"Nearer to Life's Winter."

Nearer to life's winter, wife!

We are drawing nearer,

Memories of our blessed spring

Growing dearer, dearer.

Through the summer's heat we've toiled,

Through the autumn weather

We have almost passed, sweet wife,

Hand in hand together.

Time was hearts were, well as feet,

Lighter, I remember,

April's locks of gold are turned

Silver this November.

Nearer to life's end, sweet wife

We are growing nearer;

The last milestone on the way

To our right grows clearer.

Some, whose hands we held, grew faint,

And lay down to slumber;

Looking backward, we, to-day,

All their graves may number.

Heights we've sought we've failed to climb,

Fruits we've failed to gather;

But what matter, since we've still

Jesus and each other.

Bob Whitlow's First Patient.

How, as a general thing, young doctors and lawyers get their first patients and clients is one of the unsolved mysteries.

I know how it was in Bob Whit-low's case.

Bob, after graduating with honor at a first-class medical college, went out west, and picking out a populous and sickly neighborhood, pitched his professional tent, hung out his shingle, and boldly offered himself as a healer of the people.

His moderate patrimony barely sufficed to meet the expenses of his colleagues and medical course, leaving him a sole dependence for the future on his success in the walk of life which he had chosen.

A few months convinced him that the immediate prospect was not very promising. Dr. Chinough had resigned there for so many years with undisputed sway, that the offer of a young and inexperienced practitioner to compete with him was generally looked upon as a piece of impertinence.

True, the neighboring grave yard disclosed a mortality out of all proportion to the population; but nobody attributed it to "Old Chin," as some of the less respectful called him.

I have already said it was a sickly region, and Old Chin, had a happy knack, moreover, when his patients died, of laying the blame on Providence, and when they didn't, of ascribing to himself the glory.

As for my friend, Bob Whitlow,

Old Chin, simply ignored his existence.

Things began to look blue for Bob.

His board bill fell behind, his office rent got into arrears, and unless af-airs took a speedy turn, an unpleasant crisis must be reached soon.

For Vice-President
THOMAS F. BAYARD,
OF DELAWARE.

Our readers will pardon us for the small amount of reading matter on our outside this week. We thought the people would like to see what the country was doing, so we concluded to lay the list before them.

We believe that the Commissioners have failed to comply with the provisions of the code in publishing the list in two newspapers if there be two published in the county. The Commissioners either did not want the people to see what they were doing or they desired to conceal it from as many as possible. We shall only give the list this week, and we advise our readers to preserve this copy. We shall have occasion to refer to it again, perhaps, although in the kindest spirit, as we have the kindest regard for a majority of them.

The people want to know to whom the money goes when they pay their taxes, hence we publish the list as the men who pay three-fourths of the taxes of the county are subscribers to the Advertiser. The publishers of every other paper within twenty miles of here cannot say as much with truth, and there is four of them in that distance. Now what do the Commissioners mean by refusing to put the list in the Advertiser?

Do they or do they not want it read by the people? But two of their number told us they wanted the Advertiser to publish the list, and there have not been but four present at any meeting for four months. Well, we did not expect any favor from them but the people who elected them had a right to demand something. We did not advocate the election of a majority of them, and that is the cause of the trouble (or one of the causes). The Advertiser has received last year four hundred dollars for what they paid us one hundred and twenty dollars for a like service. They pay the Advertiser $400 for publishing, while our account was only $68 for various services rendered, while they passed an account for twenty-four dollars and fifty cents. Well, it is not strange for a Christian man to take care of his own household. That paper, it is said, belongs to one of the Commissioners in part, and is published by a company, one of whom is his brother. Charity begins at home, and if the tax-payers of the county are satisfied with this perversion of their money, we ought not to be surprised. We leave the Commissioners with those who they have already insulted time and again by the appointment of constables and road supervisors in the several districts who could not command the respect of the people. They were appointed because they were opposed to the Democratic party.

Why don't you send me your paper gratis? said a person to us the other day. "It will not cost you much to print one more copy, and you certainly can spare one copy gratis."

Yes, we could and we have to spare some, but it costs us twenty-five hundred dollars to get out one thousand copies per week one year, including material, rent, wear and tear and labor, and yet subscribers seem to think that a dollar is too much to pay for their paper. We would like to accommodate all our neighbors with a copy gratis, but we think it would be much easier for each of our neighbors to pay us one dollar a year, than for us to give away one thousand copies, hence you see the necessity of paying the publisher for his paper, in order that he may be able to run his machine and get out

A good paper for you to read

Now suppose you are a farmer and you are required to assist all your neighbors by giving each a day's work in the busiest season, can it be expected that your crops will be in order for the inspection of your criticizing neighbors at the end of each week when you have to be absent, assisting all your neighbors instead of cultivating your own farm?

Then how can you expect the publisher to get out a good paper week after week at an enormous expense unless you give him what belongs to him (the pay for your paper) and let him cultivate his farm and put it in order to be seen by you and all the rest of the neighbors at the end of the week.

Then pay the publisher for your paper and enable him to buy good material and to employ skilled labor, so that he may get out a good paper for you and all the rest of the neighbors to see at the end of the week, and then you will have done only your duty.

Harper's Magazine for August, 1875.

Harper's Magazine for August is a brilliant number. The last contribution in the number—Mr. Longfellow's poem—is by no means the least important.

This poem, occupying five pages of the Magazine, where it is published by arrangement with the author, was read on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of the graduation of the class in 1825 in Bowdoin College. Among the members of that class, besides Mr. Longfellow, were the Rev. George B. Cheever, Nathaniel Hawthorne, John S. C. Abbott, Congressman, Jonathan Cilley, and J. W. Bradbury, ex-Senator of Maine.

The poem is the best of the recent productions of Mr. Longfellow, and for dignity and tenderness of feeling is not surpassed by anything he has ever written. Simply as an example of publishing enterprise, the issue of this poem immediately after its reading is the memorable feature.

The number opens with an exquisite poem by Joaquin Miller, "Sunrise in Venice," beautifully illustrated.

Joseph Cook's long poem, "Ticonderoga and Montcalm," with seven superb illustrations, commemorating the fierce conflicts between the French and English, at Lake George and Quebec, for the mastery of this continent, is as truthful as well as a spirited and beautiful narrative of those grand and decisive events of early American history.

Colin Thaxter and Mrs. S. M. B. Platt contribute poems to this number. Mr. Thaxter's poem, "Submission," is called forth by the recent wreck of the Schiller.

A profusely illustrated paper, by William H. Rice, gives an interesting history of the growth of that peculiar enterprise, the Express business.

The Rev. Julius H. Ward describes the beauties of camping out, the social gayeties, and the sportsman's pleasure, at Moosehead Lake. His paper is accompanied by twenty-four excellent illustrations, most of them from the characteristic pencil of Augustus Hoppin.

William C. Manning, an officer of the United States army, contributes an exceedingly interesting illustrated paper on the "Ancient Pueblos of New Mexico and Arizona." His description of the dwellings, domestic economy, and religious customs of the Zuni Indians is novel and entertaining.

Professor Rans's fifth illustrated paper on the Stone Age in Europe is devoted to those most curious of scientific topics—the Kitchen-middens and the ancient Lake Settlements.

James Farion contributes a paper on "Caricatures of Women," with fifteen illustrations, from Gavarni, Mrs. Trollope, and other sources.

The "First Century" paper, this month, is a comprehensive review, by Francis A. Walker, of the Growth and Distribution of our Population, illustrated with maps. A volume of information is condensed into this article.

Julien Hawthorne's serial story "Garth," develops in interest with every successive chapter. This novel will place its author first among American story-writers.

Mrs. Spofford and Elia Farmon contribute two short stories of thrilling interest.

The American Farmer.

The July No. is received, and as usual, filled with a very great variety of useful, upon almost every subject connected with Agriculture and its kindred arts. This number is peculiarly interesting to the farmers of the South and the Middle States, containing a number of papers applicable particularly to their products and condition. The Horticultural and Floricultural departments, as well as those of the Dairy, Live Stock, Poultry and Apiary are well attended to—the articles being generally of a practical character, and very instructive. The Farmer is beautifully printed and gotten up, and though the oldest journal of the kind in the country, looks as fresh, ray and is as instructive in all the branches of agricultural literature as any of its contemporaries. Subscription price $1.50 per annum, or 5 copies for $5.00. Sam'l Bards & Son, publishers, Baltimore, Md.

There are 800,000 acres of soil in India under jute cultivation.

A Father Killed by His Son.

[From the Boston Courier Record (Ky.)]

Our county was on Tuesday night made the scene of another of those tragedies which have gained for it the unenviable reputation of holding human life of small account. This time it was a son who killed his father in defense of his mother.

On the night mentioned, Columbus Fulkerson, who lives on Plum Run, in this county, came home drunk, and commenced beating his wife and children with a wagon whip in a most brutal manner. After whipping the defenseless woman and children to his heart's content, he went out to the wood pile where his son Albert, a youth of seventeen, was chopping wood, and attempted to continue his drunken brutality, when the boy with one blow of the axe crushed his skull, and stretched him a lifeless corpse on the ground.

At noon yesterday, when parties came to town and notified the Coroner, he was still lying where he fell, with the wagon whip, his instrument of brutality, clutched in his lifeless hand. Deputy Sheriff Geo. W. Hunter started to the scene of the murder yesterday for the purpose of arresting the perpetrator of the deed, but was unsuccessful in his efforts up to last evening. We learn, however, that he had frayed him through an immense briar field in the neighborhood, but finally lost track of him. We were informed, also, that after the commission of the crime, young Albert was seen by several parties, jumping over fences, leaping ditches, and rushing through field and wood as if dethroned of reason.

The Boundary Line Dispute.

It is stated that the Maryland and Virginia Boundary Line Arbitration is making satisfactory progress, and there is every probability that the present referees of the disputed line will be able to reach the conclusion of a controversy between the parties concerned which has existed for more than two hundred years.

This case is receiving very thorough investigation at the hands of the respective counsel, who are preparing it for the first action of the Board of Arbitrators.

Finding the time too brief for completing the testimony and submitting the case for decision by the 30th of June, fixed originally for their meeting, the referees have postponed their next session to the 28th of July, which will enable counsel to complete the evidence and submit the arguments now in preparation.

Hon. Isaac D. Jones, of counsel on behalf of Maryland, and Hon. William J. Robertson, of counsel for Virginia, attended by Mr. A. B. Magruder, Commissioner to take the testimony, have been diligently engaged in the examination of witnesses at Crisfield, Md., and Cambridge, Va., for the last ten days, and will resume their sessions for additional proof on the 12th instant in this city. —B. Shocking Wife Murder.—On Saturday evening, about dark, a horrible case of wife-murder occurred at twenty-ninth street between Brown and Parrish, Philadelphia. William H. Brown, a young man about 28 years of age, stabbed his wife, Bessie, in the neck, causing almost instant death. They had been married about eighteen months; but his wife lived happily together, and this caused a separation. The husband took up his abode at his father's house, and the wife took rooms with another woman, and supported herself by sewing. Subsequently Brown was annoyed by that she was obliged to have him arrested for desertion, and he was in prison about a month. This, no doubt, caused the crime.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Brown, with her friend, Mrs. Smith had been at the Park, when on returning by Lemon Hill, Brown met them and after a few words with his wife drew a sharp knife, and plunged it into her neck, severing the jugular vein. Mrs. Smith, who had walked ahead turned just in time to see him draw it from her throat. He then ran rapidly away, and escaped. He is described as being 28 years of age, five foot six inches in height, of a stout build, somewhat stooped, and has two finger joints off the right hand. His hair is brown, although he is rather bald, and he wears a small sandy mustache.

The Treasury Changes.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—All the money in the Treasury's office is now being counted. About one hundred and twenty-five millions are engaged in the business in several rooms. The count is superintended by gentlemen especially appointed for the service. It is estimated that the money aggregated about $60,000,000, each separate note passing through the hands of the counters. All this money is to be recounted before it is transferred to the new Treasury, which entered upon his duties to-day. Many friends of General Spinner, the retiring Treasurer, called upon him this morning to take leave. His retirement seems to be regretted by the employees of the bureau more than by other parties, some of whom including ladies, will be removed by the new incumbent. Colonel Frank Jones, Assistant Cashier, is the first to feel the effect of the change. His place is temporarily supplied by Mr. Guthrie. The board of Mr. New, the Treasurer, is for $150,000, his bonds being citizens of Indianapolis, including William H. English. The Treasury Department is disturbed in office, and removals under the provisions of the act providing for the general reorganization.

Four Women Made Widows by the Death of One Husband.

On Saturday last Mr. Louis Walker died at West Liberty, leaving a widow. Previous to his death he expressed the earnest wish that if he died he might be buried at his old home, a short distance south of Bevington, which is eighteen miles from Des Moines, on the Winterset road. With a heart full of love and affection, and weighed with sorrow and desolation, the widow placed the body of the late husband in a casket and started to obey his last request. She passed through the city Monday morning. Arriving at Bevington inquiry was made of residents as to the locality where the body was to be buried, the widow being an entire stranger to everybody. She was asked whose body it was, which it was discovered that the deceased was the lawful husband of the daughter of the owner of the premises where he requested to be buried, and who was then residing at her father's. Of these facts the widow was ignorant, and the certain knowledge of the scene which must follow the meeting of the two wives of one husband under such circumstances induced some of the citizens to inform wife No. 2 of the facts. She was at first astounded, then mortified and indignant at the base deception which had been practiced upon her. She instructed the citizens to take the body to the residence of wife No. 1, and taking the first train returned to West Liberty, and the first knowledge wife No. 1 had of the matter was the arrival of the body at her residence. Since her departure it has been discovered that Walker has also a wife in Missouri another in Ohio, and perhaps others elsewhere.

From every part of the South the intelligence comes that the negroes are becoming disgusted with the greed and dishonesty of the carpet-baggers who have obtained possession of the Republican or ganization in the reconstructed States, and are preparing to join with the native whites in opposition to the marionettes of these adventurers. It could hardly be otherwise. The colored voters in the South, though generally ignorant, are not so blind but that they can see that the misgovernment which is ruining their white neighbors, upon whom they mostly depend for employment and the means of livelihood, is as much opposed to their own interests as to those of the whites. A career of robbery which has resulted in the impoverishment of several States rich in natural resources, cannot be continued without the population of every class suffering from its effects. The more intelligent of the negroes see this, and are deserting the political impostors who have been using them to advance their own selfish schemes while making great professions of devotion to the welfare of the African race. The Norfolk, Va. Day Book, a Republican newspaper which has the sagacity to see that its party cannot carry the ignominy entailed upon it by the racialities of the carpet-baggers and live, says that it has been informed by leading colored men that the colored voters desire to conciliate with their white home people, and that they are determined to do so. The same disposition is manifesting itself in Louisiana, Mississippi, and other States which it has been thought would become completely Africanized, and it only depends upon the good sense and cool judgment of the native whites in all the Southern States to banish the race question from politics.

The Norwegian Government has granted a credit of $20,000 for an expedition to be sent out next year to explore the sea between Iceland, the Faroe Islands, Spitzbergen, and Jan Mayen.

The French convicts at New Caledonia have turned their attention to the manufacture of cigarettes, and their productions with native tobacco are in great demand through civilized Australia.

Among the young ladies who are this year attending the course of lectures in the St. Petersburg Academy of Medicine are two Tartar ladies (Mohammedan) who have completed their preliminary studies in a school at Odessa.

Fifty yearlings belonging to Mr. Blenkins were sold by Mr. Tatterall on June 19, at Middle Park, near Blackheath, in England, for 21,505 guineas. The highest price was 1,500 guineas, given for a bay filly by Vespasian—Scotian.

With the departure of the grainshoppers from Kansas, the State Relief Society has been dissolved. The society expended about $135,000. From other sources about $40,000 more was contributed for the 20,000 grainshoppers sufferers, or about $20 a head.

The Prussian Government has offered two prizes of the value of about $750 and $2,500 respectively, for the discovery of a new method of cleansing plaster casts and for the invention of a new material, possessing the advantages of plaster, but which will not deteriorate by crusting.

The Paris Figaro asserts that there are many American women in that city living freely in the mind and mire of the demi-monde, and acting as spies for Germany. They are said to extract information from the official French gentry, who are drawn into the circle of their fascinations.

"Sir," said a Hilo blustering man to a religious opponent, "to what sect do you suppose I belong?" "Well, I don't exactly know," replied his opponent, "but to judge from your size, appearance, and constant buzzing, I should think you belonged to the class generally called insect."

The Russian Government spends annually $32,000 for carriages to keep the singers at the St. Petersburg opera out of the snow, and to provide them with warm feet and clear voices. How if were to spend a little of this money upon its plebeian subjects, or not, extort it from them in the first instance?

The Pope intends to complete Michel Angelo's design by putting twelve statues of the Apostles around the cupola of St. Peter's. He stipulates that each statue must be made by a different sculptor, who is a Roman, and a Catholic from his birth. This will, it is said, so restrict the choice of artists that bad work is certain to be the result.

The violin of Paganini is preserved as a glorious relic under a glass case in the city hall of Genoa. A few days ago, it being taken out to be photographed, a distinguished amateur, who was invited to play upon it, delighted a select audience with the pavor from Rossini's "Moss," and the "Carnival de Venice," composed by the famous violinist.

The Unitarians of Troy are building a fine church. A passing traveler inquired recently of a hotel carrier what kind of a building it was. The man didn't answer. "Is it a church, or hall, or what?" "Faith I think it's a church." "What kind of a church?" "Can't tell the name, sir, but it's for them folks as is trying to kneel the bottom out of hell."

The Detroit Free Press says of Joaquin Miller that "if his writing is as illegible as he claims, it would be a good idea for him to publish his poems in manuscript."

The Louisville Courier-Journal says it really makes no difference with the people whether his poems are printed in illegible or legible type, as in one case they couldn't read them and in the other they wouldn't.

Last night at present at Death, actively engaged in the organization of the Academy of Music of which he has been appointed president. The plan of study that he proposes comprehends vocal branches—piano, harmony and composition, counterpoint, instrumental music, sacred and choral music, and the history of music. The professors are M.M. Van Bulow, Witte Franz, Erzel, Robert Volkman, and Cornelius Abrancy.

The Iowa State Leader tells a story of a well-known life insurance agent, who approached Hammond, the revivalist, on the subject of insuring his life. Hammond said that he could not afford to turn his attention to such a temporary and worldly subject, but if the agent could insure his soul it might be worth while talking. The agent slowly shook his head and said it was impossible; his company did not carry any fire risks.

During the epidemic of intermittents in the West this season, the whole immense stock of Ayer's Cherry Cure became exhausted, and the producing power of his Laboratory was found inadequate to meet the demand. Many who knew his extraordinary virtues for the cure of Chills and Fever, paid exorbitant prices for this. This Ayer's Cherry Cure, by those who need it, to never fail. Renewal, if you must have medicinal aid, take the best of medicine. Free remedies are dear, as good as cheap, at any price you have to pay for them.—Charles Cox Courier.

To Consumptives.

The advertiser, a retired physician, having previously discovered, while a Medical Attorney in Southern Asia, a very simple vegetable remedy for the cure of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and reliable specific for Nervous Debility, Protrusion of the Uterus, and all Nervous Complaints, he is his duty to make it known to his suffering fellow-men. Actuated by this motive, he will cheerfully send (free of charge) to all who desire it, the recipe for preparing, and full directions for its successful use, this particularly discovered remedy. Poetry.

Shall We Be Forgotten?
How pleasant is this tender thought That yonder bluffs are keeping 'Neath waves of shadows and of sheen, The forms of loved ones sleeping.

I do not wonder one should wish—Life's storms are oft so dreary—That where they rest the place should be With flowers and sunshine cheery.

For rippling brooklets near them:
For wild bird's songs 'neath waving trees, Though that one may not hear them.

I do not wonder at his pined To sleep 'neath beds of clover Where winds might play with blooming cups.
And tip their sweetness over.

The sight of beauty makes the heart Grow softer, more forgiving;
To other scenes the dying go.
But to our graves the living.

The Captain's Child;

Lost And Found Again.

"Simon Grey, I leave these children in your hands, and more than enough to take care of them until they are able to help themselves, in case I should not return. As you deal by them, may God deal with you at the judgment."

It was Captain Forrester who uttered these words. He was about to bid farewell to his native shores again for a voyage of three long years. During the past year, while he remained at home, his wife had died, and been buried in the old churchyard of her native village, far away from the busy town. She had left him two children, a boy and a girl, the former seven, and the latter five years of age. It was of these, the dearest objects in the world to him, that he was speaking.

The man to whom he was confiding his precious charge stood behind the bar of a little shop. His name was Simon Grey, and he had the reputation of being a hard, close-fisted man. People with whom he came in contact in business relations said that he was not altogether honest—There was a look upon his face which said that this might be so. The look of a hypocrite is far more to be feared than that of a man whose face is is full of bold affront. With such a man you know how to deal; with the former, never.

"I accept the trust, Captain Forrester," he said, with an expression which he meant should be silent-like.
"When you come back you shall have no cause to complain of my stewardship. I will do by them as though your children were my own flesh and blood."

"See that you do. They are dearer to me than my life. This is the last voyage I shall ever make. When I return I shall settle down, and spend the rest of my life with my children about me."

And so the bargain was made, and the matter settled. The next day captain Forrester took leave of his children, and the great ship spread its wings to the favoring breeze, and departed on its long whaling voyage to the northward.

The days, weeks and months went on, and at last they told a year—The children grew and prospered—Simon Grey was as kind to them as it was his nature to be to any one, and of him they really had nothing to complain.

One day, about this time, news of startling importance came to him in his shop. The North Star, Captain Forrester's ship, was lost, and all on board had perished.

A returned whaler brought the news. They had picked up several articles floating on the bosom of the ocean, marked with the ship's name.
For a long time its owners had got no word from her. There could be no mistake. The North Star was gone, and with her all that were on board.

At the very moment that he heard the news, an evil thought came into the heart of Simon Grey. Captain Forrester would never more return to the welfare of his children. What need, then, was there of his longer care for them?

To be sure there was a large sum of money still left in his hands, but none knew it save himself. What was to prevent his keeping it, and let the children go to the poorhouse?
Nothing.

Then the words of the lost captain sounded in his ears: "As you deal by them so may God deal with you at the judgment." As he recalled the words he shuddered. But the love of money was so strong in his heart that he could not resist the temptation. He did his best to banish the words of the captain from his mind, and at last well nigh succeeded. Still at times they came back to him like a malediction.

In a week's time he had put his evil intentions into execution. The children were sent off to the poorhouse, and the money which was justly theirs was now his own.

It was the custom of the town authorities to obtain places in the country for such children as were left to their charge, who were bright and able to do work. So, as luck would have it, it came about that they were sent to live with a kind-hearted farmer, not far from the village where their mother was born, and where she now lay buried. By chance the farmer learned who they were, and was kind to them for their mother's sake, for he had known her well—One day he took them to the churchyard where she was buried, and over after it was their custom to come as often as they could and pay a visit to the spot. The farmer did not oppose it. He was glad it was so for the dead remains' sake.

Two more years went by. The children grew and prospered, and the farmer came to love them as his own. None had been given him, and his good wife came to regard them as though they were their own flesh and blood. Even the neighbors, who are always busy in such matters, admitted this, and had no evil to speak of their treatment of them.

In the meantime Simon Grey had come on piling up money until people came to talk of him as a rich man—The money he had stolen from the orphan children had helped him much to this end. But money could not ward off sickness and death, and about this time he was stretched up on a bed from which the physicians said he would never rise again.

Then it was that words of the captain kept sounding in his ears:
"As you deal by my children, so may God deal by you at the judgment." He could not rid himself of it. At all hours he seemed to hear it. It was next to impossible for him to get a moment's peace. Still he clung to his money. He might have atoned for his crime by making restitution now. But he would not do it. He was going to get well and he wanted the money. When he died it would be time enough to give them back their own.

Thus the days went on, and at last the one came which was to be his last on earth.

Yet he would not believe that he was dying. He was better, he said, and in a few days would be well again. Those that told him different were only trying to frighten him, and wished him dead. He would disappoint them all.

Along in the afternoon of that day there was a great commotion in the town. The North Star sailed into the harbor as proudly as she had departed from it. What could it mean?
Had the ocean given up its dead and one of the many ships buried therein?

The owners and others were on board before she cast anchor. Capt.
Forrester was there to receive them, and his story was soon told. They had experienced a terrible gale, and the vessel had sprung a leak. To lighten her, they had been obliged to throw many things overboard, and it was these which the vessel had picked up, and judged therefrom that the North Star had gone down.
Excepting this, the voyage had been successful, and they were back again with a noble cargo, and all well on board.

The captain's first inquiry had been for his children. If any of his visitors knew their fate, they did not acknowledge it. And well they might be ashamed to do so. It was a disgraceful thing in them to let the children of the captain they prized so highly go to the poorhouse.

As soon as he could, Captain Forrester came ashore, and hurried at once to the shop of Simon Grey. It was closed; and fearing he hardly knew what he had formerly lived.
A servant answered his summons.
Her master was dying, the doctors said; perhaps even then he was dead.
It was impossible to admit strangers.
The captain pushed her aside, and went direct to the chamber of the dying man, entering unannounced—He sat propped up in bed, and it needed no experienced eye to see that he had but a few moments to live. At the sight of the friend to whom he had acted so falsely, he uttered a terrible cry, and then exclaimed:

"He has come back to haunt me—The sea has given up its dead. 'As you deal by my children, so may
Go back to your grave and I will—"
What he would have said none ever knew. An ashen pallor overspread his face, and he fell back dead.

Captain Forrester stood spell-bound at the sight before him, and then, with a great fear tugging at his heart he inquired for his children. But there were none there who could give him any information upon the subject. Two years before, Simon Grey had sent them away—none knew whither.

Half distracted, the captain left the house, and sought in every direction for the missing ones. At last he heard that Simon Grey had sent them to the poorhouse. He hurried whither but could learn nothing there. There were none present who had been connected with institution two years before. He asked for the records of the place, but was baffled here. A year before, the old buildings had been burned, and the books and papers with them. Heart-sick, he turned away, fearing that his dear ones were lost to him forever.

For three days he scoured the town getting no clue. Then, with only a faint hope that he might learn something of them there, he started for the village where he had married his wife.

It was late in the afternoon when the coach brought him in sight of it.
The road lay not far from the churchyard where she lay buried. Alighting, he bade the driver go on, as he preferred to walk the rest of the way.
His first visit in the place should be to the grave of her who had been so dear to him.

Springing over 'he low wall, he passed slowly along the silent yard towards the well remembered spot—He had fixed his eyes upon the stone which had been erected to her memory, when he had suddenly paused, and stood as motionless as the marble slabs about him.

At the grave of his wife were two children—a boy and a girl.
The boy stood with his cap in his hand, with a reverential look upon his face, while the girl knelt upon the earth beside the mound, her hands clasped in the attitude of prayer.

A great hope sprang up in his heart. Could it be that the children he saw before him were his lost ones?
If they were, they were much grown; but this of course they would be in the three years he had been absent.
If they were not, why were they beside the grave of his wife? With the hope growing within his heart, he hurried to the spot.

The children saw him coming, and gazed curiously towards him. The girl had now risen to her feet. Surely there could be no mistake. As he looked upon her face, he saw there the exact resemblance of his dead wife.

Coming to her, he laid his hands upon her head.
"Who is buried here?" he said, pointing down to the mound.
"My mother, sir," was the answer.

"And what may be your name, little one?"
"Elsie Forrester, sir; and this is my brother Henry."

"And your father—where is he?"
"He was lost at sea, sir. Harry and I are orphans."

"Not quite, my darling," he cried, catching her in his arms. "Elsie, Harry, I am your father, come to claim you as his own. It was a false report, my being lost at sea. I am alive and well, and, thank Heaven, you are restored to me again!" The wondering children could not doubt his word. With a hand of each in his own, he led them to the village where old friends came forth to greet him, from every side.

The farmer was astonished when the captain approached, being, as he was, and sad at the thought of having those he loved so well, but this was spared him in a measure, for the captain thereafter made his home in the village, close beside him.

Save Money.
"Put money in your purse" if you can, young man; deny yourself a few of those expensive pleasures which are so enticing, and which have a sting behind. It may come hard at first; few take kindly to self-denial; but in the years to come you will thank yourself for exercising prudence in youth. Habits are easily formed; and he who does not begin to save when he commences life for himself, will rarely begin at all; for were not even the nucleus of a modest fortune has been early required, family expenses will, after a time, grow as fast as the income, and the two keep abreast ever afterward—The saving and the keeping of the first hundred or the first thousand dollars is the key to future success, from the fact that it builds up business character; it compels the formation of habits of economy and fixes them for life; it puts the young worker on the right road; it accustoms him to keeping out of debt, drills him in the homely science of keeping his financial matters snug, and builds up a granite determination to "forego expenses before income."

The Democracy of Wicomico and its Constituent Elements.

Eight years ago this county was called into existence by an article in the present Constitution of the State. Formed as it was, out of two old and well regulated communities, yet those communities were as incongruous as if they had been located in remote parts of the State. In other words, they were two heterogeneous masses of individuals brought into political union. While many of the individuals composing each community were not strangers to each other, yet many of them were, and a large majority of the people still remain strangers to each other, and in addition to this want of congeniality and acquaintance, they had hitherto been marshaled under different political leaders, who, although they had one general aim, yet their methods of attaining it were as diversified as the number of their aspiring political leaders. The two old counties were managed very differently, both politically and financially, and we find these diversified notions still existing. The first causes some discord, while the last may be advantageous, as it may serve as a check to the expenditures. Eight years have passed since the union of these heterogeneous elements, and but little progress has been made towards cementing the people into one brotherhood, and making them potent for the achievement of any great enterprise, either political, financial or social. This is a state of things which every lover of his neighbor, his community and his county ought to deplore. We fear that one of the leading causes of this want of harmonious blending together is the result of selfishness upon the part of those who have essayed to become political leaders among us. Men have put themselves forward whose only aim was the promotion of self, or some favorite of theirs, even at the expense of the party or its principles; who have frowned upon those who dare to suggest anything for the public good, if it had nothing in it which they could see was directly to their personal advantage. Now, unfortunately for us, such men have risen to the surface in our county, as well as in others, and we regret to have to say that this thing is too common all over the State and country.

Let the Democracy of Wicomico, at least for the present, and we hope it will for all time to come) rise above this unenviable position. Let her members cherish the time honored principles which created and sustained the Constitution through its various trials and vicissitudes, and stand by those principles now and in the future, for they are as dear to the people to-day as they were in 1788, 1848 and in 1850, or during that trying ordeal of the war, when the enemies of the Constitution and friends of centralization were trampling upon that sacred heritage. Our enemies are vigilant. They are watching every opportunity to seize upon every stray sheep who happens to leave the fold. Let us reason together, and that for the public good. Let us go forth with one mind and one voice, and let the old ship be out of the breakers and clear of the rocks before you quarrel about who shall hold the colors as she enters the port of safety. Let each take his turn at the pump at the windlass, at the halloo and at the wheel before he deems it wise to take the helm. There is room on board and plenty to do.

But we have overlooked one important duty of the mariner, and that is to keep a good lookout ahead. Don't sleep at your post. Be vigilant to see danger ahead in time to avert it, and we caution those who may be in charge during the watch to heed the cry of the man who has been put upon the lookout. Be sure to take warning or your craft with all on board may be demolished.

One more word and we have done. Before you put steam on, be sure your vessel is commanded by experienced seamen. Ask yourself if they have made safe voyages; have they skill and discretion enough to meet emergencies that may come unexpected, for, no matter how skillful the sailor may be, there are always arising obstacles which will beset his craft on every side, and unless he is a man of genius as well as of experience his powers will often be put to the severest test. Be wise, therefore, and put prudent men in charge of affairs, whether they be our nearest and dearest friends or not, so they are friends of Wicomico, of Democracy and of the people—the best interests of the community and the welfare of the State.

We regret to see from our exchanges that some of our northern newspapers are still laboring to sow the seeds of discord, and fan the smouldering embers of the late civil war. In their notice of the Louisville Journal's criticisms on Sherman's war speech at Bunker Hill, they say that the people of the South are still ripe for rebellion—that they only want a little encouragement to cause them to inaugurate another state of war. They also characterize them as ignorant, bloodthirsty, revengeful and indolent. We admit that ignorance and some degree of indolence does exist among the people of the South to some extent, but we deny that they are a revengeful and bloodthirsty people, desiring to inaugurate another war, for they have shown a degree of patience and fortitude unparalleled in history. They have submitted to indignities which were enough to make the most abject slave rebel. Nor do we believe that the people of the North would have submitted to a tithe of their burdens without making resistance, both open and clandestine. We do not desire to retaliate upon them by using hard names, but will simply refer the reader to the past history of the country, so far as the same relates to the North, or the section of all the "isms" which have cursed our people, from spiritualism, Free Loveism down to Beecherism, and we only have to say that all this tirade of abuse to the South is only an effort to convince the people that it is necessary to renominate Grant or some other tyrant like Sherman or Sheridan to dominate over the South and curse the whole country for four more years. They cry, "Let us have peace," while their every act leads to strife and war. We want peace all over the land, and there are no people who desire it more for its fruits than do the people of the South. "War has been to them ruin, while the North has reaped a harvest of wealth by fomenting strife." They have had a few of their cars slain, but what do they care, so that they may enrich themselves by plundering the people by fat contracts? We hope that the great mass of the people will put down the war bounds, and put a period to their schemes of plunder and revenge. That peace, quiet and prosperity may again cover our land as the waters cover the great deep, that our people (at least) may learn no more, but go on prospering and to prosper. This is the end desired by the Democracy of the country, and we hope by the masses of all parties.

MEDICAL.—In the Baltimore trade double column advertisement published elsewhere in this paper, will be found the card of Sanders & Stayman, who have a splendid assortment of those celebrated Foley Organs, and the Weber, Bradbury, and other favorite pianos, which they offer at the lowest prices, and on the most satisfactory and easy terms. The Foley Organ, it is conceded, has no superior in the world, and of all the latest improvements of other first class instruments, besides other important ones found only in the Foley. Another important fact is that these organs are the cheapest first class instruments manufactured in this country, and that the general agents, Sanders & Stayman, furnish them on such easy terms as to make the payment within the power of the man of moderate means.

We again call attention to their advertisement, and assure our friends that in buying of them they will get none but a first class instrument.

California.

The people of this State do almost everything on a grand and big scale. The wheat crop averages twenty or fifteen million bushels per annum; the cattle graziers furnish millions of boxes each year; the crop of wool exceeds forty millions of pounds annually, netting eight or ten million dollars; the gold and silver mined out of the bowels of the earth and coined at their mint amounted last year to over thirty millions, and since the establishment of the mint a grand total of over four hundred and ninety million dollars. Now, in addition to the other large hotels, they have commenced and nearly completed, at San Francisco, the largest hotel in the world. The "Palace Hotel" covers over 96,000 square feet of land, is seven stories high, the lower story is twenty-five feet and the others fifteen feet high, mainly fire proof, the walls are of stone and brick, banded together with iron. There are three inner courts, the centre one a carriage drive, covered with glass and surrounded with tropical plants, statuary and fountains. The breakfast, dining, ball, reception and other rooms are on a grand scale. The total number of rooms for the use of guests is seven hundred and fifty-five with three hundred and fifty bathrooms. There are over two thousand ventilating tubes leading from the rooms and halls to the roof, five elevators from the ground floor to the highest story, (worked by hydraulic power,) and seven stairways. The Palace Hotel will be furnished in the most costly style and opened about next Christmas, under the proprietorship of Warren Leland, Esq., who is widely known in his profession, and who has secured as assistant Mr. H. A. Chadwick, late of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington hotels.

Political.

Senator Christiancy, of Michigan, still adheres to his habit of talking sense. In a recent address at Kalamazoo he said: "I have full faith that the time will yet come when we shall all be influenced by like national motives, seeking the like national ends, as one common brotherhood, and when the Southerners will see, what most of us and many of them now see, that the result of the civil war which they felt as a defeat, and as a victory, (the abolition of slavery,) will be there and everywhere recognized as a greater blessing and more advantageous to them than to us; that their final defeat was their greatest victory; that they have got rid of the great evils which retarded their prosperity, depraved and degraded their people, cramped their enterprise, and their progress; that both races have been emancipated instead of one, and that we have fought the battle alike for both."

BUTLER AND THE DEMOCRACY.—Gen. Butler, in a late publication, remarks that the financial question "must, apparently, be solved by the democratic party," and that Ohio has given "no uncertain sound" upon this question. It would not be inconsistent with the supposition of Gen. Butler's former political somersaults if he should be found in strange company for him before long.—B. Sun.

Local Advertiser.

This paper has double the circulation of any paper on the lower Peninsula.

Mr. James Basso is left at our office the largest Early Rose potato we have seen this season, weighing 17 ounces. Beat this if you can.

A large number of colored people went over on the excursion train on Thursday to Ocean City. We presume they had a good time.

Buy your Drugs, Patent Medicines, Dye Stuffs, &c., of R. K. Truitt & Sons.

FOR SALE CHEAP.—Two first class Parlor Organs—Pianos and Keyes. Also an elegant Stiff Piano. Inquire at this Office.

Go to Sam'l H. Evans, No. 11 Main street, for the best ice cream. Samuel is a good fellow and loves to serve his customers with the best of cream on short notice.

A new Post Office has been established at Westport, 4 miles from Quantico, Wicomico County, and Jonathan Waller appointed postmaster. Mail three a week.

Judge Franklin passed through Salisbury en route for Snow Hill on Thursday from Somerset, where he has been holding Court, which adjourned on Wednesday, 14th inst.

For all diseases of Horses and Cattle use the Challenge Horse Powders, prepared by R. K. Truitt & Sons.

Capt. L. A. Parsons has abandoned the newspaper business and purchased a sloop, and intends dividing his time between the river and his farm.

Go to Mrs. J. P. Owens' for ice cream fresh from the frigid zone or some other cold harbor, and if it is not cold enough for you put it out to freeze on shares.

Further improvements are being made on the side-walks. The work is being done in front of the Presbyterian Parsonage. When a few more vacant spaces are filled, a continuous bridge will extend from the Park to the bridge.

The river improvement is going on bravely. The mud machine appears a little nearer the bridge every evening. We are glad to see it and hope soon to see a craft of more symmetrical appearance coming up to the wharf.

All persons who try the Challenge Horse Powder, prepared by R. K. Truitt & Sons, continue their use.

NOTICE!

July 1st, 1875. This is to certify that I have this day appointed F. C. Todd to act as my agent in the collection of all claims due the estate of Dr. G. W. Todd, dec'd.

Executrix of G. W. Todd, dec'd

RECENTLY CAMPAIGNING.—Round trip tickets at greatly reduced rates to Lewis will be sold at all stations on the Junction & Yorkwater, Breakwater & Frankford, and Worcester Railroads, during the camp. Good to August 1st.

Rev. Father Curtis, formerly of Mt. Calvary P. E. Church, Baltimore, but now a priest in the Roman Catholic Church in the Diocese of Maryland, will take up his residence in Salisbury next year. His mother and sisters will also reside here.

The firm formerly known as Melick Bros. & Easton, at No. 109 Chambers street, has been changed to Melick, Price & Easton, and will hereafter be conducted in that name. It is a good and safe firm, and shippers will not go astray in shipping to them. W. J. Higgins, Esq., at Fruitland, is their agent.

SOMETHING NEW IN SIGNS.—One of Munson's latest efforts in sign painting is a "transition sign," or a sign that seems to change from one to another as the beholder passes by. It is on exhibition at the store of Riddle & Williams, and is designed for a variety store. Mr. Munson hopes to find a purchaser for it and others among our enterprising merchants.

The officers elected at the semi-annual election of Newton Lodge, No. 55, I. O. O. F., were installed on Wednesday night last. The following are the officers: R. D. Abell, N. G.; Dr. Wm. T. Smith, V. G.; R. H. Adkins, Permanent Secretary; P. W. Bradley, Recording Secretary; and M. E. Hastings, Treasurer. After the installation a collation of good things were had in the ante-room, consisting of ice cream, cake, &c.

The Challenge Horse Powders, prepared by R. K. Truitt & Sons, are sold by merchants throughout the country; and at their store in Salisbury by the lb. package or dozen.

It was admitted by Physicians, that Dyspepsia and non-assimilation of food produces sleeplessness. Liebig's Liquid Extract of Beef in pint bottles overcomes those obstacles to repose as well as urinary troubles, which are said to interfere with it.

To reach the highest standard of health, nature demands the utmost regularity of the bowels; a slight deviation brings many inconveniences and paves the way to more serious dangers. We can recommend Dr. Bull's Vegetable Pills as the best medicine for the digestive organs.

As an impure or impoverished state of the blood is the prime cause of many serious complaints—Skin Diseases, Scrofula, Cancerous and Tuberculous Affections, &c.—a remedy adapted to remove this condition is all important, and may be found in Dr. Jayne's Alternative, a safe and rational domestic curative, of long established reputation.

Farmers and livery men who have used the Challenge Horse Powders will buy no other.

The Imp. O. R. M. of Sharptown, Md., turned out in full regalia on the evening of the 14th inst., and made a great display, being accompanied by two bands of music. They were joined by members of the Order from Delmar and Salisbury. Speeches were made by Dr. Ker of Delmar, Col. Hindale, of Wilmington Del., and Dr. Mann, of Sharptown, after which a grand parade and torchlight procession took place and passed through the town.

Mr. Charles B. Elzey has our thanks for a basket of the finest raspberries of the "Red Amazon" variety. These berries always bring the best price, and we would advise fruit growers to procure some of this variety. Mr. Elzey will sell plants at five dollars per hundred, and we would advise all persons about to embark in the small fruit business to procure some of the Red Amazon at once. Address Mr. C. B. Elzey, Delmar, Del., or this office.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to the estate of Dr. G. W. Todd, dec'd, are requested to settle the same immediately. Books can be seen at the store of F. C. Todd, Agent for S. Fannie Todd.

The Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Wicomico County will meet again on the first Saturday in August, being the 7th day of the month. A full attendance is earnestly desired. The discussion of the subject of the remedy for the depressed or backward condition of farming in Wicomico, will be continued. It is desirable for the sake of progress that every farmer in the county may take an interest in this subject and try and attend the meetings, as well as join the association. All are invited to attend the discussions.

Many persons have visited the Atlantic Hotel at Ocean City, this week and all seem to be delighted with the place. The house is very much admired, and the bathing is said to be as good as any on the coast.

A grand number of persons contemplate visiting there next week, and we predict a full house for the next thirty days. Let them go, they have a large house with pleasant rooms for their reception. A Band of Music will be at the hotel next week, and perhaps longer. This will make things lively. Go to Ocean City, and see the new Atlantic Hotel and the breakers.

The renowned Zipporah (better known as Zippy) Tull is dead. She died week before last at the advanced age of seventy years. She was a great curiosity, and her most intimate friends were never able to say whether she was a good or bad woman. She told fortunes, and it is said she guessed well, and was an excellent doctor for old sores and chronic diseases; was kind-hearted and obliging generally; told persons what they desired to hear and was looked upon by the colored people, over whom she had great power, as wielding a magic wand.

The State Convention meets on Wednesday next in Baltimore, to nominate a State ticket, to be voted for in November, consisting of candidates for Governor, Attorney General and Comptroller of the Treasury. It is extremely difficult to calculate as to who will be the winning men for all these offices, as our exchanges are very conflicting as to who the different delegations are for. We presume it will not be definitely settled until the balloting is concluded. We promise our readers to give them the result next week. Until then let us wait patiently, as we have great faith in the wisdom of the delegates who have been appointed to the convention from the counties and the city of Baltimore. We hope and believe they will do the best thing that can be done for the good old commonwealth. Believing in their wisdom and integrity, we shall endorse their work and do our best to insure the triumphant election on the second day of next November of every man on the ticket.

Having connected myself with the old and reliable Commission House, of Fisher Bros. No. 48 South Market, Boston, I will be at the depot ready to attend to any shipments that may be entrusted to my care. They have a party in New York who is employed for the purpose of transferring any produce consigned to them, thereby avoiding a delay that has so frequently occurred in the past. I receive telegrams daily from New York, Philadelphia and Boston, which will enable me to ship to the best market. Cards or stencils can be had by calling upon me at the depot. No checks, but the money will accompany all orders of sales made by me. Thankful for past favors, I am yours respectfully.

HENRY D. SPENCE.

P. S. The agent at Fruitland will furnish cards to all who wish to ship to them.

H. D. S.

The Democratic County Convention convened on Tuesday last, at 2 o'clock P. M., and proceeded to business by calling Thomas Humphreys, Esq., to the chair and appointing Mr. James R. Willing Secretary.

A committee on credentials were appointed on motion of J. B. Armstrong, Esq. Said committee consisted of J. B. Armstrong, H. W. Anderson and K. V. White. All the districts were represented except Nanters' and Sharptown. The following delegates were present: Barren Creek, J. B. Armstrong and J. L. Bedworth. Quantico, L. I. Pollitt and John Griffith. Tynkin, James R. Willing and Theodore Porter. Pittsburg, W. A. Dennis and W. G. Gordy. Parsons, T. A. Walston and John Pollitt. Dennis, K. V. White and A. B. Hamblin. Trappe, W. J. Riggins. Salisbury, Thos. Humphreys and H. W. Anderson. Nanters and Sharptown, were not represented.

John Pollitt nominated Gen'l H. Humphreys; J. L. Pollitt nominated A. J. Crawford; J. L. Bedworth nominated E. E. Jackson, and Theodore Porter nominated W. G. Gordy. At this point Mr. Gordy withdrew his name, and on motion of Jas. R. Willing the Convention unanimously declared Gen'l H. Humphreys, Esq., the choice of the Convention for delegates to the State Convention which meets in Baltimore on Tuesday next, to nominate a candidate for Governor, Attorney General and Comptroller of the Treasury. W. J. Riggins offered the following resolution, which was adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That this Convention heartily endorses the financial policy of Col. Levin Woolford, and instructs its delegates to use all honorable means to secure his nomination. Another resolution was adopted, authorizing the delegates to use their discretion as to the candidates for Governor and Attorney General. On motion the Convention adjourned.

The People Want Proof.

There is one medicine prescribed by Physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of its success and superiority as to leave no room for doubt or hesitancy as to its efficacy. It is known as Boscawen's German Syrup for Severe Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, Asthma, and all the diseases of the Throat and Lungs, a proof of that fact is that any person afflicted, can take a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cents. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing everyone that use it. Three doses will relieve any case. Try it. Sold by Dr. Levin D. Collier, Salisbury.

GRAND REDUCTION IN PRICES.—A. G. Tinsdale has just returned from the city with a large stock of Spring and Summer goods, all of which he is prepared to sell cheap for cash. Having bought a large stock for cash they are obtained at low figures, which enables him to sell cheap for cash. Notions, Queensware, Saddlery and Harness, Furniture, Boots and Shoes, Carriages, Matings, &c., with a full line of Cassimere Clothing, and other gentlemen's wear, with Alpaca, Tenthredine, &c., &c. Call and see his stock and examine for yourself, as it is one of the largest houses on the Peninsula.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Thirty years' experience in House Painting and Paper Hanging in the highest style of the art; and gilding, such as Walnut, Mahogany, Maple, Cherry, Rosewood, White and Red Oak; also Mantels, marbled in Egyptian, Lisbon, Siena, Brocatella, Lapis Lazuli, Plymouth Black and Malachite. Furniture varnished and cleaned up cheaper than any one will do the same work. Chairs painted at $1.25 per set. Mixed paints of all colors and shade, supplied cheaper than they can be procured anywhere else. Contract work on houses cheaper than any other man in the State.

Is Your Life worth 10 Cents?

Sickness prevails everywhere, and every body complains of some disease during their life. When sick, the object is to get well, now go say plainly that no person in this world is suffering with Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, &c., and its effects, such as Indigestion, Constipation, Sick Headache, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Flatulency, &c., &c. Can take Quaker's Acetic Flower without getting relief and cure. If you doubt this, go to your Druggist Dr. Levin D. Collier and get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents, and try it. Legal size 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you.

Go to John D. Johnson's, for Groceries, Dry Goods, Notions, Drugs, Tobacco, Queensware, also a full line of Seed Potatoes, Clover & Timothy Seed and Orchard Grass, also Star Bone Super Phosphate, Land Plaster & Plow Castings. Coal Oil and Lead Light Oil, all of which will be sold at prices to suit the times.

Man "Mysteries."
BY VIOLA VIRTON.

"I wonder if" a man must be A silly swain when courting?
Or if, when "mitten" he's recored, His brain must turn to doting?

"I wonder if" a Mary-Gold Sends missives to her lover, Done up in yellow envelopes,
And scented with sweet clover?

"I wonder if" she dotes such words As come whirling to her ear;
Of swains who think they poet are,
If they can make words jingle?

"I wonder if" that's why his rhymes Are of a jaundiced color?
And every verse he strives to write, Proclaims his growing diller?

"I wonder still," and always shall,
Why some are so befuddled;
They cannot see, they say to much,
And get their sayings muddled.

"I wonder if," now I'm done, There's one will see my meaning,
And think I've written poetry, Because I've rhymed my meaning?

MR. DINKIE'S REVENGE.
BY M. K. D.

Naturally, my dear, a body meets with many singular people in the course of keeping boarders. I think the queerest folks that ever were have come and boarded with me since Mr.
Johnson left me with three little children to earn my living by the most ungrateful task that ever was put upon a woman's shoulders; for there are people that never think you can do enough for 'em, and people that haven't any consideration for your feelings, and if a turkey happens to be tough, ask if it was ever known for certain what became of the pair that went into Noah's ark, and the like of that, you know; and there are people that have whimsies, and want raw meat or scorched cin-dors, and people that can't bear anything fried, and people that take aim and don't pay, and people that are so far from what they pretend to be that their rooms are wanted, and all sorts of people who do all sorts of queer things.

One of the queerest things I ever knew to be done by any boarder was done, I must say, by Mr. Dinkie.
He came to board with me about five years ago, just at Christmas time. He was a bachelor about fifty years old, I should judge, and his face was smooth-shaven, and he wore a mahogany-colored wig, and he was rather particular in his dress.
He'd just met with a disappointment —not in love, mind you, but in money.

He had made himself a slave to a rich old uncle for twenty years, expecting to be his heir; put up with all sorts of treatment; been huffed and scolded and angered at morning, noon and night; never said a word; but just went on grinning and rubbing his hands and speaking about his "dear uncle" until the old man died, when he left him only a hundred a year for his life. After that he came to board with me.

There was boarding with me at the same time a maiden lady named Swiffles. She was about as old as Mr. Dinkie, and she was very rich—She wore diamonds in her ears so big and so shiny that I wonder the bigness let her come home alive with 'em on. And she had the same kind of diamonds on her fingers. She had three paws, a dog with curly wool, and a kitten all white except a black nose, and a green and red parrot.
Day times she had them in her room, but she hired an extra room for them and they slept in that, and it was comical to see them. Poil in her cage, and the dog and kitten in a sort of basket-cradle, with refreshments not 'em in case they should be hungry in the night.

Everybody isn't so careful with children. She had white-quilted covers for the two animals. It was peculiar, and she was curious in a good many things.

She wasn't very handsome, but she was of a very good family; and though she wanted extras, she paid me for 'em. I remember asking her once why she hadn't married, and she said she always felt the male sex beneath her, and that she couldn't promise to obey any of 'em. She asked me if I didn't feel to displease 'em myself; and I said some of 'em I did, and some again I didn't.

She had written a lecture, I think, for the purpose of putting 'em down, and she was a-going to deliver it in my parlor one night; only I says to her, says I, "Miss Swiffles," says I, "I'm only a poor widow, depending on my boarders for a living, and as most of 'em are of the male sex it might give 'em offense to tell 'em all them dreadful things about themselves, and how you displease 'em so, Miss Swiffles." So she gave up the idea, and I was thankful.

Well, after Mr. Dinkie came I noticed Miss Swiffles and he used to argue together a good deal. Sometimes, too, he used to see her to church and to lectures. I had my eyes about me, and I noticed that she used to dress herself up very smart indeed after he came.

Then he came and asked me how much I reckoned she had a year—And she asked what I calculated he owned. I told him that I'd heard she had ten thousand pounds, and I told her what he had, and how he got it. I couldn't tell what she thought but I made up my mind there'd be a match between 'em, for I've always noticed that the more a lady talks against the gentlemen, the more apt she is to have the first one that makes her an offer. Yes, I'd made up my mind that when, one day, I was sitting on the porch outside of the parlor window, stoning cherries—for if the girl does it she puts more in her mouth than she does in the pan—when I heard Miss Swiffles come into the parlor, and, about three minutes after, Mr. Dinkie came in.

I'd like to remark, just here, that far from moaning listening, I'm above it; but I wasn't called upon to go away, and I couldn't help hearing, and this is what I did hear:

"Miss Swiffles," said Mr. Dinkie,
"I am rejoiced to find you alone."
"Ah!" said Miss Swiffles.
"I have long wished for such an opportunity."

"Indeed," said Miss Swiffles.
"You can guess why?" asked Mr.
Dinkie.

"No, sir, I can't," answered Miss Swiffles.

"Is this the coquetry of your sex?" asked Mr. Dinkie. "Have you not seen that I adore you?"

"No," said Miss Swiffles.

"I have hidden my emotions better than I supposed I could," said Mr. Dinkie. "My dear Miss Swiffles, here, on my knees, allow me to offer you my hand and heart, and beg you to accept them and the life-long devotion of—"

"Get up, Mr. Dinkie," said Miss Swiffles. "Don't make a goose of yourself. I understand that you ask me to marry you?"

"Adorable creature," said Mr. Din-kie, "you put the question I would have asked into the most concise form."

"I'll put the answer into the same form," said Miss Swiffles. "No."
"You cannot expect me to relinquish my hopes at once," said Mr.
Dinkie. "May I ask why you are not disposed to consider my proposition? Will you not consider it, and answer it more at leisure?"

"I have considered," said Miss Swiffles.

"But why?" said Mr. Dinkie.

"Well, if you want to know why," said Miss Swiffles, "because I like to be my own mistress. I have plenty of money, as you know, and three charming pets, who are worth more than six men I ever met. I didn't marry when I was a good-looking girl, because even then I couldn't be sure any man wanted me and not my property; and now I am an ugly old woman I shan't throw myself into the arms of the first fortune-hunter who has calculated that an old maid will marry anyone who asks her. You waited for dead men's shoes twenty years, I understand.
Now, probably, you wish to wait for mine! That's why I say 'No,' Mr.

Next thing I heard was the door slam. Mr. Dinkie was gone, and Miss Swiffles was laughing to herself on the sofa.

I couldn't help it. I just pecked into the window, and says I: "Hurrah, Miss Swiffles, three cheers! It was as good as a play."
"Tisn't the first man I've served so," said Miss Swiffles, rubbing her nose. "O, they are a mean set, those men," and way she walked, with her diamonds glittering.

We didn't see much of Mr. Dinkie for some days, and then he told me he was going abroad with an invalid gentleman.

So, of course, I knew I was going to lose a boarder. But I was surprised when one afternoon I received this note:

"My Dear Madam—Upon the eve of my departure, upon a journey whence I may never return. I desire to feel myself in harmony with all whom I have had any slight difference. Therefore, will you permit me to give a little supper to several members of your establishment?
Your yourself, of course, Miss Swiffles, Mr. Rogers, and a friend of my own who will join us. Time, tomorrow evening. An answer will oblige. Truly yours,

"BENJAMIN DINKIE."

Of course I agreed, and when I saw Miss Swiffles she said the man had a better temper than she thought.
And so the very evening we all walked into Mr. Dinkie's room. He had the bedstead put away, and hired an extension table. And there was Mr.
Dinkie with a dark complexioned gentleman and two waiters.

Mr. Dinkie did the honors beautifully. He made us a little speech, and he said all sorts of fine things.
And such a supper—all hot, and very delicious; pies with queer crusts, all ornamented, and ragouts, and dear knows what, and wines and things.
Well, at last, heartily, and Miss Swiffles heartiest of all. We enjoyed ourselves, I tell you, and the dark gentleman, Mr. Mosler, sang us songs afterwards.

At twelve o'clock Mr. Dinkie arose.
"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "the time for parting has come. I must be on board the steamer in two hours. Mosler, the same obligation lies on you. We part perhaps forever. Adieu."

He shook hands all around. When he came to Miss Swiffles he gave her a little note.

"Read it alone in your own apartment, dear madam," he said. "It may make you alter your opinion of one who will ever remember you."

"Mr. Dinkie," said Miss Swiffles,
"we all do wrong sometimes. Probably I was mistaken in you. I wish you a very pleasant journey."

Then he was off.

"If ain't such a bad fellow after all," said Mr. Rogers.

"No, he ain't," said I.

Miss Swiffles went up stairs very slowly. I saw her wipe a tear away as she went, and I stopped to put it on the hall lamp.

I had done it and bolted, the front door when all of a sudden the house was filled with shrieks. It was Miss Swiffles' voice, I know, and she was screaming for help.

"She's found a burglar in her room to murder her for her diamonds at last," I said to myself, and away I rushed and up came all the boarders, and we stood in the room where she stood, holding a letter in her hand, and shrieking like mad.

"O! where is he?" I asked.
"Where's the burglar?"
"Go after him!" she cried. "Catch him—bring him back—Mr. Dinkie, Mr. Dinkie!"

"He's told her he'd commit suicide on her account," I said. "O, dear!
O, dear!"

"O! I'm so ill," cried Miss Swiffles —so ill! Open the window! I'm poisoned! O! Ah!"

"Poisoned!" says I. "O! O! O!"
"Read that," says she, falling over upon the sofa, very sick indeed—
"Read—that!"

"Mr. Rogers," says I, "I haven't got my specs."

Mr. Rogers took the letter and read it aloud:

"You ridiculous old fury, did you believe that a man could forgive such outrages as you heaped upon him? I have had my revenge upon you, and upon that puppy Rogers. I am only sorry I was obliged to include that simple old soul, Mrs. Johnson.
You enjoyed your supper, didn't you?"

Well, my dear, it was all true.
The pets were gone, and I've no doubt we had our fill, as Mr. Dinkie said, of parrot-pate and poodle pie kitten ragout; and Mr. Rogers and Miss Swiffles were very sick, and I had to send for the doctor; and that's the way Mr. Dinkie had his revenge.

Sewing on Buttons.
A meticulous contemporary, thus describes the male process of sewing on buttons:—"It is bad enough to see a bachelor sew on a button, but he is the embodiment of grace alongside of a married man. Necessarily has compelled experience in the case of the former, but the latter has always depended upon some one else for the service, and, fortunately for the sake of society, it is rarely that he is obliged to resort to the needle himself. Sometimes the patient wife seals her right hand, or runs a silver into the nail of the index finger of that hand, and it is then that the man clutches the needle around the neck, and forgetting to tie a knot in the thread commences to put on the button. It is always in the morning, and from five to twenty minutes after he is expected to be down the street. He lays the button on the site of its predecessor, and pushes the needle through one eye, and draws the thread through after, leaving three inches of it sticking up for solway. He says to himself: "Well, if women don't have the easiest time I ever see!" Then he comes back the other way and gets the needle through the cloth well enough, and lays himself out to find the eye, but in spite of a great deal of jabbing, the needle points persists in backing against the solid parts of that button, and, finally, when he loses patience, his fingers catch the thread, and that three inches he had left to hold the button slips through the eye in a twinkling and the button rolls leisurely across the floor. He picks it up with a single remark, not of respect for his children, and makes another attempt to fasten it. This time when coming back with the needle he keeps both the thread and the button from slipping by catching them with his thumb, and it is not of regard for that part of his dress that he feels around for the eye in a very careful and judicious manner, but eventually losing his philosophy, as the search becomes more and more hopeless, he falls to jabbing about in a loose and savage manner, and it is just then the needle finds the opening and comes up through the button and part way through the cloth with a celerity that no human ingenuity can guard against. Then he lays down the things with a few familiar quotations, and promises the injured hand between his knees, and then holds it under his arm, and finally jumbles it into his mouth, and all the while he prances about the floor and calls upon Heaven and earth to witness that there has never been anything like it since the world was created, and howls, and whines, and moans, and sobs. After a while he calms down and puts on his pants and fastens them together with a stick, and goes to his place of business a changed man."

Why is a newspaper like a tooth brush? Because every one should have one of his own, and not be borrowing his neighbor's.

A Man boasting of his pedigree to another said that his father was elevated above the common herd of men. He was hanged.

"Tender and True."
BY AMANDA.

"Tender and true"—Adieu—adieu!
God's sweetest blessing, my darling, for you;
Life may be sunless and sombre for me,
Happy, or mournful, Fate's certain decree,
I shall be happy, and blest, and content,
If over your pathway Hope's fair bow is bent,
A sign, and a token of happiness true,

Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!
The men and women—defunct, fanatical or righteous, it boots not,
nor is this the time or place to inquire—who grouped themselves about Bingham Young and his knot of "Apostles" prior to 1846, having been thrust out of the State of Ohio, where they had settled prior to that year
Nauvoo, Illinois. Here, their peculiar doctrines becoming noised about among the people surrounding them, there arose a persecution which at last, in the latter end of that year, grew so threatening in its proportions that the leaders deemed it best to take up their line of march to the westward again. Missions, near Leavenworth, next held them upon its broad and fertile bosom, but here, too, the people were inhospitable in their treatment of the strangers who held such "emancipating views of the holiest ties of social life, and the pilgrimage was again begun, this time to be ended when the great Prophet
and his people beheld, on the 24th of July, 1846, after a weary journey across the plains, from the mouth of Emigration Canon, the broad valley of the Salt Lake. This he, baptized with a solemnity in which was mixed up an imitation of Mohammed
and De Soto, as the Promised Land, and he and his people went in and took possession and dwelt there, serving God after their own fashion; and building up a great city, with such
said that they made the desert to blossom as a rose.

In the year 1858, however, a well-equipped train of emigrants, numbering some 134 souls, men, women and children, en route to California, stopped to rest on the borders of the great lake and almost within the doors of the Mormons. Such a large caravan could not fail to attract the notice of the Mormon people and authorities, and the latter were not long in recognizing in the party many of their old persecutors in the Eastern States, and especially those in and about the City of Nauvoo, Illinois. The blood of prophets and people boiled, and the old human passion—vengeance—sprung up in their otherwise hospitable breasts.—
This feeling was still further encouraged by the conduct of the travelers themselves, for they too had recognized their old enemies—the enemies of their God and their civil and social laws, and with the recklessness born of no suspicion of the fate which awaited them began to taunt the Mormon settlers in words, and even went so far as to dress up in fantastic clothing a couple of their bulls and to placard them with the names of the Mormon Saints, Brigham Young and Heber Kimball. All this was submitted to, however, and no outbreak other than that which individual insults might provoke took place, and the train of emigrants pulled up their stakes, harnessed their teams, gathered together their stock and the women and children, and took up their line of march southward, through the valleys of Salt Lake, Jacob and Sevier, in the Territory of Utah.
They arrived, after twelve days'
travel, at a point called Mountain Meadows, where there was good water and food for their animals and shelter for themselves. Suspecting nothing, they bivouacked for the night, throwing out but the usual number of guards. As the morning broke, however, the sleepers were awakened suddenly by the yells of men, most of whom were in the disguise of Indians, and some were in

tell the awful tale. It is therefore that long-delayed justice must seek for her instruments of vengeance in the ranks of the apostate of the red-handed murderers themselves. The story, as it is told by our Philadelphian, is as follows. His account being necessarily cursory in its character, must not be tested with nice scales as to its exact accuracy in detail. It is sufficiently circumstantial, however, to show the substantial facts of the case of the United States Government against the prisoner and those of his co-murderers who may be brought to the bar in this first attempt to put under the eye of a judicial investigator this dark episode in Mormon history and bloody page in the world's story.

preliminary stages) Daniel Wells, the mayor of Salt Lake City and the second president of the Mormon Church, as well as George A. Smith, the first president of the church and second only to Brigham Young, will be brought into the dock. Wells is connected with the murder because it is thought that the deed was committed by the creek military organization known as the "Nauvoo Legion," of which he is the commander, and was at the time of the ementa between the government and the Mormons in Buchanan's time, when Secretary Floyd sent General A. Sydney
Johnston out with an expedition.
Some one hundred and thirty-five witnesses have been put upon the subpoenas, some of whom have taken flight to California. The last dispatch from the scene shows that the United States Marshal, General Marshall, has given orders that if any more of the summoned witnesses try to escape they shall be held, even at the risk of life.

The best legal talent engaged both in the prosecution and in the defense, R. N. Baikin, the prominent Gentile lawyer of Salt Lake City, and late contestant for the seat of Congress as delegate to Congress, is as-
Attorney, Carey, and the Deputy District Attorney, D. P. Whedon, from Salt Lake. The Mormons have engaged Judge Spicer and Judge Hoge
of Salt Lake, and D. R. Bishop, of Pioche, and expect to have the assistance of Judges Sutherland and Bates, of Salt Lake City, the leading lawyers of that exceptionally fine bar.

The Mormons, as a rule, claim that this whole thing has been engineered, and that, even if not so, the Mormons should be allowed to punish their people themselves, without interference by the General Government. But if one of them who took part in the massacre is spoken to about it, the ghastly pallor of his face and the agitation of his face and the agitation of his manner, even after all these years, in nine cases out of ten will betray his guilt to a shrewd observer. The above is in substance the statement of the resident of Salt Lake who has, within a few days, left there and come to this city on business, and is interesting at this particular juncture.

Funny Cures.
Cesar held that to die quickly was to die happily; so, too, thought one whose case was cited by Montaigne as an instance of fortune playing the physician. Jason Phereas, troubled with an incurable imposthuma, resolved to end his pain by dying in battle, and throwing himself in the thickest of the fight was run through the body, which caused the imposthuma to break, and his wound healing he found life enjoyable after all. This lucky hero, who could brave death better than he could endure pain, owed his cure to a foe. A quincy afflicted cardinal had to thank a monkey for a like good turn. The physicians had left him to die, and as he lay, hopelessly waiting for the end, the dying cardinal saw his servants carry off everything that was movable, without being able even to expostulate with the thieves.
At length his pet ape came into the room, and taking the hint from the provident monkeys, looked round for something he could appropriate.
Nothing was left but the cardinal's hat; this the ape donned, and, proud of novel headgear, indulged in such odd antics that his butler, who was burst into a hearty fit of laughter;
the quincy broke, and the cardinal recovered, as much to his own astonishment as to the dismay of his plundering servants.

A NEBRASKA girl never bothers
when a grasshopper begins to hop around in the wrong direction. The only lesson against a hopping pest,
and taking him off her knee she'll throw him in the street and walk on saying: "That ain't nothing for you to chew, mister hopper."

[From Philadelphia Times.]
A "Gentile" fresh from the bracing breezes of Salt Lake City, as he stood on the corner of Third and Chestnut streets yesterday afternoon, it will be admitted was fair game for a newspaper man in the sunnier scarcity of news. And this metal was all the more attractive from the fact that the Times man recognized in the ruddy face and squat figure of the stranger an old Philadelphian, who, in the days of the war and of the oil fever, used to see all and himself a great part of the city's doings and sayings. After the latter fascinating bubble had burst and soiled many clean hands with its dirty suds, our friend packed up his baggage and his family, and "emigrated" to the far-famed City of the Salted Sea. Here he found no political rings, no parties, Democratic or Republican, but saw all, with an Eastern devotion, bow at the foot of a throne from which is proclaimed in the name of holy religion a "system" of government, and whereon sits, if all that is said of him is true, a chief who rules with as absolute a power and as black a soul as ever did the fabulous Mohanna, Veiled Prophet of Khorassan.

The presence of this some-time resident of Philadelphia in this city would have had no significance to the general readers of the Times but for the circumstances that at this moment Salt Lake people and Mormon morals are being put into a position which will or ought to agitate not only the people of Utah, but, to a greater or less degree, the reading public of the whole country; for to-
United States District Court for the Southern District of Utah Territory one John D. Lee, a "Bishop" of the Mormon Church (with his twelve wives and fifty-five children surrounding him in person or in contemplation of the Mormon law), charged with the murder of 134 men, women and children, under the most cowardly and brutal circumstances, making his work so horribly complete that not even a child among the unhappy emigrants who thus perished in the Mountain Meadows massacre nearly

deed Indians. The emigrants at
and from the superior character of their arms and ammunition they were enabled to withstand successfully the attack of the large body of infuriated but unrecognized Mormons. The attacking party, however, was so great in point of numbers that a continued resistance would have been useless, and the emigrants yielded at last to a parley, under a flag of truce proffered by one of the Mormon party. It was then agreed that the men of the travelers should deliver up their arms, and they and their women and children should be guaranteed safe conduct out of the clutches of the supposed Indians, the Mormon chief alleging that the yielding of the arms was necessary to his Indian allies. Upon this part of the compact being carried out, the emigrant men were marched into a line, the women after them and then children. In this way the party were started on their journey, but had proceeded but a few steps when, all having been arranged beforehand by the treacherous Mormons, the Indians were let loose with their scalping knives, and the Mormon men plied their rifles with such murderous effect that in a brief space of time the whole party of one hundred and thirty-four men, women and children lay smoking in their blood upon the plain, some of the women before death having been forced to desire it through other brutal barbarities. It is thought that a very few of the children, who were too young to do anything but prattle as they dabbled their hands in their mothers' blood, were kept, and are to-day living in the Mormon city, unconscious of the awful sight upon which their baby eyes looked nearly twenty years ago.
The murderers parted the goods of the travelers among themselves, and fell back into their old haunts and resumed their priestly robes and high religious functions, some probably receiving promotion and new honors for the work at Mountain Meadows.
The bodies of the ill-fated emigrants were left upon the plain, to be the prey of that scavenger of the American desert, the coyote, until, many years afterwards, the United States Government sent her commissioner, Lieut. Gunnison, out to investigate the circumstance of the massacre.
He, however, could accomplish nothing, and contented himself with collecting the bones of the long neglected dead and heaping them together and burying them. Brigham Young was Governor at that time, and could have, it is charged by "the Gentiles"
of his city, brought every one of the murderers to justice if he had so chosen. It is even whispered that he took active part in the massacre, but the better opinion seems to be that he only connived at it, and shielded the murderers for all these long years that have elapsed.

Various efforts have been made by the United States authorities to bring the matter before the courts, but owing to the peculiar surroundings of Mormon grand juries none of these efforts have been successful. Now, however, under what is known as the Poland bill for the Relief of Utah, passed a year ago last June (the Mormon) probate judge and the clerk of the United States Court (a Gentile) have the power to draw alternate jurymen to fill the panels of grand and petit juries. Under this bill John D. Lee, one of the "bishops" of the church, was arrested last fall and has been since indicted as one of the leaders of the murderous band of Mormons in this Mountain Meadows massacre. Indeed, it is believed by the district attorney that he can show that Lee was the bearer of the flag of truce under the protection of whose white and sacred folds this whole party met their bloody death.
Others are indicted conjointly with him, but upon the arrest of Lee they took fright and fled to the great hiding place of the West—California.
Their counsel have applied to the United States District Judge (Bor-man) to have them admitted to bail, but this he declined to do unless they appeared personally before the court, which is to be held at Beaver City, some 300 miles south of Salt Lake City. The court is held there because Mountain Meadows is in the jurisdiction of that judge. It is thought also that before the trial

it is thought that the deed was com-
retary Floyd sent General A. Sydney
Johnston out with an expedition.
the risk of life.

Attorney, Carey, and the Deputy District Attorney, D. P. Whedon, from
Salt Lake. The Mormons have en-
Pioche, and expect to have the as-
bar.

The Mormons, as a rule, claim that
this whole thing has been engineered,
terference by the General Govern-
there and come to this city on busi-
cular juncture.

Funny Cures.
Cesar held that to die quickly was
burst into a hearty fit of laughter;
plundering servants.

taken a wife says he did not get half so hard to get married as he did to get furniture.

This standard article is compounded with the greatest care. Its effects are so wonderful and so satisfactory as ever. It restores gray or faded hair to its youthful color. It removes all eruptions, itching and dandruff. It gives the head a cooling, soothing sensation of great comfort, and the scalp by its use becomes white and clean. By its tonic properties it restores the capillary glands to their normal vigor, preventing baldness, and making the hair grow thick and strong. As a dressing, nothing has been found so effectual or desirable. A. A. Hayes, M.D., State Assayer of Massachusetts, says, "The constituents are pure, and carefully selected for excellent quality; and I consider it the Best Preparation for its intended purposes." Price, One Dollar. BUCKINGHAM'S DYE FOR THE WHISKERS. This elegant preparation may be relied on to change the color of the beard from gray or any other undesirable shade, to brown or black, at discretion. It is easily applied, being in oil preparation, and quickly and effectually produces a permanent color, which will neither rub nor wash off. Manufactured by R. R. HALL & CO., JAMESTOWN, N.H. "Tender and True."
BY AMANDA.
God's sweetest blessing; my darling, for you;
Life may be sunless and sombre for me,
Happy, or mournful, Fate's certain decree,
I shall be happy, and best, and content,
If over your pathway Hope's fair bow is bent,
A sign, and a token—of happiness true,
Garnered and treasured, my darling, for you,
Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!

Tender and true—Ah! the Summer of song Is bearing away on its pinions strong,
The sweetest hope of a hoarded dream,
The brightest glint of a treasured beam, Whose amber radiance filled my soul With joy beyond Fate's cold control:
But the flowers of happiness blossom anew Hoping, and praying, my darling, for you—
Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!

Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!
God's sweetest blessing, my darling, for you!
No other heart in the years that shall come Will love you, as well, as the one that is dumb
No other heart will treasure away
With such piteous care, each beautiful day
Because it has touched, in its hurrying flight, Your lips, and your brow, with its passionate light,
Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!

Tender and true—tender and true!
Earth has grown fairer, my darling, for you; Beautiful things that I treasured of yore Are fairer and dearer, than ever before, Because I have known you, these later-born years
And loved you, in spite of Pride's passionate enrages
And you'll never know—would you pity, or blame?
But I shall love you, my darling, the same—
Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!

Tender and true—Adieu—adieu!
God's sweetest blessing, my darling, for you;
Will love you, as well, as the one that is dumb;
Your lips and your eyes, with its passionate light,

Chestnut streets yesterday afternoon,
a newspaper man in the summertime scarcity of news. And this material
the oil fever, used to see all and was
suds, our friend packed up his baggage and his family, and "emigrated" to the far-famed City of the Salted Sea. Here he found no po-
who rules with an absolute power
fabled Mokanna, Veiled Prophet of Khorassan.

mon monks are being put into a po-
not only the people of Utah, but to a greater or less degree, the reading
Southern District of Utah Territory
one John D. Lee, a "Bishop" of the
ing him in person or in contempla-
and children, under the most cowardly and brutal circumstances, making his work so horribly complete that

phian from the heart of the Mormon capital, is as follows. His account
tail. It is sufficiently circumstantial,
tempt to put under the eye of a judi-
the world's story.

The men and women—deluded, fanatical or righteous, it boots not,
Brigham Young and his knot of
"Apostles" prior to 1846, having been
among the people surrounding them,
westward again. Missouri, near
too, the people were inhospitable to
held such extraordinary views of the
blossom as a rose.

and children, en route to California,
notice of the Mormon people and au-
of their old persecutors in the Eastern States, and especially those in and about the City of Nauvoo, Illi-
passion—vengeance—sprang up in their otherwise hospitable breasts.

of their God and their civil and so-
their stakes, harnessed their teams,
the women and children, and took
up their line of march southward, through the valleys of Salt Lake, Juab and Sevier, in the Territory of Utah.

Meadows, where there was good water and feed for their animals and

mons. The attacking party, however,
flag of truce proffered by one of the
dians were let loose with their scalp-
their hands in their mothers' blood,

for the work at Mountain Meadows.
Government sent her commissioner,
the circumstance of the massacre.

He, however, could accomplish nothing,
and contented himself with collecting the bones of the long neglected and heaping them together
was Governor at that time, and could
that have elapsed.

efforts have been successful. Now, however, under what is known as the Poland bill for the Relief of Utah,
passed a year ago last June (the Mor-
mon) probate judge and the clerk of
have the power to draw alternate

took flight and fled to the great hiding place of the West—California.
man) to have them admitted to bail,
appeared personally before the court,
which is to be held at Beaver City,

ends (it is just at the moment in its preliminary stages) Daniel Wells, the
it is thought that the deed was committed by the crack military organiza-
retary Floyd sent General A. Sydney
Johnston out with an expedition.

well, has given orders that if any
the risk of life.

defense. R. N. Baskin, the prominent
Attorney Carey, and the Deputy District Attorney, D. P. Whedoe, from Salt Lake. The Mormons have en-
Pioche, and expect to have the as-
lawyers of that exceptionally fine bar.

The Mormons, as a rule, claim that
this whole thing has been engineered,
terference by the General Govern-
there and come to this city on busi-
cular juncture.

Funny Cures.

Cesar held that to die quickly was
physician. Jason Phereus, troubled
a foe. A quinsky afflicted cardinal
to die, and as he lay, hopelessly wait-

provident lackeys, looked round for something he could appropriate.
odd antics that his all but dead master burst into a hearty fit of laughter; the quinsky broke, and the cardinal
plundering servants.

around in the wrong direction. She only leans against a hitching-post,

A young man, who has recently taken a wife, says he did not find half so hard to get married as he did to get furniture.

THIS paper has double the circulation of any paper on the lower Peninsula.

FOR SALE—A first rate young cow giving a large quantity of milk, and quiet to milk. Inquire at this office.

There is nothing that will take the dust out of a man's eyes as quick on a windy day as the sight of a pair of well-filled striped stockings.

Are you bilious? Do you feel drowsy? Have you the "blues"? Take a dose of Dr. Bull's Vegetable Pills.

A new post office has been established at Ocean City, Worcester County, Md., and Granville Stokes appointed postmaster, and will be served with a daily mail hereafter.

MARRIAGE—At the residence of Mr. Jos. R. Collins, on Thursday, July 22nd, 1875, by the Rev. J. B. Day, Mr. E. W. Higgins, to Miss Sarah A. Tighman, both of Wisconsin County.

A young lady was heard to remark the other day: "With being tied around above and tied around below, I haven't had a square sit-down since the introduction of the new fashion."

ST. MARY'S CATHOLIC CHURCH—Eleventh Sunday after Pentecost, August 1st, 1875. High Mass and Sermon at 10.15 A. M.; Vespers, Lecture and Benediction at 7.30 P. M. Rev. Edw. Ign. Taylor, Pastor.

A Vermont paper speaks of an old lady who is successfully using an artificial jaw. "Zeb Crummett" says the husband must have been a happy man when she was wearing out the natural one.

As a remedy for Dyspepsia, and a means of countering the results of exposure of the weather and sudden changes of temperature, WATERBURY'S LIQUID EXTRACT OF BEEF in pint bottles is an A. 1. article.

NOTICE—All persons indebted to the estate of Dr. G. W. Todd, dec'd, are requested to settle the same immediately. Books can be seen at the store of F. C. Todd, Agent for S. Fannie Todd.

MR. E. E. NICHOLS, Esq., near Delmar, has our thanks for a basket of the finest Wilson Early Blackberries we have seen this season. Mr. Nichols knows how to cultivate the berry, judging from this sample.

The corn crop of Wisconsin never was better. Now is the time for our farmers to get ready for a crop of wheat and clover. Grass is what our farmers want to make their stock fat and their land rich. Sow clover and timothy.

Peaches are now being shipped in small quantities, and the article is not very good. They will improve next week. Wm. S. Phillips & Co., at 308 S. Front St., are getting good prices for fruit, and making quick returns.

Watermelons are quite abundant in our market, and sell at reasonable prices. Now who will show us the largest one next week? We'll tell on Saturday who leaves the largest one at our sanctum. "Jim" thinks this is a hint.

MR. A. W. WOODCOCK has our thanks for a basket of very fine apples. That's right, send 'em along. We have a place for them! mellow. Mr. Woodcock has the reputation of being an amateur fruit grower and a good farmer generally.

Relief may be obtained from Epilepsy, Convulsions, or Fits, by the timely use of Dr. Jayne's Alternative, which changes the morbid condition of the system, and removes the cause of these affections, generally found to arise from a persistent irritation or debilitation of the nervous system.

A LARGE POTATO—Mr. Wm. S. Bennett of Sharpton, while working among his sweet potatoes on the 24th inst., accidentally pulled out a young potato nine inches long and six inches in circumference. This is good for so early in the season. If any one can beat it please send the product to this office.

The people who have visited Rehoboth camp this season say that the interest in that enterprise is somewhat waning, yet the bathers at the Surf House are about as numerous as usual. It is believed that Ocean City is destined to be a successful rival of all our sea side watering places south of Long Branch. So note it be.

M. A. LOOMIS & Co., Wholesale Commission and Shipping Dealers in Berries, Peaches and other Produce, 58 Broad Ave. (West Washington Market) New York. Consignments solicited. Returns made promptly. Refer to J. M. Dryden, Princess Anne, Md.; E. J. Richardson, Laurel, Del., and President and Cashier of the North River Bank, New York City.

N. B.—Cards can be obtained at this office.

A party of young gentlemen and ladies have gone down to Fortress Monroe, from Crisfield this week. Others are preparing to go from the Wisconsin in a few days. Capt. Samuel Wilson will leave Shad Point, in the Schooner Wm. McDaniel, on Friday, next, 6th of August, at 10 A. M. for the camp at Hook Creek. Fare round trip 61.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of W. A. C. Williams, found elsewhere in this paper. Those wishing to purchase a fine instrument will do well to call upon him. He has for sale both the Kistey and Mason & Hamilton Cabinet Organs, both of which are popular and favorite instruments, and his terms are so easy as to place them in the reach of all.

Our young friend S. H. Evans has returned from Rehoboth. He says he ate eleven hard crabs and seven soft ones at a meal. Samuel still lives and has excellent ice cream for sale at No. 11 Main street, where he would like to see all his young lady friends and beaux, with cash in their pockets, and if his ice cream is not as cold or colder than the next one he says you may turn the cold shoulder to it. Evan so, Samuel.

Ocean City has been the objective point of attraction for the last four weeks, and the current season has demonstrated one fact beyond a doubt, and that is, if a sufficient amount was invested there to make comfortable quarters for four thousands and guests, that number would certainly make our Maryland watering place their head quarters during the bathing season. Let an effort be made to enlarge and amplify.

In another column will be seen the advertisement of the Wilmington Conference Academy. This institution has been recently founded, and is now thoroughly organized and placed under the control of able professors, and is, we believe, from the character of those who have charge of the institution, one of the best schools for youth and young men to be found in this latitude, being located within one of the most healthy districts, as well as being accessible by rail from all parts of the country. Send for catalogue, &c.

Our new seaside watering place has served as an excellent advertisement of our lands in Worcester and Wisconsin counties. There is nothing like seeing to make people believe the extent of our agricultural resources. Every farmer who has more land than he needs, and desires to sell part of it, ought to contribute to the success of Ocean City to the extent of his means. By so doing the value of his lands is enhanced. The day is not far off when some of the strangers who visit us now will take up their abode among us.

It is stated that the Old Dominion Steamship Co. have withdrawn the Richmond, of 1740 tons, Capt. Kelly, from the line between Lewes and New York, for a few days and supplied her place with the Geo. W. Elder, of 1650 tons. As soon as the peach shipments warrant it, it is expected that both these boats will be put on a daily line to New York. The Albemarle will run once, if not twice a week to Providence, R. I.—B. Light.

There will be a campmeeting at Wolf Hill, Del., commencing on the 18th day of August, held by the ministers of the M. P. Church. This place is situated about three miles west of Delmar, and is a beautiful situation for a campmeeting. Wolf Hill is a round elevation, raised about twenty feet above the general level of the surrounding country, and is a curiosity in this part of our level peninsula country. A good supply of water is at hand.

S. W. Powell, formerly with G. W. Shallow, N. Del. Avenue Market, has dissolved his connection with him and entered the firm of Bradley & Merrick, at 320 South Front St., Philadelphia, where he will hereafter be found, and will be pleased to see his friends and receive their patronage. Thanking his friends for past favors with the old firm, he desires a continuance of their confidence and that it may follow him and be cordially extended to the new firm. Card will appear next week, having come to hand too late for the present issue.

A long looked for improvement is now in progress. Division St., from Church to William, is being shelled with a heavy cut, and soon we may expect that street to be finished from the Park to the mill. One more improvement deserves the attention of the Commissioners, and that is the widening of Mr. Thomas Humphreys' mill dam, so that persons can pass on it. A very small amount of labor would do the work on the South side. A few logs thrown on against the trees filled in with bark, saw-dust, gravel dust, or anything would do the work at the expense of less than one hundred dollars. It is a much needed improvement.

NOTICE—July 1st, 1875. This is to certify that I have this day appointed F. C. Todd to act as my agent in the collection of all claims due the estate of Dr. G. W. Todd, dec'd.

S. FANNIE TODD, Executrix of G. W. Todd, dec'd. For SALE CHEAP—Two first class Parlor Organs—Plotts and Keyes. Also an elegant Steiff Piano. Inquire at this Office.

Just as we go to press our neighbor, A. W. Woodcock brought to our sanctum two of the largest peaches of the Hale's Early variety we have ever seen. Brother Amos can raise them.

THE TRAMP NUISANCE—A large number are abroad in the land. While we have much sympathy with those who are out of employment, we have no pity for those who will not accept work at reasonable wages, when the same is offered with board. We believe a little wholesome legislation on the subject, and the passage of a law compelling men who are lurking through a neighborhood to engage at once in some honest calling or leave, would do much good towards abating the nuisance. We saw some days ago at a station on the Delaware Railroad, not less than seven of these fellows getting into a freight car to lodge for the night. People are alarmed at the increase of this nuisance, and there will be trouble with them if the nuisance is not abated.

In another column will be seen the advertisement of the Cambridge Female Seminary. This institution has superior advantages over any on the Shore, and indeed we may say that no school in the State can offer greater attractions.

Cambridge is justly celebrated for the high tone of morals as well as the superior intelligence of its inhabitants. It is situated on the beautiful Choptank River, with a water view equal to that of any town or city in the country. The health of the town has always been regarded as excellent. This Seminary is supplied with a choir of teachers which would do credit to the older and more renowned institutions of learning in the country. We predict that in the course of time its advantages will be duly appreciated, and a patronage extended to it commensurate with its deserts.

We regret to have to complain of the mail agents on the Delaware Railroad, for as much as they have done us many favors, but while we feel under many obligations to them for favors to us, we must say that our subscribers have rights which must not be disregarded. It frequently happens that bundles of the SALISBURY ADVISER are put into the mail bags at the Salisbury post office, and are never seen by the parties to whom they are directed. This was the case with the bundle sent to Fruitland last Saturday, the 24th inst., and it has happened in some other instances. Sharpshoot was served the same way three weeks ago, we hope no such mistake will happen again. If they do, we shall carry our complaint to local quarters, and if disregarded, then we will say to the world that somebody is doing wrong, and are disregarding the admonitions of the people.

A SAD ACCIDENT NEAR OCEAN CITY—On Monday last, a man named William Franklin, aged 65 years of Philadelphia, was drowned while bathing near Ocean City. We understand that Mr. Franklin was staying at a pavilion some half a mile below the Atlantic Hotel, and took to his head to pass out beyond the breakers and swim up to the bathing ground at Ocean City, and to pass in through the breakers to the place where a number of persons were bathing. Finding a strong current setting out from the shore he called for help, and before the persons near the shore could reach him, which they finally did by forming rafts of plank, &c., he was drowned at a distance of two hundred and fifty yards from shore. Strange to say, he did not sink nor was he ever out of sight, was floating on his face when the parties reached him. Efforts were made to restore him without effect. His remains were taken to Philadelphia on the next day for interment. He was born in Worcester County and leaves two sisters living at Berlin. His custom has been to spend a part of the summer on this beach for many years. He was an excellent swimmer.

Having connected myself with the old and reliable Commission House of Fisher Bros. No. 48 South Market, Boston, I will be at the depot ready to attend to any shipments that may be entrusted to my care. They have a party in New York who is employed for the purpose of transferring any produce consigned to them, thereby avoiding a delay that has so frequently occurred in the past. I receive telegrams daily from New York, Philadelphia and Boston, which will enable me to ship to the best market. Cards or stenils can be had by calling upon me at the depot. No checks, but the money will no company all accepts of sales made by them. Thankful for past favors, I am yours respectfully, HENRY D. SPENCE, P. S. The agent at Fruitland will furnish cards to all who wish to ship to them.

SHARPTOWN, July 23, 1875. MR. MALONE—I enclose you will find $2 for the ADVISER for January 1875. Please credit the same and continue to send me your valuable paper as long as you publish it, for I can't do without it.

E. P. ELLISS. [It is gratifying to receive favors like the above, both for their financial aid, and appreciation of our humble efforts.—Ed.]

MARRIED.

BALL—TRUITT—On Wednesday evening last, 28th inst., at 8 o'clock, in the M. P. Church, by the Rev. J. F. Tagg, Mr. James E. Ball to Miss Theodora E. Truitt. May their matrimony through life be beautiful, happy and serene! Avoiding all anger and strife! While bidding along over the green.

DIED.

CAMBRIDGE

Female Seminary

Fall session opens Sept. 1st, 1875. A new building, with classrooms and class rooms, airy dormitories and playrooms, are among the additional attractions now offered to the patrons of this school. The course of study will be, as heretofore, full and exhaustive, the manners and morals of the students always under watchful supervision. Its believed no institution on the Shore can offer equal advantages. For circulars, etc., address

J. F. BAUGHER, A. M., Principal.
