bored tumbler shaft" for use in dredging gold in California, costing about $17,-000. The great shaft was first suspended in an upright furnace until heated to just below the melting point. A crane then picked it up and dropped it into a huge well of oil, where it boiled and sputtered, throwing out clouds of oily mist.

PURPLE DYE FROM SHELLFISH

Possibility That New Industry May Be Developed, Since the Supply Is Inexhaustible.

On the Pacific coast of Costa Rica. especially in the region about Cocos bay, there abounds a kind of shellfish called the "nacascol," from which a fine purple color is obtained. So far no way has been found for preserving this dye, and the industry has remained in the hands of the few old people who take the trouble to dye a few ounces of thread every summer. The process is very simple. On picking up the shell from the beach or detaching it from a bowlder, the gatherer blows her breath into it, whereupon a few drops of a greenish liquor ooze out. This liquor is collected in a clamshell and after a sufficient quantity has been collected the thread is passed through it, soon after assuming, on exposure to the sunlight, a beautiful purple color, which is absolutely fast after it has turned purple. It is thought possible that the dye turns fast only on exposure to the air and that the liquor could be preserved by keeping the air from it. There is little doubt that this industry of dyeing thread could be extended to greater proportions if an extensive demand at good prices could be found for the dyestuff.

The reports of Generals Lawton and Miles witness to the healthyminded zeal which Wood manifested toward the barbarians who wreaked their savagery on American women and children; and the fact that Wood received that greatest of all military distinctions for his efficient bravery in this campaign—the medal of congress-is testimony of the same kind. -Burton J. TUESDAY MORNING, JUNE 1, 1920

The convention delegates must be very careful not to forget to nominate a vice-president before going home.

The nominating speeches always demand Abraham Lincolns.

Government printer has shut down on printing campaign speeches for Congressmen. Does he not know what the office was created for?

The national conventions usually nominate the candidates for whom the galleries holler the loudest, and then some people wonder why things go wrong in this country.

Not many people are wearing out the knees of their trousers by working in the seats of the same as the result of sitting in office chairs.

Formerly the man who made two blades of grass grow where one grew before was a benefactor. Now the idea is to make half a blade grow and get a three-blade price for it.

they can enjoy the uplifting benefit of lawful pursuits in their country must leisure, a lot of people then proceed to be protected, or otherwise satisfaction work extra hours so as to take advant- will be insisted upon. age of punitive overtime.

THE POSTAL WORKERS

Government workers have been considered to have a soft snap. That can not be true of the postal service, where conditions have become so unsatisfactory that its employes are leaving in large numbers.

Postal workers are entitled to public gratitude for not going on strike and tying up all business. The public should reciprocate by giving them a fair wage. When a body of workers resort to reason instead of force to secure their claims they should not lose out by it. An efficient postal service is absolutely necessary to good business. The service will not long be efficient at the rate it is losing its men.

EQUIPPING THE FOOD PRODUCERS

The tendency of workers to leave the country districts and go into the manufacturing towns and cities is hard to check. It may be permanent, But unless remedial measures are adopted the inevitable result will be food short-

Food prices will be higher than ever unless the city and town people do one thing. That is, to provide capital in such abundance that the farmer who has lost his help can be provided with machinery to make up for his loss.

That can be done only by a tremendous extension of the rural credit system so that every farmer entitled to a loan can get it. Also the people must save money to provide these funds. The workmen who are throwing away money on silk shirts and working girls who are buying $200.00 dresses, are helping to draw workers off the farms and assisting to make prices high. When they buy $2.00 shirts and $25.00 dresses and save the balance they help provide the the machinery with which some farmer can feed them.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CONVENTIONS

Probably nowhere on earth is a public esthering held that is so interesting as a national convention of one of the leading political parties of the United States. In no other gathering is so much history made in so short a time. No other assemblage is so picturesque and dramatic. Its cheering and yelling crowds, its flamboyant oratory, its intense strife of contending factions, its mysterious subterranean influences, its dramatic surprises, make up a wonderful battle of social and political forces. Considered as a means for getting good government these conventions have faults. They are used too much to draw visitors to the cities where they are held. They are not convened to draw trade for hotel men and other business interests. but to make decisions of tar-reaching importance. They would work under much more favorable conditions in some small hall, sufficient merely to seat delegates, alternates and press representatives. The custom of organizing gallery demonstrations to yell by the bour for favorite candidates is an obstacle to careful deliberation. The fact that the supporters of one candidate can holler twice as long as those of another proves nothing. Howlers can be hired cheap. Such demonstrations skirts are not consistant with the dignity of longer. such a gathering and they interfere with its work.

In spite of all extravagances these conventions assemble a body of very able men from each party. The average of brains is higher than that of when needed. Severe attacks of colic

AMERICA'S HORNET'S NEST

Mexico, our nearest Southern neighbor. is a perpetual hornet's nest, forever buzzing and stinging with its futile wars and vain ambitions, never settling down to honest work. A live American feels much the same desire to throw a rock into it that he used to feel toward the nest of yellow jackets in his father's back orchard.

With Carranza's flight another era passes and the American government will have to frame a new policy. This policy should not be based on romantic ideas, but on cold facts. It should always be kept in mind that Mexico is onstrate that this country is raising a practically an Indian republic. It has large number of George Washingtons about 20 per cent. of straight white blood. The rest are about half pure Indian and the remainder half breeds.

The situation is much more difficult than in a country like Brazil, where nearly half the people are of the white race. You can't expect to build a democracy after American standards, among a race whose origins are so largely savage and barbarous.

The land question is at the root of their troubles. With so large a portion of the soil held in great estates, there will always be a great under element who feel no ties anywhere and are the garden, but a lot are going through ready/to join gangs of bandits and keep the country in turmoil.

The American people are not loved in Mexico. They have interfered too much in telling the Mexicans what kind of a government they should have and have not interfered enough to protect our own citizens. The Mexicans will respect us much more if they are made After being granted short hours so to realize that Americans engaged in

Analyzes The Agricultural Situation

In a letter to a newspaper a Jefferson county, West Virginia, farmer's wife writes of conditions and analyzes the agricultural situation. The article was handed to us by a prominent Somerset county farmer to be published, as it was sound logic and truthful words. The letter follows:

"We hear and read so much about the farmer. 'Why don't he produce more' and 'He gets such wonderful price,' but if that is true, why is it that the towns are overcrowded and the farms are so short of help? One thing, we are educating our boys away from the farm, holding out to them a life of ease and white collars in town as lawyers, etc. Our schools and the whole rural mind are full of this. The farmer is compelled to reduce crops and live stock feeding. During the war women, old men and children went out into the fields and worked. But women shocking wheat to feed a soldier son or brother is quite different from doing the same to feed a city striker who wants more than a dollar an hour or a clerk who is working only eight hours a day. And then the extravagant, useless things the people are buying are keeping the factories at work on those things that otherwise would be turning hands loose for more useful occupation. "It is no joke, the situation the farmer is up against, and the towns are as much to blame for it as the farmer who milks at 4 o'clock in the morning, feeds the hogs and steers before breakfast, plows, reaps, etc., all day, then works in the garden after supper or goes to town to buy his groceries, only to find the store closed an hour early after an eight-hour day and clerks out having some amusement. "We are due for a waking up. Figure it yourself. Fewer hands on the farms mean less corn to be eaten or less hogs fed. Fewer hogs mean fewer pork chops, hams and sausage. Fewer sheep mean less wool and mutton. Less cotton means less cloth. Less production means less transportation, less labor in the packing-houses, less grinding in the mills, less work for the tailors and factories. Less crops mean less money for the farmers to spend for farm implements and a thousand other things. Fewer implements mean less work in the factories, which brings it back to the fact that the country is dependent on the farm and its products in one way or another, and the only result will be that something will happen to make men hungry in the towns and drive them away from the fun and luxury of town life. We are just like Germany before the war, when the whole nation was permeated with militarism. The only difference is we have a different disease and have it bad."

Buying out Railroads

If all the farmers in the United States should sell all their livestock and all the crops they raise this year, they would have money enough to buy all the railroads in the Nation. That's how big the farming business is. Worth knowing about-eh?

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

carries to its readers each week the news of this eighty-billion-dollar business. It tells of successes—and the failures, too—of farmers in every state.

The farmers right round this town have a part in that $80,000,000,000; the merchants and preachers and lawyers and doctors here in town are getting their living, directly or indirectly, from the farmers. . . . Do you read THE COUN-TRY GENTLEMAN? Regularly? Every week?

If you don't you're not keeping very closely in touch with this farming business that could buy out the railroads. . . . Better subscribe. Costs only $1.00 for a whole year-fifty-two big weekly issues - and it will put before you the whole Nation's farmingfrom the backyard garden to the million-acre

RIDDING HOUSES OF VERMIN

Outline of Method Recommended by Poultry Specialists of Department of Agriculture.

The following method of ridding hen houses of mites and lice, when the weather conditions are such as to permit of the birds being kept outside the house for five or six hours, is recmmended by poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture.

Close all the doors and windows and see that there are no cracks or any other openings to admit air. Set an iron vessel on gravel or sand near the center of the house. Place in the vessel a handful of shavings or straw saturated with kerosene and on these sprinkle sulphur at the rate of about one pound to every 90 or 100 square feet of floor space. Instead of using the shavings and kerosene, the sulphur may be saturated with wood alcohol.

When everything else is in readiness, light the material and hastily leave the house. In case any anxiety is felt about fire, a glance through a window will show whether everything is all right. There is very little danger of fire when proper precautions have been taken to have plenty of soil beneath the vessel. After three or four hours, throw all the doors and the windows wide open to drive out the sulphur fumes thoroughly. Then let the fowls in one by one. As each enters, catch it and dust it well with insect powder, which will destroy the lice on the birds. Tobacco dust is also good to use instead, of insect powder.

The birds and house have now been freed from vermin for the present, but the eggs of the insects have not been destroyed, and in a week another swarm will be hatched out. Therefore it will be necessary to repeat the peration once or twice before the ests are exterminated. After this care should be used to see that no strange fowl is admitted to the house or yard without having been thoroughly rid of lice, for one lousy hen will contaminate all the rest.

GIVE GROWING CHICKS MILK

Where Supply Can Be Obtained It hould Be Kept Before Them in Open Dish or Pan.

Nothing is better for growing chicks than a liberal supply of sour milk. If it can be obtained it always should be kept before them in an open dish or pan where they can eat and drink it freely. Where sour milk is fed, the amount of beef scrap in the dry mash may be reduced one-half.

Plenty of fresh, clean water is absolutely necessary for all growing chicks. In hot weather it should be given twice daily and put into fountains or dishes and placed in the shade so as to keep as cool as possible. Clean the water dish thoroughly each day before fill-

Lower California Has Much Fertile Soil.

Really a Region of Great Resources That Only Await Development, According to Writer in Los Angeles Newspaper.

Lower California is an expansive region that has never been well known and has long been misunderstood. Even we of Upper California, despite our close proximity, know little of the peninsula except its extreme northern part, writes Arthur Berg, in the Los Angeles Times. Few of us realize that it is not an utterly barren waste; that it is a tropical country with a salubrious climate and many regions of luxuriant vegetation; that its northern and southern parts are utterly unlike one another, and that rich resources abound that are only waiting to he developed.

Despite its jagged, barren heights and cactus-clad mesas, which glow in the flery rays of an unobscured sun, it was a land rich in history when ; the timbers of the Mayflower were yet trees in the forest. Once sought and guarded for her ores and her jewels, this peninsula, which to the Spanish conquistadores was an island glittering in the azure web of romance, a land for which the padres gave their lives in fanatic devotion to the cross, now lies practically unnoticed, its romance and history forgotten, and its possibilities, if not overlooked, at least neglected.

Between 1527 and 1532 Hernando Cortez sent four expeditions on voyages of discovery up the west coast of Mexico, but the first three accomplished nothing and the fourth failed to return. Finally, in 1533, Lower California was discovered by Ximenez, who anchored in the bay of Santa Cruz (now La Paz). Later Cortex himself visited Santa Cruz and secured a quantity of pearls and Indian slaves. In 1539 Francisco de Ulloa sailed up the Gulf of California and discovered the mouth of the Colorado river. In spite of this discovery, Lower California was known as an island for more than 100 years and appeared on European maps as an island up to as late as 1748.

All attempts of Spain to colonize the California peninsula ended in disastrous failures until the task was delegated to the Jesuits, or Company of Jesus, in 1697. These Jesuit missionary priests were possessed of the tact of the French explorers, the persistency of the English colonial settlers and the bravery of the American frontiersman.

Padre Salvatierra made the first mission settlement in Lower California on October 15, 1697, at the bay of San Bruno, on the east coast. For 70 years thereafter the Jesuit controlled the peninsula, and the 70 years represented the era of Lower California's greatest activity and greatest prosperity.

During their sojourn the Jesuits charted the east coast, explored the east and west coasts the islands adjacent thereto and the interior in a manner that has never been excelled; founded 23 missions, of which 14 proved to be successful; formulated a system of mission life never thereafter surpassed; not only instructed the Indians in religious matters, but taught them many useful arts as well; cultivated and planted the arable lands and inaugurated a system of irrigation which, had they been given time for a more northerly advance, would have given Upper California a marvelous agricultural development early in the nineteenth century.

The establishment of the mission in Upper California was a much easier task than that which the hardy Jesuit priests faced and conquered in Lower California.

Frown on Cuddling.

At Scarborough, England, during an application to the licensing justice for cinema licenses, it was stated that when the justices visited the Palladium they saw some young couples manager, said he had not seen it. The chief constable asked him if he knew that locally 42 settees in one part of the building which seated two people each were known as the "cuddling chairs." Mr. Standing said he had not heard it, and that he had seen no kissing and cuddling. The license was granted on the court's being given to understand that more lights would be installed and the settees divided to prevent cuddling

Believe It or Not. He was a stranger to the ways of a city and made his way about with difficulty. He entered a large department store and was standing near the elevator when he heard the man directing the running of the elevators say: "Take the elevator to the right, it will take you anywhere." So the stranger entered the elevator with the assertion: "I wish to go to the terminal station." "Take the next car," came the quick rejoinder. That's More Than Some Do. "Whoever told you you could play golf?" sneered the expert. "Who? Me?" asked the novice. "I'm playing just as well as any of the others, am I not?"

"Why, man alive, you took 14 strokes to make the first hole! Is that what you call good playing?" "Well, I hit the ball every time, didn't I?"-Stray Stories.

Edith Logen vs. Henrietta Johnson and Sarah No. 8334 Chancery. In the Circuit Court forSom eract County.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for he cale of certain real estate situate in said Som-rest county, of which Denard Johnson, late of

has since died, and the following children and grandchildren as his sole heirs at law, to wit:

(1). The defendant, Henrietta Johnson, daughter, who is of full age and unmarried, and resides in said Somerset county. (2). A son, John Al. Johnson, who departed this life during the year nineteen hundred and nineteen, unmarried, and intestate, and leaving no children or descendants. (3). A son, Isaiah Johnson, who died during the year nineteen hundred and fourteen, intestate, leaving no widow, but leaving as his sole heir at law, a daughter, the defendant, Sarah Johnson, who is of full age and resides in said Somerset county. (4). The plaintiff, Edith Logan, a grand-daughter of the said Denard Johnson, being the only child of Mary Ann Logan, a daughter of the said Denard Johnson, who died before her said father, the said Edith being of full age and unmarried, and residing in Northampton county, State of Virginia.

married, and residing in Northampton county.

THEIR 'LUCK' HELD

Men Evidently Not Fated to Die on Gallows.

In the One Case It Would Almost Seem as if Providence Had Intervened to Prevent Hideous Case of Injustice.

Criminological history unfolds some interesting and curious "escapes" from the gallows. In Sussex, England, a man was found guilty of murder by a jury which did not take five minutes in which to consider its verdict Twice he stood on the death-trap of the gallows, on each occasion the lever failed to release the trap. An indignant country called for his reprieve, which was granted. It was afterward discovered that the gallows, which was made of wood in those days, had swollen by rain that fell heavily on both the nights preceding the dates fixed by the sheriff for the execution.

But here is the case of a man who not only was saved from the gallows, but from hearing his death sentence passed by the judge! A man was charged at the Old Bailey with a peculiarly atrocious crime. The jury sent in word from their retiring room that they were unable to agree upon a verdict, and were escorted to the London coffee house on Ludgate hill, there to be locked up "without food, fire or light," until they had decided upon a unanimous verdict.

Eleven out of the dozen were in favor of a verdict of "guilty," but the foreman of the jury, a Mr. James Simmer, had a rooted objection to capital punishment. He did not believe in the innocence of the man, but he refused to consent to a verdict which would send the man to the gallows.

It was Saturday afternoon when the jury was locked up. By dawn next day six of the jurymen, overcome by discomfort and lack of food, were willing to vote "Not guilty." Toward the afternoon of Sunday the foreman, actuated by feelings of compassion, addressed his fellow-sufferers as follows:

"I am willing to make you a sporting offer and leave the decision as te the guilt or innoncence of the poor wretch in Newgate to chance. Observe: I shall balance the poker upright in front of the empty grate. I shall then slowly count 'One! two! three!' You will range yourselves, half your number on either side, two yards away. At the word "three" we shall jump. If the poker falls to the side of the opposition I shall give in to your verdict of 'guilty,' but if it comes down on my side you will join me in returning a verdict of 'not guilty.'-One! two! three!"

At the word "three" the twelve men jumped for all they were worth. The poker fell with a clatter to the side of the foreman! The warders were summoned, and the jurors were escorted back to the Old Bailey, re-entered the jury box and gave their verdict.

The judge, who had provided himself with the ominous black cap, appeared completely paralyzed with astonishment on hearing the announce-

Twenty years later a convict at Portland was fatally injured by the premature explosion of a cartridge. Before he died he confessed to being guilty of the crime for which the innocent man was arraigned at the Old Bailey 20 years before, and was only saved in the manner described, by the fall of the poker toward the foreman of the jury.

Community Theater.

San Jose, Cal., is going to be the first town in the west to have a community educational theater. This proposed theater is not merely going to present plays for the benefit of the community, but it is going to promôte acting among the citizens themselves. It will afford an opportunity for every person from the tiniest tot to the oldest citizen to gratify the desire to appear in the world of make-believe, according to Miss Mabel L. Dorsey, who started the idea. Miss Dorsey, a graduate of a leading school of music and expression, took up the question of establishing the school with members of the chamber of commerce of the city and it was enthusiastically received by them. The primary purpose of the theater is not to make actors, but to develop men and women as well as allow residents of the community to display their talents in singing, speaking and dancing.

Mother Hubbard's Dog. Mary's teacher one day asked her to draw a picture of Old Mother Hubbard's house, showing Old Mother Hubbard and her dog. Very quickly Mary drew the rough outlines of what was supposed to be a house, placing the crude form of Old Mother Hubbard beside the door. Then, with a self-satisfied air, she handed her finished product to the teacher. "That is very good, Mary," commented the teacher, as she looked at the drawing, "but where is the dog?"

"Oh, the dog is in the house," promptly replied Mary.

London's Subway System. London's underground railways transport 4,000,000 passengers daily. The vehicles controlled by the roads make a total journey every day equal to 20 circuits of the earth. The gross revenue each month is £1,000,000.

CLUB GIRL'S HENS PAY WELL

Valerie Henning of Mississippi Is Paying Her Way Through College on. Profits From Flock.

"I am a poultry club member, and my records show that this year the net profits from my chickens were $525.35." This is the report of Valerie Henning of Panola county, Mississippi, who at sixteen holds the championship of her state in poultry-club work. She, with six other Mississippi girls and two chaperons, recently visited Washington. The five-day trip was a prize offered by Mississippi bankers and business men to the girl in each district of the state who made the largest profit in her club work.

Miss Henning has been a member for two years of one of the poultry clubs supervised by the United States department of agriculture and the state

To obtain her start in club work she borrowed $13.50 from a local bank. With this money a pen of Barrel Plymouth Rocks, consisting of four hens and one cockerel, was bought, The profits from her chickens last year, her first in poultry work, were $374, and her flock for 1919 consisted of two cockerels and nineteen hens. By the use of trap nests and leg bands the record as a layer of each hen had been observed, and only the good egg. producers were kept. From January 1 to October 16 the 19 biddles laid 2,840 eggs. Miss Henning sells nearly all the eggs for hatching purposes; but the birds she raises, aside from the culls, bring from $15 to $20 a pen.

The money this club girl has made through her poultry work is being used to pay her way through an agricultural high school.

DESIRABLE HENS TO RETAIN

On Most Farms Size of Flock Could Well Be Increased-Range Is Very Important.

The average farmer might find it desirable to increase the size of the fock of hens. While most farmers have little time to devote to poultry raising, yet their families may attend to the fowls and see that they are well cared for and protected.

The usual "advice" to poultry raisers to begin with a few hens is sound. But on most farms the women and girls have had the responsibility of the flock for years and most of them could well afford to increase the number of lay-

Range is very important for poultry. But range alone is not enough. The fowls must have feed and shelter when they need them.

When one is about to increase the number of hens it is well to see that those kept are worth keeping. Poor hens are not an asset; they are generally a liability.

Cull out weak or slow-growing chicks.

Eggs being taken to market should be protected from the sun's rays.

If the hen house is damp, it is safe to say fewer eggs will be laid.

Infertile eggs will withstand marketing conditions much better than fertile

A chicken can stand any amount of cold, but yery little moisture, when housed.

Rapid growth and no bowel trouble are essential in developing profitable flocks of chicks.

Make hens take exercise by feeding their grain in litter, where they will have to scratch for it.

Begin marketing the cockerels as soon as they weigh 11/2 pounds or attain a marketable weight.

Bran and charcoal are two valuable feeds for young chicks. They can be placed in hoppers before the chicks at all times.

Soybeans A Good Crop For Somersel

Soybeans is an all-around crop for our conditions and should have a place on the farms of the county and the farmers here are preparing to greatly increase their acreage this year.

Sovbean hay is slightly superior to alfalfa hay in protein, is relished by all classes of stock and is an excellent winter ration for growing cattle, sheep and horses. Even hogs will relish the leaves and smaller stems.

Soybeans will give an average yield of about two tons of hay to the acre on land capable of producing thirty to forty bushels of corn per acre, providing, of course, that the soybeans are inoculated and properly planted. They will also yield twenty to thirty bushels of soybeans to the acre. As the chief source of protein in hog pasture they are excelled only by alfalfa. When their fertilizing value, as well as their feeding value, is taken into consideration soybeans are superior to any other crop grown in this section.

Soybeans should be planted when the weather becomes warm, the middle to atter part of May or early June for seed and as late as the latter part of June will produce a crep of hay.

Maryland Bar Association To Mee At Atlantic City June 24th

The annual meeting of the Maryland State Bar Association, to be held June 24th. 25th and 26th at the Hotel Chelsea, Atlantic City, will be dry only in respect to the absence of stimulating beverages. Otherwise the prospects are that it will be the largest and most successful meeting in the history of the association.

As principal speaker, Albert J. Beveridge, former United States Senator from Indiana, has been secured. Mr. Beveridge will address the association Saturday morning, the last day of the meeting. His subject will be "Maryland, Marshall and the Constitution.' He will also speak at the banquet on the closing day of the convention.

Another eminent lawyer who will address the association is John Lord O'Brian, of Buffalo, N. Y. He will speak Friday night, June 25, on "Enorcement of the Law Relating to the Deportation of Aliens." on which he is said to have some radical views.

The first session of the meeting will be Thursday morning, when Judge Morris A. Soper, the retiring president, will make an address. Following the address reports will be received from standing and special committees. Thursday night there will be an address by Judge William H. Harlan, of Belair, on "The Lawyer's Position in the Com-

At the Friday morning session there will be discussions on "Shall the Maryland State Bar Association Be Incorporated, as Suggested by the American Bar Association?" and "Trust Companies in Their Relationship to the Practice of Law." The discussion will be participated in by Randolph Barton, Jr., Jesse N. Bowen; John W. Staton, of Snow Hill; Attorney-General Alexander Armstrong, Willam C. Coleman, Charles McHenry Howard; Walter C. Copper, of Cumberland; Ridgely P.

Melvin, of Annapolis, and others. At a business session Friday afternoon officers will be elected and unfinished business disposed of. The new officers will include James E. Ellegood, of Salisbury, slated to be president.

Judge T. Scott Offutt, of Towson, will be toastmaster at the banquet. There will also be a number of social events during the meeting for the entertainment of the ladies of the lawyers' families.

MINERS ACCEPT WILSON'S PLAN

Agree to Arbitration, Saying "Class Legislation" Precludes Strike.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.-Declaration that "class legislation" had made it "almost humanly impossible to wage a successful strike," anthracite mine workers in their tri-district convention accepted the plan of President Wilson to settle their wage dispute by an arbitration commission. Pending the award of the Presidential commission the hard coal miners will remain at work.

President Wilson's flock of prize sheep exchanged their winter coats last Wednesday for summer attire. The flock. which numbers 26 sheep and 22 lambs, yielded 185 pounds of wool, which will be given to the Salvation Army.

WILSON VETUES KNOX PEACE WITH GERMANY

President Says It "Makes Complete Surrender of Rights of United States."

Washington.-In a short message to the house, President Wilson vetoed the Knox resolution which would declare war with Germany at an end. When read in the house, it was received with prolonged cheering by the Democrats, led by ex-Speaker Clark. Republican part, but expressed disapproval of the reference made to the failure of the peace resolution to protect the freedom of the seas.

The President's message pointed out that the moral obligations which the United States assumed when it entered the war were left unsettled by the failure of the senate to ratify the peace treaty. Acceptance of the peace resolution, the President asserted, would "place ineffacable stains on the gallantry and honor of the United States."

None of the things for which the United States fought, the President said, would be "safeguarded by the Knox resolution and Germany would not be compelled to take action by way of setting right the infinite wrongs which it did to the peoples whom it attacked and whom we professed to assist when we entered the war."

The message further says that the United States entered the war reluctantly, but that when it did so it entered with a specific purpose and only because it "became convinced that it could not in truth be regarded as only a European war, but must be regarded Ignorance is guilt and the fines are was involved and human rights of erty. every kind as against a belligerent government." The efforts of this country to create a condition which would make wars in the future difficult were obtained in the Treaty of Versailles, while the resolution, the President said, did not attempt to accomplish any of them, but "in effect, makes a complete surrender of the rights of the United States so far as the German government is concerned."

The resolution, the message emphasized, failed to provide any machinery to bring about a reduction of armaments, enforce the freedom of the seas or rectify the wrongs done to France or to settle any of the other questions that grew out of the war.

The Knox resolution, the message says, would put us in the position of saying that this country did not wish to assume any further "responsibilities with regard to the freedom of nations or the sacredness of international obligation or the safety of independent

AS SCIENTIST SEES FUTURE

Advances of 500 Years Will Make the Year 1920 Seem Like a Prehistoric Age.

Those unimaginative people who believe the high pitch of inventive genius was reached with the advent of electricity, talking machines, airplanes and the X-ray will be interested to know that civilization on this planet has really just begun. Dr. A. M. Low, a London engineer with many inventions to his credit, says five hundred years hence our descendants will look back upon conditions in 1920 with just such feelings of amused pity as we show for the state of the savages of prehistoric times.

The scientist predicts among other things that in 2420 A. D. all public thoroughfares and parks will be underground, vehicles will be run by wireless, telephones will carry an attachment enabling the speakers to see each other, and all roads will be as smooth as billiard balls.

Dr. Low, who invented a motor scooter and has produced an apparatus for seeing simple objects by wire, in a recent interview in London said

"When a man sets out for business he will not proceed, as he does now, by tramway car or train; he will pass along delightful avenues underneath the surface of the earth. Parks and all other places of public resort and beauty will be roofed in.

"Motor cars and all motor vehicles will proceed by wireless power and not by the crude method of using petrol. They will be fitted up like luxuriously appointed drawing rooms and will be driven at a rate of one hundred miles an hour. Wireless telephones will be installed in the cars, as well as every kind of appointment making for luxury and comfort. Many people will own these cars.

"People will live in a condition of splendid physical isolation. Television—that is, the ability to see your absent friend over a distance of many miles-and wireless telephony will lead to this condition.

"This vision is not extravagant or a wild set of theories. It is the direction in which scientific discoveries and experiments tend. Many scientific men have come face to face with discoveries and inventions which are only separated from actual realization by a simple little difficulty, which will certainly be overcome in time."

Now She's Sorry. "What did you say to Algy when he told you he loved you?"

"'Old stuff.'" Well, he gave Georgette a diamond necklace last Christmas. That's old stuff, too, but it's good."

SITES OF HISTORIC INTEREST

Many Places Around Dutch City of Doorn Should Be of Interest to the Kaiser.

Doorn, the little Dutch town now the home of the former emperor of Germany, is surrounded by sites that may give the former kaiser cause for reflection, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. At Rhenen he might find an historical companion in misery. Friedrich of Pfalz, the exiled king of Bohemia, took refuge there. Perhaps the most noteworthy aspect of Rhenen is its tower, which bears the name of Kunera, after the daughter of the ruler of the Orkney isles, who accompanied Ursula and her 11,000 virgins on a pilgrimage to Rome. Upon their return, according to the legend, now known to have been based on a misreading of a Latin text, the maidens were coming ashore to Cologne when Huns killed them all except Kunera. Later she leaped to her death from a castle parapet.

From the Morayian settlement of Zeist the former kaiser might learn of humility, virtue and genuine piety. Considerable property is held in common by the people. There widows, married women and girls are classified by their attire. At Maarshergen the Pyramid of Austerlitz was erected by Marmont's soldiers to commemorate the crowning of Napoleon. At Utrecht the treaty was signed which opened the way for Britain's present great commercial power, as it gave her Gibraltar and several colonies.

Weaving Mills of Bielefeld.

In a review of the Bielefeld flax and linen market the Rheinisch-Westfalisch Zeitung says that the weaving mills cannot undertake operation on a large scale for lack of cotton and linen yarns. It is impossible to compete in the world markets with cloth of paper yarn, which was manufactured during the latter years of the war, although its quality has been improved consid-

Catarrhai Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

Gonzales, Tex .- Mrs. Minnie Philpot, of this place, writes: "Five years ago I was taken with a pain in my left side. It was right under my left rib. It would commence with an aching and extend up into my left shoulder and on down into my back. By that time the pain would be so severe I would have to take to bed, and suffered usually about three days ... I suffered this way for three years, and got to be a mere skeleton and was so weak I could hardly stand alone. Was not able to go anywhere and had to let my house work go... I suffered awful with a pain in my back and I had the headache all the time. I just was unable to do a thing. My life was a misery, my stomach got in an awful condition, caused from taking so much medicine. I suffered so much pain. I had just about given up all hopes of our getting anything to help Movement for "Mixed Clubs" in City of London.

Method Has Been Suggested to Check Decline in Marriage Rate, Which Is Viewed With Considerable Alarm.

Social reformers, bishops, clergymen and physicians are continually reminding us that in England we need "more marriage and earlier marriage." The postponement of the age of marriage among men until thirty or the beginning of middle age is not a healthy social sign.

In the middle class this deferment of wedlock is attributed chiefly to the increased difficulty in earning a sufficient income to support the family. The same factor comes into play among the skilled craftsmen who wish to attain a fair financial position before they undertake the responsibilities of parentage. We find, therefore, that early marriage is the custom chiefly of the unskilled workers, casual laborers and the very poor.

The economic question is not the only barrier to early marriage and more marriage in the great middle class. Strange as it may appear, a vast number of men and women who wish to marry cannot find mates. Even in these days there are a multitude of men who have very few women acquaintances, and a still larger host of women who rarely enjoy the society of men. We are apt to forget that a large proportion of the inhabitants of the big cities are practically "strangers in the gates." Their "homes" are a bedroom in the suburbs, a boarding house or a little lock-up flat. They are country immigrants to the large towns, and in many instances they have not a' single acquaintance in the place.

If we are really in earnest about the decline of the marriage rate and the deferment of matrimony, we should set about facilitating social intercourse between the sexes. The first practical step is the provision of "mixed clubs" under municipal control. Clubs, as they exist now, are simply internment camps for men or women, and there is no doubt that they tend to a further segregation of the sexes.

It is true that there are clubs in London where men and women can meet. But we require a very much larger number in the metropolis and in all parts of the provinces.

My own experience of mixed clubs is that they undoubtedly promote matrimony. They are a pleasant meeting place for young men and women after the days' work. It is appalling that thousands of youths and maidens should have nowhere to foregather in the evenings and no choice between the lonely lodging and the streets.

I would suggest also that every municipality should establish a marriage bureau and provide candidates for wedlock with introductions.-From Continental Edition of London Mail.

Where Soft Drinks Originated. A Philadelphia writer says that there is not much inspiration for poetry in soda water. Let it be remembered that another 'first" to be credited to Philadelphia is for the manufacture of soda water -that is to say, the commonly accepted beverage with fruit sirups.

It was made by Eugene Roussel, who conducted a perfumery establishment here about a century ago.

Moreover, the Philadelphia centennial finally confirmed the important place of the industry and the popularity of the beverage in the United States. Robert M. Green began to build soda fountains in '74, showed one at the centennial, and at the Franklin institute exposition, held not long thereafter, dispensed his new invention, "ice cream soda," to an increasing throng that presently was paying $200 a day over the counter for the seductive new "soft drinks."

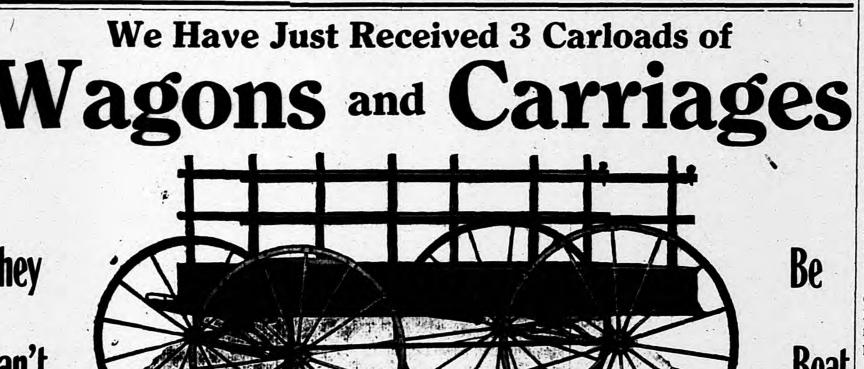

With the present soda water and soda fountain business approximating one billion dollars a year, this Philadelphia born industry is still in its infancy. But what a prodigious infan, it is!-Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Nickel Coins Again.

An innovation in currency has been made by the Indian government, which has coined and issued nickel 8-anna and 4-anna pieces. Two-anna and 1-anna pieces have been in circulation in India for many years, but hitherto no nickel coins of a value equal to the new issue have been in use in any country-in fact, the 8anna piece is credited with being the highest-valued coin struck in base metal in the world, its recent sterling exchange value being 1 shilling 2 pence, or 28 cents, at normal values. The Indian government was influenced in its decision to issue the new coins by the high price of silver, and it is probable that one result of the innovation will be to cause the 8-anna silver coins to disappear.-Brooklyn Eagle.

"I'm not having an actual autumn of rest and decay," the old woman indignantly protested. "My life is too beautiful and too fruitful to label it that way. It's an Indian summer. When I was younger I used to watch old people having autumns when they fretted everybody and were miserable themselves. It worried me because I knew that some day I would be old, and I didn't want to make anyone, not even myself, miserable. Though Poe prior into a number of nooks and crapmies of European literature, he seems never to have interested himself in Spain or Spanish. His "Oval Portrait" is located in "one of those piles of commingled gloom and grandeur" which have so long been associated with Spanish architectures, and that is about the extent of his debt to the land of our guest. But poets do not look for reasons; they are content with opportunities. Seeing that we had no adequate Poe memorial, he selzed upon the chance to make a good suggestion. Possibly, also, Poe's "Four Beasts in One" prompted generous thoughts is the author of "The Four Horsemen."—New York Evening

A Disturber.

It was a scrubby little room, in a scrubby little part of a scrubby little city's scruburbs, and the London traveler didn't approve at all.

When he went to wash he found that there was no water for the basin, no soap to wash with, and no towel to dry himself with.

So he rang. Five minutes interim bringing no answer, he rang again and then again and again, until his arm ached. At the end of 20 minutes a waiter of forbidding aspect opened the door.

"Did you ring?" he inquired in a be's, rumbling voice. "Of course I did!" snapped the Lightheaded Customer.

A Jeffersonville merchant has recently placed an automatic weighing machine in front of his store. A few days ago a citizen was observed standing on the machine and closely scrutinizing the dial. His hat was in his hand, although the thermometer marked a low temperature, and a asked him why he had his at off. "I want to see what I weigh without my outdoor garments," said the citizen blandly. His interlocutor walked away, muttering: "He wouldn't weigh much less if he took his head off as well."-Indianapolis News.

Tomato Juice for Babies. Dr. Alfred F. Hess of New York says that canned tomatoes are good for babies. Orange juice is commonly win to them, for they need something of this sort to prevent such diseases as scurvy, and Dr. Hess has found that canned tomatoes serve the same pose. He told the State Medical iety that he gives about an ounce day to infants that have passed first month, especially to those mothers are not nursing them.

in Country Today Compared to Twenty Years Ago.

Custom of Sleeping Outdoors, for Instance, is Growing-What the "Movies" and "Canned Music" Have Accomplished.

Twenty years ago the inhabitants of entire villages, up in New York state at least, seemed to fear fresh air o' nights and slept with their windows closed. Night air was not healthful, they said—and a lot of them lived to be ninety-seven even on that theory. The window sashes were nailed down and stuffed with rags at the first sign of snow and we slept under those conditions.

In those days if anyone had practiced sleeping outdoors, even in summer weather, it would have caused a sensation. "Cracked, I swan!" the old farmers would have said.

The change came gradually, presumably because the sons and daughters of the old residents went to work in the large centers where opened windows were, if not the rule, surely not the exception, remarks a writer in the New York Evening Sun. Now the complete change hits one fairly in the face when he returns to the once airless districts of early youth.

Night and day now the windows are wide open and sometimes even doors are never closed; no one thinks of living without screens and mosquito netting, even the poor in hollows and bylanes. The families frequently eat outdoors under the old apple tree, on red and white table covers or oilcloth or a bare scrubbed board. Like the omnipresent flivver that carries the clerk and his family to picnics along the roadside, the outdoor-eating habit has done wonders for the health and happiness of all, particularly the country

Out-of-doors sleeping is now well nigh a habit. Hardly a porch in that country nowadays is complete without a khaki swing couch, a made-up cot or one of the old time hard, haircloth "sofies" with pillows and a patchwork quilt or two, ready for the sleeper. Most of these were hung with mosquito net curtains, looped back by day.

Nowadays on these outdoor couches are seen reclining in daytime the old man of the family, lying at full length with his bare feet toasting in the sun. Twenty years ago he would have slept in the darkened parlor behind closed shutters; or, if very foolhardy, he might have been caught by watchful eyes of his family napping under the old apple tree.

Yes, the country has come on! But outdoor sleeping by rural children has not yet arrived. Here the farmer's wife draws the line. It may be all right for grandpap and herself and husband, but she is not yet sure about the night air for little lungs. So children's cots are not seen upon the porches. They still sleep within four walls and a ceiling. The city and large towns have come to this airy regime through years of propaganda in newspapers, in churches and in social centers. The country absorbed it through newspapers and mag-

But if there has been a notable change in the attitude of farm and village folk toward fresh air there has been an even greater change in their social life. The small town of twenty years ago is not the small town of today. Then they had church sociables. They may still have them, but I do not know where. There used to be buggy rides and prayer meetings, and the greatest dissipation of the younger villagers was "going walking," with a possible "sody" at the corner drug store. Booth Tarkington depicts these rural scenes truthfully, but his pointed view is now out of date.

The movies and "canned" music have recreated village life. Even in those families where there is no automobile life is a far pleasanter thing than it was twenty years ago. The movies entertain the whole family. And in the evenings, when the movies fail, the average soda fountain draws not with ice-cream cones and candy alone but with a rollicking, jazzing mechanical player. The drug store has become largely a refreshment parlor; it is now a social center. Young and old meet there and strolling and loafing have gone into the discard.

The closing of saloons may have helped, but even before prohibition the lilting notes of music boxes in ice cream parlors began to woo the vil-

Twenty years ago never was there such joyousness in country life, such clothes worn by the young girls, such sang-froid among the boys, such naive sophistication upon all. There spoke the screen in Mary Pickford curls, in styles of an extremity, in a youth's cane, in a girl's vampish slouch. And all the joy life. That is the secret of the change that has come over village habits of living. The cheap cost of the photoplay and the graphophone has taught the public in out-of-the-way places to get into the game; to live joy-

The government has been very succaseful in getting the profiteers into the newspapers, but what the public wants is to see 'em in jail.

Many of these automobile drivers who can't lose a minute by slowing up around curves are compelled later to lose sev eral weeks in the hospital.

"Let George do it," say a lot of people in regard to raising vegetables. All right, George will do it, but he won't the principle decided was the same in pay for the vegetables.

As long as silk shirts are advertised so much more conspicuously than garden tools, the country cannot, be conidered in a wholly sound condition.

Fifty-one freight cars loaded with sugar held up in Chicago railroad yards, but of course luxuries have to be transported before necessaries in these times.

It is suspected that some of the people who are spending money to get presidential candidates nominated might be willing, at great personal sacrifice, to take cabinet jobs or foreign missions.

LETTONAL CORVERTEDUS NOW AND THEN

The national political conventions are nite different affairs from what they used to be 25 years ago. In those times 95 per cent. of the people voted pretty nearly a straight party ticket. The rest majority voted the way their fathers and grandfathers did." Today the majority of people ask to be shown." Most people have a party preference, but they will not back up their party when it makes a bed nomination. As a result the party leaders of today are far more cautions than they were formetly. It is not a queetion of getting safe candidates who will distribute the offices fairly and harmon-ize all the politicians. The candidate today must make good with the people. The politicians realize this fact quite early and are keeping their ears very Princess Anne, much closer to the ground than they of business have the retail merchants had to meet such a difficult situation. On the one hand they have had to meet the public, which has been hot over high prices. Many people who could not increase their income to balance the rise in prices have visited their wrath upon the retail merchant whom they have indignantly charged with profiteering. And on the other hand, they have had to meet the demands of the manufacturers and wholesalers, which have been sometimes about impossible. It has taken a great deal of effort even to secure deliveries of goods through this period. Then when the stores got the stuff they have often had to pay prices fixed at time of delivery.

Now, with the public striking against high prices, they may no sooner get made good money. Whenever people show indifference about prices and deliberately select the most costly things the merchant can make money because he can fit his prices to meet the situation. The average retailer in a place like Princess Anne finds it hard work to do as well, cost of his own living considered, as he was doing before the war. The people must remember that they need the service of their home stores. They must be willing to allow hem a fair return.

If the public will buy everything possible of their home stores it will help the merchants keep cleaned up and in a position to pay off loans promptly and meet the changes of the times as they

So now the Liberty bonds may be bought far below par and if they are held to maturity the holder will get one hundred cents on the dollar. Take the Fourth Liberty 41s which are selling below 84. An investment of say $840 now will in 1938 bring a payment of $1,000, and in addition the bond will pay annually $42.50 as interest, and if this interest is deposited when the coupons are clipped so that it will be compounded there will be another $1,000 accumulated by the time the Liberty bond matures. Some parents are making an investment of this kind for very young children, so that by the time they reach the age of 21 years they will have $2,000 of capital available which grew out of an investment of $840 by the parents. If the heads of 22,000,000 families in the United States would adopt this course the question of the public absorbing the funded debt would be solved. - Frank D. McLain, financial editor, in the Philadelphia Press.

The Unio Referendum Knocked Aut

The Supreme Court of the United States disposed of an interesting point in regard to woman suffrage and prohibition in the decision rendered Tuesday on the referendum issue. The same question was raised in Ohio as to both amendments, and, though one is restrictive and the other emancipative, each. So far as these two amendments are concerned, the court holds that the Ohio referendum is unconstitutional and that the ratification of an amendment by a Legislature is final.

This decision settles the important point that the suffragists need only one more State to win. If they can get Delaware, North Carolina or Louisiana this summer women will be able to vote in all the States in November. Let us hope that the antisuffrage legions will stand firm in each of these States, at least until provision shall have been made to safeguard against the dangers which the suffrage amendment threatens. -Baltimore Sun.

RIGHT STOCK FOR BREEDING

Fowls Should Be Healthy and Vigorous for Best Success-Yearling Hens Preferred.

For success in raising chickens it is necessary to have healthy and vigorous breeding stock, for the lack of vigor in the newly hatched chicks is often traceable to weak parents. Only the most vigorous and the best grown birds should be put in the breeding yards. Each bird should be full of life and energy and free from any serious deformity.

Yearling hens are usually better than pullets for breeders, because hens are more mature and do not lay so many ears during the early winter, and conequently do not reduce their vitality so much before the breeding season. Vigorous hens two to four years old can often be advantageously retained in the breeding yard.

The male bird chosen should be young and active. An early hatched, well-developed cockerel is usually satisfactory, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture affirm, or a good, vigorous yearling or two-year-old cock may be chosen. The hens used for breeding purs should be given the best care possible; they should be provided with large runs and should not be forced for heavy egg production during the early winter.

DEADLY FOE OF LAZY FOWLS

When Trap Nests Are Used No Amount of Cackling Will Deceive Owner of Poultry Flock.

Trap nests are the deadly foe of the they hen. When they are used, no amount of cackling and appearance of industry can conceal the fact that she isn't delivering the goods. They are the one accurate way by which the owner of a flock can eheck up on the laying ability of the individual hens.

Besides being valuable in locating the drones, their use is advisable for the following additional reasons:

They help to make the birds tame, thereby tending toward increased egg production. They furnish definite knowledge concerning the egg production of individual fowls.

They furnish the most satisfactory basis for utility or other breeding. They show which hen lays each individual egg; thus furnishing the essential basis for pedigree breeding.

YIELD WHITE-SHELLED EGGS

Mediterranean Breeds Are Best Suited for Production-Do Not Make Good Sitters.

Poultry of the Mediterranean or egg breeds are best suited for the production of white-shelled eggs. Represencives of this class are bred largely for the production of eggs rather than for meat production. Among the popular breeds of this class are: Leghorn, Minorca, Ancona and Andalusian. One of the outstanding characteristics of the egg breeds is the fact that they are classed as nonsitters. That is, as a rule, they do not become broody and hatch their eggs. When fowls of this class are kept, artificial incubation and brooding are usually employed.

HOW TO RID FLOCK OF FLEAS

Necessary to Clean and Spray Houses and Runs Thoroughly and Then Treat the Fowls.

In many of the Southern and Southwestern states fowls and chicks are often infested by a species of flea, commonly known as the "stick-tight" flea, because of its habit of sticking to one place on the bird instead of moving about like lice and mites. They are usually found in clusters on the comb, wattles, and around the eyes. Chicks, when infested, often die quickly. Old fowls, while usually stronger: and more resistant, will cease laying, or nearly so, and sometimes die as the result of the attacks.

"Stick-tight" fleas breed in cracks and crevices of brood coops and poultry houses, and dry animal or vegetable refuse, but not in damp or wet places. Therefore, to get rid of them it is necessary to clean and spray the houses and runs thoroughly, as well as to treat the birds, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture. Grease the comb and wattles of the fowls and chicks with a preparation of kerosene and lardone part kerosene to three parts of lard-being very careful not to use too much of the mixture or get any of it in the birds' eyes or on other places where it is not necessary, as it may cause injury if used too freely.

Clean and spray the coops and houses thoroughly, the same as for poultry mites; also wet or spray the yards or runs, especially any dry soil about the poultry houses, such as dirt floors or ground underneath a board floor, with a solution of salt and water, which helps to keep the ground moist and prevents the fleas from breeding.

OYSTER SHELLS ARE NEEDED

Lime is Essential for Hens to Manufacture Eggs-Fowls Will Balance Own Ration.

Pullets and hens do better for having oyster shell as a regular part of their ration. This was proved by the New York experiment station some years ago, when a poultry writer condemned the use of oyster shell as un-

It was proved that a pound of oyster shell contains enough lime to manufacture about seven dozen eggs. This should not be fed in the mash. Fowls know more about what they need to eat than we do. If they have the oyster shell, ground bone, meat scraps and grit in hoppers before them, with a variety of ground grains in dry mash, they will balance their ration better than we can balance it for

DUST BATH VERY IMPORTANT

To Control Chicken Lice It Is Necessary That Fowls Be Given Some Light Material.

One important condition in controlling chicken lice is to give the fowls abundant opportunity to dust themselves. For this purpose, dust, air slaked lime, ashes, or any light, dusty material is suitable. Fresh, slightly damp (but not wet) earth in which to scratch or dust should always be

TURKEYS ARE HARD TO RAISE

Reason Is Because Poults Are Allowed to Become Chilled or Damp and Infested.

Many people say that turkeys a too hard to raise, and fewer of them are raised from the number of eggs set than any other kind of fowl. This is almost always because the little poults are allowed to get chilled or damp or lousy during the first month or six weeks. After that age turkeys are the hardiest of fowls.

 JOCELYN OF THE BLUE ARROW LINE

By RAY LEWIS

* (@, 1920, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Se our little girl is determined to come home," said Captain McDonald slowly, tossing back to his wife the letter she had given him. "What shall we do about it, Molly?"

"There's nothing to be done," returned his wife. "Didn't you see that she was going to start at once? You'll have to meet her tomorrow if we dock in time."

Twenty-five years ago, attractive Molly Steward had braved her parents' opposition and married Bruce McDonald, a powerful young Scotchman, with more skill at managing perverse mule drivers than culture or education. But Molly had not been unhappy.

Then had arrived a little girl so pretty even in her first baby days that Molly, searching her brain for the daintiest name she knew, named her Jocelyn. And the child grew up to fit the name -slim, graceful, with softly curling sun-kissed hair and eyes like blue velvet pansies. Vaguely at first, then quite definitely, the parents grew to realize that the crudeness of the girl's surroundings were not calculated to develop her mind and character as they wished. And there was the question of education. After many hours of anxious meditation, Molly sat down and wrote to her widowed sister-and enclosed a snapshot of Jocelyn.

As a result, Jocelyn went to live with her aunt in a distant city, where she went to school, learned how to speak the king's English correctly and how to dress. There had been money enough for it all without any asking of charity from the aunt, for Captain McDonald, in spite of diminishing traffic on the canal, had made good with his Blue Arrow line barges.

As the years passed the girl's visits to her father and mother had become less frequent, and they, considering the girl's welfare, had been satisfied. Now, sudden and unexpected, had come her letter saying that she was "tired of being away so long from her own home" and that she was "coming before they could tell her not to."

Jack Stafford threw his portfolio down on the bank of the canal, removed his straw hat and mopped his brow. Tramping the towpath on a hot August afternoon, even in the interests of a free lance story on the "Passing of the Old Erie," wasn't altogether delightful.

"A nice, slow motor boat that would steer itself would just about hit me off," he grumbled. "Then I could sketch as I traveled and yet go slow enough not to miss anything."

As if in answer to his wish a boat poked her nose around the bend of the canal-but not the motor boat of his desire. Instead appeared the head barge of a tow.

"Jupiter!" cried Jack suddenly. "An idea for fair!"

And when the barges drew abreast he stepped forward, picked out the man who seemed to be in charge and begged of him board and lodging for a few days, compensation to be given accordingly.

The man hearkened, then called his wife. "Molly, this young man wants to take a trip with us; can we put him up?"

On the lips of his wife formed a refusal. Then she checked it. "Why, if there is room on one of the other barges. Our daughter has just come home and our bunks are full, but you're welcome to take your meals with us."

So Stafford found himself installed and started on the plodding journey to Buffalo. The tow had been held up awhile at one of the locks as a previous string of barges was put through.

As he swung back to the forward chair in the cabin doorway looked up quickly. Taken off his guard, Jack stared, unbelieving. Then he bowed, and said, "I'm going with the tow for a way. Are we fellow travelers?"

Jocelyn smiled. "I'm the captain's daughter," she returned simply. "So I guess we are."

travel, and the young people soon became oblivious to all but each other.

Long ago Jack's article on the old canal had lost much of its importance. Why worry about outside occupations when father's considerable business would some day be his-a business which in the meanwhile gave him a tion? And yet-if it wasn't for his dependence on his father wouldn't he perhaps allow himself to think of this glorious girl more seriously? As it was him.

his hand. At the sudden touch Jack forgot his father, his business everything but the girl at his side.

"Jocelyn!" he cried hoarsely and folded her in his arms. And Jocelyn, her velvet eyes lifted to his, let him see the love and surrender in them. "You're going to marry me, girl!" he said, shaking her a little to emphasize his seriousness, "as soon as we can get the license after we dock." "All-all right," said Jocelyn, breathless, but happy.

True to his word, Jack, the day the tow reached port, went up to the city hall to make investigations. Then he went around to the post office for his accumulated mail—bills, a letter from the firm, one from his father. Poor father! What a surprise he was going to get when he received the letter Jack had just mailed. Yet father got in his surprise first.

"Dear Jack-Don't know where this will find you. I shall be in Georgian bay very shortly. Am going to marry Mrs. Cynthia Arnold. Everything C. K. at factory. Yours, Slowly Jack folded the letter and slipped it in his pocket. So his father was going to be married and going to Georgian bay for a honeymoon. He knew the lady by hearsay-knew that she was quietly well-to-do, of unassailable social position. This unexpected alliance on his father's part would not make the bargeman's daughter any more welcome to his father. Well, as far as that went, he would give up his father, his business, everything, before Jocelyn.

And then Jocelyn gave him the greatest surprise of all.

"It's all right about the license, honey," he said. Then, holding out his father's letter, "as long as you're coming into the family, you might as well know you're going to have a step-mother-in-law. I hope he will be happy. No one could be as happy as we are going to be!"

But Jocelyn was reading, "Am going to marry—why, Jack, how funny! Mrs. Cynthia Arnold—that's my aunt!"

LAND OF HILLS AND RAVINES

Reasons Why Mountainous Madeira Is Somewhat of a Trial for the Traveler on Foot.

Of all civilized parts of the world, Madeira is the most difficult to get about in. This is because so much of its landscape is, as it were, set on

Once upon a time a volcano broke loose in the sea-floor where Madeira is now located. It built up an enormous mountain, which it presently thrust above the surface, and kept on at the business until four lofty islands had come into being. Two of these are even now uninhabited. The larger of the other two is called Madeira and is terrifically mountainous, with many rugged peaks, the highest of which has an elevation of nearly a mile and a quarter. Much of the coast is an irregular line of lofty precipices.

The islands, built of lava (the group is called "the Madeiras"), are so rugged, with steep hills and deep ravines, that travel by any ordinary means is hardly practicable. Hence tourists who visit them and well-to-do residents are commonly carried in litters or drawn in curious sled-carriages by bullocks.

The Madeiras belong to Portugal and are 360 miles west of the coast of Morocco. To keep the rich soil from being washed off the mountain side, incredible labor has been expended in the making of terraces. No wine of its kind approaching in quality the old-time product of Madeira has been known; but about seventy-five years ago, the vines were well nigh destroyed by a fungous disease, and the output since then has been of markedly inferior excellence.

Cicerone.

Cicero was one of the great orators Jack had climbed out to sketch the of ancient times, and certainly the greatest orator of ancient Rome of whom we have any account. He was barge, the occupant of a low rocking both a lawyer and a politician, and besides a man of letters and something of a philosopher. Many of his letters and several of his written speeches have come down to us and are well known, not only to Latin scholars, but also to readers of English into which language they have been translated. By a kind of analogy Followed long, lazy days of leisurely of modern times that has degraded the name, there came into use the word, eicerone (four syllables), an Italian word that English has borrowed, meaning a guide to point out objects of interest to strangers. In a party of sight-seers the guide is the chief speaker, and as he came to be compared to the famous Latin orator. comfortable berth and a month's vaca- Cicero, a name was given him by cor-

GABABILITY!

You can spot a "fake" stock-salesman by his "gabability." He'll tell you about the wonderful profits that have been made in other stocks, how he's anxious to give you this "chance," how he's letting you in on the "ground-floor."

But getting in on the ground floor of such schemes generally means that you'll have a chance to "crawl out of the cellar window" later on.

TILGHMAN'S FISH FERTILIZERS Help Solve the Farm Labor Problem

The farmer, as are many big manufacturers, is up against a shortage of labor. One of the big problems of present day farming is how to solve the labor problem. It is having the serious consideration and attention of not only the farmers themselves, but all economic experts who realize that the prosperity of the country depends upon keeping up and increasing farm production.

All authorities agree that one of the most practical ways to meet this situation is to increase the yield per acre. In other words, enable the farm owner and the help he has left to produce as much as formerly by intensive production. To bring this about the use of fertilizers is vitally necessary, for fertilizers enrich the soil, increase the yield and improve the quality.

It is much more economical to fertilize your present acreage and make your present labor more efficient than it is to plow up more acres, so use plenty of Tilghman's Fish Fertilizers and let it help you keep up your production despite your lack of help.

Commission's Statement Pertaining

To Proposed Highway Dr. E. P. Simpson, president; Arthur Andrews, treasurer, and W. Edelen Webster, secretary, of the Good Road Commission for Deal's Island and Princess Anne, request the publication of a true statement pertaining to the proposed shell road between this town and Deal's Island. Their letter follows:

"A delegation of representative citizens waited on the County Commissioners sometime in February and, after a strenuous fight, the commissioners promised to furnish the shells if our committee would finance the hauling and spreading of the same.

"On May 11th our committee had another interview with the Board of Commissioners, advising them that shells were not being provided. They claimed they were unable to purchase the shells for 3 cents per bushel. This was great surprise to us, as no limitation in price was embodied in their proposed agreement made in February.

"We are thus handicapped and placed in an embarrassing position by our commissioners, as every one knows it is impossible to purchase shells at 3 cents a bushel. We have acted in good faith and trust the many public spirited citizens who have contributed to this commendable enterprise will realize we have done all we could, and whilst a number of good citizens are willing to contribute as long as the work progresses, we are up against a tough proposition and feel there is nothing left for us to do but place the matter before the public to judge where the fault

INCREASED TELEPHONE RATES Chesapeake And Potomac Company

Asks For Increased Rates

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, of Baltimore city, has filed with the Public Service Commission a petition for increased rates. Uncompany asked that the rates established by the Postmaster General during period of Government control of the wires be made permanent, but for a long time it has been known to the commission that the company would ask for more money than the present rates are yielding.

The Public Service Commission has ruled that the Telephone Company is entitled to earn 8 per cent. on its investment. In accordance with the revision in the rates filed with the commission the company would only be earning 1.283 per cent. on its investment in the Maryland elsewhere territory, which does not include Baltimore

The new rates for Princess Anne and Oriole as set forth in the schedule filed include the following:

The individual business line rate is increased from $3 to $3.50 per month, the four-party business line rate from $2 to $3 per month. The individual residence line from $2 to $2.75 per month. the four-party residence rate from $1.50 to $2 per month. The rural business line rate from $2 to $3 per month, the rural residence rate from $1.50 to $2 per month. Extension station business service from 50 cents to $1 per month; the extension station residence rate remains the same, 50 cents per month. Service station companies who own their telephone sets from 42 cents to $1 per month for each business station, and from 42 cents to 67 cents a month for each residence subscriber. Service station companies who rent their telephone sets from the Telephone Company are increased from 67 cents to $1.25 per month for each business station, and from 67 cents to 92 cents per month for each residence subscriber. The service station companies compose the co-partnership lines owned, constructed and maintained by the people in the rural sections.

Under the present rates the gross telephone revenue is $1,990,800. Increase from proposed rates $243,057, or a total gross telephone revenue of $2, 233,857. Under the present rates the telephone expenses show $2,118,200. The increase from the proposed rates shows $16,321. The total expenses under the proposed rates $2,134,521. The net telephone revenues under present rates show a loss of $127,400. The increase from the proposed rates show $226,736. The net increase under the proposed rates shows $99,336, or a rate of return of 1.283 per cent. Under the present rates the company shows a loss of 1.645 per cent, in the State not including Baltimore city. The estimated fair value for rate-making purposes shows $7,744,910.

STATE CAPITAL

Road Funds First

Annapolis .-The new State Roads Commission its first meeting, Governor Ritchie attending.

The commission decided in effect that no contracts for lateral roads will be awarded until the several counties shall have contributed or guaranteed their share of the cost of construction as provided by the new loan, one-half of the cost being borne by the state and one-half by the counties with such deductions as may be possible by federal aid and by funds now available.

The commission considered the two following propositions, which are immediately pressing:

The amount of unobligated funds on hand available for new construction. It was not possible to ascertain from the commission's books and reports what this amount is without an audit. The commission felt that it was necessary to know accurately how much free money is available for new road construction before considering the question of what new roads should be built. Accordingly, the commission, and he will at once audit the commission's books, and report to the next meeting of the commission, to be held on Thursday, June 11 at 11 A. M., what the exact situation is when it will at once be made known to the public.

A new system of bookkeeping will then be inaugurated, from which the financial condition of the road funds will be at all times known, and made public by periodical reports.

Table is Studied.

The commission closely studied the following table, which shows the road mileage in each county, the percentage of the total road fund to be provided by each county and amount of each county's share for the first year. To the total sum of $750,000 will be added appropriations by the Federal government for inprovements of post roads, and any funds now available, funds from these sources being about equal to the state and county quotas:

WATCH PHONE CO. ASKS FOR LOCAL RATE PAISE

Hearing on Telephone Charges Scheduled for June 14, in Baltimore

Baltimore. Maryland.-With the aling of proposed rates for business and residence service throughout the State of Maryland, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company has announced to the public the slight increase which will be necessary to run the service under existing costs.

Shortly after filing the petition for an increase telephone officials were notified by the Public Service Commission that a hearing would be started Monday; June 14, to which interested parties are invited. The hearing is simply a continuation of the case which was started before the Public Service Commission several months ago and was discontinued shortly before the death of former Chairman Reifsnider.

"Only think of the salaries they'll de-A. E. Berry, President of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, in presenting the petition for increase at the Public Service Commission last Monday made the statement:

"The rates for telephone service throughout Maryland can be justified on several grounds. The return on the invested capital is exceedingly low, less than six per cent. being realized throughout the State of Maryland if these rates are allowed. What other business is conducted at so low a profit? On the telephone investment in the rural districts of Maryland we are losing money and the rates which we are asking from the people of Maryland in the counties are simply enough to guarantee a rate of less than one and one-half cents on each

AN IMAGINARY HUSBAND

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Some gossips of Rodmore learned that Miss Teresa Martin had been seen in the next town purchasing a pipe, an ash tray and a fancy smoking stand. At once in their inquisitive, babbling circle the decision was arrived at that the lady in question was about to become a devotee of the weed.

A little later, after a shopping visit to the city, one of her packages was left in the train. The conductor restored it to her, but not until he had informed his wife that it had contained a pair of lounging slippers, man's size, and the imputation spread that Miss Martin had a beau and was going to get married. Several busybodies visited Miss Martin hoping to get a sight of the suspicious articles enumerated, but obtained no sight of

"Those old cats!" volubly denounced little Matilda Brown, the maid whom Miss Martin employed, and who was true blue and full of love toward the kind mistress who treated her as considerately as she would a relative. She was talking to a neighbor. "The idea! They just came snooping around to see if they could get hold of some mean thing to say about the loveliest lady in the world. Why haven't they got sense enough to guess: that Miss Martin has been making some presents to her cousins down at, Evansville, who got married last month?"

But Matilda's mind was full of secret uneasiness while she thus defended her beloved mistress, and she marveled at a great mystery concealed within the precincts of the pretty little cottage home. For neither smoking outfit nor slippers had been sent away. They reposed at that very moment in a room which recently Miss Martin had transformed from a library into a den, and a man's den, at that. She kept that especial apartment securely locked up when strangers were around, but she could not hide its existence from Matilda. Bit by bit she had furnished it, and as various articles of comfort and luxury adapted to mankind solely were set in place, Matilda solved the enigma to her own satisfaction in the cautious soliloguy:

"She's got an imaginary husband!" Yes, Matilda had correctly figured out the puzzle, and soon she knew a great deal more about it. Miss Martin, twenty-six, but still girlish, had never been wooed. She regretted the fact as she grew older, for life was monotonous and lonely. There was only one epistle in her life that had approximated real interest in a member of the other sex on her part. About a year previous Alan Frisbie, whom she had known since he was a schoolmate, had come to her on the score of long-time friendship.

"Teresa," he sad said, "I am not doing well in this town, and I want to try my luck further west. I need $200, and I want you to loan it to me if you have it and can spare it, to be faithfully repaid later. I wish to leave as security my dead mother's diamond ring, worth more than the. amount."

"You offend me by hinting at such a thing as security," declared Teresa, but he pressed the pledge upon her. Then, with tears in his eyes he lifted her hand to his lips and kissed it, and wept with deep emotion.

"You are the noblest of womankind, Teresa, and life is worth a lot if it has been only to find such a true, good friend!"

A month later from a thousand miles distant there came a brief note, inclosing a few pressed violets which the wanderer had gathered on the top of one of the loftiest mountains in the West. After that silence and dreams. Somehow the impressionable nature of Teresa craved some object to sentimentally consider. Her romance took the form of fitting up a room just as if it was for a husband, and she loved to sit mere in the gloaming and think of the man who might never return, but who was a fond memory to her devoted soul.

Of all this-the treasured violets. the emotional moods of her gentle. kindly mistress-Matilda became fully aware, and enjoyed a stolen participation in the secret. It was months later, and Miss Martin had gone to the city and left her in charge of the house, when there came a summons at the street door, and there stood the returned wanderer. He looked eager and prosperous, he was cheery and friendly with Matilda. She had always liked him, she liked him better than ever now as, in her simple way, she debated with herself as to how far she dared venture to employ: a present golden opportunity to let Alan Frisbie know just where he stood in the estimation of Miss Martin. Finally she decided.

"Mr. Frisbie," she said, "Miss Teresa will be mighty glad to see you." "Think so?" replied Frisbie, all

"Yes let me show you something." and Matilda secured the key of the den. She unlocked the door and ushered Frisbie into the room.

"She did that for you," continued Matilda to the amazed wanderer returned. "She had an imaginary husband-I mean you. Think-think hard what you are going to say to her when she comes."

It needed no thinking, but Alan Frishie blessed the loyal, loving little creature who had led his footsteps it into the garden of love.

Ocean Couldn't Be Damper Than Alsace, Was the Assertion Made by Negro Yank.

We wanted to watch the negro troops defile, according to Edith O'Shaughnessy in "Alsace in Rust and Gold." They appeared very smartly dressed till the eye got to their feet. Such a collection of ripped, torn, cut, down-at-the-heel footwear was never seen before. I spoke to a couple of them very much en repos, who were leaning against a fence near the motor, as I got in.

One answered with a broad grin: You an American from America?" "Yes."

"Well, have you heard this here war's about oveh?"

FAMILY

MEDICINE In Her Mother's Home, Says This Georgia Lady, Regarding Black-

Draught. Relief From Headache, Malaria, Chills, Etc.

Ringgold, Ga.— Mrs. Chas. Gaston, of this place, writes: "I am a user of Thedford's Black-Draught; in fact, it was one of our family medicines. Also in my mother's home, when I was a child. When any of us children complained of headache, usually caused by constipation, she gave us a dose of Black-Draught, which would rectify the trouble. Often in the Spring, we would have malaria and chills, or troubles of this kind, we would take Black-Draught pretty regular until the liver acted well, and we would soon be up and around again. We would not be without it, for it certainly has saved us lots of doctor bills. Just a dose of Black-Draught when not so well saves a lot of days in bed." Thedford's Black-Draught has been in use for many years in the treat-ment of stomach, liver and bowel troubles, and the popularity which it now enjoys is proof of its merit.

If your liver is not doing its duty, you will suffer from such disagreeable symptoms as headache, bilious, ness, constipation, indigestion, etc., and unless something is done, serious trouble may result.

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found a valuable remedy for these troubles. It is purely vegetable, and acts in a prompt and natural way, regulating the liver to its proper functions and cleansing the bowels of impurities. Try it. Insist on Thedford's, the original and genuine. E 79 Embarrassing Situation.

I have been teaching at the same place for fifteen years, have a family and up to a short time ago was considered respectable, but my most embarrassing moment also greatly lowered my standing in this town.

At recess, when all the pupils had gone to the recreation room and I sat alone at my desk, one of the young lady teachers came in and, after making me swear to keep her secret until the close of the school year, told me she had married my cousin the day before, and now that we were cousins she wanted me to kiss the bride.

She was very pretty and I needed no second invitation. But as I lifted my head after giving her a resounding smack, there stood our superintendent in the doorway, and I, sworn to secrecy, could not explain.-Exchange.

The Good Heckler.

Elihu Root said at a New York luncheon:

"I like to attend some radical meetings on account of the heckling that goes on at them. Hecklers are much cleverer than the speakers as a rule.

"A radical orator was being heckled the other evening by a broadshouldered lad in a brown cap. The orator got the worst of it, and he lost his temper. Finally he said in a voice of rage and hatred:

"Take off your cap, young man, if you want to question me!"

"Take off your cap! Take off your cap!' yelled the orator's supporters on the platform.

"But the broad-shouldered youth grinned and shouted:

" ' I didn't take off me cap when I went over the top."

The work maped out by Governor Ritchie to secure many lateral roads joining the State pikes ought to have a effect in the next few years in the State's development agriculturally. The whole of the next decade will be remired to build these lateral feeders, and the enhancement of the assessed value of the land will no doubt amount to millions of dollars—and every county treasury in Maryland will be substantially helped.

THE USE OF LEISURE

About 10 years ago the majority of the ndustries ran on a ten hour basis. It was considered a great advance for the working world when some generous concerns permitted a Saturday half holiday in the summer.

Now the majority of the industries have come down to an eight hour basis. As a result millions of people who formerly used to work long days have an hour or two of added leisure daily. If well employed this time can be a wonderful blessing.

It used to be said that an eight hour day would mean that great numbers of men would spend their time in liquor saloons. These prophets did not figure on prohibition. Yet many young bloods will hang around sporty places and play feverish games of chance. Their new leisure will leave them worse off than Deiore.

Many men of industrious temper will reflect that their wives still toil faithfully at household tasks for 10 to 14 hours a day. They will do their share in the garden. The eight hour a day ought to mean an enormous increase of back yard products.

Mary E. Taylor vs. Edward Taylor

The object of this suit is to procure a divorce vinculo matrimonii by the plaintiff from the The Bill states that the parties were married to each other on the 25th day of August, 1910, and that they lived together until about the 15th of September, 1916; that, though the conduct of the plaintiff towards the defendant has been kind and above reproach, the defendant has, without any just cause or reason, abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and has declared his intention to live with her no longer, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for at least three years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expects. years, and is deliberate and final, and the separation of the parties beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that the parties have no children born to them from said marriage; that the plaintiff is a resident of the State of Maryland, but that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland and is supposed to reside in the State of New York.

It is thereupon this 20th day of May, 1920, ordered by the subscriber, Clerk of the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be in-plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be in county once in each of four successive weeks before the 25th day of June, 1920, give notice to the said non-resident defendant, Edward Taylor, of the object and substance of this Bill, warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor on or before the 12th day of July, 1920, to show cause, if any he has, why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

The COUNTRY GENTLEMAN

(Stage business: Yankee snorts; Westerner grins.) We all know Oklahoma as an oil state, but the truth is that there is a lot more to her than oil. There's agriculture!

Even in the oil boom last year the income of the average Oklahoma farmer-nearly $4000included only about $200 of oil money. Oklahoma is doing big things in agriculture. In a series of four Country Gentleman articles, all of which you will enjoy if you send me your dollar today, Mr. Pickett tells about them. Every farmer hereabouts will profit by the experience of this great farm state, which pays the most excess-profit taxes. And remember: this series is just one among scores of features covering every farm interest included in a year's subscription for this unique national weekly of helpful farm service. The cost? Exceedingly Unlikely That Thieves Will Ever Rifle the National Treasury of Annam.

A Frenchman returned with an account of a singular national treasury in Annam. If the story is true—and it presents no essential improbabilitythe treasury is in no danger of robbery and is destined to become fa-

Now, in Annam iron safes of good resisting · power are for the most part unknown, and, unfortunately, adroit thieves are not. To defend his most costly treasures the native ruler had to resort to some means in harmony with the natural circumstances of the country.

Armed guards he could not fully trust. Animals do not steal money. and nature had supplied the ruler with a creature that could not be wheedled nor killed except with a great deal of trouble. The crocodile is such an animal. The ruler would have the crocodile guard his specie reserve.

Yet to avail himself of the services of the crocodile he must keep his money in a place where crocodiles are at home. Nothing was more simple. In the interior of his palace the ruler caused to be constructed a large tank or basin, which he kept filled with water. Then he took several teak logs, which he had bored with holes, and into these he put his specie reserve of gold and silver. The holes were closed up and the logs put into the tank.

Then some crocodiles of the largest and fiercest description were installed in the tank and maintained there-not being fed, however, with such a superfluity as to interfere with their natural ferocity. Any person who should undertake to reach the treasure-laden logs would surely be eaten by the crocodiles. And any one who should undertake to put the saurians out of the way would have to make noise enough to attract the attention of the human guards and of the ruler himself, for he, by Annam custom, is required to remain very closely in his

Woman "Called" Enver Pasha. Enver Pasha, the most autocratic and arrogant of the committee of union and progress, was obliged to listen to the protests of Turkish women against the large number of casualties in the Dardanelles and Bagdad campaigns. He called together the bereaved mothers and reminded them that their sons were among the faith-

One poor mother, bent with age and beyond caring for herself, dared to cry back to the man more feared by Turk and Christian alike than anyone else in the empire: "Marshallah, effendi (May it please God, your excellency), that your mother may soon have this same pride and pleasure that we have."-Barnett Miller, in Asia.

Electricity to Thaw Ground. The electric ground-thawing device used in Alaskan railroad building has the form of a hollow steel pile. This has a sharpened steel point at one end and a solid steel driving head at the other, and the hollow body contains a suitable resistance coil. The pointed tube is driven like any pile into the frozen ground to the required depth. Connection is then made with a power transmission line through a portable transformer mounted on a sledge and a low-volt current of high amperage is passed through the coil. The heat soon thaws the surrounding ground sufficiently for driving a wood-

Utilizing Wood Waste. The utilization of wood waste is one way recommended to cut down the high cost of living. Here are some articles made from sawdust and shingle waste which the New York College of Forestry is exhibiting in its efforts to show how the waste of the sawmill can be utilized to cheapen the cost of living. "Silk" socks, sausage casings, phonograph records, paper milk bottles, and tanbark shingles. The "silk" looks like silk and feels like silk, but is much cheaper than silk. The sausage casings are made by treating the wood with chemicals that turn it into viscose, and rolling this into thin films.

BEST FEED FOR LAYING HENS

Composition of Ration Rather Than Method of Feeding Influences Egg Production.

Experiments in the methods of feeding laying hens show that the composition of the ration rather than the method of feeding has the greater influence upon egg production. The tests were made at the Ohio experiment station.

Rations for laying hens should contain from 10 to 12 per cent of meat scrap or a good grade of digested tankage, or their equivalent in skim

The wet mash has some disadvantages, it is found, as it requires some time each day to prepare and give the mash and may cause digestive disturbances in the fowls if too much is fed. A satisfactory ration consists in feeding a grain mixture of corn, three parts; oats, one part, by weight, and for the dry mash ration, ground corn seven parts, bran 3 parts, meat scrap five parts. About twice as much grain as mash should be consumed.

UPGRADING MONGREL FOWLS

Noteworthy Progress Reported by Continued Use of Males of Pure 30: Breeding.

Noteworthy success is reported by the United States department of agriculture in grading up mongrel flocks of poultry by the continued use of males of pure breeding. During the last fiscal year, according to a statement of the bureau of animal industry, the third generation of Barred Plymouth Rock grades showed marked uniformity in color and type, and White Plymouth Rock grades showed much improvement, but did not all come pure white in color. In both kinds of grades individuals occurred which so closely resembled stock of pure breeding that it was impossible to tell the difference by their appearance.

PRESERVING EGGS IN BRINE

Good After Eight Months if Simple Measures Are Taken-Lime Good as Water Glass.

Eggs laid during April and May are of better quality for preserving than are those laid later in the summer. One pound of air slaked lime added to cooled, boiled water is equally as good a preservative for eggs as water

Only clean, fresh eggs with sound shells should be "put down." Use an earthen jar. Stir the lime thoroughly into the water and drop the eggs in gathered. Some lime settles to the bottom of the jar but does no harm. Two or three inches of the solution should cover the eggs to allow for evaporation. Keep in a cool place, preferably in a cellar.

Eggs preserved by this method may be safely kept for eight months. When ready for use, remove only the eggs that are necessary.

CARE FOR CONFINED CHICKS

Much Greater Attention Needed Along All Lines Than Those Given Free Range.

Growing chicks that are kept closely confined need much greater attention along all lines than those that have range. See that they have plenty of green feeds that have not wilted down to almost the decaying point and that the yards are kept sweet. Culling also is more essential when chicks are closely confined.

DO NOT MAKE GOOD MOTHERS

Best to Use Incubators and Brooders With Leghorns, Minorcas and Similar Breeds.

Leghorns, Minorcas, and similar breeds, while having many qualities to recommend them, do not make satisfactory mothers and the work of hatching and brooding the chicks may be done more satisfactorily with incubators and brooders.

CALLS FOR WAR ON RATS

United States Department of Agriculture Gives Figures of Depredations That Are Astonishing.

The rat is the worst animal pest in the world.

From its home among filth it visits dwellings and store rooms to pollute and destroy human food.

It carries bubonic plague and many other diseases fatal to man and has been responsible for more untimely deaths among human beings than all the wars of history.

In the United States rats and mice each year destroy crops and other roperty valued at over $200,000,000. This destruction is equivalent to the gross carnings of an army of over 200,000 men. On many a farm, if the grain eaten and wasted by rats and mice could be sold, the proceeds would more than pay all the farmer's taxes.

The common brown rat breeds six to ten times a year and preduces an average of ten young at a litter. Young females breed when only three or four months old.

At this rate a pair of rats, breeding uninterruptedly and without deaths, would at the end of three years (18 generations) be increased to 359,709,-482 individuals.

For centuries the world has been fighting rats without organization and at the same time has been feeding them and building for them fortresses for concealment.

If we are to fight them on equal terms, say specialists of the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture, we must deny them food and hiding places and must organize to rid communities of them. The department has devoted a great deal of study to the problem and is anxious to help in rat extermination, not only by supplying bulletins and other printed matter, but by supplying the advice of specialists in specific Built an Insulated House.

With a house built on the principle of a refrigerator, its walls insulated to keep the cold out, a new idea in construction of residences is being tested in the cold country in Canada, the Ohio State Journal remarks. The residence has been used for a year, being occupied by the dealgner and his family. It was tested verely during the past winter, when temperatures ran to 40 below zero, but it stood the test and was heated throughout with electric heat during the hardest winter. The walls were designed to keep the cold out and apear to have done so.

The walls are hollow, the outer rails being cement plaster on metal lath, with a top coat of stucco. Back plaster is placed between the metal lath and the studding. The outer wall sheet of concrete one and onehalf inches thick. The inner wall is of two layers of asphalt paper with wood lath and plaster on top. The airtight space in the wall is filled with insulating material, granulated cork with a mixture of planer shavings. The theory on which it is built is to prevent the movement of warmed air toward a cold surface.

The cost of construction was given as 10 per cent above ordinary methods.

Britain's Oldest Possessions. The Channel islands (Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney and Sark are the chief) are the oldest possessions of Great Britain. They were formerly an appanage of the duchy of Normandy and were united to the English crown after the Norman conquest of England by William of Normandy, in 1066. The inhabitants of the Channel islands preferred to remain subjects of King John at the period of the conquest of Normandy by Philip Augustus, 1180-1223. To King John it has been usual to ascribe a document at one time reverted to by the Channel island people as their Magna Charta; but modern critics have cast very grave doubts on its authenticity. Almost every war with France included a descent on the Channel islands, but all to no avail. The people, about 96,000 in number, acree to their old customs, and within well-defined limits make their own laws. They are not bound by acts of the imperial parliament unless specially named in them.

Good Sportsmanship.

If anything were needed to show at once both the British love of outdoor sports and the number of young Englishmen who were crippled by the war, it could be found in the actions of the British National Lawn Tennis association in so modifying the rules of the game that a one-armed player, when he serves, may toss the ball from his racket instead of with his hand. To put a disabled player on an equality with competitors who are whole is the very flower of sportsmanship.-Youth's Companion.

Telephone Facts. The telephone industry in 1917 gave employment to 262,629 persons, of whom 171,119, or over 65 per cent were women. The sum paid out in salaries and wages amounted to $175,670,449. Those employees operated plants and w.prpment valued at $1,492,329,015. which yielded operating and nonoperating revenues of $391,499,531.

Now that the war is over and Venice has recovered from the nightmare of having her wealth of art destroyed by shell fire, or, worse still, looted by soldiers, one by one her treasures from underground cellars or distant gallerles are being returned to their places. One of her most admired possessions, however, Titian's "Assumption of the Virgin," which is counted among the seven great masterpieces in the world, the pride of the Venetian Academy of Fine Arts, has been returned, not to the gallery, but to its original home in the choir of the beautiful gothic Church of the Frari, for which it was painted by Titian in

The magnificent frame of carved marble originally built round it now shows off the glorious picture to advantage and the Venetians are delighted that it should be restored to the position where its donors and the great genius who composed it intended it to remain.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. ID YOU ever "get fitted" to a watch? We mean, did you ever figure out exactly your watch needs and then see if you were properly

There are a dozen or more different Ingersollsvarying in price, varying in purpose—small watches, jeweled watches, radium dial watches for night use, and so on. For instance, if you have an expensive watch, you probably would choose a Radiolite for $3.50. If you haven't a good serviceable watch, you'd be likely to buy a 7-jewel Reliance. The dealer will help you to select just the one for you.

"Ingersoll" has always meant the lowest-priced good timekeeper. Today, with present day costs and the 1920 purchasing value of a dollar, $2.50 is the lowest price at which we can make a watch while keeping up the Ingersoll standard of quality. "Ingersoll" means "money's worth" whether it's for the $2.50 Yankee or one of the Radiolites that tell time in the dark, or for one of the jeweled watches.

The first complete report made in connection with the Raleigh and Wake county community study shows that the state of North Carolina has had nine capitals ,as follows: Bath, Edenton, Brunswick, Filmington, Newbern, Hillsboro, Smithfield, Fayetteville and Releigh. TELEPHONE RATES IN MARYLAND

THE CHESAPEAKE AND POTOMAC TELEPHONE COMPANY, like all other industries, has been seriously affected by increased costs. During 1919 our earnings were not sufficient to pay our expenses and interest charges.

THIS DEFICIT occurred in spite of the fact that in May, 1919, the Federal Government made some increases in our rates for service. These increases, however, did not at the time produce sufficient revenue and the increased cost of labor and material since has brought us to a point where additional revenue is imperative.

THEREFORE, we have submitted to the Public Service Commission a petition asking for a further increase in our rates sufficient to enable us to pay our expenses and earn some return on the investment.

WE RECOGNIZE our obligation to the public—to give good service at reasonable rates—but unless we have rates which produce sufficient revenue, we cannot maintain satisfactory service, nor can we secure the new capital necessary to keep pace with the growth of the community.

WE WANT OUR PATRONS to understand the situation that confronts the Company. We want you to know that we have no desire to make excessive profits. Pending the investigation by the Public Service Commission, we hold ourselves ready to furnish our patrons full information upon the subject, and we shall be glad to receive your inquiries.

PRISCILLA F. LEACH DEA

Expires After Long Illness At Her Home In Upper Fairmount

Mrs. Priscilla F. Leach, mother o State's Attorney Robert F. Leach of Baltimore, died at her home in Upper Fairmount, Somerset county, Sunday afternoon of last week, aged about 75

Mrs. Leach had been in failing health for the past two years, and several weeks ago her condition became so serious that the State's Attorney was summoned to her Somerset county home, where he remained for four or time in no immediate danger. The State's Attorney was called to his mother's bedside about a week before her death, but she insisted upon his return to Baltimore, saying that her condition was not grave enough to warrant his foregoing his important duties there. The doctors at that time told Mr. Leach that while his mother might be expected to pass away at any time, on the other hand, her life might be prolonged indefinitely.

Mrs. Leach was the wife of Robert F. Leach, a retired shipowner of this county. Besides her husband and son, she is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Charles A. Lankford, of Upper Fairmount, and Mrs. W. C. Franklin, of Los Angeles, California, and several grand and great-grandchildren. Funeral services were held at her late home on Tuesday and were conducted by Rev. J. A. Brewington (a son-in-law), of Hebron, assisted by Rev. George E. Sterling, of Upper Fairmount. Interment was in St. Stephen's P. E. Churchyard, Rev. O. H. Murphy, of Princess Anne, officiating. Messrs. Thomas, William, Wesley, Ira and Charles Holland, nephews of the deceased, and Mr. Grover Holland, grand-nephew, acted as pallbearers.

Loses foot in accident

Mr. Clifton Hancock, of Princess Anne, while riding a motorcycle Saturday afternoon, the 12th instant, on the stone road between Princess Anne and King's Creek, was in collision with an automobile driven by Garland Ennis, of Pocomoke City. Mr. Hancock's motorcycle was completely demolished and one of his feet was badly lacerated and crushed and he was otherwise badly bruised. He was taken to the Peninsula General Hospital at Salisbury, where the injured member was amputated last week. Mr. Ennis was scratched up a little but not seriously hurt. We understand the collision was accidental and no special blame could be attached to either party. Mr. Hancock is married and has the sympathy of the community in his misfortune.

26.000 Teachers Needed

Twenty-six thousand teachers are needed to fill vacancies in high schools opening in September, according to reckonings of the Bureau of Education, of Washington, D. C.

The estimate is based on 7,088 replies to questionnaires sent out by the bureau. More than one-fourth of those who taught last year do not intend to teach

The shortage must be filled in two vays, the bureau says:

"First, by recalling former teachers: second, placing teachers with less than college graduation in charge of high school elasses."

New Headlight Law In Operation

Everyone who has done any amount of night driving in the State during the past year or so appreciates the fact a radical change was necessary in the law so far as it applies automobile headlights. The tremendous number of machines which use our highways at night has made the use of strong and powerful headlights seem necessary to the majority of motorists. The average person thinks that if he has a sufficient light to get along with at a moderate rate of speed, he is not doing his duty; he feels that he must secure bulbs that will make the light shine at least half a mile down the road so that other people can see him coming.

The Automobile Club of Maryland rives the following warning to mortorists:

"All persons permitting a motor vehicle or motorcycle on the highways of this State, either at rest or in motion, day or night, equipped with electric headlamps containing no glass or clear glass, on and after Monday, June 21st, will be subject to arrest and fine, the minimum being $5 and costs.

A party from that place in automobiles passed through Princess Anne about 6 o'clock for Deal's Island and upon their arrival were soon convinced that the negro was not the man they wanted.

With the hunt for Fountain for nearly a week, the belief is that he is not now in Talbot county. Another belief is that the negroes in the Trappe district, where he is reported to have been seen, have tricked the searching parties and kept them in that vicinity following false clues so that Fountain might escape in another direction.

Special Appeal To Women Is Made By Red Cross

An urgent appeal has been sent out by the Potomac Division of the American Red Cross to all chapters in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia asking them to again call together their workers and press into service the needles, which were laid aside some months ago. This time it is not a matter of comforts for fighting men, but actual covering for thousands of children and adults in Europe, left utterly destitute by the World War and its aftermath of afflictions and horrors.

Hundreds of thousands of layettes and other articles of children's wearing apparel are needed particularly and at once, according to the cables received daily at Red Cross National Headquarters from responsible persons abroad. These messages reveal the increasing misery of the people there, beset by disease, famine and conditions rapidly approaching a state of complete chaos.

SYSTEM LACKING IN ROAD FUNDS

Governor Ritchie Makes Statement Showing Condition

Governor Ritchie last Tuesday gave out a statement attacking the accounting system used by the former State Roads Commission. Based upon a report made by the State Auditor's department, the Governor's statement sets forth that the Zouck commission did not keep construction and maintenance accounts separate; that accounts were not closed; that Federal funds were not shown as revenues, etc.

The Governor also charged that the books consist of an unbroken series of entries, beginning in 1908. That was when the Roads Commission was organized under the Crothers administration. with John M. Tucker as chairman. Since then there have been two chairmen. E. O. Weller in the Goldsborough administration and Frank H. Zouck in the Harrington. No charge of misconduct or of maladministration or inefficiency in roadbuilding was made by the Governor, but in addition to the charges of loose accounting he attacked the Zouck commission on the ground that it had permitted nine counties to overdraw their shares in the State-aid road funds, with the result that ten other counties have not got as much as they were entitled to. The Governor proposes that the 10 counties be reimbursed in the next

The counties that drew more funds Godfrey Anderson from Ethadeus I. than by law they were entitled to are: Brown, land in Princess Anne; consid- Allegany, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Carroll, Charles, Howard, Queen Anne, Washington and Wicomico. The aggregate amount of their overdrafts is $146,931.32.

The ten other counties which have not been allotted the amounts due them. which they are now and for a long time have been demanding, are: Calvert, Caroline, Dorchester, Garrett, Kent. Prince Georges, St. Marys, Somerset, Denwood O. McIntyre and wife from Talbot and Worcester. The aggregate amount due these counties is $160,764,-Princess Anne district; consideration 25, which, by drawing $17,589 from the above balance of $29,392, would be Roy L. Cordrey and wife from Harry available had the overdrafts not been

In referring to the above the Governor said: "The result, therefore, of giving the nine first mentioned counties $146,931 more than they were lawfully entitled to has been to deprive the Toney Bonavita from Clarence Hill other ten counties of the $160,764 to

"It does not seem to me advisable to ask the nine counties to reimburse the State Aid Fund for the amount of their respective overdrafts. To charge the amounts of the overdrafts against the respective shares these nine counties Ward and wife, land in Lawson's dis- will receive from the new lateral road fund, thus releasing the amounts—which would otherwise go to these countiesfor allotment among the ten counties which have been deprived of their share, would interfere unduly with the lateral

> "The only solution seems to be for the State to recognize its obligation to the ten counties which have not received their share and make adequate provision therefore in the next budget."

At a meeting last Thursday of the State Roads Commission, Governor mixed maintenance and construction accounts were adjusted by wiping off the books all apparent deficits in the several accounts due to borrowing from one fund to help another.

The deficit the commission determined to write off was $645,778.19, which had been borrowed from maintainance by the construction fund. As there is not now any indication of where the money would come from to pay back this fund, it was determined to simply charge it permanently to construction rather than carry it longer as a liability to be paid back at some future date.

It was determined that the $185,206.70 of the state road fund found by the recent audit as available and unobligated will be used for the building of highways through incorporated towns forming links in the main arterial system.

Verdict Guilty For Connorton

Charles Connorton, Tangier Island deputy sheriff, who was covicted of shooting Roland Parks by a jury in the Accomac County Court last Friday night and given a year's sentence in Richmond penitentiary, was denied a new trial Saturday morning by Judge Fletcher, who presided. THE SILVER YATAGHAN

By LILY WANDEL

(6. 1510, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) Alcina thoughtfully chewed the end of her pencil in Mrs. Mawson's great library. She was off in a corner with ber typewriter and letters, but she was not thinking of work. Tomorrow was a holiday and in the evening there was to be a fancy dress ball. Phil, her brother, in a rare burst of brotherly interest had promised to ting to be a regular little mouse and I'm going to take you out among people," he had said patronizingly. "Now, don't worry and be bashful; I'll scare up a few fellows to dance with you, but of course you can't expect to be the belle of the evening and all that sort of thing. Get yourself a costume something that suits you; be a Quakeress or a schoolmarm."

She had nodded and thanked him, but inwardly resolved to throw off her little mouse cloak and be somebody else just for one evening. "I'm sick and tired of being the sedate private secretary; I'm just as funloving and jolly as any other girl if I'd have half a chance. And I'm going to have it, too. A masquerade ball is just the thing!" And then and there she decided to go as a Turkish

At home in a locked bureau drawer lay the costume quite handy-yellow silk trousers, crimson bolero jacket and white batiste chemise, red turban and floating, filmy veil, even turnedup Turkish slippers and a wonderful black and red sash. It was a perfect outfit; she really would look like a Tukish woman, but, she wanted to be a vamp! Something was needed, a little touch—she did not know what. So she continued to bite the unoffendmg pencil and stare with wrinkled forehead at the high bookcases, antique shields and swords that decorated the somber walls. Right above her little typewriter table hung a queer looking thing, a dagger or knife, thought Alcina idly. Very black and tarnished, an odd handle, too, the soul crossbar missing and the blade ore than a foot long, flexed in a graceful double curve. On the handle ething was engraved, curious charcters she rose to see it better why that must be a Turkish inscription. Oh, now she knew, the dagger was a Turkish yataghan! Suppose it were dished and gleaming, stuck in her th; then she would look like a amp a real Turkish vamp!

That was the touch that her cosume needed. The only trouble was: Would Mrs. Mawson lead it to her for the ball? She doubted it, for the old lady had recently refused to lend her a book from the well-stocked library. there was another way. Mrs. Mawson never entered the gloomy room. Alcina always went to her employer's perior or dressing room for dictation or instructions. If she took the yataghan home with her tonight and returned it the day after tomorrow no one would know the difference.

When five o'clock came, Alcina, a bit conscience stricken, took down the dagger, and wrapping it quickly in a piece of newspaper, stuck it in her muff, and without looking right or left hurried from the house.

At home, in the privacy of her room, she rubbed and polished it, and behold, the black melted away and heautiful, gleaming silver came to view! Her eyes sparkled with delight as she saw herself in her pretty Turkish suit with a silver yataghan stuck In her sash. It was bound to attract the attention of everybody.

When they left the dance a long cloak covered her up completely so that not even Phil had an inkling of her costume. He was not even curious, for he thought he would know her in any kind of dress.

She lingered in the dressing room, and then conscious that she looked very pretty and attractive, took the plunge into the ballroom just in time to see Phil benevolently tuck the hand of a demure little shepherdess under his arm and patter of with her under the impression he was doing his duty to Alcina.

Alcina was surrounded at once. Hverybody was sure they knew her. Knights and clowns, sailors and Roman soldiers, all were highly interested in the Turkish vamp with the glittering silver yataghan. Alcina had not known that any one scould have such a glorious time. By and by she realized that she had a certain fascinating toreador, and decided it was time to change, but he persuaded her to sit out a dance. Laughing they found a little nook for a tete-a-tete.

"That silver yataghan, it attracted me at once when you entered the room; where on earth did you find anything so wonderful?" he asked. Alcina flushed under her veil at loss for an answer, when a rather merry Pilgrim strutted up and pulled her off for a fox trot. She gave a little sigh of relief: the toreador was bus followed, and there, in time, he lovely, but the questioning about the yataghan was embarrassing. She noticed with delight that it was near twelve, atmost time to unmask. She quite longed to see the Spaniard's to go into a bank in the city? How face. And then the joy of Phil's did he acquit himself? gement when he saw who the Tuckish vamp was!

The yataghan must have slipped little-where was it? It was goneshe had lost it! Then began a frantic search, but it was not to be found. Terror-stricken, she questioned many of the dancers, and then, as a last resort, ran to the dressing room and asked the maid. No one had seen the dagger. It had vanished, it seemed. Tears of fright came to Alcina's dark eyes; she sank to a chair in the cloakroom, miserable, utterly unhappy. The evening was over for her. She could not return to the festivities. In a moment or two, enveloped in her long cloak, she was speeding home in a taxi alone. A sorry end of the wonderful evening.

At breakfast Phil was not even concerned about how she had reached home alone. He was still under the impression that she had been the take her to the festivity. "You're get- shepherdess and somebody had informed him that she had left with an escort. Alcina did not explain, she was too miserable to care about anything except how she would explain the loss of the yataghan to Mrs. Maw-

A very pale, quiet social secretary crept into the great gloomy library for work that morning. She raised two worried eyes to the bare spot where the yataghan had hung-but -was she dreaming-she rubbed her eyes, for there in its old place hung the Turkish dagger, polished like new. Alcina drew back, actually frightened, then hastened to touch it to see if it was real and not an optical illusion. No, it was the silver yataghan, there was no possible mistake. "I don't understand it," she said aloud; "it's the most remarkable thing that ever happened." "Not really so very remarkable, considering that I put it there," said a voice strangely familiar. Alcina swung around to see a tall young man quite unknown to her. "Don't you really remember your devoted toreador?" he questioned, coming nearer.

Alcina gasped. "How on earth did you get here and how do you know me, if you please?"

"I think I would recognize the dark eyes of my Turkish vamp anyapology. I took the yataghan last night-you see it happened to be my yataghan. I recognized it immediately. But if I had had an idea that it would make you leave I never would have done it in the wide world. When I could not find you anywhere, then I left, too.".

Alcina, mortified, her breath coming fast, answered, very disturbed, "Then you must be Mrs. Mawson's youngest son?"

He nodded. "I am very much ashamed of myself for causing you an anxious moment over that old knife. And I'm going to confess still further. When I came home night before last I happened to glance in the library, and le and behold a very charming young woman was taking down my old Turkish yataghan and putting it in her muff. I wondered what on earth she could possibly want with that sword. On questioning mother I found out who you were and that you intended to go to a fancy dress ball. Then and there I decided that I was going to the ball, too, but it was not the silver yataghan that made me go! Please forgive me, and let's be friends!" He held out both hands beseechingly, and before Alcina knew what she was doing she had laid her hands in his! It was a silent but true promise of future partnership in the silver yataghan!

MADE FAMOUS BY COLUMBUS

Island of Porto Santo Known to Moderns as Place Where Great Explorer Once Dwelt.

Off the north shore of Madeira lies a misty strip of island which accounts itself famous because Christopher Columbus once lived there. Porto Santo, as the mist-covered isle is called, consists of huts and houses in the form of a town known as the Villa, scattered vineyards and grain fields, a steep range of hills and a shore line now edged with spiky crags, now sinking into a level stretch of sand.

If it had not been for Columbus the island would be altogether dull and commonplace. As it is, the place is often dull, but it lives in history, and sometimes travelers come over from Madeira to see the island where the discoverer once lived and where he is said by some to have received his first clew to the existence of an unknown land in the West.

Porto Santo was discovered by accident early in the fifteenth century by a Portuguese explorer who was driven there during a storm. As the day happened to be All Saints' day, and as he was particularly thankful to have danced three times in succession with found a safe refuge from the wind. the navigator named the little island Porto Santo. He then returned to Portugal and spoke in such enthusiastic praise of the discovery that a colony was soon formed to take possession of the land of promise. Among the colonists was Bartholomeu Percestrello, an Italian sea captain serving with the Portuguese government, who was to be governor of the island.

Columbus fell in love with Bartholomeu's daughter in Lisbon. So when she departed for Porto Santo, Colummarried her.

Declaration of Principles Adopted By Convention

Republican Administration Pledged To Co-operate With The Other Nations -President Condemned Fo 1ssuing Commands As Dictator

Chicago.-With the adoption of a platform bridging the chasm which has separated for a year the hitherto uncompromising elements in the party, the Republican National Convention, relieved with the realization that it has escaped another 1912, set its stage for the nomination of a ticket which will make its supreme bid for the favor of the American people.

FOR A PEACE AGREEMENT. The plan in the Republican platform on the Versailles Treaty and League of Nations is in strong accord with the principle of a concert of nations advocated by Senator France, of Mary-

The plank in the Republican platform urged by the league advocates, the mild reservationists or the irreconcilables. Its language is so nearly at one with that in the Senator's addresses on the subject that the plank might well have been written by him.

"The Republican party stands for agreement among the nations to preserve the peace of the world. We believe that such an international association must be based upon international justice and must provide methods which shall maintain the rule of public right by development of law and the decision of impartial courts. and which peace shall be threatened by political action, so that the nations shall secure instant and general international conference whenever pledged to do and insist upon what is just and fair may exercise their influence and power for the prevention of war. We believe that all this can be done without the compromise of national independence; without depriving the people of the United States in advance of the right to determine for themselves what is just and fair when the occasion arises, and without involving them as participants, and not as peacemakers, in a multitude of quarrels, the merits of which they are unable to judge.

"The covenant, signed by the President at Paris, failed signally to accomplish this purpose, and contained stipulations not only intolerable for an independent people, but certain to produce the injustice, hostility and controversy among nations which it proposed to prevent.

"That covenant repudiated to a degree, wholly unnecessary and unjustifiable, the time-honored policy in favor of peace declared by Washington and Jefferson and Monroe and pursued by all American administrators for more than a century, and it ignored the universal sentiments of America for generations past in favor of international law and arbitration, and it rested the hope of the future upon more expediency and negotiations.

We pledge the coming Republican administration to such agreement with the other nations of the world as shall meet the full duty of America to civilization and humanity in accordance with American ideals, and without surrendering the right of the American people to exercise its judgment and its power in favor of justice and peace."

PERSHING BOOM SET IN MOTION.

Missouri Delegation Would Take Him To Frisco On Special.

New York .- A dark-horse boom for Gen. John J. Pershing for Democratic Presidential nomination was set in motion here.

It was announced that Edward E. Coltra, national Democratic committeeman from Missouri, will go to. Washington to invite General Pershing to attend the San Francisco convention as the guest of a big Missouri delegation on a special train.

Pershing is a native of Missouri and the men behind this movement claim that he is eligible for nomination as a Democrat, although he has no definite party alignment.

Democrats here say that the fact that Senator Warren, of Wyoming, is Pershing's father-in-law has led to the impression that Pershing was a Republican, but that this impression was without foundation in fact.

Englishman Victim of Unusual Circumstances.

Reduced to Penury Through the Operations of Man Who Resembles Him With a Fidelity That Must Be Remarkable.

Somewhere in England flourishes a brilliant scoundrel who is committing fraud after fraud in the name of Herbert Leslie Perkins, an impoverished berb seller of Wolverhampton, writes a foreign correspondent of the Kansas City Star.

He is said to look exactly like Perkins, even to a tendency to stoop. He dresses like him, has the same mannerisms and voice, and is sufficiently familiar with Perkins' past to assume his identity before acquaintances-but he cannot write like him.

For this theft of his personality Perkins has paid painfully. He has been imprisoned five times, being acquitted each time at the subsequent trial. Four warrants are now out for his arrest, and a cloud of suspicion hangs over him that may result in other warrants. His savings of $500 have been spent to earn his freedom, and most of his furniture and his wife's keepsakes have been sold to support his family of six children while he has been in jail.

He was first arrested October 15, 1919, for fraud at Gloucester. Five days after his release he was arrested again and taken to Chesterfield, in Derbyshire, where he was remanded for trial on the declarations of four persons that there could be no doubt. he was the man who had defrauded them. Yet he never had been in Chesterfield before in his life. At the Derbyshire assizes he proved that on the day of the fraud he was at the Uttoxeter market in Staffordshire. Fourteen dld specimens of his handwriting were produced. None of them was anything like the criminal's.

The jury promptly acquitted Perkins. While his friends were congratulating him in the courtroom a policeman pressed forward and arrested him for other alleged frauds. They dragged him off to Hull police station, where Perkins says he lay that night wondering if he was "mad or only dreaming." In Hull he was again positively identifled, and he had to remain 18 days in Hull prison before his trial. This time he had 14 witnesses to prove his presence at various markets distant from Hull on the dates that the frauds were committed.

"I could have produced sixty witnesses," said Perkins, "but it took my last cent to pay the fares of the four-

The operations of the "slick" double hurt the police nearly as much as Perkins. They have four warrants for his arrest for a number of other frauds committed at Burton-on-Trent, Peterborough, Bristol and Leicester. The warrants are pigeonholed for the time be ag. The police are ruminating.

Penniless, Perkins busily is digging up his herbs again and trying to sell them, but after 27 days in jail and with the shadow of prison bars still hovering over him he has little peace of Future Rapid Travel.

Mr. Lindsay Bashford, writing in the Edinburgh Review, foreshadows a London to Calcutta journey by rail in a fortnight.

"The Bagdad railway," he says, "begins at Konia, in the heart of Asia Minor, where, by means of the Anatolian railway, it connects with Constantinople. From Constantinople to Aleppo the distance is some 850 miles. From Aleppo, the line proceeds to Jerablus, on the Euphrates, and thence by Nisibin to the important center of Mosul on the Tigris; thence southwards to Bagdad and to Basra. The distance from Aleppo to Bagdad is about 650 miles.

"Carry the imagination further, and we may reasonably picture, under the new political arrangements between Great Britain and Persia, the extension of the Bagdad railway to Teheran, and thence to Quetta and India. That done .travel 'overland' between London and Calcutta should be a matter of less than a fortnight."

Another Use for the Airplane. Eclipse observation by airplane is declared by Paul W. Merrill to be not chimerical. A modern plane could readily surmount any ordinary fog or cumulus cloud, though cirrus is usually too high, and, aside from cirrus clouds, the observer would have a wonderfully clear dark sky. And photographic observations are not out of the question. A DeHaviland plane with a Liberty motor, at 10,000 feet altitude, rides more smoothly than a train, and should permit direct photographs on a small scale, especially if the plane were equipped with a gyro-

Vladivostok, Political Capital of the Far East, Lacks What Americans Consider Essential.

A city with some 350,000 inhabtants and no running water-such is Vladivostok, as described by Phil Norton in the columns of Travel. Nor is this lack of an everyday convenience made less pressing by the fact that Vladivostok jumped from a population of about 90,000 people without adding to the number of houses. The Manchu water vender, with his hogshead mounted on two wheels and drawn by sturdy, thick-coated Siberian horses, takes the place of pipes and faucets, filling his hogshead at a shallow well in some private or public yard, and retailing the commodity | Mr. Wardell, the president of the bank, at the rate of two buckets a day for a month, for about $2 in American money. He carries the buckets at the end of a pole over his shoulder. If one can manage to live in reasonable comfort in Vladivostok, a coolie boy can be procured to bring water to one's room, and heat it in the kitchen. Or again, if the water vender has failed to arrive, the coolie boy will gather snow and melt it, and there is one's morning bath. If one wants more generous ablution one goes to the public baths; and if one wants a drink of water one thoroughly holls the merchandise of the water vender before drinking it. And this city of the primitive water supply is now the political capital of the far east.

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.) "You have lost your position in the bank," spoke Norma Drury. "Oh, fa-

"Not because of any dishonesty, Norma," he said, bravely attempting a smile. "Since I was given charge of the securities cage my salary has been raised and I seem to have pleased both and the directors with my services. Today I carried all the Liberty bond packets to the desk of Mr. Wardell for him to check up. He returned them an hour later. Then I was called to the cashier's desk on some business. When I returned to assort the packets one was missing-No. 23. Mr. Wardell's schedule showed he had checked it, with the others. It was for $3,000. It was gone, and the only fault found with me was that I had left the packets on my desk when hurriedly called by the cashier, instead of first placing them in the vault."

"Then-" "Somebody on the watch, it is assumed, reached through the wicket and extracted the $3,000 packet."

"And Mr. Wardell?" "Consulted the directors. He was kind enough and just enough to vouch for my integrity, but said that I was getting old, that I needed less responsible work and has offered to retain me at a reduced salary, but in an inferior position. It is hard lines!" and the voice broke. "My pride-my Norma came up to her father and. twined her arms about him. "Dear father," she said tenderly. "I shall give up my preparations to become a teacher. You have had me help you so much with bank work you have brought home evenings that I have practically learned the business, as you may say.

That was the amazing proposition Norma Drury made to stern, systematic Martin Drury the next day. If the old financier was secretly moved by the filial act and sacrifice of the loyal young girl, he did not betray the fact. In his cool, methodical way he accepted the proffer, and one quarter of the joint compensation of father and daughter was each month to be retained and credited on the loss ac-

If Mr. Drury felt humiliated by his reduction in working rank it was more than made up for in having Norma for company in the bank. He grew a little more gray, a little more bent, but he was proud of his daughter and their mutual work for a noble object filled both with a high sense of duty sturdily faced.

David Wardell's health failed and he was ordered to a sanitarium for permanent treatment. A month later he change the hue. Everything is on the died and his only son, Sydney, was summoned from college to take charge of the affairs of the bank. He was a bright, intelligent fellow and from the start Norma attracted him, When he tion with the bank there appeared a their minds off themselves there is a high order of respect and admiration in | chance to have some good work from his manner toward her. "You are very kind, but do I deserve it?" spoke Norma.

"We think so," declared Sydney heartily, and Norma felt that he was genuinely sincere. It was a rest she craved and enjoyed. The happy four weeks ended in a surprise. The day before setting out for her return she received a note from her father that considerably mystified her. It informed her that young Wardell would be at men who know how Ford cars are Leeville the next morning on an automobile trip, and that he would call for her and drive her home. It was not strange that Norma fluttered and marveled when the young man arrived

> It was late afternoon when the cary reached her home town. Young Wardell drove around to the bank and halted in front of it.

> "There has been something of a change in the personnel of the institution since you went away, Miss Drury," he told her, and he pointed to a newly emblazoned window bearing the two names: "Sydney Wardell President: Martin Drury, Cashier." Norma stared, bewildered.

"We were moving my father's old desk last week," said Sydney, "and behind one of the drawers we found that missing $3,000. Don't you think I was glad to award your dear father what he so deserves after all the years of his faithful service?"

Norma broke down utterly, Insensibly her tear-bedewed face pressed the shoulder of her companion. He thrilled at the contact. Just then a brilliant glint of sunshine illumed the drab western sky. "Look," Sydney said, "a presage of gladness for all your future, I hope," and she knew from the glow in this clear, honest eyes that love actuated the sentiment

CLAIMS A GREAT DISCOVER

Englishman Convinced That in Uncooked Vegetables and Fruit He Has Found Ideal Fare.

"It is an entirely erroneous idea that human beings derive their energy from food," says Mr. William Aird of Sompting, Sussex, England, who claims that he lives like the hares and squirrels.

"Each human being," he contends, "has a certain capital amount of energy which can be spent slowly or rapidly, but cannot be supplemented."

Mr. Aird is an engineer. Formerly he suffered from very bad health, but after six years of experimenting in dieting came to the conclusion that uncooked fruit and vegetables formed ideal fare. Today, although nearly fifty, he claims the feelings of a boy of eighteen.

"When I searched for the means of health," he says, "I studied the wild animals on the Sussex downs. So certain am I that I have found the true path of life, that I am willing to be inoculated with smallpox, cancer, plague, anthrax, tuberculosis, or any disease you care to mention. I am sure that germs would not live in my

UNIQUE SCHEME OF REVENGE

Sardonic Humor in Tale of Hew Frenchman "Got Even" With His Fellow-Citizens.

A quaint short story by Rodolpte Bringer, a marvel of French brevity. appeared not long ago in L'Humanite. It is called "The Benefactor's Revenge," and the tale is of a millionaire in a small town who was piqued because he was not elected mayor. Presently he died, partly of annovance. The funeral was magnificent, but the townsfolk did not attend. They distrusted the millionaire. Imagine the shock of pleasure, then, when they At all events we are responsible for a | learned that he had bequeathed 3,000,loss of $3,000. Together we will make | 000 francs to the municipality! It was given on condition that the town should undertake to nourish and sustain all the poor, without distinction of age, sex or nationality, who lived within its boundaries. At once the popularity of the deceased took a tremendous jump. A philanthropist; he had been misjudged. A pedestal was prepared for his statue. Today the pedestal still remains uncrowned. A town that was hard working and unknown to poverty and misery became the mecca for all the scamps in France. Since the day on which the will was proclaimed tramps, rogues and apaches have not ceased to pour through its gates. At last it awoke to the dark intention of its benefactor.--Boston Post.

Adhesive From Snails.

Many of the larger kinds of snails have at the extremity of their bodies small white bladders filled with a gelatinous substance. It has been discovered that this is the strongest adhesive known for the repairing of porcelain, glass, etc. The substance is applied thinly to both sides of the fracture and the broken piece is tied firmly together so' that all is held in place. A rather longer time for drying should be given than in the case of ordinary adhesives so as to allow the natural glue to acquire the greatest degree of strength. When it is once really set the tenacity of this remarkable adhesive is astonishing .--Scientific American.

Appreciated Cooper's Work.

The first American novel to win popularity outside our own language is said to have been James Fenimore Cooper's "Spy." Cooper had to publish it at his own expense, as no American publisher would accept it. It was quickly translated into French, German and Spanish, and later was published in thirty-four different places in Europe. Cooper translations are often better literature than the original, as the best elements of the story are not lost in translation and many stylistic; defects disappear in the hands of a literary translator.

Camping gives young people a chance to learn to do things themselves instead of depending on others. They share the primitive experience of the pioneers and do without the luxuries of civilization. This makes them observant and resourcfeul.

The advantages of this experience should not be restricted to the children of the wealthy. Boy and Girl Scouts, churches and like organizations run such camps in many places. Every young person in Princess Anne should have a chance to attend some well disciplined and supervised camp,

A CHALLENGE TO WOMEN

It was recently announced by high authorities in the garment trade that next fall styles of women's clothes would be so radically changed that women would be ashamed to wear their old garments.

In times when prices were reasonable the garment trade might persuade some millions of women to discard clothes long before they were worn out on the ground that they were out of style; but in these times, when women have been boiling with indignation about prices, it will not be so easy. Compelling them to throw away half worn clothes is just the same as doubling the prices.

Mrs. Charles G. Ryan, State fair price commissioner of Nebraska, urges women to refuse to buy clothes if they change markedly in style or are held at high prices. While this policy may cause temporary hardship to retail trade, yet it would seem that the merchants would approve of it. They suffer everely from the constant alterations of style, as they constantly have to reduce prices below costs in order to get rid of goods that are slightly passee.

The cost of women's clothing is increased by the many women and girls with whom dress is about the first consideration in life. They are ambitious to shine in society and attract attention. The only way to do it that they know of is to spend a lot of money on clothes and constantly appear in rich and costly navelties. Sensible women dislike these extravagances, yet sometimes they have to compete with them or appear wholly out of the game. But the body of women who refuse to be dictated to by the light-minded is in a large majority. More and more they insist on sane and conservative and economical styles.

The Six-Hour Day

And now the American Federation of Labor demands a six-hour day. Does that mean that the worker will produce as much or more in six hours than he has done in eight? If so, six hours' labor is preferable to eight. The reduction from ten to eight hours was found to stimulate production in some vocations, though not, we believe, in all. But when employers are asked to lop off two hours more, some sort of efficiency guarantee should go with the

Just now the crying need of this country and the world is not shorter hours, but more output. If a man can do more or as much in six hours as in eight, all right. But the complaint ever since the armistice has been that labor has fallen off in efficiency and productive capacity. If it is not to throw greater energy and earnestness into the sixhour day than it has seemed frequently of late to throw into the eight-hour day, what will be the result?

The country is in a Missouri condition of mind on this subject. The six-hour case will have to be proved. - Baltimore

thy One Wise Old Turk Decided That

When western civilization first began to make its way into the Ottoman em-pire it provoked some very interesting reactions upon the oriental mind. One by that Sir William Whittall tells ows how unquestionably even the sest Turks attributed the triumphs stern invention to magic and di-

During the Crimean war, says Sir William, the first telegraph was estabed in Turkey. This wonderful inntion created tremendous astonish-int among the Turks, who were quite the to understand its workings. mong the more intelligent the discus-tions were not concerning the scientific inciples that lay behind it but whethir it was a good or a bad thing for

To solve the question it was at last cided to have a full debate by the ulems of the province of Smyrna, over which at that time a very wise old mullah presided. The meeting was held and fierce was the contention. Half the niema declared that the telegraph was a good thing, because it quickened communications; the other half asserted that it could not be good, because it was an invention of the devil.

There seemed to be no way of arriving at a conclusion, when some of the Turks perceived that their chief, the old muliah, had not yet expressed an opinion. Both parties, therefore, eacerly pressed him for his ciew on the subject and agreed to abide by his desion: The old mullah replied: "My children, the telegraph is a good

What!" said the conservatives indignantly. "Do you mean that it is not a work of the devil?"

"Oh, yes," replied the old man. "Asuredly it is a work of his; but why are you so dull of understanding, my children? Can't you see that if the devil is occupied going up and down the wires with each message sent he will have less time to trouble us mortals on earth below?"

All the ulema acknowledged the wisdom of their chief.—Turkish Stories

Arabs Bow to Airplanes. - Some of the most modern kinds of warfare have been used in regions here modern civilization had hardly strated before. It is an interestng fact that the Arab, who had resined unconquered while all the great empires of the world rose and fell, is at last succumbing before the airplane. He has never admitted allegiance to anyone but Allah and himself, and has threatened the lines of communication of all the empires-Babylonian, Persian, Greek, Roman and British. Even at the height of their power they could not overtake his swift horses when he returned to the desert after a raid.

But even the Arab horse has no chance against the airplane. British planes are now able to protect all parts of the line from Suez to India. The French have been using aviators whose perves went to pieces on the western front to chase the wild tribesmen in the interior of Algeria. And the "Mad Mullah," when recently he began to preach another Mohammedan holy war, was routed by an expedition of British and Italians, who used both airplanes and tanks.

Paris a City of "Old Clo'." Paris just now is full of "old clo'." Not only are new wardrobe dealers starting in all quarters, but even the cleaners are filling their windows with half-worn frocks and cloaks for sale. Obviously madame is making economies, remarks a writer in the continental edition of the London Mail. She must be as smart as usual, but as dress costs more than ever, she sells everything she can before it goes out of fashion, and thus manages to balance her accounts.

The 'chand d'habits walks the streets more diligently than ever, and his dismal chant may be heard all day long. He easily fills his big black bag. Clothes, like money bills, are new constantly changing hands, and they are worn to the thread by their successive wearers.

Houseboat on Land. The housing shortage in Cincinnati is presenting some unique problems to the building commissioner, George Hauser. The owner of a houseboat on the Ohio river asked permission to transfer the cabin of his boat to a Zoundation which he has prepared on Southside avenue. In the summer he plans to restore it to the boat, thus using the cabin as an all-year-round home. The purchaser of a number of discarded cottages built for the government nitrate plant at Ancor, near Cincinnati, has applied for a permit to bring them into the city and erect them into flat buildings by arranging them three on top of each other. He contends that this can be done with

Indian Runner Ducklings,

PRODUCTION OF DUCKS' EGGS

Demand at Good Prices Is Limited Except Around Easter-Indian

Runner Is Favored.

The demand for ducks' eggs at good price is limited and not nearly as general as the demand for hens' eggs. The quality of the Southern and Western duck eggs on the average market was poor until people began to keep Indian Runner ducks and to build up a trade in first-class eggs. A good demand for ducks' eggs exists about Easter time at prices usually several cents a dozen higher than for hens' eggs. Most buyers make no quotations for ducks' eggs except early in the spring. Since three ducks' eggs weigh about the same as four hens' eggs, ducks are not as profitable for.

the production of market eggs as fowls, unless a higher price is secured for the ducks' eggs.

A trade is gradually being established in some markets for fancy nearby ducks' eggs, which bring higher prices than hens' eggs, and the demand seems to be increasing. Pure white eggs are preferred and usually bring the highest price. These eggs should be marketed frequently, as they depreciate in quality more rapidly than hens' eggs, especially during hot weather. The market for eggs should be carefully investigated by these who intend to raise breeds of the egg-laying type of ducks, such asthe Indian Runner, especially for the production of eggs, say poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

PROVIDE FOWLS CLEAN FEED

Carelessness on Part of Poultryman in Cleaning Utensils Will Cause Much Trouble.

Fowls that are fed grain are pretty sure to receive pure feed, as all one has to watch is to make sure the grains are sweet and clean, and not moldy or decayed. However, it is se. dom advisable to make grain the sole ration of the poultry.

Soft feeds (or mashes) will have to be fed to some extent and troughs must be used for this kind of feed. Where the residue is left to sour, the fowls will show the effects in time. Fermented feeds do not appear to be. readily digested by poultry and may, also spread disease germs.

Carelessness in the matter of cleaning the troughs has brought disaster to many a poultryman. The same thing is true of the drinking vessels. It requires only a little effort to have the feeding and watering wessels always clean, and it certainly is the thing to do.

PLENTY OF RANGE ESSENTIAL

Discouraging Results Have Come From Attempting to Raise Turkeys Under Confinement.

Given plenty of range, turkeys will rustle for grasshoppers and other insects, green vegetation, weed and grass seed, waste grain, waste nuts, and convert them into delicious meat at a minimum expense. Plenty of lange is essential to success in turkey raising, and usually the discouraging results have come from attempts to raise the fowls under close confinement.

Be sure chicks do not become crowd

Ship or deliver eggs twice or three times weekly.

Market white-shelled and brown-

Overgrown fowls are no better in any particular than those of normal shelled eggs in separate packages.

Cull the flock so as to eliminate the early molter and other unprofitable producers.

The important thing in getting started in turkey raising is to be careful to get healthy stock.

Uniform poultry products command the best prices. Pure-bred fowls produce uniform products.

When selling eggs to the country merchant or cash buyer, insist that the transaction be on a quality basis.

UICK CHANGE OF CLIMATE

Traveler in Arizona Gota Variation With Comparatively Little Physical Exertion.

In climbing from the Painted desert, which lies at the foot of San Francisco ountain in Arizona, to the summit of that peak, perhaps 25 miles away, you experience as much change of climate and scenery and pass through as many different zones of life as you would in traveling from southern Sonora to the region of Mudson bay.

This is due to the fact that altitude has the same effect on climate as latitude. If you climb 500 feet upward you have achieved the same change of climate as though you had gone 2 degrees north. The result is that a mountain top in Arizona 12,000 feet high above sea level has a climate like that at the edge of the arctic circle. Moreover, many of the same plants and some of the same birds that live in the subarctic regions are found on top of San Francisco peak -relics of that distant age when most of North America was covered by an ice cap and had an arctic climate.

The desert at the foot of San Francisco peak is one of the deadest and hottest places on earth. Great areas of it are without a sprig of vegetation. There are vast beds of brightly colored pebbles gleaming in the sun, great barren sand flats, ranges of hills that are stained bright red and blue with minerals, but show not a touch of living green. The heat is terrific and incessant.

Leaving this region in the morning, by noon you find yourself on the mountain slope in an arid region supporting a low scrubby forest of juniper and nut pine. Two hours later you have entered an entirely different zone, and are riding through a beautiful open forest of yellow pine, with trees a hundred feet high. This gives way to a forest of fir, which is dense and damp, with heavy underbrush along the streams. Here birds and squirrels abound, and you may glimpse deer and

As you continue upward the timber again dwindles in size. You pass through a region of scrubby spruce, such as grows along the Yukon in Alaska, and finally emerge on the treeless crest above timberline, where the climate is almost arctic and the snow lies deep in June.

Find Natural Purple Dye. A shellfish exists on the Pacific coast of Costa Rica from which a speclarly fine purple color is obtained and used for dyeing silk thread. A report received by the department of commerce states the discovery of this natural dve came to light through an inquiry from Guatemala, where some slik thread imported from Costa Rica commands a good price.

The dyers, who apparently are limited to a few old persons, take the thread to the shore, where the shellfish abound, and dye it there. The person who picks up a shell blows his breath upon it, whereupon a few drops greenish liquid ooze out. This quer is collected in an open clam shelf or other small container. After a sufficient quantity has been collected the thread is passed through it. The thread soon afterward, on exposure to the sunlight, assumes a beautiful purple color, which is absolutely

In ancient days it is believed this dye was called "Tyrian purple," and was even then so rare that it was reserved for royalty.

Capital Feels Paper Shortage.

The paper shortage is making itself felt in the post office department, where the greatest difficulty is being experienced in getting the needed supplies of stamped envelopes. Postal cards, also, are scarce.

A few weeks ago there was discovered a large quantity of the old 3-cent stamped envelopes, for which there is now almost no demand. They are being sold now for 2 cents apièce, plus the small charge for the envelope, with a distinguishing cancellation mark over the stamp. More recently the post office department began to sell a quantity of postal cards of the yintage of about ten years ago. The department is restamping 400,000,000 2-cent postal cards issued during the war.

Pedestrians on Sands street, Brooklyn, caught a glimpse of a marine recruit carrying a contraband "bumbershoot" during yesterday's rain storm.

At the very outset of the recruit's journey two older marines met him, took the umbrella away from him, broke it up before his horrified gaze and gave him a severe lecture on military proprieties.

There is no service regulation to prevent the carrying of umbrellas by uniformed men, but there is an unwritten law of the marine corps which puts the taboo on the umbrella.

Her Preference.

A few years ago Merom college had a young Japanese student, who after the fashion of all Japanese students, was very polite. He always spoke of his teachers as the "Hon. Professor S.," etc. One day the music teacher's sister came to visit her, and in time met the young Japanese. They grew to be friends, but he always spoke of her as the "Hon, Miss M.'s sister."

One day the young visitor grew a bit peeved over the title. "Just for a change I would be glad if you would say 'Miss M.'s honorable sister,' " she retorted. "I would at least like to see how it would sound."

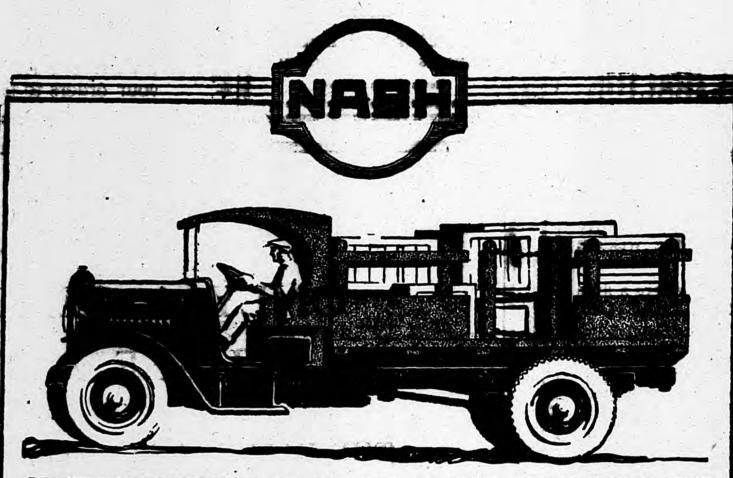

Summer Reasons For This Sedan

Triplex Springs Insure Riding Comfort on All Roads. Overland Four-Door Sedan Insures Comfort In All Weather

THE SUPERIORITY of the Sedan for autumn. winter and spring is even more emphasized in the wide range of summer motoring. It's thick permanent top is a cooler shield from boiling sun. Breezes are freely admitted or entirely excluded at will. Rain, dust and sudden cold, are shut out at your command by heavy plate glass which never cuts off your vision or leaves you feeling "Shut in." Now the Overland Sedan adds to all this convertible convenience, the riding comfort of Triplex Springs, and extraordinary light weight economy.

Conservation On Business Lines. Harrison W. Vickers, chairman of the new Conservation Commission, had a conference with Governor Ritchie and later visited the offices of the commission in the Munsey Building.

Governor Ritchie is anxious that the management of the oyster, crab and fish industries of the state shall be conducted strictly on business lines, with politics eliminated. He desires a hearty co-operation between the commission and those engaged in the oyster, crabbing and fishing industries. With this co-operation he believes there will follow a large increase in the leases of oyster bottoms, from which revenues may be derived to provide for rehabilitation of depleted beds. The allied industries may be built up in the same way.

The commission will find a score or more of desirable berths to be filled. They include one game warden at $1,800, and two deputies at $1,200 a year each, eight district deputy wardens at $900 each, two clerks who are paid, respectively, $1,320 and $1,200; two clerks at $1,040 each, 13 deputy commanders at $720 a year each, and six other subordinates for the force at $240 each; one chief oyster inspector at $83.33 per month, three general inspectors at $100 per month each, two inspectors at $75 per month each, and 14 special inspectors at $50 per month each.

The total appropriation to conservation commission for this year is $129,426.

Frederick.-Admonishing them to be idealists, not to make something or to do something but to become some thing, and saying the things most valued in life are not the things that will bring them money, Prof. H. E. Slagen, principal of the Lancaster High School, delivered the address to the graduates at the last commencement of Hood Seminary.

Unique Style of Greeting.

Sir Auckland Geddes, who is evidently expected to do a great deal of entertaining when he goes to the United States, is a notable athlete, but it may be doubtful whether his physical endurance will be equal to the handshaking which will be involved unless he reforms his methods, remarks the Manchester Guardian. It is most interesting if rather exhausting, to watch him receive a number of guests as he did recently at Olympia, for he has an athletic style all his own. As each guest comes in sight Sir Auckland advances one foot, plants it firmly and balances himself as if for a trial of strength. Then his long arm shoots out to full length, he smiles the guest straight in the eye like a boxer, seizes his hand and draws him determinedly around in a semicircle to greet the hostess.

He will need to develop a less expensive muscular action for the social tasks before him in America.

Sure Ways.

"What is the quickest way to get up in the world?" "Either get a job with an aviator or nat a mule on the off hind leg."

Catarrhai Deafness Cannot Be Cured the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. SUCCESS IN MARRIED LIFE

To Insure It, Says Court Official, Each Should Be a Partner, as in Business Enterprise.

A wide experience with husbands and wives has enabled Mrs. Julia L. Mc-Guire of the Chicago court of domestic relations to formulate these principles which she gives in People's Magazine. "It can all be summed up in about the same way textbooks on business tell one to sum up the proposition of going into business partnership:

"1. Know your partner. Study him -or her-under trying circumstances as well as when things are going

"2. Be sure that you and your partner agree in your purposes and ambitions. Compare notes with each other and find out whether you have the same tastes and hopes for the future. Find out your prospective partner's idea of what to do in prosperity or adversity.

"3. Settle upon your working program for the future. Decide how you will apportion your working funds: face frankly the possibilities for trouble, and arrange in advance to meet them. Determine in advance the direction in which you will expend your establishment when you have savings

"4. Institute an adequate system of cost accounting to see to it that your funds go for the purposes you have agreed upon. Get into the habit of being frank with each other, of clearing up misunderstandings instead of letting them rankle. "5. Go to it-and stick to it-along these lines. "6. Unless one of you has hidden faults, you will not fail. "That is what I have learned from my contact with forty-four thousand unhappy marriages, which I have been able to sum up, scrutinize and analyze. The soundest advice to both men and women that I could give is: 'Play fair and use common sense with husband

LONG A FAMOUS PLAYHOUSE

Walnut Street Theater, in Philadelphia, to Be Torn Down, Dates From the Year 1809.

The oldest playhouse in America, which is to be replaced in part at least by a modern structure, is the Walnut street theater in Philadelphia, opened in 1809. It has never missed a season in these 111 years.

Edwin Forrest made his first regular appearance here at the age of fourteen, getting his first start through the influential backing of Col. John Swift, at one time mayor of Philadelphia. The play in which Forrest appeared was "Douglas," and in the cast were Wheatley, Mrs. Williams, Joe Jefferson's grandmother, and Warren and Wood, managers of the theater and of the stock company. Warren and Wood considered themselves very unfortunate in the cast of novices they had to deal with and were greatly surprised when Forrest acquitted himself so well that the public expressed a desire for the play's repetition.

The English tragedian,- Edmund Kean, appeared at the Walnut in 1821. During the 16 nights of his engagement the receipts ran as high as $1,-379, only once falling below $650. In those days this was considered a prodigious sum in theatrical circles.

Beaver Money.

John Jacob Astor introduced the eaver skin as a medium of exchange, and it was not until beaver hats were replaced by the modern felt hat made from rabbit fur that beaver money went out of fashion.

For about 100 years the beaver skin had its fixed value by which the cost of any other article was determined. It is said that the process of making hats from rabbit pelts actually saved beaver from extinction in North Amer-

Most of the beaver was trapped by Indians, and ambitious white men exerted their wits in separating the red man from his treasures.

If an Indian thought he needed furs to keep warm, he was given a drink of something that made him feel that he wouldn't need an overcoat, after all.-Detroit News.

Make a Beginning.

Many people prosper on ideas that come from without. In a measure these are common property. The really great entures that make outstanding men are those born within a man and therefore peculiarly his property. When appreciated and acted upon they give him the inside chance that others will covet when they see him beginning to climb. So instead of sitting around moping it's "up to you" to start something. Let your thinker sink deep down into your anatomy and mine the unused possibilities that are rusting out for want of use. And rest assured unexpected possibilities will open up just as soon as you start something.-Ex-

Missouri Weather.

The frequent rains recently have made us appreciate what an old lady from Arkansas said about us once after a visit up here. When she made up her mind to go home she remarked: "Well, yer see, honey, it's this here-away: In Missouri when it starts to rain it never quits, and when it clouds up the sun never shines, and when it does get clear you never see a cloud again, and when it gets hot it never turns cool, and when it once gets cold it never warms up no more." -Clinton (Mo.) On June 21st Mr. Lankford received a telegram from Chicago from Internal Revenue Collector Joshus W. Miles, who, in company with Governor Ritchie, was on his way to the Democratic convention in San Francisco, which follows: "Governor Ritchie says road through Princess Anne will be built at once.'

It will be seen from the foregoing that this much needed improvement for Princess Anne will soon be under way.

Last Friday Chairman John N. Mackall, of the State Roads Commission, said embargoes declared by the railroads on account of the strikers are seriously holding up road contracts in both construction and maintenance jobs and see no immediate relief until the strike is broken and the embargoes are lifted. Contracting forces were virtually at a standstill on about 25 jobs, involving more than $1,000,000.

It was planned to begin oiling the surface of the outlying highways on Monday, but this had to be abandoned on account of the inability to get oil. Crushed stone was also needed for resurfacing Eastern Shore roads, but this Berlin, Md., who attended the funeral also had to be abandoned.

Children's Day services were held in St. Peter's Methodist Episcopal Church. Oriole, on Sunday evening, June 20th, The church was filled with admiring parents, friends and visitors, and a well-selected program was delightfully and efficiently rendered by the children of the Sunday school.

The most surprising event of the evening was the collection, totaling $233.66. The teacher's prize offered for the class raising the largest amount went to class No. 11, Mr. John W. Croswell, teacher. This class raised $137.91. The prize offered for the largest individual amount raised was awarded to Miss Leila Bennett, who collected $89.41. Miss Mary Wilson, another contestant for the individual prize, raised $43.40. Another solicitor worthy of mention is Miss Mary Frances Shores, who collected $20.00.

A unanimous vote of thanks was extended to the ladies who trained the children and to all who in any way contributed to this service. The entire collection will be apportioned to the various items of missions assessed to the church. The Rev. G. S. Allen is pastor of the church.

A WILD ROSE.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.) "A lady to see you, sir," spoke Susan Dodge, the old housekeeper; "two of them in fact-mother and daughter, I think." Professor Albion Dacre lifted his eyes from his book with surprise, almost concern in his timid eye.

"If it is a subscription or something of that sort, you might attend to it, Susan," suggested her employer. "I don't think it is anything of that kind, sir," explained Susan. "The elder lady said something about wishing to talk to you about the young lady."

"Very well: show them in," directed the professor, although he rather resented any intrusion upon his dearly exclusively for ourselves." (Bravol loved solitude.

"I am Mrs. Eunice Ward," spoke a trained, even voice, and a matronly appearing lady with a refined cast of feature introduced herself. "This is my niece. Miss Gloria Tresham."

Professor Dacre courteously acknowledged the greeting of the elder lady. As he fixed his eyes upon her companion, it seemed as though the latter had brought into the staid, well governed house the very essence of youth, beauty, a breath of the forest or the sea, free, unrestrained, an indefinable spiritual something that caused the professor to feel as if this lovely creature was quite of another world.

Mrs. Ward was brief, concise and practical. "We have just moved into the house diagonally back of yours,"

"Ah! then we are neighbors?" observed the Professor.

"My niece, Gloria," proceeded Mrs. Ward, "has been brought up for eighteen years in the remote wilderness. When her mother died my brother went into seclusion, taking his only child to share it. Gloria has been brought up among nature's solitudes. She has had music, reading, the devoted love of her father in her hermit- sunburned face?" like seclusion, comfort, even luxuries, her charge. Gloria is a loving, in- her tan." necent child, who knows nothing of the great world. She can read, she is a wonderful panist and singer, but she has not been taught to write a line. She knows nothing of the science of study. Professor Dacre, would you consent to take Gloria as a special home pupil, with the idea of familiarizing her with the system and methods of acquiring learning? And later on she might enter upon a course in some seminary."

It was an extraordinary concession to ask of a man as occupied and as well paid as Professor Dacre. The sweet eyes of Gloria Tresham fixed upon him, he was influenced to say:

"Madam, I have two hours daily in the afternoon unoccupied and usually girl. devoted to rest, or reading in my library, or the garden. It will be a duty and a pleasure to have your niece for a casual pupil, but please do not speak of compensation," and a sentiment of pity for the orphan girl and a natural desire to be helpful to others so clearly spoke in the grave, earnest eyes, that Gloria's own bestowed a glowing glance upon him of gratitude and confidence.

Within a month Albion Dacre was lifted into a new phase of existence. To hira Gloria was an untrained wild rose, sweet and beautiful, who shamed his practical worldly-wise nature in contrast with freshness, purity and innocence of a soul that had known and lawyer."-Browning's Magazine. loved nature with the ardor of a child. Many a time the professor nurtured as a dream embracing all that was worth while in life, an ardent longing to seek a new existence amid the glories of nature in its primeval wildness, away from the drudgery and inharmoniousness of his present sphere, communing with the flowers, the birds, the stars, and learning from the lips of his fair young pupil lessons of the real loveliness and peace of a happy existence, "forgetting the world and by the world forgot!"

"Oh, think of it!" exclaimed Gloria rapturously one day. "I can write a whole line. See," and the rugged heart of her tutor beat tumultuously as she placed before him a sheet bearing the words, "I love Aunty Eunice and dear Professor Dacre more than anybody else in the whole world."

Then after that there seemed to creep into her nature a certain shyness that puzzled Albion Dacre. Even her aunt observed the change. Contact with the world was teaching the artless girl that she should repress the naive free impulses that her life in the wilderness had encouraged.

One afternoon the professor came to the tree-shaded table where Gloria took her lessons to find her sunny head pillowed on one arm and her lovely eves closed in slumber. She had been writing in a little memorandum book and he could not help but scan the open page before him.

It held the secret thoughts of a girl in love—herself. It artlessly analyzed the deep devotion that had grown up in her heart for the man she adoredhimself.

Suddenly Gloria aroused. She discerned that he had scanned her treasured confession. A deep blush overspread the heautiful face. She hastened to hide it against his arm. where she murmured softly:

A GENIAL HOST

90000000000000000000000

By GEORGE E. COBB

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

The most agreeable incident that had come into the boy life of Ted Morse was that signalized by his stay for one week at the Palace hotel at Brompton, owned and operated by his father's brother, John Morse. Thenceforth the lad had one fervid ambition: to become in time the manager or proprietor of a like establishment.

Uncle John was a porty individual who had followed the hotel business for over a quarter of a century. He was built for the task both in disposition and bulk. He knew every commercial traveler on the road, he kept fairly apace of the times in equipment and improvements. The dazzled Ted took back home with him a pleasant memory of the big arm chair in the hotel lobby, filled by his big relative, who was revered by his clientele, always jolly and joking, a typical "mine host."

The years went on, but the glowing memory never faded from the mind of Ted. He became a clerk in the store of his native village and one day received a letter that set his wits staggering. His uncle had died and had bequeathed to him the hotel. The dream of early youth was fulfilled.

"Your uncle had been failing for about two years," the executor of the estate told Ted when he arrived at Brompton, "and the odds and ends have not maintained the old systematic order. However, young blood coming into the proposition will make the best of a very promising situation."

It was in Ted to make himself popular. He faithfully copied his uncle's methods. He became a genial host, indeed. He was accomodating, lenient, agreeable. The traveling men took to him and there was no stinting in the menu and no deterioration in general service. A new element came into the situation later that harassed Ted. His friends and relatives began to trade on his liberal, easy going nature. They came in swarms. They came with their families and sent their friends as well. It seemed as though every acquaintance he had received a tip that half rates, or no rates at all, were accessible to those who had the art to appeal successfully to the indulgence of a man who loved to be considered a genial host, and whose ambition was to be known as "running the best hotel on the road."

By the end of a year Ted began to realize his weakness. Thus, a half cousin had swooped down upon him with a family of five, staying for over a month and departing without paying his bill. A brother-in-law had passed half a dozen worthless checks on the hostelry, some old time friends had borrowed several hundred dollars from him. His manager had worked in a special friend as buyer for the hotel, and Ted could not help but notice the extortionate prices paid for supplies.

"Something's wrong," decided Ted. "I must find somebody to watch the outlay while I sit around playing gentleman."

Ted was thus occupied in his favorite arm chair one evening when a little girl of about ten came hurriedly into the lobby. He could not help but notice her deep agitation. She looked wearied and her attire was poor and

"Please, sir," she panted, "mamma is sick.'

"Eh, hello! what's that?" exclaimed Ted. "Who is your mamma and where is she?" "Mamma is tired out and walked a long way, and she expected to find friends here, and they're all dead and gone, and we're hungry, too. She's just outside." Big hearted Ted Morse Stirred himself with a vigor ever present when he could do anybody a good turn. He followed the child outside. There seated on the step of the ladles' entrance was a young woman, pale, with closed eyes, and apparently overcome with weakness. She looked dazed and despairing as Ted touched her arm and spoke kindly. In fragments she weakly told her story. Both her husband and herself had in years agone been respectively steward and bookkeeper of the hotel for John Morse. They had left for another position six years previous. Her husband had died leaving her penniless. She had come to Brompton to see if her former employer could not give her employment again.

"So the finely kept books showing a profit where my careless figuring had a loss was your work, eh?" observed Ted, when he had seen mother and child installed comfortably. "You've come at the right time, Mrs. Alward. If ever I needed experienced advice it's just now."

Within a month Mrs. Alward was back at her old desk and the leaks in profits began to diminish. Within a month Ted experienced his first love and there was a quiet wedding.

Genial host and genial husband to a charming, helpful woman, a kindly father quite to little Eva, it seemed as though fate had led to his door the influences that were to make him a success and a happy man, Clothing Allowance.

When making out a budget, approximately one-sixth to one-fourth of the family income should be apportioned for clothing. Seventy per cent of the clothing allowance will be needed for outer clothing such as coats, suits, dresses, shoes, etc., and 20 per cent might be allowed for accessories and 5 per cent for cleaning and repairs.

"All right" was generally the first English phrase the French picked up from American troops. "All right" answers probably a quarter of the questions that an American is called upon to reply to. In the great mass of jargen in a strange tongue, it stood out on account of constant repetition. The poilus were wont to practice it, over their cognac and vin blanc glasses, in place of their own "tres bien," and yell it out to the Yankees on the side of the cafe.

As the French mastered "all right," so the Filipinos took up "gangway" during the American occupation of the Philippine Islands 20 years ago. Pursuing rough-house tactics that were not permitted during the last war in France, the American troopers would go down the streets of the island towns, pushing the natives into the gutter and yelling "gangway!" It became so that whenever a native heard "gangway" half a mile off, he immediately began to make way for the gang.

During the insurrection, at the height of one of the rebels' "offensives," the American troops were astonished to see a great swarm of Aguinaldo's soldiers come rushing over the top, waving bolos and spears and yelling "Gangway! Gangway!"

The Filipinos thought "gangway" was a vile American cuss word. They later decided that Col. Fred Funston and his Twentieth Kansas doughboys didn't care even if they were sworn at.—Ralph Duffy in Home Sector.

LOOK TO FUTURE OF FOREST

Experts Point Out Folly of Practices Which Prevent the Reproduction of the Trees.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That young growth in the woods, known popularly as "brush," is something to be rid of, is a prevalent but mistaken conception since a forest cannot maintain itself long without reproduction. For the sake of getting a scattering of green grass in the spring it is the short-sighted practice in hundreds of localities to fire the woods regularly. This results in killing thousands of small trees needed to continue the forest in the future, and also injures a large amount of marketable timber. Furthermore, such burning destroys a large amount of rich vegetable fertilizer.

Cattle and hogs in hardwood stands, and hogs in long-leaf pines, keep the forest from being restocked. Damage from insects can be reduced by cutting timber at the proper time of year and by utilizing lightning-killed trees without delay, since they harbor destructive pests. Cattle destroy the productive leaf mulch which keep the trees growing during long, dry spells. All large openings where light comes through into the forest should be filled with younger trees.

Telephone Defect Remedied. Part of the construction of the telephone consists of a pocket containing a small quantity of granules of arbon through which the vibrations pass, and the difficulty with this has always been that its full efficiency has not been secured by reason of the fact that these particles become packed in and are therefore nonactive. This condition is attributed to the moisture of the atmosphere. To remedy this defect some French inventors have made a microphone in which each individual grain of carbon is in a coil by itself so that no two grains can touch each other, being in contact only with the walls of the cell and diaphragm of the instrument. Experiments have shown that the new microphone is remarkably sensitive and gives a purer tone than any constructed on the old principle.—Indianapolis News.

Coaches to Go in the Trossachs. An epoch of more than local interest was closed recently, when the four-inhand and other coaches formerly in use on the famous Trossachs route were brought under the auctioneer's hammer.

For more than 60 years the four-inhand coach with its team of powerful horses and its post-boy in scarlet coat and white hat has been a familiar and pituresque feature of the season on the road between Callander and the

The picturesque four-in-hand coach is being displaced by the utilitarian motorcar, and a fleet of them is being put upon the road by the new company which has taken over the Trossachs hotel from the Blair famfly, in whose hands the famous hostelry has been for more than half a century.-Edinburgh Scotsman.

Origin of the Word Canada. The origin of the word Canada is obscure, but it is now generally accepted that it is derived from an Indian word, "Kannatha," meaning a village or collection of huts, and it is supposed that Jacques Cartier, hearing this word used by the Indians with reference to their settlements, mistook its meaning, and applied it to the whole country. Quebec is said to be derived from the Indian word 'Kebec," meaning a strait, and was given to the site of the present city of Quebec from the peculiar configuration of the St. Lawrence river at that point, for the river there grows narrow and from its deep waters rises the bold height on which the ancient city stands.

the eminent English scientist who is now visiting America, announced that the earth would probably continue to exist for 20,000,000 years more. These are, of course, round numbers. Some scientists estimate that the earth will live for ten times this age. There have been animals of one kind and another on this planet for fully this length of time. The dinosaurs are believed to have lived through some such period. The age of man, which is probably only a few thousand years, seems the merest trifle by comparison. When we consider how man has developed during recorded history, which is less than ten thousand years, we may hope that he will evolve to an infinitely finer type in the future.-Boys' Life.

Keeping Warm With Games.

Games were never so popular as now in country houses, and the reason is not far to seek. Living rooms are not heated as they were in the good old times, and guests, young and old, vote for games because they are warming. / There isn't a better game of ball than "fives," known in the days of Queen Elizabeth and declared by her to be "the best sport she had ever seen."-The Gentlewoman.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an in-flamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. A WOMAN OF METHOD.

By CECILLE LANGDON.

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.) The mother of John Bryce was what is commonly designated as a "tartar." No one who took the pains to become acquainted with her real qualities of sense, justice and strict adherence to her principles considered her either capricious or prejudiced, only her stern, iron ways seemed tyrannical at

Her husband had left her poor with an only son to care for. He became the one object of his mother's solicitude, not to coddle or indulge, but to bring up in the way he should go. There was no lack of the strap and unwavering discipline. John respected his mother because she was consistent. As he came to the estate of manhood he forged ahead very creditably in a business way. He courted and wedded Lillian Duane, who lived in a neighboring town, Lyndon, and they settled down there in their own home.

"John asked me to break up and live with them," old Mrs. Bryce remarked to a neighbor, "and that meek, mild, but thoroughly good little wife of his joined in the idea, but I would never think of intruding, for it would not turn out harmoniously. The only thing that worries me is that John needs some one to guide and restrain him. I do hope Lillian will see and curb his inclination to act on impulse."

The newly wedded pair seemed to get along creditably from all that John's mother learned, and if she missed her son and was lonesome, she concealed her sentiments. One day, however, a neighbor who had been on a visit to friends at Lyndon, stirred old Mrs. Bryce up and started her on the war path, bringing back some information that caused the mother to set her forceful wits at work.

"Lillian fairly idolizes John," was the way the neighbor put it, "but hasn't the gumption to govern him. She is simply so devoted to him that she never resents or complains." "Resents what?" sharply challenged the blunt old lady. "John has sort of hailed his release from your strict discipline as a relief and is celebrating his liberty full blast."

"What! you don't mean that he has got into wild ways and all that?" "Bless you, no! It isn't in John to act otherwise than the man your careful training has made of him. But he neglects Lillian." John Bryce had never been out in the world much. His business was prosperous, he liked companionship and through his genial and liberal ways had made many friends, principally members of a club. There he became a great favorite and most of his evenings were spent away from home, and while Lillian pined in secret, she really encouraged him because of the enjoyment he so selfishly acquired. Like a Roman mother of the olden times, the elder Mrs. Bryce made arrangements to remain away from home for a week and arrived bag and baggage at the son's home at Lyndon one morning. She was greeted with sincere pleasure by the lonely, neglected daughter-in-law who, within the hour, welcomed a visit that promised to restore to her the happiness she so

John Bryce came home that evening to find his mother in charge. She got him his supper and told him that Lillian had been called away to visit a friend and would be home later.

John had gone to his own little den adjoining the parlor, when his mother intruded upon his privacy. There was a resoluteness of the old time in her wrinkled face.

"John," she said. "do you remember when you were a boy how I used to tie you to a chair when I wished to keep you in the house?" "Yes, mother," assented John with reminiscent smile.

"Well, I shall do just that right now unless you consent to remain home all of this evening right in this room and learn what a gifted and lovely wife you have. Lillian does not know you are here. I will leave the door slightly ajar. I want you to know what a treasure you have got."

Some neighbors arrived one hour later. It was Lillian looking her best who received these. John Bryce opened his peering eyes wide as he noted her brilliancy in conversation, her rare grace and beauty, never before realized by his heedless gaze. She played on the plane, she sang-hidden accomplishments never before suspected by

"To try and check the cruel neglect of a heedless husband. For her sake John, for that of the little one on its way to you-"

"What's that?" exclaimed John. "Hasn't she told you? No? Poor soul! Don't you think she deserves a little more of your company, John?" "All of it!" cried John, going to his desk and taking a pen. He wrote a few lines. "I accept the lesson you are teaching me," he said humbly. "My resignation from the club. It's home for me and wife and baby after this," and he kept his PLACE CARDS, SO TO SPEAK.

Jane had been much interested in watching her grandmother prepare the dining table for a formal luncheon.

"What are those pretty pictures you

Third party candidates will no doubt be able to land in their places.

If an editor gets elected president the office seekers will have to boil down their letters.

The conventions always come out which every one agrees upon.

Not all the people who disappear into the woodland solitudes nowadays go there for communion with nature.

Feeling the necessity for hard work many people are putting in some licks for an hour or two in the morning.

You can't prove that you have massive brains simply by brushing your hair straight back from your forehead.

Don't expect the telephone operator to attend to your call until she has seen if the end of her nose needs any more powder.

The small boy will feel reasonably well satisfied if he blows off a finger July Fourth, and if he works hard he may get rid of an eye.

Responding to the clamorous demand for increased production vast numbers of limousines, fur coats, diamond rings and dress suits are being turned out.

It's all right to jail all the little profiteers who get away with a few cents, but the government should be very careful not to get too close to the big fellows who gather in millions.

Some of the people who look with contempt on the business ability of the new graduates will be complaining in a few years because these intelligent them. young men are jumped over their heads.

For every dollar that the world spends in stimulating production it is now spending about 100 to pay for destroying what other people have produced. Just how long can the world run on that basis?

THE NATION'S BIRTHDAY

The Nation's birthday is a day to be claimed their political independence. that date principles of fredom and equality and justice were proclaimed which were destined to overturn the world.

It has often been thought that American growth and prosperity are due mostly to the fertile territories this country possesses, with such abundant DR. H. C. ROBERTSON resources. But many other countries have equal advantages. Mexico has a land having superb resources, yet its people live in squalor and misery. Prosperity and success then are not dependent so much on opportunities as on the Princess Anne, Maryland use that people make of them and the principles on which their community

The nation founded July 4, 1776, has gone on to abundant prosperity, principally because it was founded on right principles. Thus based, its people have worked unitedly and have accomplished the grand result that now astonishes 350 Equitable Building, Baltimore, Md.

Few people realize the debt the peofounded this republic. It was an act calling for matchless courage. The signers of the declaration might have ple owe to the wonderful men who lived much more comfortably if they Friday, July 2nd, 1920 bad quietly submitted to the evils existing at that time. But they were not satisfied to live under a government hased on wrong principles. They started a movement that has swept over the world, freeing all peoples from the curse of absolutism, and opening wide the doors to democratic opportunities everywhere. The people of the United States must ever cherish the memory of these men and take pride in the marvelous gift they made to the world, feeling at the hour of 9-o'clock a. m. Subjects: English. FEMININE CAMPAIGNING

As woman suffrage has spread women and becoming adept at political campaigning. They do not follow just the lines laid out by the men. They do political work in a more subtle and refined way that may be quite as successful in getting votes.

Instead of noisy rallies on street corners with blaring brass bands they invite you to select pink teas and give you toothsome refreshments and smart conversation. In quiet ways they give you the idea that their candidates have the support of the most influential people. When the women get thoroughly going they will be more of a force in political results than most people expect.

THE COST OF WAR

A recent tabulation of federal expenses for 1920 shows what a tremendous burden war entails upon the people. Out of the taxes paid into the treasury 93 per cent. are either for purposes growing out of the recent war or for year and then rallied to 180 by the end protection against future wars. how to avoid war. Sometimes avoiding war means national dishonor, which is worse than debts or taxes. But it should be possible to find honorable ways by which war can be prevented.

THREE PER CENT. ON SALES

Competent business experts lay down the rule that a business may well appropriate 3 per cent. on its gross sales for advertising. Many claim that a 3 per cent. advertising outlay has resulted in increasing business 331 per cent. To many people 3 per cent. will seem a rather small amount for a business to spend to make itself known and independence of the law, but it's to communicate its offerings to the pub-Many concerns spend a good deal more than that and find it pays and that they could not exist without it.

Publicity is reckoned as one of the essential expenses of the up-to-date business. It no more expects to avoid it than to avoid insurance on its stock or cost of clerk hire or rent. You can't sell goods unless the people know what you have to offer, and 3 per cent. seems a moderate tax for getting that information to the public.

THE COLLEGE GRADUATE'S ATTITUDE

The editor of a leading American newspaper once said, speaking of college graduates, that they knew so much that it was awfully difficult for anyone else to get along with them. They felt they had had exceptional advantages giving them great superiority so that other people must defer to

How Prices Rose—And Fell

Interesting conclusions may be drawn are going more and more into politics from a recently completed analysis of wholesale and retail prices and wages for the years 1860 to 1872, in which tendencies strikingly like those of the finally a slump in prices which, economists and students of market conditions | will do you good. say, soon may be expected if history is to repeat itself.

The figure of 100 is taken as the basic level of all three in 1860. There was a gradual rise during 1861 and 1862 and 1868, and at the end of the last year wholesale prices were at 150, retail prices at 140 and wages at 130. During the year 1864 came the sharpest rise and wholesale prices jumped to the 210 mark, reaching the peak in January, 1865. Meanwhile both retail prices and wages had taken a more gradual rise, the former standing at 165 in January and wages being at 150.

In April, 1865, the war ended and there came a sudden drop in wholesale prices, which fell to 160 in July of that continued a steady rise throughout the year, not being affected by the end of levels of 170 and 165 at the end of 1865. In the year following the close of the war, 1866, there was a marked variasale prices fluctuated rather violently, but with a constant downward trend, It is the great problem of the future and they continued this downward course with occasional sharp rallies for seven years following the war, scoring a net loss of from five to ten points a year, until in 1872, just prior to the great panic, they were at 130, or just 30 points above the pre-war figure.

If history is repeating itself the man who denies himself useless luxuries and puts his money in government securities or in other standard investments will be on a sound financial basis when the present troublesome days are over.

Must Earn Nature's Favors.

Nature will not reveal her beauty, her joy, her splendor, her magnificence or her sublimity to the selfish or the hurried soul. She thinks too much of her great treasures of marvelous mystery to fling them out to the penurious, greedy, hurried human being, to the casual eye, to those who are rushing along at railroad speed. No one can successfully woo and win her who is not willing to study her, take time to serve her, and listen to her voice. She tells her secrets, reveals her mysteries and beauties only to those who know how to walt, who take time to think, to ponder; to those who can appreciate and love these things well enough to spend time with her.-Orison Swett Marden in Chicago News.

No High Cost of Clothing Here. When a hole is worn in tapa cloth it is only necessary to moisten the edges and beat them together. Tapa cloth was once woven or pounded into hape in many parts of the South Sea islands. It is made of the barks of the banana, breadfruit or mulberry. The rough outer bark is first scraped off and the inner fibers are beaten toether and allowed to ferment. So fine is the texture of the cloth that one would never imagine it had been prepared in this crude manner. It is blenched to a dazzling white color in the sun, and when made into garments is practically indestructible.—

MANY ROADS TO KNOWLEDGE

For Instance, Impudent Fake Resulted in Opening Up the Field of Electro-Therapy.

Along the road that leads to knowledge are scattered many fake-shops, which as a rule do a flourishing and profitable business. For the chief weakness of the human mind is credu-

But by curious paradox, the foolishness factories every now and then produce something that proves of substantial usefulness to science.

For example, in New England many years ago a man named Perkins invented what he called a "magnetic tractor," for drawing diseases out of folk. It was shaped like a pair of compasses, with one leg of silver and the other of copper. When the two points were passed over the afflicted part of the body the instrument was supposed by some electrical means to alleviate or cure the trouble.

The "tractors" undoubtedly did benefit many people; also Perkins, who sold them for $5 apiece. They made such a sensation that scientists took the matter up, investigating it thoroughly and proving that imagination did the work. Blindfolded persons were relieved of pain by the contact of a couple of pointed sticks of wood, which they mistook for the instrument in question.

The whole business was plain foolishness. Nevertheless, the interest it awakened led to the first opening up of the field of electro-therapy, discoveries of which have proved of such immense importance to medical sci-

AHEAD OF HIS TIME

Peter Heulein, Who Made the First Watch, Accused of Witchcraft and Thrown Into Prison.

There is in existence today a letter dated April 22, 1527, from Martin Luther to Father Frederick Pistorius. the last abbot of St. Aegiduis in Nuremberg, in which he thanks the abhot for the gift of a watch, and adds: "I feel compelled to become a pupil of our mathematicians in order to understand this unique timekeeper." Never before had he seen such an ob-

As he was familiar with clocks, what he meant, evidently, was that the time indicators on the clock were different from those on the watch which had been given to him. It is quite probable he had in his possession the first watch made by Peter Heulein, or at least one of his first ones. This Peter Heulein was a blacksmith and locksmith and devoted his time to mathematics and watchmaking, for which he was thrown into prison charged with witchcraft, which was then one of the easy ways of disposing of a rival or of a person who did things out of the ordinary.

But Peter persevered, and the name of Heulein and Nuremburg is preserved by a monument in his native town.

New Bells Made Like Old.

We have often heard of the beautiful silver tone of very old church bells in Europe and some have even been bought at a great price and brought to America. It was supposed that after a bell had rung regularly for one or two centuries some mysterious quality was developed, and the beautiful tone could be acquired in no other way. An ingenious American studied the problem, however, and decided that the silver tone was simply due to the fact that the clapper of the bell had worn itself and the bell by continued striking, until the two fit closely together and that the shape of the metal and nothing else determined the tone. He began to make bells by casting them so that the clapper and the bell fit each other properly, and the mellow silver tone was obtained at once. Today we are manufacturing such bells and selling them abroad.-Boys' Life.

Worry Really Wicked.

Worry is really an evidence of lack of self-confidence and of faith in the power that runs the universe. It is a lack of faith in the power that, provided you do your part, will always bring things out better than you possibly could by yourself alone. Why should you worry, why should you fear, why should you be anxious, when God's vision and omnipotence are always ready to guide and serve you?

There never has been an instant in your life, my friend, which you could have safeguarded or provided for with a thousandth part of the wisdom with which God has guarded and provided for it. It is really a reflection upon him to be anxious about the future, to dread poverty and sickness, to worry about your business, to fear failure, in your undertaking.-Orison Swett Marden in Chicago News.

Fierce Apparitions.

In the West Indies a sight of the "rolling calf" presages death or terrible misfortunes. The negroes are dreadfully afraid of possible encounter with it at night. It is white, of enormous size and with eyes that blaze like hot coals.

William Thorp, a learned student of such manifestations, writes of a phantom shark that haunts the waters about Nassau, in the Bahamas, where it is known as the "harbor master." It shines with a weird phosphorescent glow even in the daytime, and though hooked on many occasions and pulled in, it invariably vanishes from view at the last moment-simply melting into nothingness.

Best Qualities of Three Great Peoples
Declared Mingled in the Dwellers
In Alexce.

As we came out of the square (at St. Amarin) little boys were bringing in armfuls of wood for their school-room stoves; others were already noisily scampering home for dinner in the crisp, sawdusty air; straight columns of smoke from many chimneys evoked women standing about nooday fires; there was a homely human feeling about it all.

As I went through the school it seemed to me that the types of the children were modified in two ways, inclining now toward the elongated head, with pointed chin, dark hair, dark eyes and mantling color; now toward the round-headed, square-jawed, blond type, with full, dreamy, blue eyes. But under these modifications one felt that there was a persistent something, that was their own, neither German nor French nor anything else, for all the mingling; the Alsatian root and stem, with an inalienable, peculiar life mounting in it, its very own, its race gift.

And this essential gift, this rich, diverse inheritance, had been received from each point of the compass. From the south, through the defiles of the Alps, the Great Latin traditions had infiltrated. From the north and east had come Germanic thought, with its mystical reactions, its metaphysical inclinations, its marvelous legends, and its romantic chronicles of gods and half gods. From the west, from Caul, came grace and courtesy and the deathless wish for liberty. Was ever a people more richly endowed!-From "Alsace in Rust and Gold," by Edith O'Shaughnessy.

WITCHES FEARED IN OHIO

Early Settlers Had Strong Belief in Their Power to Work Harm In the Community.

Belief in witchcraft was not uncommon among the early white settiers in Ohio, and domestic animals which were claimed to have been taken possession of by witches were sometimes burned alive in order to bring in end to the evil practice of witches. It was held that witches could not be exterminated in any other way.

Howe's Chio history records a tory of this kind, said to be on he records of the common pleas court of Lawrence county. The story was brought out in the trial of a claim for imposition in a horse sale 1828. The purchaser claimed that he had been cheated, that the horse, fistead of being sound, was sick when sold to him, and died soon afterward. The defendant who had sold the horse claimed that the animal was not sick, but was bewitched, and in support of his contention told of a cow in the same neighborhood that had been bewitched. The owner of the cow was convinced of the fact, and to make sure that the witch would not take possession of other animals in the neighborhood, had tied the cow to a tree and with the assistance of neighbors, burned her there alive, much to the relief of Vishnu is the second god in the Hindu triad. When he first appears in Vedic times, he is simply the god of the shining firmament, the younger brother of Indra, and inferior to him in dignity. The higher rank was accorded to him by later writers. The Brahmanic myths relating to Vishnu are characterized by the idea that whenever great physical or moral disorder affected the world, Vishnu descended in a small portion of his essence to set it right. He is generally represented as having four arms, each hand holding some particular object, and as riding on a being half man and half beast. His most enthusiastic followers are generally drawn from the middle classes of Hindu society. His mark on their foreheads is a trident, with a yellow prong in the center and a white one on each side.

Sweetle's Last Call.

I had an appointment with my best beau on a rainy evening, and as I knew that because of the weather our evening would be spent in the movies I put up my hair in curlers, thinking that my tam would be enough camouflage. The tam-was already in place when sweetle arrived, and off we went. It was warm in the show and without thinking, I slipped the tam off. Can you imagine my embarrassment when the light went on and my sweetle. turned to gaze on my natural curly hair and was confronted with a head full of curlers sticking up at different angles? He never came again.-Exchange.

The Art of Pleasing.

The desire of pleasing makes a man agreeable or unwelcome to those with whom he converses, according to the motive from which that inclination appears to flow. If your concern for pleasing others arises from an innate benevolence, it never fails of success; if from a vanity to excel, its disappointment is no less certain. What we call an agreeable man, is he who is endowed with that natural bent to do acceptable things from a delight he takes in them merely as such; and the affectation of that character is what constitutes a fop.—Richard Feeding for Good Teeth.

The soon defective teeth of the adult are due in a great measure, according to an authority on dentistry, to the faulty kind of food given to children. Food which requires mastication tends to develop the gums and salivary glands, while the practice of giving too much liquid food causes narrow jaws, weakens the gums and mars physical beauty. The same authority continues: "Thin, small faws consequent on liquid diet, do not furnish room enough to accommedate the teeth even were the blood supply sufficient—the teeth thus crowded failing to receive adequate nourishment-a most potent cause of defect in the enamel, and caries follows."

Gold and Religion.

Gold was used for most part as a useful metal; for decoration and ornament; but it was often associated with religious thought. According to the Inca belief, an egg of copper fell from heaven from which sprang the noblity; and after a longer period an egg of gold fell from which issued the Inca. Among the Chocos of Colombia, an important idol of gold was worshiped and slaves were sacrificed to it at certain seasons of the year. The idol represented a woman, who was once human and gave birth to a child who became the creator.—Exchange.

FOR TWENTY-SIX YEARS NOW WELL AND HAPPY THIS IS WORTH READING

The experience of Mr. E. J. Toupalik, 1438 Rose street, LaCrosse, Wisconsin, is chiefly remarkable on account of the length of time he was afflicted.

He writes: "I have been suffering with chronic bronchitis for twenty-six years and every winter I would catch cold and become so hoarse I could not speak for six or eight weeks. I could get only temporary relief.

"This winter I was taken with Grip and was in awful shape. A fellow workman advised me to take PE-RU-NA. By the time I had used three-fourths of a bottle, the hoarseness was gone, also that tired feeling. I am on my second bottle. Hereafter PE-RU-NA will be constantly in my house. It is the best medicine ever put up for the purpose."

For any disease due to catarrh or catarrhal conditions, PE-RU-NA is equally dependable. Coughs, colds, catarrh of the head, stomach trouble, constipation, rheumatism, pains in the back, side and loins, bloating, belching gas, indigestion, catarrh of the large and small intestines, are some of the troubles for which PE-RU-NA is especially recommended.

PE-RU-NA can be purchased anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

MAKING OVER" OLD HOUSES

rehitects Have Shown That They Can Do Wonders With Present-Unsightly Structures.

There never was a time when the ervices, taste and special knowledge of the trained architect were more needed or more in demand. The carpenter and builder have for years been the consulting experts in the building of thousands of suburban homes and farmhouses, and let us give them credit, at least, before the jigsaw era, for many beautiful and charming old

Following the building shortage in these latter years has come an appreciation of the fact that any old house, or new, be it as hopelessly ugly as it may be, has possibilities. Architecture has shown many instances of "before and after" of old ramshackle, barnlike structures, altered into most delightful homes. Old barns have been made over into charming studies and living quarters, woodsheds incorporated into the redesigning of an old farmhouse. Everywhere is shown a wider appreciation that nothing is impossible to the architect of taste and

The old and hopelessly ugly city brown-stone house and the little two er three-story brick house or stable on a side street have been made into artistic and attractive apartments or studio buildings.

It is to the architect that we owe this renaissance and we have only made a beginning toward the development of the city beautiful from old and unsightly and out-of-date structures. Lest some should say that we are dealing with merely idealistic matters, with our own desire for better things artistically, we remark that in every instance these "artistic" improvements have proved the very best of business in increased rents and more desirable tenants.

If the cost of new buildings has deterred many from carrying out their long-cherished dream of ewning their own home, there is abundant opportunity almost everywhere for the alteration of old places at very moderate cost. And old houses nearly always offer the nucleus of a more substantial structure than many hurriedly built modern houses put up in quantitles for speculative purposes.—From

CITY'S BILLBOARDS MUST GO

Cincinnati Commissioner Prepares for the Removal of Signs, Under a Court Order

Orders for the removal of all billbeards from the residential sections of Cincinnati are being prepared by George E. Hauser, city building commissioner, according to the Christian Science Monitor. Commissioner Hauser's action is based on a recent decision by a judge of the Commou Pleas court, that the municipal ordinance restricting billboards is retroactive. This ordinance requires a petition containing the consent of 51 per cent of the property owners in any residential block before a permit for the erection of a billboard may be granted. The judge held that this regulation applied to billboards erected before the passage of the ordinance. Commissioner Hauser points out that under this interpretation the residents of each block have it in their power to rid themselves of objectionable billboards by refusing to sign the consent petitions which the billboard interests are hurriedly circulating.

If your back aches-if your kidneys are weak, profit by the experience of Thomas H. Heath, 114 Beckford avenue. He says: "I suffered from severe pains through my back and loins. 1 was unable to rest well at night and mornings felt tired and worn out. I suffered from frequent dizzy spells and at times they were so severe I could hardly stand. Doan's Kidney Pills holped me in every way and my sys-tem was entirely rid of kidney com-plaint."

FOR OBSERVANCE OF INDEPENDENCE DAY

We will be closd on Monday, July 5th

July 4th, fittingly celebrated each year as the date of the official signing of the Declaration of Independence, is symbolic of the true spirit of Americanism.

One hundred and forty-four years of industry, initiative and honest achievement have won for America a preeminent position among the great nations of the world.

This rich heritage is ours. With characteristic American energy and resourcefulness, and with the determination to go ahead, there can be no stopping of the onward sweep of our country as it enters the one hundred and forty-fifth year of its
