Sudden Death of Mrs. Clara Powell

Mrs. Clara Powell, wife of Mr. Geo. W. Powell, died at her home, the "Egypt Farm," near this town, about 8 o'clock last Tuesday morning, aged 37 years.

Mrs. Powell's illness was very brief, lasting only a few hours. She attended a session of the Chautauqua at the Auditorium Monday night and was at that time in normal health, but was taken suddenly ill after reaching her home.

She is survived by her husband and the following children—Miss Mildred Powell, who is a student at Western Maryland College, Westminster, Md.; Elmo, Wendell, James, George and Clara Powell. Mrs. Powell is a daughter of Mr. Jas. S. P. White, a Justice of the Peace, of Princess Anne, and leaves the following brothers and sisters—Messrs. J. Arthur and Charles E. White, of this town, and Rev. Leroy White, of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. L. S. Short, of Salisbury, Md.

Mrs. Powell was a member of the Antioch Methodist Episcopal Church, and the funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Rev. D. J. Givan, last Thursday afternoon. The interment was in the cemetery of Manokin Presbyterian Church. The pallbearers were: W. O. Lankford, Columbus Lankford, Dr. Henry M. Lankford, Dr. C. W. Wainwright, L. L. Pusey and E. H. Cohn.

The Boston Lyrics

The Boston Lyrics gave one of their rare entertainments in Princess Anne last Friday evening. The company was here last year and the invitation to return was much appreciated. The members of the Lyrics are Flavel R. Jordan, Jr., Miss Bertha Wells and Miss Carolyn Jordan, accompanist. The program given was a most agreeable one of vocal and instrumental music, readings and cartoons. Each member showed remarkable versatility and skill. The attendance was not so large as it might have been owing to the Chautauqua which closed on Tuesday evening. The Firemen's Company, of Princess Anne, will share in the proceeds of the various performances, which are to be continued for several months. The next one will be a lecture by Dr. T. Alexander Cairns, on November 19th.

Tri-County Bankers Meet

Members of the Tri-County Bankers' Association comprising Wicomico, Somerset and Worcester counties, met in Salisbury last Wednesday for their annual meeting. Col. George M. Upshur, of Snow Hill, presided. The address of welcome was made by James E. Ellegood, of Salisbury, to which John W. Staton, of Snow Hill, responded. Leland J. Getz, of Baltimore, made the principal address on banks and banking. Warren F. Sterling, of Crisfield, was elected president; W. S. Gordy, Jr., of Salisbury, vice-president, and J. L. Wynne, of Crisfield, treasurer. A banquet was held at the armory at night under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Presbyterian Church of Salisbury.

New Automobile Tags For 1916

The State license tags for automobile vehicles in 1916 will have yellow figures on a black field. State Auto Commissioner Harry Roe made the selection this week. He also announced that the tags would be ready for issuance within a few weeks. This will permit motor-vehicle owners to obtain licenses long before the first of the year and will prevent them from being forced to participate in the first of the year rush. The Commissioner's office is always rushed during the last few days of the old year and the first week of the new, and many persons will take advantage of the opportunity to purchase tags at the earliest moment.

PLACE ORDERS FOR FOREST TREES

Not Much Time Remaining For Ordering State-Grown Forest Trees

A comparatively short time remains for making application to the State Forester for forest planting stock to use this season. Fall planting may be successfully undertaken in the greater part of Maryland, and since the season for this work is naturally somewhat restricted, the local landowner is urged to place his order for the required stock immediately.

There is for sale at the State Nursery a considerable selection of different aged conifers and hardwoods, including such valuable and attractive trees as White Pine and Norway Spruce, Red Oak, Black Locust, White Ash, Honey Locust, American Elm and Black Walnut. They are offered at prices ranging from $3 to $30 per thousand, but the greater number are priced at from $5 to $6. All are for sale at actual cost, and the purchaser is given the advantage of the low, thousand rate on any smaller lots. The trees themselves are obtainable in seedling and transplant size, from a few inches to a foot tall, for reforestation and commercial planting on a large scale, there being in addition larger sizes adapted for roadside and ornamental work.

Reforestation of "waste lands" is relatively inexpensive and quite productive, and the Forester's office is glad to cooperate with any interested parties in formulating plans of planting and conducting the actual operations where it is desired. Applications for stock and price lists of trees are sent to all who request them by the State Forester, whose address is Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, and all orders for forest planting stock should be filed with him at once.

Epworth League Convention

The twenty-sixth annual convention of the Epworth League of Salisbury district was held at Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church in Crisfield last week and was well attended.

Nearly every M. E. Church in the district was represented by two or more delegates.

Rev. E. W. McDowell is president, and Miss Annie Dryden is superintendent. Both helped to make the session a success.

The address by Dr. Martindale on Monday night on "Christ's Love of Service" was regarded as a fine one.

Rock Creek invited the convention for next year.

The Crisfield Epworth League choir furnished music. The same officers were re-elected except the treasurer, to which position Mr. J. E. Woodland was elected.

The delegate from Antioch M. E. Church, at Princess Anne, was Mr. George B. Twilley. Mr. Ray Gibbons also attended as one of the vice-presidents.

Peter C. Goble Dead

Mr. Peter C. Goble, a prominent farmer of West Princess Anne district, Somerset county, died at his home last Wednesday evening of paralysis, aged 63 years. Mr. Goble was apparently in good health until Monday, October 11th, when he was stricken with paralysis. From then until the time of his death he was unable to speak.

Mr. Goble came to this county from Ohio about 19 years ago and purchasing a beautiful home on the Manokin river, about three miles from Princess Anne, where he has been very successfully engaged in farming. He is survived by a widow, also one brother and two sisters, who reside in Ohio.

Funeral services were held last Friday afternoon in Manokin Presbyterian Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. F. Freund, and the interment was in the cemetery adjoining.

The pallbearers were, Messrs. H. F. Lankford, Chas. W. Long, W. O. Lankford, Frank Greenwood, R. W. Adams and G. W. Kemp.

The Bull Tractor Exhibition

The Bull Tractor exhibition given at H. N. Schofield's farm in Mt. Vernon district last Saturday, drew a big crowd from this county and also other nearby sections of persons who desired to see the test of using a tractor instead of horses on the farms. The exhibition was very satisfactory. The tractor did all kinds of farm work. Among those who were present were J. R. Crutchfield, of Richmond, Va., sales manager for King & Wright Co.; J. F. Sattley, sales manager of the Bull Tractor Company, Minneapolis, Minn.; D. H. Smalley and V. H. Sawyer, of Richmond, Va.; H. S. Lippincott, demonstrator of Somerset county, and officials from adjoining counties.

This Fall Term of the public schools of this county will close next Tuesday, November 9th.

LITIGATION OVER SOMERSET OYSTER BED LEASES

The First Heard Under Law Passed By Last Legislature—Damages To The Amount Of $257,975 Awarded By The Circuit Court

The Circuit Court for Somerset county reconvened Monday of last week and was in session three days trying the condemnation cases, involving the oyster areas in Somerset county heretofore found by the Court to be natural beds and bars, and awarding to the lessee of each lot the amount of damages found to be due by the jury.

Judge Henry L. D. Stanford was on the bench, and the following panel of jurors were selected to try the cases: S. Mac Pusey, foreman; Harry E. Froelick, George P. Lewis, Clarence Landing, Samuel F. Shores, A. J. Hufington, Daniel J. Ballard, William Joseph Barclay, James H. Adams, John T. Somers, Joseph L. Brown and Frederick Holland. Swenson Earle, engineer for the Board of Shellfish Commissioners, testified in each case.

On Monday the first case tried was that of the State vs. Carroll Crockett. The lease covered an area of 30 acres and the damages awarded by the jury was $3,150. There are four leases in the so-called Crockett holdings, and as the testimony in each case was the same, the State's Attorney, representing the State, agreed with the attorneys for the lessees—Alonso L. Miles, H. Fillmore Lankford and Clarence P. Lankford—that the same amount of damages should be entered up in each of these four cases, which amounted in the aggregate to $12,600 and costs.

This was the first case, so far as is known, that has been tried in this State to award damages under the condemnation provisions of the Shepherd bill, passed by the last session of the Legislature. The preliminary proceeding instituted under the Shepherd law was to determine whether or not the areas leased by the Board of Shellfish Commissioners were natural beds and bars. In every case where it was found that a disputed area was a natural bed, then the law provides that before the lease can be deemed valid, the lessee must be compensated and damages awarded. The law furthermore provides that the measure of damages shall be the value of the leasehold interest, together with the value of the oysters on the lot at the time of condemnation. At the outset of the case the attorneys for both sides agreed in their opening statements to the jury that the proper measure of damages was as stated in the law and then evidence was taken to prove the value of the leasehold interest and the value of the oysters on the lot.

At the session of the court Monday night the holdings of the A. E. Tull Oyster Company were disposed of. These lots are situated in the Annamessix river. The four lessees hold 60 acres and the total amount of damages awarded by the jury were $12,790.

On Tuesday morning the Cox holdings on Carmel bar, in the Manokin river, containing 120 acres, were disposed of.

Using The Mails To Defraud

In four years the American people have been swindled out of the huge sum of $238,000,000 by fraudulent schemes who have used the mails to defraud. The Government is doing all it can to stop these swindles by means of "fraud orders" which bring about the punishment of the swindlers and return of the money, as far as possible, to those who sent it. In the four years, about 15,000 such cases have been investigated.

One case is recalled, of an "infallible potato bug killer," which could be obtained of the inventor by sending two dollars. Those who sent the money received by mail two small blocks of wood, with directions to place the potato bug between them and press them firmly together. There are plenty of other schemes as fraudulent and nearly as absurd.

Parent-Teachers Meeting

The first Friday in November will soon be here. Are you planning to attend the meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association, on that day? There are many interesting things to tell you about your child and we would like to ask questions about him and also cooperate with you for his welfare. Come to the meeting of the Association, 3 p. m. Friday, November 5th, discuss with us and plan with us for your child's benefit and comfort. We are crowded in the school building and cannot possibly do our best work and we will be crowded and only half efficient until the parents change our condition. Do you not want to help or shall we struggle ahead the best we can with our hands pinioned at our sides? You are earnestly requested to be present at our next meeting and to help all you can. Everybody is needed in this.

Magnet A Surgeon's Tool

A piece of steel three-quarters of an inch in length and one-sixteenth of an inch in thickness has been removed from one eye of Stephen Brown, a patient at the Presbyterian Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital at Baltimore, by the aid of a giant magnet especially constructed for this character of work. The operation was an extremely delicate and dangerous one, due to the fact that the magnet, which was of high power, in attracting the steel from the eye might have torn the optic nerve in several places.

An X-ray photograph was taken, the steel located, a puncture made in the exact spot where it had entered and the magnet was then placed in a stationary position at the side of the operating table and Brown was moved in such a position that the magnet centered directly over the incision. The current was turned on by degrees until the steel was slowly drawn out.

The outcome of the operation, which has been successful, has completely surprised the attending physician and has opened a new method of removing objects of this character from eyes without making incisions.

Mr. Stephen Whittington Dead

Mr. Stephen Whittington, aged 80 years, died suddenly at the home of his son, Mr. Charles Whittington, near Marion, last Friday morning. Mr. Whittington seemed to be in good health when he retired on Thursday evening and the fatal attack came early the next morning. He is survived by his widow and four sons. Mr. Robert H. Whittington, of Marion, is his brother.

Funeral services were held last Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Trinity M. P. Church, at Marion.

THE CHAUTAUQUA A GREAT SUCCESS

Arrangements Made To Hold Another In Princess Anne Next Fall

The indoor Chautauqua began in Princess Anne on Saturday, October 23rd, and continued through Monday and Tuesday, October 25th and 26th. The Auditorium was well filled at all the entertainments, both afternoons and evenings. Dr. I. Alvadore Downey, the Superintendent, lectured each afternoon upon the subject, "Your Boys and Girls: Culture Epoch's Theory—What?" Dr. Downey is a fine lecturer and his talks were very entertaining and instructive. The Soiree Singers—Miss La Viness, soprano; Miss Foster, contralto; Harry Longstreet, baritone; Ralph Thomas, tenor; John Curtis, Jr., pianist—entertained the audience finely both Saturday afternoon and evening, and on Sunday they gave a sacred concert, after which Dr. Downey lectured upon the subject, "Man vs. the Animal." On Saturday evening Miss Mary Agnes Doyle gave a beautiful interpretation of a fine story entitled, "Peg O' My Heart."

On Monday afternoon and evening the Regimental Quartet gave a brilliant entertainment. Dr. Downey continued his lecture, and following the evening concert a scientific lecture was delivered by Dr. Reno B. Welbourn, which was finely delivered and splendidly illustrated by actual demonstrations of the miraculous possibilities of science.

On Tuesday afternoon the College Club gave an entertainment of songs, recitations, monologues, etc., with an entirely different program in the evening. The club is composed of Miss Elizabeth Roberts, Miss Margaret Malone, Mrs. Nellie Harry Turner and Miss Dorothea Fitch. Miss Fitch could not be present and her place was filled by Miss Madeline Davis, of Philadelphia. Miss Davis is a granddaughter of the late Rev. Charles F. Shepherd, who some years ago was a minister in Princess Anne. At the close of the concert in the evening Dr. A. E. Turner gave a lecture upon "Watch Your Health."

It is needless to say that this lecture was a brilliant one, as Dr. Turner was here last March and again at the commencement of Washington High School the latter part of May, and those who heard him then were again entertained at the recent Chautauqua. Motion pictures concluded each evening's entertainment.

Arrangements Made To Hold Another Chautauqua Next Fall

The guarantors for it are the following: G. W. Kirk, E. C. Cannon, L. L. Pusey, Ernest Hayman, Mrs. C. T. Fisher, Rev. D. J. Givan, Oscar F. Jones, M. O. Baltz, H. L. Brittingham, B. H. Dougherty, Dr. Roy A. Buhrman, C. H. Hayman, W. McDowell, Henry S. Tighman, J. S. Clark, Frank Collins, B. H. Dryden, J. D. Wallop, G. W. Colborn, W. H. Dashiell.

Postmasters To Carry Fewer Stamps

Postoffice burglaries have been so numerous of late that an order went forth last Tuesday to all postmasters, except of the first class, throughout the country to keep on hand a smaller number of stamps and other papers of a commercial value and to guard them more carefully than in the past. Reports to the department accounting for last year's business show that 1400 claims, aggregating a loss of $190,000, resulted from burglary of postoffices. They were received from nearly every section of the country.

Inspectors were unable in most cases to find any trace of the stolen goods because of the lack of identification marks. Their investigations, however, have led department officials to believe that stamp brokers in a number of the larger cities make it their business to dispose of stolen goods. The department is pursuing its investigations along these lines, and is endeavoring to develop some means for identifying stamps and other papers.

Tuesday's order, issued by Third Assistant Postmaster General Dockery, said that postmasters of the second, third and fourth classes who cannot properly protect their stamps, hereafter will draw requisitions for approximately two months' supply of 1 and 2-cent stamps at a time. Stamps of these denominations heretofore have been drawn in quantities sufficient for a 3 to 12 months' supply.

Bishop Adams' Visitation

Bishop Adams will visit Grace Church, Mt. Vernon, at 10.30 next Sunday morning. There will be no 11 o'clock service at St. Andrew's, but there will be an early celebration of the Holy Communion here in Princess Anne, at 7.30. Bishop Adams will visit St. Andrew's Church at 7.30 in the evening. Classes will be presented, both at Mt. Vernon and here in this town. The public will be made welcome at all these services.

ELECTIONS IN EIGHT STATES TODAY

Test Of Woman Suffrage To Be Made In Three States

Eight States, New York, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio and Mississippi, will hold elections today, Tuesday.

In four of these States, Massachusetts, Maryland, Kentucky and Mississippi, Governors are to be elected; in six States, New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Kentucky and Mississippi the State Legislatures, in whole or in part, are to be elected, and in five States, New York, Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio, important constitutional issues are to be decided.

The woman suffrage question will come up for decision in New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts, which States will furnish, in point of population, the greatest test the suffrage issue has ever had in the United States. New Jersey, the first State in the East to vote on equal suffrage, defeated the proposition at a special election given over exclusively to the suffrage question on October 19th.

Maryland will elect a Governor, Comptroller of the State Treasury, Attorney General, a full House of Delegates and half of the State Senate. In addition four constitutional amendments will be voted upon, and local minor officers will be chosen in the counties and Baltimore city.

The constitutional amendments are for the referendum, a new taxation scheme home rule for cities, and parole in criminal cases. The referendum plan is practically the same as that followed in other States, except that the Maryland proposition includes a prohibition against the use of the referendum in any local option or license legislation. If the home rule amendment carries the Legislature will be relieved of a vast amount of purely local legislation, which would be vested in the city and county councils; while the taxation amendment provides for the classification of all kinds of property for the purpose of taxation.

The New York State Constitution to the suffrage issue, a dominant feature of the election will be the question of adopting a new State constitution as revised by a recent State Constitutional convention, presided over by Elihu Root. The new constitution, at the request of the suffrage leaders, has not been made to include the suffrage amendment, hence the constitution and the suffrage issue will be voted upon separately, neither question having anything to do directly with the fate of the other.

Massachusetts, in addition to the suffrage amendment, will vote on the proposition of giving the Legislature authority to impose a tax on incomes, and similar authority for the taking over of land in country districts for the purpose of establishing homesteads for those who may wish to escape from the more congested quarters of the cities.

Pennsylvania will have comparatively little of general interest to its election outside of the vote on the suffrage question. No State officers are to be elected with the exception of three candidates to fill vacancies on the Superior Court bench. In general the only things other than the suffrage issue to attract the voters to the polls will be county and municipal elections. In Philadelphia the Republican organization has conducted a vigorous campaign to regain control of the city administration, which was wrested from it four years ago when the reform element united with the Democratic party and elected Rudolph Blankenburg, a life-long reformer in politics, as mayor.

The Kentuckians will elect a Governor for a four-year term, all other State officers, one-half of the State Senate and an entire assembly. Democrats, Republicans and Prohibitionists have candidates for all the State offices, with Republican and Democratic contestants for every place on the ballot and the Progressives are represented by candidates for nearly all the State offices and numerous seats in the General Assembly. The Socialist party has only a candidate for Governor.

The election in Mississippi will be merely a ratification of the nominations made by the Democratic voters at the State primaries held last August, inasmuch as no other party has candidates in the field. A full set of State, county and district officers will be formally elected, as well as members of both branches of the Legislature. No Congressmen will be elected this year.

Having disposed of the suffrage issue at the special election in October, New Jersey has left little of general interest for the election today. Voting today will be confined to the election of six members of the State Senate and a full membership of 60 in the House. The campaign has been very quiet, no State-wide issues being involved. In some legislative districts, local option has been an issue.

Convinced

Story of a Well Kept Secret.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Rosamond Deane was sitting at breakfast in her home in the center of a Georgia plantation. She was a spinster, and as Queen Elizabeth was married to the state so was Miss Deane married to a girl friend. That friend had left her some time before to take her invalid mother to Europe. Letters were received from the traveler postmarked Naples, Rome, Florence, Lucerne and other points. The last, received from a little seacoast town in England, announced that the writer would be at home within a few weeks.

While Miss Deane was breakfasting that morning it was fated that she should receive the surprise of her life. Chloe, an old darky woman who was born on the plantation, came into the room carrying a basket and exclaimed:

"Fo' de Lawd, Missy Rosa, wha' yo' s'pose I found on de po'ch?"

Placing the basket on the table, she turned down an embroidered blanket and exposed the face of a girl baby that appeared to be three or four weeks old.

"Poor dear little motherless child!" exclaimed Miss Deane, bending over the baby and kissing her.

"Wha' yo' tink o' dat woman who lef' her baby to some un else?" grumbled Chloe.

But Miss Deane heard not. She was busy uncovering the child with a view to examining the clothing for a mark of identity. The apparel was of fine texture, but there was nothing on it to give a clue.

"Well, Chloe," said Rosamond, "I'm sorry for its mother, but her loss is our gain. We will keep it. The house won't be so lonely hereafter."

"Ef' yo' do when yo' come to lub it somebody come along and tak' it away from yo' sho'."

"I can't help that. I can't turn the little stranger away."

But fickle fate, having brought a joy, turned about several days later and brought a sorrow. A letter came announcing the death of Miss Deane's bosom friend. It was dictated by the dead girl's mother, but was written by a man. The shock to Rosamond was severe and was the more intense that she had expected any day to receive word that her friend had arrived in America. For a time she forgot the little girl who had come to her in her grief; then suddenly it occurred to her that the child had been sent by Providence as a compensation for her loss.

Taking the little one in her arms, she covered her with kisses.

In due time a letter was received, written in the same hand as the first and signed Edward Warwick, stating that the mother had survived the daughter but a few days and both would be buried in England. This was a disappointment to Rosamond, who had hoped for the satisfaction of at least keeping her friend's grave green.

The clothes in which the foundling had been received were put away that they might possibly serve as an identification in the future. Chloe was installed as nurse. Miss Deane acted as mother. Months passed without any intimation as to the baby's parentage, and what was at first desired came to be dreaded. By the time little Winifred, as her foster mother named her, reached the age of six months she had so completely won herself around the heart of Rosamond Deane and Chloe that any one appearing to claim her would have been regarded as an enemy.

When Winifred was eighteen months old her foster mother received a letter postmarked Philadelphia that astonished her. It was written in a man's hand, and an attempt seemed to have been made to disguise it. It stated that a child had been left at Miss Deane's plantation whose identity at the time could not be divulged without causing serious trouble. A change had come in the situation owing to the demise of the child's grandfather. A check for $1,900 was inclosed as payment for what had been expended on the child and more would from time to time be forthcoming. This was all the information contained in the letter except that the baby had been born in wedlock.

"Wha' I tole yo', missy?" cried old Chloe when the contents of this letter were made known to her. "Nex' t'ing some fine lady or gemmen come down with a kerriage and carry de baby off."

"Heavens!" exclaimed Miss Deane, shocked at the mere prospect of such an event.

From this time Winifred's foster mother and nurse lived in a state of anxiety. An envelope came once a month containing a check for $100. The envelopes were addressed in different hands and were postmarked from different places, mostly abroad. Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Munich seemed to be the abiding places of the sender, though one or two had been mailed in America. One day a letter came, evidently from the person who sent the checks, as follows:

"It has been suggested to me that a possible taking away from you of the child left in your care may be harrowing to you. I therefore take this means of assuring you that she will not be removed from you without your consent."

"Everybody know a fool man wrote dat letter," grumbled Chloe. "Tie hadn't sense enough to know of one took de child in one wouldn't want to gib her up."

"You're right, Chloe," replied Rosamond. "Some woman in his confidence has told him how unjust he was to us to keep us in a state of anxiety. It's a pity he did not think of it himself when he wrote the first note. I wonder if he is any relation to Winifred?"

"Like enough he de fadder. He mus' be mighty mean to keep de baby away from de mudder."

"We are completely in the dark about the matter, Chloe," replied Rosamond, "and there is no use in our speculating about it. I expect, however, that some day it will be explained. Winifred is evidently the daughter of parents of the upper social strata. At any rate, whoever is sending us money for her use must be wealthy. Half of what we receive would more than cover the cost of keeping her."

Miss Deane might have added that all the amounts received had gone into a savings bank, to be used as a dowry for the child when she should come to womanhood.

One day Chloe, who was dusting so fiercely that it was evident something was irritating her, let out upon her mistress:

"I don' tink a woman wha' hab children hab de right to marry ag'in no how."

"Why, Chloe, what put that into your head?"

"A stepfadder air pretty nigh as bad as a stepmudder—sometimes worse."

"Come, Chloe, explain. What are you drivin' at?"

"Ef' yo' marry Marse Childers like enough he git all de money wha' yo' put in de bank fo' Winnie."

"Good gracious, Chloe! What makes you think I'm going to marry Mr. Childers?"

"Ef' yo' ain't goin' to marry Marse Childers wha' fo' all de flowers he sendin' yo', I lak to know?"

Rosamond's blushes indicated that Chloe was not far from right. Henry Childers had recently come into the vicinity, had met Miss Deane and had soon begun to pay her marked attention. He was an attractive man, and Miss Deane had not shown any disposition to turn him away.

"Chloe," she said soothingly, "Mr. Childers is very fond of children, and it is the gentleness he shows toward Winnie that has attracted me to him."

"Fond o' chillun! Just yo' wait till he git chillun ob he own. Winnie hab to take a back seat."

Notwithstanding this protest Miss Deane continued to accept the attentions of Mr. Childers. He was evidently a gentleman and seemed to be comfortably situated in a financial way. He was not a man of business, seeming inclined, rather, to the agricultural life of the south. He said that he would like to manage a cotton plantation, and whenever one was for sale it was offered to him. But none of them seemed to be exactly what he wanted. His main object seemed to be courting Miss Deane. At last he proposed to her. She put him off by repeating what Chloe had said about Winifred. He asked her if that was the only reason for her refusal of him. Rosamond admitted that it was. He asked her if she would consent provided he would satisfy her that his treatment of the little girl would be always kind and affectionate. She replied that no one could give any such assurance or, at least, it could not be relied on. He left her, saying that he would convince her beyond a doubt.

The same evening a darky rode up to the plantation house with an envelope for Miss Deane. It was addressed in Mr. Childers' handwriting. She took it to her room, where she would be alone, to read.

It contained a story too long to be given here. The following is a synopsis of it: Rosamond's bosom friend, who had gone abroad with her invalid mother, had met a young American whom she had soon come to love and who loved her. He had nothing of his own, though his father was wealthy and allowed him an income, which he was spending in travel. He had cabied his father that he was about to wed an American girl of no fortune. The reply was, "If you do your income will be cut off and you will be disinherited."

The result was a secret marriage. The only person in the secret of the marriage was the young wife's mother. A baby came, and its mother died. She had planned the future of her child in case of her death before its parentage could be acknowledged. Her husband was to take the little one to America and leave it with her friend Rosamond Deane. When the child's grandmother died he returned to America and, not daring to give up his secret to any one, had the baby left on Miss Deane's porch. His father died, and his son came into the possession of a fortune. At the time of the father's death the son was abroad. His wife had given him a sealed letter to be opened two years after her death. It was inclosed to Rosamond with the other manuscript. This letter expressed a wish that he should marry her friend Rosamond Deane and they should bring up her child together. He was Henry Childers.

Rosamond perused the narrative with deep emotion. She wondered that her friend had not given her a hint of her marriage, but remembered that she had no right to do so. She went over what had passed since the advent of the child and could not but admire the care with which the secret had been kept. A singular decree of fate was that she had named the foundling for her absent friend, its mother.

When Mr. Childers came the next day, on meeting Rosamond he asked:

"Are you convinced?"

For reply she suffered him to take her to his arms.

A CHINESE JACOB.

His Willy Scheme by Which Hsien Feng Reached the Throne.

How Hsien Feng, winning his father's favor after the manner of Jacob, reigned in his stead and hastened the swift decline of the Manchu dynasty in China is told by Messrs. E. Backhouse and J. O. P. Bland in "Annals and Memoirs of the Court of Peking."

Toward the end of his reign Tao Kuang, concerned as to the succession, had almost decided to confer it upon his favorite son, Prince Kung, a young man much superior in character and intelligence to him who eventually became heir to the throne. It happened, however, that the latter's tutor, Tsao Chenyung, knew of the emperor's predilection and, desiring to enhance his own position, cast about for some means of inducing the sovereign to change his mind and confer the succession upon his pupil.

The emperor, following the dynastic tradition, had given orders one day that his sons should go hunting in the southern park. Etiquette required that a prince who had not completed his studies should ask his tutor for permission to absent himself for the day. Hsien Feng therefore attended at the lecture room in the palace and found his tutor there alone. The prince went up and, making the bow that ceremony requires, asked for leave.

Tsao asked for what purpose, and he answered:

"The emperor wishes me to take a day's shooting."

Tsao whispered to him:

"Ako (the Manchu word used in speaking of or addressing princes meaning, literally, elder brother), take my advice: When you reach the park sit you and watch the others shooting. Do not fire a shot and give orders to your hunsmen not to set any traps. If the emperor asks you for your reason tell him that at this spring season it is not right to take life because both birds and beasts have their young to take care of, and such slaughter is a violation of natural harmony. Take care not to quarrel with your brothers, but do not endeavor to emulate them. If you, ako, will remember this, you are certain to win his majesty's approval, for I know his disposition. On this hinges your whole future. Be careful; do not forget."

When the princes returned in the evening and reported to their father only Hsien Feng had an empty bag. To Tao Kuang's questions he replied exactly as his tutor had told him to do. The emperor was delighted and said:

"This is the conduct of a superior man," and from that day he decided to make him his heir.

In later years, when Tao Kuang had passed away, Hsien Feng raised his tutor to the rank of assistant grand secretary, but he died before attaining to still higher honors.

When Tosti Kissed Melba.

The first time I sang "Goodbye" it was in Tosti's studio, and he gave me the accompaniment himself. The lines "Hush—a voice from far away," "Listen and learn," it seems to say, "The tomorrows shall be as today." "The cord is frayed, the cruse is dry, the link must break and the lamp must die," I sang throughout pianissimo, with only the two slight crescendos that he had marked to the music. Stopping suddenly at the end of those phrases, Tosti kissed me and exclaimed, "That is the way I heard it!" I knew what he meant. The desire prompted by imagination in its composition had been realized. And I was very happy. —Mme. Melba in Woman's Home Companion.

Turn the Children Loose.

Turn them loose. That is the best way to develop the muscles of boys and girls. Turn them loose and let them live wild—climb trees, jump fences, chase squirrels, play with the dogs, dig in the garden, pick flowers, hop, skip and jump and do all sorts of things that a natural human animal wants to do. The trouble is, our boys and girls are tamed too much. We are all born wild and in the civilizing process have to be tamed more or less. Most of us, however, get tamed too much. We become so tamed that we are spoiled.—Good Health.

Norway Hotel System.

There is a capital hotel system in vogue in certain parts of Norway. In villages where no hotel exists one of the more prominent inhabitants is subsidized by the Norwegian government and in return is bound to provide accommodation for not fewer than four travelers. He may take in more if he chooses, but four is the minimum. The accommodation and food supplied are excellent and the charges moderate.

"Why is the lily so haughty?" inquired the mushroom. "She barely nods to the rest of us."

"She is very proud," explained the ivy. "She regards you as an upstart and me as a climber."—Kansas City Journal.

Leatherback Turtle.

A marine creature hard to keep alive in captivity is the leatherback turtle. The leatherback is a sea turtle, and it is the biggest of all the turtles. It grows to weigh a thousand pounds or more, six or eight times as much as a man.

Good Luck Is but Another Name for Common Sense.

Water and Pure Water.

Pure water is nothing more or less than a chemical curiosity. Even when distilled it cannot rightly be considered perfectly pure. Mineral matter is the most common foreign substance found in "Adam's ale." This is largely owing to the fact that all water passes through rock and soil at some time or other. In moderate quantities these mineral salts are quite desirable, as they are particularly needed for our bones and muscles. When water is distilled these mineral substances become detached; hence distilled water is useless for drinking. But if more than a hundred grains of such salts as magnesium or sodium sulphate are contained in a gallon of water it should then be regarded as a mineral beverage rather than a good drinking material. The importance of water can be well realized when we consider that the very elasticity of our muscles, cartilages and tendons is due to the amount of water that these tissues contain.—Pearson's.

Do Champion Athletes Die Young?

From opinions collected from men prominent in the athletic world, among them several doctors and surgeons who have given the subject special study, it may be concluded that the average man can play baseball, tennis and basketball with safety until he is forty. After that age these more vigorous games become a little dangerous, even to the man in good physical condition. At forty-five, most of the experts agree, golf, croquet, handball, volleyball and medicine ball are more fitting and, certainly, safer pastimes. The United States public health service discommends some of the more violent forms of sport, such as rowing, for instance, even for young men. Long distance running, jumping and pole vaulting also are considered extremely exhausting by its experts. It declares, in short, that "champion athletes die young."—Boston Herald.

A Short Lived Island.

In 1967 a new shoal was discovered in the group of the Tonga or Friendly Islands. In 1877 smoke was seen over the shoal. In 1885 the shoal had become a volcanic island more than two miles long and 240 feet high, and a fierce eruption was taking place within it. In 1886 the island had begun to shrink in dimensions. In 1890 its height had diminished one-half, and the ocean close around it was more than a mile deep. In 1892 the island rose only about twenty-six feet above sea level, and in 1893, under the action of the waves, its complete disappearance was reported.

The Safety First Critic.

"Brown is a very careful critic, isn't he?"

"In what way?"

"He always manages to take the sting out of his unfavorable comment."

"For instance?"

"The bride made him a shortcake the other day and when she asked him how he liked it he replied, 'It isn't as good as your mother used to make.'"—Detroit Free Press.

Birds and Lightning.

Birds are sometimes struck by lightning. Darwin records the case of a wild duck that he saw struck by a bolt while flying. It was killed instantly and fell to the ground. But birds seem to know instinctively that lightning is to be feared. That perhaps is why they seek shelter in thunderstorms. The sudden disappearance of the birds is, indeed, in the country one of the surest signs of an approaching tempest.

Italics.

Italics are letters formed after the Roman model, but sloping toward the right, used to emphasize words or sentences. They were first used about 1500 A. D. by Manutius, a Venetian printer, who dedicated them to the Italian states; hence the name.

Grit Always Wins.
Grit is the thing that counts. We all know young men who are hanging around waiting for father to slip out of his old shoes. As if a pair of old shoes ever made a man out of a loafer! Why, father's shoes are ten sizes too big for any man that thinks money somebody else has earned will make him a gentleman!

Grit is what these young chaps need, whether they know it or not. The day will come when the only man the world will count worthy of its respect will be the man who does things, even if he is forced to shut his teeth hard to keep back the groan of pain.

Folks used to think that the only real soldier was the man who marched away to the sound of life and drum, to shoot and kill and destroy. It is not so.—E. L. Vincent in Farm Life.

Proof Against Wasp Stings.

A Glimpse of Lisbon.

Lisbon leaves the definite impression of a gay, bright capital, if not of a truly beautiful city. Beautiful it certainly is by nature, seated on its lofty hills overlooking the Tagus and interspersed everywhere with semitropical gardens and largos, but its newer houses are too rectangular, too lacking in imagination, to make anything but rather monotonous streets. Even the Praca do Comercio, though laid out upon a truly magnificent scale, fails to arouse enthusiasm.

This is the city's aspect to the casual visitor who devotes but a day or two to its sights. But to one who is willing to give it a week or more it holds many attractions.

The seeker for the picturesque will delight in the water front in the morning hours and in the fisher folk—the men in black bag caps and knee breeches; the women, barefoot, setting out with basket on head to trot the city streets. These fishwives are the most picturesque of the Lisbon types, and most of them are really beautiful, the fine ovals of their faces, their smooth complexions and lustrous, almond shaped eyes recalling the Mauresques and clearly bespeaking their oriental origin. — Ernest Peckotto in Scribner's.

A Pen Portrait of Carlyle.
He looked, I thought, the prophet. His clothes loose and careless, for comfort, now show; the shaggy, unkempt gray that of hair; the long head, the bony, almost fleshless face of one who has fasted and suffered; the tyrannous overhanging cliff forehead; the firm, heavy mouth and out-thrust challenging chin—the face of a fighter; force everywhere, brains and will dominant; strength redeemed by the deepest eyes, most human, beautiful; by turns piercing, luminous, tender, gleaming; pathetic, too, for the lights were usually veiled in brooding sadness, broken often by a look of dumb despair and regret; a strong, sad face, the saddest face I ever studied—all petrified, so to speak, in tearless misery as of one who had come to wreck by his own fault and was tortured by remorse—the worm that dieth not.—From "Contemporary Portraits" by Frank Harris.

Judged by Appearances.
In "Twenty Years of My Life" Douglass Sladen recalls a story told at the Authors' club long ago by Sir J. M. Barrie against himself and in broad Doric:

"I expect it was just a ben trovato but it was none the less amusing. He apologized for being late. He had been to the wrong club. He had never been to the Authors' club before, he said (though he was a member of the committee), so he asked a policeman the way. From the way in which he pronounced the word the policeman thought he meant Arthur's, which was quite near the Authors' club when it was in its temporary premises in Park place. When he got there he found it a very grand place, he said. The club porter looked him up and down and said, 'The servants' entrance is round the corner.'"

Britain's Capital Crimes.

How To Prevent Croup

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.

Scientific Farming

Some Farmers Prefer Spring and Others the Fall.

The soil for alfalfa should have plenty of humus. A deep, rich, sandy loam will grow alfalfa to perfection. The land should be well drained, for alfalfa will not be a success on swamp land, says a contributor to Farm Progress.

There is a difference of opinion as to when alfalfa should be sown. Some prefer the spring and others the fall. I think one should be governed by conditions of climate and soil. In those sections where there is little moisture in the fall and the winters are exceedingly cold spring seeding is preferable. Soil that tends to bake on account of drought will give better results when seeded in the spring. When seeded in the fall the roots go into winter quarters very tender and are apt to be winter killed.

When there is plenty of moisture and soil is alluvial and sandy and winters light, fall seeding is recommended because the alfalfa can be sown after the season's crop is harvested. When planting in the early spring one should be certain to wait until all danger from frost has passed. The soil should be harrowed and disked until it is like an ash bank, then packed until it is firm below. Lack of thorough preparation of soil is the cause of more failures to get a stand of alfalfa than anything else.

When alfalfa is planted in the spring it should have a nurse crop. Oats are considered the best nurse crop in certain sections. They shade the ground and protect the young plants from the hot summer sun and at the same time give a profitable crop. The ground should be full of moisture when planting the seed so that it will come right up and start to growing.

Acreage of Farm Lands.

The last federal census shows the total number of farms in the United States to be 6,381,502, containing 878,788,325 acres.

The land in farms represents 46.2 per cent, or less than one-half of the total land area of the country. Of the total acreage given only 478,451,750 acres are classed as "improved land." The balance comprises wood land and other unimproved land in farms. The improved land given above is only about 25.1 per cent of the total area of the country. The average size of farms, as shown by the last census, is 138.1 acres of which an average of 75.2 acres are improved, and 62.9 acres unimproved.

BEEES IN SEPTEMBER.

September is a month that often brings hope to discouraged beekeepers who for one reason or another have failed to secure a crop of honey from the earlier sources, such as the clovers. Experience has proved that often the fall flow exceeds the earlier one.

This may be the result of two causes. It may be that the colonies were so weak from winter losses or spring dwindling that they were not strong enough in numbers to take advantage of even an abundant flow, or the lack of an early crop may have been the result of real lack of nectar secreted by the flowers.

There is an ever increasing number of progressive beekeepers who during September take from the hives every drop of honey, not only from the supers, but from the brood nest as well, and in its place they feed sugar syrup and make the bees depend exclusively upon it, and there is much to be said in favor of this plan.

The honey from the fall flowers is full of pollen grains, and too much of this eaten by the bees during the winter is liable to cause dysentery, especially if the bees are kept in winter repositories, and by giving the hives clear sugar syrup in place of the honey taken there is a decided gain, not only in the health of the colony so treated, but a gain in dollars, as the honey we take from them will sell for more than the sugar syrup will cost.

GET READY THE SILO.

It will save time if the silo and machinery are all ready before they have to be used. All silos should be cleaned thoroughly and any leaks or weak places repaired. A thin cement wash can be applied to stone, brick, or concrete walls. Wood silos may be painted with boiled linseed oil or hot creosote. One gallon of the latter will cover 200 square feet of surface, two coats. The creosote should be heated to just under the boiling point, but care must be taken to prevent its boiling over into the fire. A large kettle like those used in making soft soap is suitable for heating and the creosote may be applied with a brush the same as in painting, allowing the first to dry before the second is put on.

FALL AND SPRING PLOWING.

August and September Rains Often Make Autumn Plowing Advisable.
[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

The average yields of spring crops, such as wheat, oats and corn, in the great plains area from spring and from fall plowing show that the blind following of a rule prescribing any particular time of plowing might cause a reduction as often as it does an increase in the yields. The great variation in the time and amount of precipitation in this region must be constantly kept in mind when considering the time of plowing. No dependence can be placed on a heavy precipitation in August and September, yet it frequently occurs. As moisture is considered the most important factor in crop production in the great plains area, its conservation is the primary object in cultivation.

Stubble, weeds and uneven ground are common means of retaining snow and holding a large part of the winter precipitation. In deciding when a field should be plowed, the question of whether a greater amount of moisture will be accumulated by holding the snow that falls than will be dissipated by the growth of weeds is paramount. It must be decided by the man on the ground. In answering this question several factors must be considered—namely, the amount of moisture already in the soil that may be lost through weed growth, the probable time before the weeds will be killed by frost, the possibility of increasing the water in storage in the soil by holding the snow that may come, the danger of soil blowing if the stubble and weeds are removed and the distribution of farm labor.

In deciding the time to plow the advantages and disadvantages of both spring plowing and fall plowing must be taken into consideration. Heavy rains in August indicate that fall plowing should be done, as the gain of moisture during the winter by the stubble land probably would not equal the loss of moisture taken by the weeds in the fall. If only light rains occur, however, the moisture in the soil produced by these rains probably would be more than offset by the greater quantity of snow held by the stubble during the winter and the reduction of the weeds in the crop. Spring plowing would then be better. The availability of labor in the fall will influence the amount of plowing done, but a greater effort should be made to do the plowing if there is heavy precipitation than if the rainfall is light. The only advantage in late fall plowing is that the amount of spring labor in preparing the seed bed is reduced.

Seed Row Drills.

A good way to make drills or seed rows of uniform width and depth is to have an attachment for the garden rake as shown in the sketch. writes Bert W. Verne of San Diego, Cal., in Popular Mechanics. The device consists of a piece of tin or sheet metal having V shaped projections on one edge of the width of the rows. The other edge of the metal is inserted between the teeth on the rake. Thus it can be easily drawn over the garden bed to mark the rows. After the seed has been planted reverse the tin and use it as a hoe for filling the row.

Farming in Denmark.

Denmark has been termed the paradise of the small proprietor. Nearly two-thirds of her population make a living, and a good living, from the land, one-half of the agriculturists being their own masters. The secret of success has lain in technical education and co-operation. Every farmer, big or little, belongs to one of the great co-operative associations, which guide him in the care of the land and cattle and dispose of his produce to the best advantage without the needless waste of competition. The result of the system has been to make Denmark one of the richest countries in Europe in proportion to her size.

A FINAL APPEAL

Today is to determine whether Maryland is ready to leave its Democratic moorings and permit the election of Republican State officers. It will also determine whether the control of public matters in the various counties, this one included, is to be surrendered to a body of men who would be hopelessly in the minority were it not for its colored element of support.

We can not believe that such a state of affairs will occur. The matter will depend upon how Democrats conduct themselves at today's election. It is our belief that their behavior is going to be of the highest order and of such a class as to prevent the induction of Republican nominees into office. So far as Somerset county is concerned, our appeal is to every Democrat to vote the entire Democratic ticket. It matters not what prejudices we may have. Now is no time to attempt to adjust inter-party feelings, all of which are supposed to have been settled at the primaries. Let us lay aside everything that looks like a grievance and hasten to the support of our party. Above all, let us not listen to the appeals of oily talking Republicans. They have their own selfish ends in view and any such talk is not for our benefit. Let us realize this. This is our final appeal. Democrats know how to conduct the affairs of the State and they know how to conduct those of Somerset county. If we are Democrats let us so remain. Let us say again, as we have said before, be true to your Democratic principles.

THE CHAUTAUQUA

The Chautauqua entertainments held in Princess Anne last week, the second of the indoor series during the year, were of a most instructive and agreeable sort. The object of the Association is to present not only entertainment, but instruction as well.

Dr. Downey, who was the Superintendent last week, is a man whose life has been centered upon the subject of education. His lectures upon "Your Boys and Girls" were filled with the most kindly hints to parents and school officials as to the suitable training of children. The lectures were full of snap and vigor, agreeably interspersed with humor, and showed that the speaker was a man who had studied and who knew whereof he spoke. His lecture on Sunday was also filled with inspiring counsel.

Dr. Turner also delivered one of his finest lectures upon the subject of "Community Wastes," and his hearers were far from being disappointed in his third appearance in the county seat. So with the series of musical and other entertainments, including a remarkable one by Dr. Welbourn of an intensely interesting class, all of which were valuable in presenting appeals to those searching for broader planes of aesthetics and science.

It is gratifying to know that arrangements have been made for a return of the Chautauqua next year. It will be welcomed as a relief from many entertainments that carry with them little of real benefit.

Our Debt To France

An interesting discussion has been going on through some New York City newspapers, recently, in respect of the debt of the United States government to France, for men and money furnished by that country in aid of the American Revolution. One writer puts the money obligation at the very large total of $772,000,000, without consideration of interest.

It is a fact that France ably assisted the American Colonies during their long struggle for independence, both with men and money. It is admitted that but for the help given by France, the Revolution might have continued much longer, or, indeed, have failed. Yet it does not appear that we have ever liquidated this large debt to a friendly nation whose assistance proved so valuable and timely. Nor is there any record that correctly and definitely reduces it to plain figures. The statement that it amounted to the large sum of $772,000,000 is ridiculous, but there are reliable documents to the effect that it amounted to between two and three millions of dollars.

But no matter what may be the actual extent of our indebtedness to France during the interesting period of our Revolution, France has not been disposed at any time to hold the debt against us. We have been good friends throughout, with the exception of a brief period of President Washington's administration, when he came very near to open hostilities, and indulged in a few naval conflicts. But the storm passed over, and there was no serious open outbreak afterwards. —Wilmington Every Evening.

A "Drop Letter" Rate

Senator Weeks of the Senate committee on Post Offices and Post Roads is in favor of a one-cent rate of postage for first-class mail matter for local delivery, and his suggestion ought to take precedence over the general penny-postage proposition which has been advanced many times and is said to be the aim of the Burleson regime as the crowning achievement of its administration of the postal business.

The "drop letter" reduced rate has a legitimate reason for its application, as such letters form a distinct class of mail matter, involving a minimum cost of transportation—none at all in the great majority of instances—and only the cost of carrier collection and delivery and of office handling, so that a cent rate would probably pay the entire cost of service. Whether or not it would provide an increase in revenue by developing greater use of the mail service on the part of city business interests, may be questioned but the saving in many lines of business would be considerable.

The rural postal service has been receiving generous attention for many years and it would be a welcome change if the service in the cities should be brought up to date, for Philadelphia is not the only community suffering from inadequate service. While the one-cent local rate would be gratifying and would not be unreasonable, the greater need is for more efficiency in city service, and that is to be insisted on even if the reduced rate shall not be given. —Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

A Great Task For Goethals

General Goethals, the eminent engineer of the Panama Canal, who has been induced by the recent tremendous slides that have blocked the waterway to resume his work there, has a tremendous task facing him. The latest slide carried about 10,000,000 cubic yards of earth into the canal, and at the present rate of excavation is a million yards a month, it may be ten months before the waterway will be again opened to navigation.

It is said that often the canal bottom bulges up to a height of 15 feet above the surface of the water, due to the tremendous weight of the hillsides. The area of motion is roughly calculated to be in the neighborhood of 175 acres, which constitute the greatest slide area in the history of the canal. It extends 3,600 feet along both banks of the waterway, with probably an average of 1,500 feet back of the center line of the canal prism.

This situation is a sad blow to many who believed all the difficulties of canal construction had been overcome, but now it is seen the danger from slides is ever present, and there is no telling when it will be obviated to the extent of allowing profitable operation. But great as the task of clearance is, the people of the country believe General Goethals is a big enough man to accomplish it, although it may require a tremendous amount of work and a paralyzing lot of money. Success to him.—Wilmington Every Evening.

The Race for Constantinople

Constantinople, long the object of assault by the combined forces of Great Britain and France, is now the prize of an international race. Germany and Austria-Hungary, aided by Bulgaria, have started on a march through Serbia to the relief of the Turkish capital. The armed forces of England and France have entered upon a campaign to assist Serbia to repel the invaders of her soil.

Here is a race for a prize of the first magnitude. Should Germany and Austria-Hungary succeed in saving Constantinople, it might mean the salvation, for a long time, of the Turkish Empire, in Europe. Should England and France capture the city, it would mean an absolute extinction of Turkey in Europe for all time to come.

Looking at such a race from the outside, the sympathy of the neutral peoples will be extended to England and France. The world can well afford to dispense with the presence of the Turkish Empire in Europe, or for that matter, on any portion of the inhabitable globe. —Wilmington Evening.

CHARLES C. GELDER

In the person of Charles C. Gelder the Democratic party offers to the voters of Somerset county a candidate who is exceptionally well qualified for the office of County Commissioner and peculiarly fitted to discharge the duties of the position in an efficient and business like manner. Mr. Gelder did not seek the office, but was induced to become a candidate by his neighbors along the Revell's Neck road, nearly all of whom, including a great number of Republicans, joined in a petition requesting him to become a candidate. The men who signed this petition were among the largest and most representative farmers and taxpayers in the county and they paid a high tribute to the personal esteem in which Mr. Gelder is held by his neighbors, as well as their judgment of his exceptional ability to discharge the duties of this particular office.

Before coming to Somerset county, Mr. Gelder was connected with large business interests in Chicago, New York and Philadelphia, having under his immediate charge during this time from 2,000 to 3,000 employees. The special feature of Mr. Gelder's line of work was that he was required to practice the strictest economy in the purchase of materials and the employment of labor. It was necessary for him to economize in the smallest details. His business experience was a wide and varied one and he is thoroughly equipped to enter the Commissioner's office and will conduct the affairs of the office in the most up-to-date business manner.

Since coming to this county Mr. Gelder has devoted his entire time to farming. He owns two large tracts of land situated on the Manokin river and is one of our largest taxpayers. He applies to the cultivation of his land the most modern and scientific methods. He has certainly made good and has taken from rank among the leading farmers in this section of the county.

Three years ago Mr. Gelder married the eldest daughter of the late Congressman Robert F. Brattan and a granddaughter of the late James U. Dennis, Esq.

By reason of his extensive and successful business interests and domestic ties, Mr. Gelder has become one of our own people. The welfare and good government of the county is as important to him as it is to any other taxpayer among us. The taxpayers of the county should be glad of the opportunity of placing in the Commissioner's office a man possessing Mr. Gelder's extraordinary qualifications for the office.

PROPOSITION

Proposed Amendments to the Constitution of Maryland.

Whereas, at the January Session of the General Assembly of Maryland held in the year nineteen hundred and fourteen, Acts were passed, to wit: Chapter 290, proposing an amendment to Article 15, of the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of Maryland; Chapter 415, proposing a new Article to said Constitution to be known as Article XI-A, Chapter 453, proposing an additional section to Article III of said Constitution and Chapter 513, proposing an additional Article to said Constitution to be known as Article XVI; which said Acts of the General Assembly are in words and figures following:

CHAPTER 290.

An Act to amend Article XV of the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, and to provide for the submission of such amendment to the qualified voters of this State for their adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly, that the following Article be and the same is hereby proposed in the place and stead of Article XV of the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, as at present existing, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, it shall supersede and stand in place and stead of said Article.

Article XV. That the levying of taxes by the poll is grievous and oppressive and ought to be prohibited; that persons ought not to be assessed for the support of the government; that the General Assembly shall, by uniform rules, provide for separate assessment of land and classification and subdivisions of land and personal property, as it may deem proper; and all taxes thereafter provided to be levied by the State for the support of the general government, and by the counties and by the City of Baltimore for their respective purposes, shall be uniform as to land within the taxing district, and uniform within the class or subclass of improvements on land and personal property which the respective taxing powers may have directed to be subjected to the tax levy; and fines, duties or taxes may properly and justly be imposed, or laid with a political view for the good government and benefit of the community.

Section 2. And be it enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the foregoing Article hereby proposed in place and stead of Article XV of the Declaration of Rights of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, shall be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof for their adoption or rejection, in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of this State, and that said general election vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each official ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment," and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now prescribed by law, and immediately after said election returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment as directed by Article XIV of the Constitution.

Approved, April 10th, 1914.

CHAPTER 453.

An Act to propose an amendment to the Constitution of this State by adding a new Article thereto to follow immediately after Article XI-A, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, (three-fifths of all Members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following Article to follow immediately after Article XI and to be known as Article XI-A, be and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, which shall be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of this State, as herein provided, shall thereby by such adoption be and become a part of the Constitution of this State.

ARTICLE XI-A. LOCAL LEGISLATION.

Section 1. On demand of the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore, or petition bearing the signatures of not less than 20 per cent of the registered voters of said city or county (provided, however, that in any case 10,000 signatures shall be sufficient to complete a petition), the Board of Election Supervisors of said city or county shall provide at the next general or Congressional election, occurring after such demand or petition, for the election of a charter board of eleven registered voters of said city or five registered voters in any such county. Nominations for members for said charter board may be made not less than forty days prior to said election by the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore or the County Commissioners of such county, or not less than twenty days prior to said election, written in their own handwriting (and not by their mark) of not less than 5 per cent of the registered voters of the said City of Baltimore or said county; provided, that in any case two thousand signatures of registered voters shall be sufficient to complete any such nominating petition, and if not more than eleven registered voters of the City of Baltimore or not more than five registered voters in any such county are so nominated their names shall not be printed on the ballot, but if such majority board shall be void, but if such majority board shall be void, then and in that event the eleven nominees of the City of Baltimore or five nominees in the county receiving the largest number of votes shall constitute the charter board, and said charter board, or a majority thereof, shall prepare within six months from the date of said election a charter or form of government for said city or county and present the same to the Mayor of Baltimore or President of the Board of County Commissioners of such county, who shall publish the same in at least two newspapers of general circulation published in said City of Baltimore or county within thirty days after it shall be reported to him. Such charter shall be submitted to the voters of said city or county at the next general or Congressional election after the report of said charter to said Mayor of Baltimore or President of the Board of County Commissioners; and if a majority of the votes cast for and against the adoption of said charter shall be in favor of such adoption, the said charter from and after the thirtieth day from the date of such election shall become the law of said city or county, subject only to the Constitution and Public General Laws of this State, and any Public Local Law inconsistent with the provisions of said charter and former charter of said City of Baltimore or county shall be thereby repealed.

Section 2. The General Assembly at its first session after the adoption of this amendment shall, by Public General Law, provide a grant of powers for such county or counties; which powers thereafter form a charter under the provisions of this Article. Such express powers granted to the counties and the City of Baltimore, as set forth in Article 4, Section 6, Public Local Laws of Maryland, shall not be enlarged or extended by any charter formed under the provisions of this Article, but such powers may be extended, modified, amended or repealed by the General Assembly.

Section 3. Every charter so formed shall provide for an elective legislative body in which shall be vested the law-making power of said city or county. Such legislative body in the City of Baltimore shall be known as the City Council of the City of Baltimore, and in any county shall be known as the County Council of the county. The chief executive officer, shall be known in the City of Baltimore as Mayor of Baltimore, and in any county as the President of the County Council of the county, and all references in the Constitution and laws of this State to the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore or to the County Commissioners of the counties shall be construed to refer to the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore and to the President and County Council herein provided for, whenever such construction would be reasonable. From and after the adoption of a charter by the City of Baltimore, or any county of this State, as hereinbefore provided, the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore or the County Council of the county shall have full power to enact local laws of said city or county, including the power to make or amend Local Laws of said city or county enacted by the General Assembly, upon all matters covered by the express powers granted as above provided; provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive the Mayor of Baltimore or the County Council of any power or authority to enact laws or regulations for any incorporated town, village, or municipality in said city or county, on any matter covered by powers granted to said town, village, or municipality by the Act incorporating it, or any subsequent Act or Acts amendatory thereto. Provided, however, that the charter for the City of Baltimore shall provide that the County Council of the county shall not sit more than one month in each year for the purpose of enacting legislation for such counties during the month of January for that purpose in the charter, and all laws and ordinances so enacted shall be published once a week for three successive weeks in at least one newspaper published in such county, so that the taxpayers and citizens may have notice thereof. This provision shall not apply to Baltimore City. All such local laws enacted by the Mayor of Baltimore and City Council of the City of Baltimore or the County Council of the counties, as hereinbefore provided, shall be subject to the same rules of interpretation as those now applicable to the Public Local Laws of this State, except that in case of any conflict between said Local Law and any Public General Law now or hereafter enacted, the Public General Law shall control.

Section 4. From and after the adoption of a charter under the provisions of this Article, the Mayor of Baltimore or any county of this State, no Public Local Law shall be enacted by the General Assembly for said city or county on any subject covered by the express powers granted as above provided. Any law so drawn as to apply to two or more of the geographical subdivisions of this State shall not be deemed a Local Law, within the meaning of this Act. The term "geographical subdivision" herein used shall be taken to mean the City of Baltimore or any of the counties of this State.

Section 5. Amendments to any charter adopted by the City of Baltimore or by any county of this State, under the provisions of this Article may be proposed by a resolution of the Mayor of Baltimore and the City Council of said City of Baltimore, or the Council of said county, or by petition signed by not less than 20 per cent of the registered voters of said city or county, provided, however, that in any case 10,000 signatures shall be sufficient to complete a petition, and filed with the Mayor of Baltimore or the President of the County Council, and when so proposed shall be submitted to the voters of said city or county at the next general or Congressional election occurring after the passage of said resolution, or the filing of said petition, and if at said election the majority of the votes cast for and against said amendment shall be in favor thereof, said amendment shall be adopted and become a part of the charter of said city or county from and after the thirtieth day after said election. Said amendment shall be published by the Mayor of Baltimore or President of the County Council once a week for five successive weeks prior to said election in at least one newspaper published in said city or county.

Section 6. The power heretofore conferred upon the General Assembly to prescribe the number, composition, powers and duties of the County Commissioners in each county, and the power to make changes in Sections 1 to 6, inclusive, Article XI of this Constitution, when expressly granted as hereinbefore provided, are hereby transferred to the voters of each county and the voters of the City of Baltimore, respectively, provided that said powers so transferred shall be exercised only by the adoption or amendment of a charter as hereinbefore provided; and provided further, that this Article shall not be construed to authorize the exercise of any power in excess of those conferred by the Legislature upon said counties or city as this Article sets forth.

Section 7. The word "Petition," as used in this Article, means one or more sheets written or printed, or partly written and partly printed; "Signature" means the signature of a registered voter, persons so signing are registered voters shall be evidenced by the affidavit of one or more registered voters of the city or county in which said voters so signing are registered, and one affidavit may apply to or cover any number of signatures to such petition. The false signing of a petition, or the signing of a petition under a false name, or the making of any false affidavit in connection with said petition shall be perjury.

Section 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the aforesaid Article hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of this State, submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XVI of the Constitution of this State, and at the said general election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment as directed by the said Fourteenth Article of the Constitution.

Approved April 10th, 1914.

CHAPTER 453.

An Act to propose an amendment to the Constitution of the State of Maryland, by adding a new Section thereto, and to provide for the submission of said Amendment to the qualified voters of this State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland (three-fifths of all Members of each of the two Houses concurring), That the following new Section and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to Article III, title, "Legislative Department" of the Constitution of the State of Maryland, to be known as Section 6, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, said Section shall become a part of Article III of the Constitution of Maryland.

Section 6. The General Assembly of Maryland shall have the power to provide for the suspension of sentence by the Court in criminal cases; (b) for any form of the indeterminate sentence in criminal cases, and (c) for the release upon parole of any prisoner sentenced to imprisonment under sentence for crimes.

Section 2. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That the said foregoing Section, hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution shall be submitted to the legal and qualified voters of Maryland for their adoption or rejection in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XVI of the Constitution of this State, and at the said election the vote on said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said proposed amendment as directed by said Article 14 of the Constitution.

Approved April 10th, 1914.

CHAPTER 513.

An Act to amend the Constitution of Maryland by adding thereto a new Article to be entitled, "Article XVI," providing for the referendum, and to provide for the submission of said amendment to the qualified voters of the State for adoption or rejection.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland (three-fifths of all Members elected to each of the two Houses concurring), That the following new and additional Article, to be known as Article XVI, title, "Referendum," be, and the same is hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of Maryland, and if adopted by the legal and qualified voters thereof, as herein provided, it shall stand as part of the Constitution, to be known and entitled as aforesaid.

ARTICLE XVI. THE REFERENDUM.

Section 1 (a). The people reserve to themselves power known as The Referendum, by petition to have submitted to the registered voters of the State, or part of any Act of the General Assembly, if approved by the Governor, or if passed by the General Assembly over the veto of the Governor, and to provide for the submission of said Act or part of any Act of the General Assembly, to be self-executing; provided that additional legislation in furtherance thereof and not in conflict therewith may be enacted.

Section 2. No law enacted by the General Assembly shall take effect until the first day of June next after the session at which it may be passed, unless it contain a provision that it shall be self-executing, or unless it be an emergency law and necessary for the immediate preservation of the public health or safety, and passed upon a yeas and nays vote supported by three-fifths of all the members of each of the two Houses of the General Assembly; provided, however, that said period of suspension may be extended as provided in Section 3 (b) hereof. If before said first day of June the Governor shall sign with the Secretary of the State a petition to refer to a vote of the people any law or part of a law capable of referendum, as in this Article provided, the same shall be referred by the Secretary of State to such vote, and shall not become a law or take effect until thirty days after its approval by a majority of the electors voting thereon at the next ensuing election held throughout the State for Members of the House of Representatives of the United States. An emergency law shall remain in force notwithstanding such petition, but shall stand repealed thirty days after having been rejected by a majority of the qualified electors voting thereon; provided, however, that no measure creating or abolishing any office, or extending the salary, term or duty of any officer, or granting any franchise or special privilege, or creating any vested right or interest, shall be enacted as an emergency law. No law making any appropriation for maintaining the State Government, or for maintaining or adding any public institution, not exceeding the next previous appropriation for the same purpose, shall be subject to rejection or repeal under this section. The increase in any such appropriation for maintaining or adding any public institution shall only take effect as in the case of other laws, and such increase or any part thereof specified in the petition, may be referred to a vote of the people upon petition.

Section 3 (a). The referendum petition against any Act or part of an Act passed by the General Assembly shall be signed by ten thousand qualified voters of the State of Maryland, of whom not more than half shall be residents of Baltimore City, or of any one county; provided that any and each law for any one county or the City of Baltimore shall be referred by the Secretary of State only to the people of said county or City, or Baltimore, upon a referendum petition of 10 per cent of the qualified voters of said county or City of Baltimore, as the case may be, calculated upon the whole number of votes cast thereon respectively for Governor at the last preceding gubernatorial election.

(b) If more than one-half, but less than the full number of signatures required to complete any referendum petition against any law passed by the General Assembly, be filed with the Secretary of State before the first day of June, the time for the law to take effect, and for filing the remainder of signatures to complete the petition shall be extended to the thirtieth day of the same month with like effect.

Section 4. A petition may consist of several papers, but each paper shall contain the full text of the Act or part of Act petitioned upon; and there shall be attached to each such paper an affidavit of the person procuring the signatures thereon that of the said person's own personal knowledge every signature thereon is genuine and bona fide, and that the signers are registered voters of the State of Maryland, and of the City of Baltimore, or county, as the case may be, as set opposite their names, and no other verification shall be required.

Section 5 (a). The General Assembly shall provide for furnishing the voters of the State the text of all measures to be voted upon by the people; provided, that until otherwise provided by law the same shall be published in the manner prescribed by Article XIV of the Constitution of this State, and the publication of proposed Constitutional Amendments.

(b) All laws referred under the provisions of this Article shall be submitted separately on the ballots to the voters of the people, but if containing more than two hundred words, the full text shall not be printed on the official ballots, but the Secretary of State shall prepare and submit to the voters of each such measure in such form as to present the purpose of said measure clearly and intelligently. The ballot title may be distinct from the legislative title, in any case the legislative title shall be sufficient. Upon each of the ballots, following the ballot title or text, as the case may be, of each such measure, there shall be printed the words "For" and "Against" the measure referred law, as the case may be. The votes cast for and against any such referred law shall be returned to the Governor in the manner prescribed with respect to proposed amendments to the Constitution under Article XIV of this Constitution, and the Governor shall proclaim the result of the election, and, if it shall appear that the majority of the voters of any such measure were cast in favor thereof, the Governor shall by his proclamation declare the same having received a majority of the votes to have been adopted by the people of Maryland, and the laws of the State to take effect thirty days after such election, and in like manner and with like effect the Governor shall proclaim the result of the local election as to the Public Local Laws of the City of Baltimore, or county, as the case may be, of any county or the City of Baltimore.

Section 6. No law or Constitutional Amendment, homing, regulating, prohibiting, or submitting to local option, the manufacture or sale of malt or spirituous liquors, shall be referred or repealed under any Act of the provisions of this Article.

Section 2. And be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That the foregoing Article hereby proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of this State, at the next General Election for Members of the General Assembly to be held in this State, shall be submitted to the legal and qualified voters thereof, for their adoption or rejection in pursuance of the directions contained in Article XIV of the Constitution of this State, and that at such general election the vote upon said proposed amendment to the Constitution shall be by ballot, and upon each ballot there shall be printed the words "For the Constitutional Amendment" and "Against the Constitutional Amendment," as now provided by law, and immediately after said election returns shall be made to the Governor of the vote for and against said amendment as directed by the said Article XIV of the Constitution.

Approved April 10th, 1914.

Homing Instinct of Bees.

In the fortnightly Review Henri Fabre, the naturalist, tells a characteristic story about Darwin and himself. Darwin wished to explain the homing instinct of bees, and he induced Fabre to begin a series of experiments with that purpose in view. A regular plan of campaign was drawn up. Marked bees were placed in a dark box and were carried away from the hive in an opposite direction from that in which they were finally liberated. The box was repeatedly turned about, so that the inmates should lose all sense of direction. Every possible means was taken to render useless any known or conceivable method of obtaining their bearings. The bees were even placed within an induction coil in the effort to confuse them. The long and elaborate series of tests was without value, so far as getting any explanation of the homing power was concerned. In every case from 80 to 40 per cent of the bees found their way home without apparent trouble, no matter how confusing the trip away from home had been made.

Plant Leaves.

It is a fact that, to the casual observer, all trees look pretty much the same, in some respects at least. But if one looks carefully at the twigs of almost any tree, or, still better, at the young shoots of some rapidly growing plant, they are pretty certain to discover that no two leaves occupy the same position.

The fact is, however, that a leaf does not keep always in one position. Everybody knows that they will droop and stand erect again, and that some plants sleep at certain times of the day. A house plant, moreover, grows toward the light, and if the pots are turned about so that the leaves face away from the window, it takes only a day or so for them to assume their old positions.

If now one looks carefully for the joints where this bending is done one can see at once that nearly all the leaves have two.—Exchange.

The Faithful Horse.

I don't know who wrote this toast to the horse, but I'd rather read it than Vest's dog speech: "Here's to that bundle of sentient nerves, with the heart of a woman, the eye of a gazelle, the courage of a gladiator, the docility of a slave, the proud carriage of a king and the blind obedience of a soldier; the companion of the desert plain that turns the moist furrows in the spring in order that all the world may have abundant harvest, that furnishes the sport of kings, that with blazing eye and distended nostril fearlessly leads our greatest generals through carnage and renown, whose blood forms one of the ingredients that go to make the ink in which all history is written and who finally, in black trappings, pulls the humblest of us to the newly sodded threshold of eternity."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

In Sympathy.

The two men had met at a dinner party and were talking in a corner by themselves. "You see that tall woman with the sharp nose and the critical eye?" asked one of them. "Yes," said the other quietly. "Well, I've watched her for quite awhile. She's always got her nose into somebody's business. She's the last woman I'd marry." "Which shows how strangely in sympathy we are," said the other without resentment. "She's the last woman I'd marry."—Exchange.

That Sinking Feeling.

Sometimes a simple phrase will tell more than a volume of description. In such a phrase a soldier describes his sensations on going under fire for the first time. "It was," he says, "as if some one had given me a smack below the chest with the flat of a heavy spade."

POSTMASTER LINCOLN.

What Happened When He Was Called Upon to Square Accounts. On May 7, 1893, says F. F. Brown in "The Druryday Life of Abraham Lincoln," Lincoln was appointed postmaster at New Salem, Ill., by President Jackson. The duties of the position were light, for there was only one mail a week and the remuneration was correspondingly small.

The office was too insignificant to be considered politically, and it was given to the young man because every one liked him and because he was the only man willing to take it who could make out the returns. He was exceedingly pleased with the appointment because it gave him a chance to read every newspaper that was taken in the vicinity. He had never been able to get half the newspapers he wanted, and the office gave him the prospect of a constant feast. Not wishing to be tied to the office, since it yielded him no revenue that would reward him for the confinement, he made a postoffice of his hat. Whenever he went out he put the letters in his hat. When a person who expected a letter met the postmaster he found also the postoffice, and the public official, taking off his hat, looked over and delivered the mail wherever the public might find him. He kept the office until it was discontinued or was removed to Petersburg.

A small balance due the government remained in Lincoln's hands at the discontinuance of the office. Time passed on and he had removed to Springfield and was practicing law, having his place of business in Dr. Henry's office. Meanwhile his struggle with poverty was unabated, and he had often been obliged to borrow money from his friends to purchase the bare necessities. It was at that juncture that a government agent called to make a settlement of old postoffice accounts. The interview took place in the presence of Dr. Henry, who thus described it to Mr. Brown:

"I did not believe he had the money on hand to meet the draft, and I was about to call him aside and offer to lend him the money when he asked the agent to be seated. He went over to his trunk at his boarding house and returned with an old blue sock, in which a quantity of silver and copper coins was tied up. Untying the sock, he poured the contents upon the table and proceeded to count the coins. "The government agent found that the pile contained the exact amount of the draft to a cent and in the identical coins that Mr. Lincoln had received. He never under any circumstances used trust funds."

IT WAS A TOUGH STEAK.

But the Restaurant Man Easily Fixed It When the Kick Came.

It happened in a downtown restaurant. A well-dressed—as he always must be to make a good story—young man ordered a steak. The waitress, rather pretty—which qualification she must possess in writing a story of this kind—filled the order, and the young man started in to devour the feast which had been set before him.

The young man had no sooner started in on the steak than he discovered that he had a kick coming, and as the restaurant proprietor passed he stopped him by saying: "I can't eat this steak; entirely too tough. I wish you would see that I get better meats when I come in here."

"Too bad! That steak looks all right. But let me get you another." And the aforesaid proprietor took the steak, the silverware which had been served with it and departed. He soon returned with a steak which looked exactly like the first one. The young man picked up his knife and started at his second order. "Fine!" he said as his knife cut it apart without the least effort.

The customer was pleased beyond words, and that he enjoyed the steak was evident, for he left only the plate. As the reporter passed out he met the proprietor again, and this is what was said:

"That steak was all right, but the girl made a mistake in not giving him a sharper knife. All I did was to put the same steak on another plate and bring him a sharp knife. You have no idea what a difference a sharp knife makes with a steak from a beef of questionable age."—Columbus Dispatch.

To the College Boy.

When you enter college keep in mind the sound advice that a wise college president has offered to such as you. "Follow the preparatory school rules for the first year," he says. "Keep up the momentum that the school has given you rather than take advantage of your new liberty all at once. Watch the upper class men. See how they have improved or abused the freedom of the college life and the opportunities at the college and then deliberately make up your mind what kind of man you want to be."—Youth's Companion.

Can't Be Done.

"Mrs. Giddy has invited all the members of the sewing circle to a luncheon and matinee party." "Doesn't she know they have been gossiping about her something awful?" "If course she does. That's the reason she's trying to square the circle."—New York World.

Making a Rug "Antique"

How "genuine antique rugs" are manufactured and prepared for European and American markets is told by a writer in the National Geographic Magazine who visited Bagdad.

The shopping-streets seem like tunnels, he writes. They are arched overhead with brick to keep out the heat. Thus they run, like subways, up and down the bazaar quarter. Through those long, stifling, faintly lighted tunnels through the eternal crowd of men, mules and camels.

Often you will see a fine rug lying flat in the filth of a narrow street, ground beneath the tramp of men and beasts, but there is method in this. Foreigners make oriental rugs, bright and new, in Persia and sell them through Bagdad. Since an "old rug" is worth more, wily brokers have hit on this shameful way to make a new rug look old.

Between the Poles.

Although Lord Rayleigh is a noted scientist and a profound scholar, he has a humorous side to his nature, and he once played a neat little joke on a learned friend with whom he had been discussing some deep subjects.

"What is the difference between the north and south poles?" he asked gravely.

His lordship's friend thought he had a new scientific problem to grapple with and brought all the weight of his brain to bear upon the question.

"I really must give it up," he said at last.

"The answer is simple enough," replied Lord Rayleigh with a smile.

The Bull.

The bull is a male ruminant, specifically a bovine. The bull is a historical animal. He has been worshipped in Egypt, thrown in the cattle country, fought in Mexico and Spain and canned in Chicago. The Egyptians called him Aps and built temples to him, but bull worship was not a profitable business, as all the Egyptians who followed the bull are either dust or mummies and have been so for centuries. On the other hand, canning the bull has made a flock of millionaires, so the live ones everywhere have adopted the western idea and pretty generally can the bull. Don't be a bull thrower.—Judge.

District of Columbia.

Maryland in 1788 and Virginia in 1789 gave land comprising 100 square miles. This was organized in 1790-91 as the District of Columbia and became the seat of government in 1800. Afterward the part ceded by Virginia was given back, not being needed. The present District of Columbia, therefore, consists of sixty-four square miles, all on the east bank of the Potomac and all ceded by Maryland.

Serfdom.

Serfdom was abolished in Russia in 1861, in England in 1860, in France not wholly until the French revolution, in Prussia in 1702, in the rest of Germany 1781, in Denmark 1786 and in Brazil 1867-68. There is now practically no legalized serfdom anywhere on earth.

To the Voters of Somerset County:

We, the undersigned, candidates on the Republican ticket of Somerset county, hereby desire to express ourselves on the management of the affairs of Somerset county and to show where we stand on the matters of vital importance to the taxpayers.

We are opposed to the extravagant methods used at present, and we regard same as a waste of public funds. We cite below a few cases to show where some such wastes exist.

First—The office of Supervisor of Assessments is, in our opinion, a useless one and should be abolished, this office costs the taxpayers of Somerset county annually a salary of $800, together with other costs. Among the other costs we noticed in looking over the 1915 levy and the disbursements of the surplus account which accompanied said levy, that a desk had been purchased for the Supervisor of Assessments which cost the taxpayers of this county $41.66; we also noticed that a chair had been purchased for him which cost the taxpayers the sum of $14.37, making a total amount of $56.03. In our opinion, a desk and chair suitable for his purposes could have been purchased for a much less sum than $56.03. We also noticed that this desk and chair was purchased from Mr. S. Frank Dashiell, a very significant point in this case when you take into consideration the fact that Mr. Dashiell stands very high into the ranks of the Democratic party in Somerset county.

Second—The office of County Roads Engineer, in our opinion, is, as managed at present, a useless one and should be abolished, and our county roads should be placed in the hands of some good competent General Road Supervisor who would devote his entire time to the road work. Experience has taught us that our present system of managing the roads is too costly; as an illustration, in the year 1906, which was before our present system went into effect, there was levied for county road purposes the sum of $8,170.34; whereas, in 1915, which was under our present system, there was levied the vast sum of $30,295.10, an increase of $22,124.76 in nine years, notwithstanding the fact that during this whole period the Democratic party had absolute control of the Commissioners office. Mr. Taxpayer this should be an "eye-opener" for you and on the 2nd day of November you should ask yourself the question, how can I remedy such evils, and your answer will be, vote the Republican ticket. Under our present County Roads Engineer system the taxpayers are required to pay the so called engineer a salary of $1500 per year and $200 per year for expenses. The law directs that he be paid a salary not exceeding $1500 per year, and expenses not exceeding $200 per year. The Commissioners could, in their discretion, pay a man a salary of $1000 per year if they so desired. We are informed that the State Roads Commission has employed competent and reliable civil engineers at salaries of $1000 per year. If the office of County Roads Engineer cannot be abolished then we would favor the employing of some competent civil engineer, as required by law, at the lowest possible salary for which a good man could be employed.

Under the present management of the Democratic Machine of Somerset county they have made a record for extravagance. They now have a bonded indebtedness of $86,500, and in addition to this indebtedness they have borrowed money amounting to something over $30,000, and they have done this without consulting the tax-payers.

The Republican party was "turned down and out" when the expenses of Somerset county amounted to about $55,000 and they were censured for being so extravagant and branded as spendthrifts. In 1915 the levy showed that the expenses of Somerset county had reached in round numbers the enormous sum of $100,000, and remember all of this happened under a Democratic administration.

Mr. Taxpayer, where are the improvements to justify the above increase? Ask yourself again, how can I remedy the existing evils, and your answer must be: I will vote the Republican ticket on November 2, 1915.

We pledge ourselves, if elected, to do all within our power to correct the existing evils, to do all within our power to see that the taxpayers get value received for every dollar of their money expended. With these pledges we solicit your suffrage.

Isn't it your experience that young men who have growing bank accounts are more dependable in their work, make more rapid progress and win promotion faster than the men who spend all they earn?

It is an undeniable fact that men who have learned to manage their own financial affairs are better fitted to manage the business affairs for their employers.

Many of her friends came from Salisbury and Berlin to attend the funeral, among whom were: Mrs. Knauss, Mrs. Ringgold, Mrs. Dick, Miss Banham, Miss White and Miss Bertha Smith, from the former place; Misses Mary G. and Minnie W. Jones, from the latter.

Will Name Convention Cities

Chairmen of the Democratic and Republican National Committees have issued calls for meetings in Washington to select cities for the coming National Conventions. The Democratic meeting will be held on the 7th of December, while that of the Republicans will be held on the 14th.

HARRINGTON WINS IN THE COUNTY AND STATE BY 3,500 PLURALITY

Democrats Retain Control Of Senate and House By Reduced Majorities—County Ticket Shot To Pieces—Only One Democrat Elected On It

State Comptroller Emerson C. Harrington, Democrat, has been elected Governor of Maryland over O. E. Weller, Republican, by a plurality of 3,500 votes.

Hugh A. McMullen, the Democratic candidate for Comptroller, defeated Robert F. Duer, his Republican opponent, by a plurality about equally to that of Mr. Harrington.

Albert C. Ritchie, the Democratic nominee for Attorney-General, has swept the State. Returns indicate that he has a plurality over Albert A. Doub, the Republican candidate of nearly 20,000.

Baltimore county furnished the real surprise of the election. The Democratic leaders of the county expected to carry it for Mr. Harrington by at least 1,800. Instead of that Mr. Weller has carried it by 294 votes.

In Somerset county the Democrats were very unfortunate. A Republican landslide wiped out the entire ticket except Gordon E. Milbourne, candidate for the House of Delegates. The result was a complete surprise to some of the Republicans themselves. The official vote for Somerset county follows, and a perusal of the figures will give much information to every voter to consider.

"Maryland Week"—Nov. 16th To 20th

That Maryland is fast becoming recognized throughout the country as an apple producing State is evidenced by the great number of inquiries being received by Prof. T. B. Symons, of the Maryland Agricultural College, who has charge of the "Maryland Week," to be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, in Baltimore, November 16th to 20th, regarding the possibility of sending classes interested in apple culture, from other state institutions and there will be present in Baltimore during the Maryland exhibition representatives from Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia and Delaware.

The belief held by many for years that good apples only were grown in Oregon or Washington State has been proven a myth and at several apple shows in recent years, it has been conclusively proven that apples grown in Maryland and the Virginias have a zest and flavor that is not excelled by any apples on earth.

Until recently the western apple growers have produced a fruit which excelled the eastern product in size and color, but now with improved methods and more careful attention by the orchardists nearby, this condition no longer obtains.

Maryland, with its unexcelled shipping and marketing conditions, its even climate, and soil which is susceptible to intelligent treatment, bids fair to rival all other fruit growing States.

CARROLL HURLEY ASSAULTED BY NEGRO

Schooner's Deck Hand Runs Amuck On Smith's Island

At an early hour Monday morning of last week Carroll Hurley, mate on the oyster boat Emma Florence, was struck on the head by Bailey Jonabe, a negro deck hand, with a spike and seriously injured. Jonabe seems to have run amuck on the boat, hitting another negro, T. L. Brown, over the head with a piece of wood before assaulting Hurley.

Jonabe, a shipped man from Baltimore on the schooner Minnie V., lying in the harbor at Smith's Island, acted queerly Sunday afternoon and a doctor was called to see him by Capt. Charles Middleton, owner of the boat. The doctor not finding anything the matter with him, Captain Middleton told the negro if he did not wish to work he would send him to Crisfield on the mail boat Monday morning.

When Hurley went to the boat Monday morning to put Jonabe on board the mail boat for Crisfield, the negro attacked him. He was overpowered after a stiff fight and tied in a sailboat and taken to Crisfield by Capt. John Evans, where he was given a preliminary hearing before Justice Britton, who committed him to jail to await the outcome of Hurley's injuries.

During the hearing a large number of the island men arrived in Crisfield in gasoline boats, and the news having spread over the town, a crowd gathered and the cry "put him up a pole" was heard on every side. While the crowd had about decided to rush to the local jail and get the negro, Sheriff Sterling, with his deputies, put the negro in his high-powered automobile and started at full speed for Princess Anne and lodged the prisoner in jail here.

Carroll Hurley was taken to the General and Marine Hospital at Crisfield where an operation was performed to relieve the pressure on the brain. When operating, it was found that several of the larger blood vessels had been broken and the young man seriously injured.

Was It Spirit Or Illusion?

By F. A. MITCHEL

There is nothing so strong in nature as the chains that draw two persons together, and nothing better typifies it than two vines that originally could have been broken apart by a child's delicate fingers, each becoming after a lapse of, say, half a century as large as an athlete's biceps and much harder to bend.

The most remarkable case of this kind came under my observation. I will relate the story.

Donald Gregory, when he was too young to remember the fact, became a playmate of a little girl about his own age, Ella Marston. Their parents' places were side by side, and the children, neither having brother or sister, were together all day. Then they went to the same kindergarten and afterward to the same school. Their first and only separation was when Donald went to college. They pined for each other, and he neglected his studies to write her long letters, receiving equally long replies. When the first examinations came on, though a bright fellow, he failed. This ended his college career. He returned to his love and was never again separated from her till half a century later, when death claimed her.

They were married when the groom was nineteen, the bride eighteen. A son was born to them and a daughter. The former lived; the latter died in infancy. Till the son came to manhood he remained with his parents. Then he broke away to engage in business at another location.

Even in their youth they had few intimate associates and after coming to middle age dropped away from anything social. Those who knew them wondered at this, for they were both attractive and popular. Efforts to get them into social undertakings always failed.

Mrs. Gregory died at seventy. It was a year after this that I made the acquaintance of their son, now a man of nearly fifty. Strange it is that with his parents' happy married life before him he never married. When his mother died he persuaded his father to come to live with him. I had made George Gregory's acquaintance some time before this, and when his father appeared on the scene George and I, both bachelors, were intimate, I being at his house frequently.

When I was introduced to his father I saw a handsome old gentleman with a florid complexion and white hair and mustache. It struck me that if I were a woman I would fall in love with him no matter what was his age. George told me of the close relationship between his father and his late mother, and when the latter died he feared his father would lose his reason. But his father seemed to settle down to an acceptance of his fate and in a measure apparently ceased to grieve. His son noticed something about him which he communicated to no one. I discovered it for myself.

One day when, going to George Gregory's house I saw his father putting his night key into the door. He opened it, stepped back as if waiting for some one to enter, then went in himself. The matter made but little impression on me till later I heard the old gentleman talking to himself in the library. At first, thinking that he was reading aloud, I permitted myself to overhear him. I soon became aware that he was talking to some one whom he called "my dear." The two episodes together set me to wondering, and I narrated them to his son, George, who sighed and said:

"So you have noticed it. I have known that of which you have seen evidence ever since father came to live with me. He ever has my mother with him—just how I don't know. Whether he sees her spirit, whether he fancies that it is present with him, whether he hears her replies when he talks to her—all this is a puzzle to me. I have often heard him talking to her as you heard him, and he says the same things to her that he was used to saying while she lived, only they are more endearing. He was always during her life as gallant to her as when they were young lovers, and when he fancies she is with him he will not sit while she stands, will not go through a doorway without waiting till she has gone before him. I have seen him come into the house after having been out of an evening and remove her wraps as tenderly as he ever did while she was with him in the flesh. He had a way of sometimes walking with her hand in hand, and since her death I have often seen him swinging his arm through the empty air as I often saw him do it when I was a boy."

"Do you observe," I asked, "whether after apparently being with her he is more or less gloomy?"

"He is never what we call gloomy, though there is a certain sadness always in his eyes. It seems to me that Providence, in whose sight such lover-like lives as were his and my mother's must be acceptable, has made some physical change in his brain which causes an illusion to comfort him till the day shall come when he will be reunited to her."

"Did it ever occur to you," I asked, "that the strong affection between him and your mother has enabled him to see and commune with her spirit?"

"It has," was the reply, "but I don't know."

Since then the same door has closed behind Donald Gregory that closed behind his wife.

OUR PRIVATE POWER PLANT.

Nature Produced It, and Science Has Never Equaled It.

The most complicated manufacturing plant that ever existed is the human body as controlled under the scientific management of the brain and nervous system. No factory ever boasted a more efficient producer plant for converting fuel into energy. No plant ever had so well designed a pumping system nor one so perfect for the disposal of waste and sewage. Talk of heating and ventilating up to date or inter-department telephone! The best that our modern science can put into our shops is crude indeed as compared with that furnished by the Great Designer. Suppose that you went to a pump manufacturer with the following specifications:

Wanted, a pump with capacity of one-quarter gallon a minute to handle warm salty fluid, to work for seventy years night and day without a shut-down at the rate of seventy strokes per minute. Must be guaranteed to operate for the full period of time without repairs or adjustments, to require no attention; must have automatic control and contain its own motive power and must have a duty per million foot pounds superior to the best triple expansion high duty unit ever made.

Do you think the manufacturer would bid for the job? If he were a timid man he would probably agree with you and tell you to come around next week, meanwhile edging you toward the door before your insanity took a violent form, or if he were not afraid of lunatics he would say, "You poor bug, such a pump as you speak of never existed nor ever will except in the brain of a perpetual motion freak such as I see before me." Which shows how much he knows about it, for both you and he carry just such a pump around with you, and each of you thinks too much of your possession to sell it for any money.—John E. Van Deventer in Engineering Magazine.

ART OF BATHING.

To Get the Right Idea Just Inquire of Any Healthy Boy.

The art of bathing has never been fully understood. It ought to be put on its feet. Some people feel that in order to bathe it is necessary to call in the services of a physician. Others bathe at the slightest provocation—on railroad trains and when they are visiting a family of ten with only one bathroom. Such people would call for a bath anywhere—on a trolley car, on an excursion steamboat or when crossing the desert of Sahara.

Between these two extremes, the bathers and the nonbathers, there lies a vast gulf. If these people could only be brought together by arbitration possibly—what a benefit to society!

Boys are the only ones who have the right idea. No real boy likes to take a bath or to be presented with one on a marble slab. Any healthy boy will sink to any necessary moral level to avoid this. But any boy will go in swimming. In short, if there be about the bath the spirit of adventure, then the boy—whose instincts are natural—will seize the bait. Swimming in April, with the water somewhat above zero, is a joy for him which would be properly resented in a bathroom. If we must bathe indoors therefore the boys ought to be in charge of the proceedings. And if they were all the mean, contemptible bathtubs would be abolished and every house would have a swimming pool. Everybody has a motorcar. Why not a swimming pool?—Life.

Sufficiently Humbled.

Mrs. Mellen did not wish to offend her new cook.

"John," she said to the manservant, "can you find out without asking the cook whether the tinned salmon was all eaten last night? You see, I don't wish to ask her because she may have eaten it, and then she would feel uncomfortable," added the good soul.

"If you please, ma'am," replied the man, "the new cook has eaten the tinned salmon, and if you was to say anything to her you couldn't make her feel any more uncomfortable than she is."—Christian Register.

Both Legs Lifted.

A young officer rather new to his work was drilling a squad of recruits and gave the word of command, "Lift the right leg." One of the soldiers by mistake lifted his left leg, so that it joined closely to the right leg of his neighbor.

"Good gracious," exclaimed the astonished officer, "that fool has lifted both legs!"—Chicago News.

The Real Sufferer.

"So," said the neighbor sympathetically, "your baby suffers from sleeplessness, does he?"

"No," responded the haggard and hollow eyed man; "he doesn't. He seems to enjoy it. I'm the one who suffers."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Yes, She Will.

"I cannot say 'Yes,' Harold, but I shall always be a sis."

"Sister to me? No, you won't."

"Yes, Harold. I accepted your brother last night."—Lehigh Sun.

An Evolution.

"Women are never pugilists," "Maybe not exactly. But I know one who said her husband was a prize. If he was she is now a prizefighter."—Washington Star.

Imitation.

"She had her dressmaker make a gown exactly like one I had."

The Temporary Quarters of a Football Man

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Johnny Hackaway was an athlete and a football enthusiast. He played a match game on the last day in November, in which he carried his team through on his own shoulders and so excited their gratitude that they carried him on their own shoulders. So interested had he been in the coming game that he slept but little the night before from thinking of it and after it was over went home late from talking of it.

It was midnight when Johnny passed a house which was being moved from one side to another and which occupied nearly the entire width of the street. So dead tired and sleepy was he that he was tempted to go no farther, but climb to the front door, effect an entrance and find a resting place for the night. But, having not much farther to go, he trudged on till he reached his home. Feeling for his door key, he remembered that he was in football togs, with no pockets and consequently no key.

Knowing that there was no one inside within sound of the bell, he went back to the house on blocks, but found it locked. He broke a pane of glass, put in his hand and opened the window. Inside he found matches and, scratching one, saw that the house was being moved with some of the furniture left in it. A lamp stood on a table, which he lighted, then went upstairs. On the top floor he found a bed that suited him and, throwing himself on it, was asleep in two minutes.

It was 1 o'clock on Saturday morning when Johnny sank to slumber. When he awoke he heard church bells ringing. He rubbed his eyes and looked out through a window. The surroundings were not what they were when he had gone to bed. There was a church opposite, and there had been only dwellings. Moreover, persons were going into the church with prayer books in their hands.

There was a sound of dainty footsteps on the stairs, and the door was opened. A girl, evidently preoccupied, came in and for a moment didn't notice Johnny. When she did she gave a cry and made for the door. Johnny stopped her.

"Will you kindly tell me what day this is?" he asked.

As soon as the girl could find her voice she told him it was Sunday. Noticing that he was in football costume, she concluded that he was not a regular and became more composed.

"I reckon," he continued, "that I have slept about thirty hours. I entered this house when it was on Hinton street, and now it seems to be somewhere else. How did you get into it?"

"We came in last night after the house was put on the lot. We belong here."

"And slept in it all night?"

"Yes. We didn't need to use this room and didn't come up here."

"Well, I'll be jingled!"

"You're John Hackaway, the great football player, aren't you?"

"I'm Hackaway and I play football. How do you know that?"

"I saw you play in the big game the day before yesterday. You were splendid. I shouted myself hoarse when they carried you off the gridiron on their shoulders. Won't you come down to breakfast? We're late this morning. We didn't get settled very early last night."

"You're very kind. I invited myself to a bed; I won't sponge on you for breakfast."

But the girl had gone to the door and shouted:

"Mother, Mr. Hackaway, the great football player, is up here. I'm going to bring him down to breakfast."

Johnny listened for the reply. It was this:

"Oh, my goodness gracious! I knew that would be the result of her infatuation. Pa, Molly's gone crazy over football. Go up and bring her down. Quick! Maybe she'll jump out the window."

John and the girl laughed, and John proposed that he go downstairs and show himself. So she led the way to the main floor, where a woman was in the kitchen frying griddlecakes. When she saw the football giant she dropped the turner and cried out:

"Oh, dear! Have I gone daft too?"

Molly went into the kitchen, and between her fits of laughing John heard her tell her mother what had happened, adding, "Just think, ma, what an honor—to have such a wonderful man for a guest and not know it!"

"And give him a ride to boot," remarked John.

An introduction to the members of the family followed, and presently they all sat down to breakfast.

"Fine location," remarked John, feeling somewhat embarrassed at breakfasting under such circumstances with strangers.

"We think we'll like it," was the reply.

"Much finer than the one from which you came."

Molly snickered.

John could have eaten all there was on the table, but he contented himself with his share, remembering that he could place it out in a couple of hours with dinner.

The rest of this story occupied several years, or, rather, a lifetime, for John and Molly, John was invited to come again now that they were settled, and he availed himself of the invitation. The old folks are dead, and John and Molly, his wife, occupy the house.

COUNSEL AND CLIENT.

A Lawyer's Right to Defend a Prisoner He Knows to Be Guilty.

Ought an advocate to defend a prisoner whom he believes to be guilty? Mr. Justice Darling in a case in which a solicitor was the plaintiff made some observations on this familiar problem which ought not to go unrecorded. He protested, says the London Globe, against the notion that a lawyer, whether barrister or solicitor, was under an obligation to cease to conduct a case which he realizes to be bad.

"If an advocate in the course of a trial for murder comes to recognize that his client is guilty is he," asked the learned judge, "to say to the court, 'Hang my client'?" Judges have seldom asked about the ethics of advocacy in open court. It was, however, in a considered judgment in the court of exchequer that Baron Bramwell made his famous contribution to the discussion.

"A man's rights," said the baron, "are to be determined by the court, not by his advocate or counsel. It is for want of remembering this that foolish people object to lawyers that they will advocate a case against their own opinions. A client is entitled to say to his counsel: 'I want your advocacy, not your judgment. I prefer that of the court.'" Mr. Justice Darling, in the jargon of the courts, concurs.

Laymen have usually been readier than lawyers to discuss the ethics of advocacy. "What do you think of supporting a cause you know to be bad?" Everybody knows Dr. Johnson's reply when Boswell asked him this question. "Sir, you do not know it to be good or bad till the judge determines it."

Less generally known is Sydney Smith's contribution to the discussion. "Justice is found experimentally to be most effectually promoted by the opposite efforts of practiced and ingenious men presenting to the selection of an impartial judge the best arguments for the establishment or explanation of truth. It becomes, then, under such an arrangement the decided duty of an advocate to use all the arguments in his power to defend the cause he has adopted and to leave the effects of those arguments to the judgment of others." This was said in an assize sermon the famous wit preached at York in 1824.

Verdi and His Admirer.

Verdi was once traveling in the same railway carriage with General Tournon. They got into conversation, which soon turned on the subject of music, and the general, who did not know his companion, expressed enthusiastic preference for that of Italy. "I can hardly go so far with you," replied the other. "For me, art has no frontiers, and I give German music the preference over Italian."

"Indeed, sir," said the general testily, "for my part, I would give all the German operas in the world for one act of 'Rigoletto.'"

"You really must excuse me from following you any further on this ground," replied the composer, blushing a little. "I am Verdi."

The Historical Bluebeard.

Bluebeard was a historical personage whose name was Gilles de Retz. He was nicknamed "Barbe Bleue," from having a beard of a blue black shade. Persuaded by an Italian alchemist that his strength could be restored by bathing in the blood of infants, he had many children entrapped for this hideous purpose into his castle of Chamtoce, on the Loire, the ruins of which are still to be seen. At last the horrible suspicions of the country folk as to what was going on were proved, and the monster was burned at the stake at Nantes in 1440.

The Color of the Eye.

The color of the iris is not uniform in any eye. Some eyes have spots, others stripes, still others blotches of white, green, blue, yellow and black, and the eye takes its color from the predominance of one hue. An eye that is considered gray will often be composed of black and yellow. An eye that is thought to be brown will be very dark red with spots of yellow or blue.

Crossing the Strait.

Talking about funny typographical errors, the Christian Register recalls how once upon a time a clergyman, writing of his travels in that paper, was made to say that he had crossed the straits of Messina "in twelve hours." It should have been "twelve hours."

Sore Throat or Mouth.

You must keep the throat and mouth clean and healthy. Any disease that attacks the canal through which must pass the food we eat, the beverages we drink and the very air we breathe is a serious matter. Bulls and Bears.
The Stock Exchange use of the term "bear" is with reference to the animals pulling down. The bear pulls down prices; so in the other direction the bull tosses them up. Originally the expression was "a bearskin jobber," applied to a person who sold a bearskin before he had caught his bear. The bearskin jobber was a person who sold stocks which he did not own. Of course he was interested by the fact of his sale to have prices come down and schemed to pull them down. In that way he became called simply a bear without reference to the original proverb.—Philadelphia Press.

How To Prevent Croup
It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.

MARYLAND WEEK EXHIBITION NEAR

Annual Event Of Affiliated Agricultural Associations To Be Held At Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore,
November 16-20.

Progressive farmers in every section of the State are now looking forward to the coming of the Maryland Week Exhibition to be held this year at the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, November 16-20. With a view to entering the competition for the wide variety of farm, garden, and home products during this exhibition, local growers of fine fruit, vegetables, grains and table products are already competing in many sections of the State in neighborhood and county fairs modelled after Maryland Week. Throughout the rural districts of Maryland, our folks are coming more and more to realize the value of these local and county exhibits in encouraging the production of a superior quality of farm products and in arousing a pride in what their neighborhood and county can produce. This is especially true where local clubs, granges, or associations are preparing to compete in the Club Exhibit Class at Maryland Week, in which every year we find the keenest competition and liveliest interest. The substantial prizes offered by the Affiliated Associations in charge of the Exhibition make the representation of one's neighborhood or county among the exhibits even more worth while than from the standpoint of pride in being able to hold one's head with the best of them in agricultural production.

"THEY SHOULD BE AT MARYLAND WEEK."
The educational value of the local fairs that precede Maryland Week is of inestimable value to both old and young. In fact, in a number of localities the exhibits of the boys and girls at the end of their club contests has opened the way for their elders to take a hand in the holding of local fairs or exhibits. It is natural then that Maryland Week should be the goal of all progressive Marylanders interested in the advancement of our agricultural interests. Men, women, boys and girls in every country neighborhood in the State ought to have their representatives at the Exhibition. They should know what they can produce both in their own immediate section and in other parts of the State. We ought to have a bright crowd of boys and girls from every county, accompanied by their school teachers and county agricultural and home demonstration agents, attending every day of Maryland Week. The youngsters can learn more about the possibilities of agriculture in Maryland in a day spent at the Exhibition by seeing the best that the country people can produce than they could learn in ten years from textbooks or written accounts. It is a great inspiration to any country boy or girl to go to Baltimore during Maryland Week, there to see the city, which is the goal of so many of our brightest boys and girls, pay tribute to the country at its Fifth Regiment Armory and realize the often repeated saying, "The farmer feeds us all!"

If Maryland Week has lessons for our children, it has its lesson as well for our older ones, who after all are only grown up children. We owe it to ourselves to know more about the agricultural riches of a State that for its variety and excellence in the production of farm and orchard crops stands second to none. We owe it to our boys and girls to take them there, so that they may return home with some understanding of the wonderful opportunities farm life holds for them. We owe it to our neighbors to have them represented in the Club Exhibit Class, unashamed to measure up with the best. We owe it to ourselves as individuals to take to the Exhibition the best we have grown or made on our farms or in our homes. What farm or farm woman is not proud of at least some one crop he or she has grown, canned, or preserved? Is there any better way of getting your children to grow up content with your way of living and satisfied with what you are accomplishing, than by proving to them that father and mother stand well in the doing or producing of some one thing that it takes thought and care to bring about? It is worth your while if for no other reason to visit Baltimore during Maryland Week, keep your eyes open, and discover some one thing or things in the producing of which you feel you could excel. Next year, if not this year, send your exhibits and have the satisfaction of knowing that you are not ashamed to try your best to win.

The full program of Maryland Week ought to be in every farm home in the State, whether you intend to exhibit or not. It will be in yours if you will write to T. B. Symons, College Park, Md., asking him to send you a copy on behalf of the Affiliated Agricultural Associations.

WHY THE FARMER NEEDS RURAL CREDIT

How He Could Secure the Capital Needed For Investment In Farm Property and In Permanent Improvements.

F. B. BOMBERGER,
Maryland Agricultural College
Extension Service.

In the old days when the American farmer produced for a local market and bought in a local market, under conditions determined largely by local needs, when crops were staple and methods of production were standardized, there was little need for extended credit. Each crop paid the way for the next, and store credit was sufficient for his needs. Nowadays this is all changed. The commercial farmer of today produces his crops under conditions that are affected by world-wide influences. He sells in a market that is fixed by national and international conditions and he buys under conditions similarly fixed. Further, the old, careless, slipshod methods of production are no longer efficient. The impoverished land demands more intensive cultivation, drainage, fertilizers, more live stock and more labor. All of these call for more capital; and the question is, where shall he get it?

Why not from the banks? It may be asked. The answer is that our whole banking system has been created and organized to meet the needs of commerce, trade and manufacturing industry, and is not suited to the requirements of the farmer.

To carry on his business effectively the farmer must have two distinct types of credit, neither of which is adequately provided by our present banking system: first, long term credit, by means of which he may secure capital to buy his land or to make permanent improvements; second, short time credit which will supply him with capital for the purchase of seeds, fertilizers, machinery, live stock, labor, etc. He needs long time credit because the returns from one or two or five years' crops cannot be expected to repay capital invested in the form of permanent improvements. He needs short time credits because crops do not mature within the limited credit periods customarily allowed by our commercial banks. The farmers of European countries are provided with two distinct types of credit agencies which are especially designed to meet these needs. The one is the Land Mortgage Association, which enables him to issue and sell bonds, running for long periods of years, bearing a low rate of interest and secured by the value of his land. The other provides a special form of personal credit not limited to thirty, sixty or ninety days or even six months, but extending from six months to three years. These are the Rural Credit Banks which play so important a part in the development of efficiency in European agriculture.

These two types of institutions, in some form, should be placed at the disposal of American agriculture; for until the American farmer is permitted to mobilize his assets and his credit as fully and as freely as does the merchant, the manufacturer or the industrial corporation, his productive capacity must necessarily be limited and the progress of the industry is bound to be retarded.

UNIFORMITY, DESIRABLE IN SELECTING EXHIBITION CORN.

In selecting ten ears for exhibition the first thing to remember is that the sample will be judged as a whole and not in part on the merits of a few exceptionally good ears. Two or three unusually fine ears cannot make up for the deficiency of the rest of the sample. They will bring out more prominently the poor qualities of the other ears and therefore detract from, rather than add to, the appearance of the sample.

Uniformity should be one of the principal considerations in selecting corn for exhibition. Have every ear like every other ear in shape, size, character of kernel, color of cob and in shade of color of the grain. When selecting sample, first pick out in the field while husking or from the wagon or crib, one hundred or more of the best ears to be found. Lay them out on a table or floor side by side, and having in mind all the characters of a good ear, study each carefully and eliminate the poorest ones. Two or three hours can be spent very profitably at this. Next, select two or three of the most ideal ears in the pile, using each as a standard, match them with as many good ears as can be found. Finally, out of these lots, choose the best ten ears that will match.

The ear should be cylindrical, or at least only slightly tapering, with rows running straight from butt to tip. A tapering ear has either less rows on one end than on the other, or the kernels are shorter or narrower on the tip end. In either case, the yield of grain is less than that of a cylindrical ear; besides, in the latter case, there is the additional objection of lack of uniformity in shape of kernel which makes it impossible for the planter to drop them evenly.—Nicholas Schmitts, Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

Electric Time Pieces

Messrs. J. T. Sheldrake and W. W. Charles, of Philadelphia, representing the Western Union Telegraph Company, were in town last Friday taking orders for electric time-clocks. Time pieces were engaged for the Bank of Somerset, the Peoples Bank of Somerset County, the Washington, Hotel, E. I. Brown, W. O. Lankford & Son and Omar A. Jones. The price of rental is $1.00 per month. By this method standard time is furnished to all subscribers.

Civic Club Awards Prizes

For the past two years the Civic Club has offered prizes to the colored people for the greatest improvement in keeping their yards. This year awards were made to Irving Parsons, first prize, $2. Other prizes of $1.00 each went to C. C. Reed, Charlie Johnson and Marion Schofield. Much interest has been shown and it is hoped that these contests will prove a stimulus for next year and that each householder can feel a personal pride in the appearance of his premises.

Cards Of Thanks

Mrs. P. C. Goble wishes to extend her thanks and gratitude to each and every one who has been so very kind to her in help and sympathy during the illness and death of her husband.

We express to our friends and neighbors our sincere appreciation of their sympathy in our sore bereavement. This is truly the saddest hour of our life. No language can adequately express our grief. Our burden is made lighter by the consciousness of the sympathy of our fellow townsmen. This kindness cannot be forgotten. This is one further proof of the generosity of the human race and makes the sorrows of life more easily borne. GEO. W. POWELL AND FAMILY.

Bicycle Riders Take Warning

The following communication was handed us last week, and we have no doubt that the authorities will see that the users of bicycles will use more caution when riding on the state road near town:

The attention of the proper authorities is called to the reckless riding of bicycles on the stone road at the north approach to town. They go at great speed and frequently without lights. One serious accident has already occurred. A young lady was knocked down and severely injured by a rider who hastily fled without stopping to see what damage had been done.

A few days since two ladies, one of whom was lame, were walking on the road just after dark. Though they were at the extreme right of the way and the road was otherwise empty, a bicyclist rushed down on them at a high rate of speed without turning aside an inch. In this case they barely had time to escape. The bicycle carried no light and the rider only rung the bell after too late to give warning of his approach.

Bicycles approach swiftly without noise and when carrying no lights the pedestrians are completely at the mercy of a reckless rider. Many women and children use this road daily and yet have their lives and safety endangered.

Let us hope that the authorities will see that the unlighted scorchers are curbed in their appropriation of the highway.

Monday night of last week Mrs. Albert B. Fitzgerald gave a Halloween party in honor of her son, Gilbert, and her daughter, Louise.

An Incident Of Heredity

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

"Doctor," said Norman Goodfellow to Dr. Theodore Colt, "I am thinking of proposing marriage to a lady in whose family there are traces of insanity. Do you consider me justified in marrying her under the circumstances?"

"Not if the insanity is hereditary. There is a great difference between insanity from a temporary cause and from an organic trouble that may be transmitted from parent to child. I do not consider that any one suffering from an ailment which is hereditary has a right to marry. Your question suggests a story involving a case which came within my professional experience."

"One day a young man named Severance came to consult me as to a case similar to yours. He had recently been married and all had gone happily till one day on returning to his home from business he found his wife lying on the bed indisposed. She seemed drowsy, and, suggesting that she try to get a nap, he took the evening paper to a window and sat down to read."

"Presently he heard her tossing about on the bed and, looking at her from his paper, saw that, though asleep or at least dozing, there was an up-and-down motion about her that suggested the movement of a snake. He had awakened her and asked her if she had not been dreaming, but she said she had not been conscious during her nap and felt much better for it."

"Nevertheless the young husband seemed to me to have been much shocked at what he had seen. Were it not for this I would have concluded that what he had seen was the working of his wife's nerves uncontrolled during slumber. I gave him this cause in order to reassure him, but it did not. However, since I could give him no other comfort, he left me, much dejected."

"Not long after his visit, taking up a newspaper, I saw a notice that he had left his house a few days before and had not been heard from since. The police had been notified, and an alarm had been sent out. Fears were entertained that he had met with foul play, since the day before his disappearance he had drawn a large sum of money from his bank."

"His visit to me, the story he told and his depression led me to suspect that he was suffering from some nervous or mental trouble, and I inclined to the belief that what he had told me about his wife was a creation of a diseased brain. I did not see how I would be justified in making known my suspicions without mentioning the cause, and that I did not care to do."

"Severance never turned up, and no probable cause was ever given for his disappearance. When several years had passed his wife gave him up for dead, believing that he had been murdered for the money he had with him. Four years after his disappearance she married again, and as fate would have it her second husband was a patient of mine. I did not know that he was married, and I was satisfied that I should have been troubled as to what I should do in the matter, for I was undecided what to attribute her first husband's disappearance to."

"Within a few months after my patient's—Hammond's—marriage he came into my office one day with a wild look in his eyes and told me a story similar to the one Severance had told me. He had had a disagreement with his wife, during which she had become very much excited. During the vituperations she had hurled at him her eyes had glittered like those of an angry serpent. Her appearance during the trouble had made such a horrible impression upon him that he was afraid he would lose his mind. He asked me to give him a sedative."

"Here was a worse complication for me than Severance had brought me, for I was not sure whether Severance's experience had been an hallucination occasioned by a disordered brain or had been caused by some peculiar condition in his life. But I dared not tell Hammond this, for it would be sure to make a wreck of him. I had no recourse but to say to him that he must have been suffering from some nervous weakness. Instead of giving him a drug I advised him to go on a trip, but on no account to take his wife with him."

"He took my advice as to the trip, but never returned from it. News of his having fallen over a precipice in Switzerland was sent to her over the ocean, but I have always suspected that he arranged for his transmission himself. One thing confirmed this suspicion; his body was never found."

"Two years after having become a hypothetical double widow the lady in this case died. I confess I was relieved. There was now no further chance of any more of my clients marrying her. Soon after her death I made some investigations as to her case through the physician who attended her. I called on him and gave him the experience of her two husbands as given to me. He accepted a theory I gave him and promised it possible to learn facts that would confirm it."

"He found an aunt of the subject of my story who told him that her sister soon after her marriage had been frightened by a serpent. Six months after this episode the child, who became Mrs. Severance-Hammond, was born. My theory was that the mother's fright at this critical period affected the nature of the child."

HAVE YOU WEAK LUNGS?

Do colds settle on your chest or in your bronchial tubes? Do coughs hang on, or are you subject to throat troubles?

Such troubles should have immediate treatment with the strengthening powers of Scott's Emulsion to guard against consumption which so easily follows.

Scott's Emulsion contains pure cod liver oil which peculiarly strengthens the respiratory tract and improves the quality of the blood; the glycerine in it soothes and heals the tender membranes of the throat.

The Pianist's Speed.

Astonishing statistics have been gathered with reference to the amount of work accomplished by the brain and nerves in piano playing.

A pianist in view of the present state of pianoforte playing has to cultivate the eye to see about 1,500 signs in one minute, the fingers to make about 2,000 movements and the brain to receive and understand separately the 1,500 signs while it issues 2,000 orders. In playing Weber's "Moto Perpetuo" a pianist has to read 4,541 notes in a little under four minutes. This is about nineteen per second, but the eye can receive only about ten consecutive impressions per second, so that it is evident that in very rapid music a player does not see each note singly, but rather sees them in groups, probably a pair or more at one vision. In Chopin's "Etude" in E minor, in the second set, the speed of reading is still greater, since it is necessary to read 3,950 signs in two minutes and a half, which is equivalent to about twenty-six notes per second.—Independent.

Two Doctors.

The famous Dr. John Abernethy, accusing a rich and famous quack, said: "Sir, you are no surgeon. You swindle the public. You deceive your patients. You are totally ignorant and utterly unscrupulous, and yet you live in a palace, ride in a chariot and actually smell of wealth. I, John Abernethy, surgeon of London, an operator, a student, an author, I, who strive to be an honest and conscientious man, must live in a humble abode, must walk my rounds and only by the hardest work do I make a bare living. Why are these things?"

The quack said: "Mr. Abernethy, yonder is London bridge. How many people, think you, cross it in a day?"

The surgeon answered: "I do not know; perhaps a hundred thousand."

The quack responded: "And how many of them are fools? You, Mr. Abernethy, attend the wise men; I attend the fools."

A Premier Who Won't Write.

Count Okuma, though he is the author of books and pamphlets and innumerable magazine and newspaper articles, dictates all his work to a secretary and, so far as is known, has never even written his own signature. The truth of the matter is that he forms the beautiful Chinese characters like a schoolboy, and, since the autographs of the great are highly prized in Japan, many expedients have been successfully tried to get a scrap of his writing. A friend once made an attempt which came near being successful. He pretended to have forgotten how to form a certain Chinese character and asked how it should be written. Count Okuma took up the brush and paper, which had been conveniently placed at his elbow, but the plot failed at the last moment, for he put down the writing material with a smile and traced the character with his finger on the ashes of the hearth.—Carl Crow in World's Work.

Not as She Thought.

Fond Mother—Our Johnny is a great favorite with his teacher. Sympathetic Friend—Is that so? Fond Mother—Yes, indeed. Why, only the other day she told Johnny if there were another boy like him in the class she would feel entitled to demand an increase in salary.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Explained.

"This isn't my suit," said Hawkins to the pawnbroker. "This is a half dozen sizes smaller than mine." "You are mistaken," replied the pawnbroker. "This is your suit, but it has been in soak so long that it has shrunk."

A Dark Hour Friend.

Jimson—Oh, yes; I knew old Simon. He was a good sort. He did a very kind action once for me when the clouds were dark and threatening and the world looked so black. Pimmon—What did he do? Jimson—He lent me an umbrella.—Boston Globe.

Safety First at Sea.

In nautical parlance the phrase "The three L's" means "lead, latitude and lookout," these being the chief three things to be considered in keeping a ship from running aground.

The Next Best Thing to The Pine Forest For Colds Is—

Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey which goes to the very root of cold troubles. It clears the throat and gives relief from that clogged and stuffed feeling. The pines have ever been the friend of man in driving away colds. Moreover, the pine-honey qualities are peculiarly effective in fighting children's colds. Remember that a cold broken at the start greatly removes the possibility of complications. 25c.

DARING BELLE BOYD.

Brilliant and Romantic Career of the Famous War Spy.

Stonewall Jackson's valley campaign was one of the great deeds of history. Not since Napoleon's time have men been so dazzled as they were by that great exploit of his. Yet Stonewall might have gone down the valley in defeat had it not been for a little college girl named Belle Boyd.

The Union general, Shields, was quartered at Miss Boyd's house. He held a council of war there. Miss Boyd bored a hole in the floor of her chamber, which was over Shields' room, and lay there with her ear to it throughout the night. The next morning Stonewall Jackson was in full possession of the plans for a great battle and was able to defeat the Union army.

She kept up her valiant work for the Confederates until the Union officers began to suspect her, and Jackson ordered her to move from her Shenandoah home to Winchester. She had been arrested by the federals and had flitted her way to liberty, for she was a pretty girl despite the libelous photographs of her. In Winchester Jackson conferred upon her a commission as captain in the Confederate army. By this time the whole north had become aware of the services she was rendering the Confederacy, and every officer and private was on the alert to get her. Yet she escaped until 1864, when she was caught on a blockade runner. Her captor lost his heart to her, deserted the navy and married her, and the Prince of Wales, afterward Edward VII., attended the wedding.—New York Times.

The Entrance Hall.

In planning for the entrance hall arrange for plenty of light. Have at least one window of ample size. Do not depend upon the light admitted through a small pane of glass placed in the top of an ugly so-called "mission" door. The entrance hall may be made a very important factor in carrying out the general character of the home, and it needs the light equally with any other room in the house. Another mistake often made is in depriving the entrance of heat. Certainly the impression conveyed by a cold entrance hall in winter is not a pleasing one and does not suggest the spirit of rest that we have laid so much stress upon. Not only this, but in winter weather cold drafts of air are certain to enter the room through the opening of doors and through the cracks around the door. It will mean much to the comfort of the living room if this air has the chill removed from it before entering the general circulation.—Good House.

Reckless Eating.

Dietsicians commenting on modern "fasting" in eating, quote the remark of Seneca, the Roman philosopher, "Man does not die; he kills himself." Originally made to live 1,000 years, man has fallen to an average of only one-third of a century. It has taken 6,000 years, the authorities tell us, to develop a race that will live, by hook or by crook, as long as thirty-three years, which is given as the present day average. The blame is placed upon our disregard of plain honesty in living. We scorn everything natural and surrender to artificial gratifications and indulgence that tend to ruin the natural health of the body. Our discretion cannot be trusted to do the common sense obvious thing. It is pointed out that animals live longer on natural food than on man's mixture. A sick horse turned out to pasture will get well, and if fed on bran, oats and other food prescribed by man he dies.—Exchange.

A Modern Trend.

"Then she doesn't think that two can live as cheaply as one?" "No; her idea is that two ought to live as expensively as five or six."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from headache, dizziness or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help. Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Princess Anne residents desire more convincing proof of their effectiveness than the statement of a Princess Anne citizen who has used them and willingly testifies to their worth?

Mrs. Lena A. Hastings, Princess Anne, Md., says: "For nearly seven years I was afflicted with disordered kidneys and was made miserable by backache. Sometimes I was taken with severe headaches and pains in my loins. Finally, the kidney secretions became disordered. Reading about the cures Doan's Kidney Pills had made, I got this medicine at Omar A. Jones' drug store. The first box cured me of the trouble and toned up my entire system." (Statement given Oct. 14, 1907) Over four years later Mrs. Hastings said: "My former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills still holds good. My cure has been lasting."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Hastings had. Foster-Milburn Co., Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Curious Wish.

I want to be sick! I want to lie in bed and be fussed over and petted and nursed. So far in my life I have had but one disease—health. It sticks out all over me. It runs swiftly through me. It yanks me up in the morning. It tucks me up in bed at night and shoves me off into unexcited sleep not even to dream. It stands by my chair at meals and gives me an appetite for just the right food in just the right quantities.

I want symptoms. I want to be put to bed and petted. I want to come back to convalescence with brews and potions and soft cool fingers and dark rooms and sweet flowers to beguile me. I want to be sick!—H. S. Haskins in Smart Set.

The Other Way Round.

Mrs. Sourpuss—When I gave you that solemn warning against marrying I said that some day you would regret it. That one will come, mark my words!

Mrs. Newed—The time has come. Mrs. Sourpuss (gleefully)—I thought so. Then you regret your marriage?

Mrs. Newed—Oh, no! I regret the warning you gave me. It kept me from marrying for nearly a year.—Pittsburgh Press.

The Poet's Lighting.

Samuel Rogers gave a dinner and had the room decorated with candles placed high up in order to show off the pictures, says T. P.'s London Weekly. At dinner he asked Sydney Smith how he liked the plan. "Not at all," he replied. "Above there is a blaze of light and below nothing but darkness and gnashing of teeth."

Deduction.

"How can you tell that the conductor is married?" gasped the diminutive man.

"Didn't you hear the way that woman roared him and he never even batted an eyelash?" retorted the great detective.—Buffalo Express.

Siam.

The name "Siam" is supposed by some pretty good authorities to be derived from a Malay word, "sajam," brown. Both Siamese and Shans call themselves "Thai"—that is, "the free."

Presence of Mind.

Young Arthur, the pride of the family, had been attending school all of six weeks, and his devoted parent thought it was high time he should find out how things were running. So he asked one afternoon:

"And what did my little son learn about this morning?"

"Oh, a mouse," Miss Wilcox told us all about mouses."

"That's the boy. Now, how do you spell mouse?"

"It was then that Arthur gave promise of being an artful dodger. He paused meditatively for a moment then said:

"Father, I guess I was wrong. It wasn't a mouse teacher was telling us about; it was a rat."—Harper's Magazine.

Couldn't Blame Them.

Papa had a grouch, and an atmosphere of deep gloom settled over the family dinner table. Even little Bobby felt that something was wrong, but he had to talk or burst, and he preferred to talk.

"Daddy," he asked, "why did they throw the tea overboard in Boston harbor?"

Daddy twirled the spoon in his cup while he thought up this mean thing to say: "If it was anything like this stuff they certainly had a mighty good excuse for throwing it overboard."

Having got this remark off his chest, the old man felt so good that he actually smiled, and before he knew it his grouch was gone.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Keen Observer.

"Pa," said Georgie, "is it true that George Washington never told a lie?"

"I guess so, my son. Why?"

"I was just thinkin'," said Georgie, who was a keen observer, "that if that was true Martha must have always gone along whenever he went out anywhere."—Exchange.

Wedding Vows.

Patience—So he never took any marriage vows?

Patrice—Oh, yes, he did: "But I thought he was still a bachelor."

"He is, but he vowed he'd never get married."—Yonkers Statesman.

Saunterers.

A "saunterer" in the old days was one who had made a pilgrimage to the Sainte Terre, the Holy Land. The connection between the word and place is clear.

SEED BED FOR WINTER WHEAT

Plowing is of Vital Concern For Soil Preparation.

Winter wheat, if it is to get a good start and keep it, demands a thoughtfully prepared seed bed, says E. V. Laughlin in the Rural New Yorker. Not only must the fall growth be considered, but in addition the long season of winter idleness, interspersed frequently by snows and dry freezes, followed in all probability by destructive spring thaws and floods, must, as well, be forecast and prepared for. Plowing, the feature naturally considered first, is of vital concern in wheat raising, and in connection with subsequent cultivation processes largely determines the size of the yield. Unless this initial process is properly performed all subsequent working of the land is useless, for the results are foredoomed to end in failure.

How deep should wheat land be plowed? Experienced farmers generally consider that five inches is just about right, and expert observations since have verified their conclusions. Wheat is rather a shallow feeder, and this depth gives ample room for the roots to establish themselves in the soil. A greater depth than this is not only unnecessary, but if the winter following proves snowless and extremely cold, it is apt to produce excessive heaving of the soil—the prime cause of the "freezing out" so destructive of wheat during dry winters. In addition to this deep plowing turns the poorer under soil to the surface and furnishes a less efficient germinating bed.

Every inch of soil intended for wheat must be turned over and broken—that is, if a good crop is desired—for wheat will not root well in a skin of soil, especially if that skin lies over hard, unplowed ground. The writer has known good wheat lands that have had their yields greatly reduced through haste and carelessness in plowing. Those guilty of such negligence are often so through erroneously reasoning that, inasmuch as wheat is a shallow rooted plant, "cut and cover" methods do not matter very much—an error always apparent when the crop is harvested. Subsequent harrowing and disking will not undo the damage, though it may hide the cheat until revealed by the stunted results of the following summer.

After the ground is plowed it will need to be worked into a finely pulverized condition by harrowing and disking. It will need also to be firmed and pressed until all air spaces and pockets are filled in. Wheat does not germinate in a coarse, cloddy soil and grows very slowly when it does germinate. In a soil garden-like in its texture germination takes place quite readily, even though there is a scarcity of moisture. The roots establish themselves firmly, reaching down and out in a durable cluster well calculated to withstand the rigors of the coming winter.

Cornstalk Cutter.

Some farmers plow under the stalks after they have been broken down by a harrow or a drag. Others prefer to cut, pile and burn them, especially where insects are bad. Stalk cutters have been in use for years in this country, though their use has been limited because of the large acreages put into crop in the short space of time available. The cylinder on which the blades are mounted is lowered into contact with the ground when the machine is pulled into a stalk field, rolling along as the cutter is pulled. The stalks are straightened by a guide rod that drags on both sides of the row ahead of the cutting cylinder, so that practically every stalk is cut into even lengths and easily put under ground when plowed.—Farming Business.

MOLTING PERIOD OF FOWLS

The New York State College of Agriculture has made some interesting findings regarding the molting period of fowls. These may be summarized as follows:

The hen feathers more quickly in those areas which protect the vital parts.

From the incubator to the laying period chicks experience at least four moltings, either partially or completely.

Hens frequently lay during the summer while partially molting, but seldom during the general molting.

Young hens molt more quickly than older ones.

Hens molting very late molt in less time than those molting earlier.

Hens molting very late give a higher yearly production than those molting earlier.

Hens lose in weight while molting. Broodiness appears to retard molting.

Hens molting early resume production more quickly after molting than those molting later.

Hens molting early lay more eggs during early winter than hens molting late.

To Appeal Somerset Oyster Cases

State's Attorney Gordon Tull, filed in the Circuit Court for Somerset County last Friday an order for an appeal to the Court of Appeals in each of the 38 cases involving the condemnation of oyster ground situated within the waters of Somerset county and the assessment of damages to the lessees of each lot under the provisions of the Shepherd bill. The damages assessed by a jury against the State amounted to $257,975.

The filing of the orders for an appeal has caused surprise and speculation in this county, and no one seems to be able to say on what ground the action is to be taken. State's Attorney Tull states that he was directed on Thursday over the telephone by Attorney-General Poe to file the orders, and that he knows nothing more about the matter.

During the trials no demurrer was filed to the pleadings and no exceptions taken to the testimony or the prayers granted by the court in any of the cases. Several attorneys have expressed the opinion that as no exceptions were noted there are no grounds upon which an appeal could be asked.

A Wonderful Antiseptic

Germs and infection aggravate ailments and retard healing. Stop that infection at once. Kill the germs and get rid of the poisons. For this purpose a single application of Sloan's Liniment not only kills the pain but destroys the germs. This neutralizes infection and gives nature assistance by overcoming congestion and gives a chance for the free and normal flow of the blood. Sloan's liniment is an emergency doctor and should be kept constantly on hand, 25c., 50c. The $1.00 size contains six times as much as the 25c.

"HENPECKED HENRY"

Coming To The Auditorium Next Saturday Night

The type of henpecked husband presented in Halton Powell's famous musical comedy "Henpecked Henry" which will be seen at the Auditorium, Princess Anne, next Saturday night, is absolutely different from the accepted idea of a stage "Barnaby." The character is a creation and unlike any other ever presented heretofore. It is a revelation in musical comedy characterization.

"Henry" is henpecked and desperately afraid of his wife, but he never allows her to know it. Nine out of every ten husbands will appreciate "Henry," sympathize with him and secretly acknowledge in their own hearts that he is a replica of themselves. "Henpecked Henry" is drawn true to life, and at the same time is the funniest character ever presented upon the American stage.

The musical numbers are augmented by a chorus of pretty girls who wear the most gorgeous costumes ever used with a one night stand production.

$50,000 Fire At Seaford

A fire that started in the main building of the Seaford Planing Mill, owned by William F. Day, of Salisbury, threatened the centre of the manufacturing district and town of Seaford, Del., last Saturday night for nearly three hours. Delayed by crowds of rural shoppers in the streets, the fire department arrived after the fire had gained a considerable headway. Through efforts of a bucket brigade of several hundred persons and local firemen, the flames were confined to the mill, which was destroyed, at a loss estimated at $50,000, partly covered by insurance. The buildings threatened, which were finally saved, were the R. S. & G. Shirt Company, L. W. Hurley's lumber mill, the Longfellow Manufacturing Company, the Seaford Machine Works and the Sussex Hotel.

Distress In The Stomach

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padgham, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and annoyances ceased in a short time." Obtainable everywhere.

Strindberg and Magic.

Georges Brandes, writing in Vanity Fair about August Strindberg, declares that the famous Swedish writer's belief in magic was deep rooted and cites the following conversation in proof.

Strindberg once said to Brandes:

"You have an enemy. A newspaper enemy. I want to do something for you. Let me kill your enemy."

"You're very kind. But I should prefer not."

"But no one would know about it."

"So all criminals think. Besides, don't you feel it would be rather unjust to kill a man on account of an unkind newspaper article?"

"Well, let's not kill him. We'll simply blind him."

"I still have my doubts. However, how would you go about it?"

"If you will give me the man's photograph I will, with my magic, blind him by driving a needle through his eyes."

"In that case you could easily deprive me of my eyesight, too, if you wished?"

"Hardly. It must be done with hatred."

"Granted. But if a man who hates me tears my picture into pieces, will I fall to the ground in bleeding bits?"

This remark seemed to put him out, and he did not answer me.

The Too Good Man

His Kindness Is Always Repelled.

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

I've figured it up with slate and pencil, and I've chalked it down and added it up and subtracted it and multiplied it on the barn door, but it always comes out the same—the too good man has no place in this world. He is a sort of cross between a burdock and a sundowner—not ornamental enough for wear nor good enough eating for cows.

Coming up from Red Bank the other day, I followed an old man into the passenger coach. I had noticed him on the platform, and I recognized him as belonging to the species I have named.

The train had scarcely begun to move when my too good man, who had a rear seat, rose up and announced: "Don't nobody be skeered, now. This hain't no collision. It's just like they allus move off. I've rid on 'em more'n a dozen times, and I'll tell you when to jump off."

Everybody looked at him, while some deluded him with smiles meant to be encouraging. He stowed away his satchel and removed an old slouch hat he had been wearing.

There was a woman sitting alone a few seats down the aisle. She had an umbrella, a bundle secured with a shawl strap and two or three parcels on the seat, and as Uncle Jerry passed down the aisle he stopped before her and cheerfully observed:

"Face kinder familiar to me, but I can't remember your name. Never been much of a hand at remembering names, anyhow. Husband flew around and helped ye to git ready, I suppose? Leave the children all right? Been lots o' measles around this year. Didn't leave the outside cellar door open, did ye?"

"I don't know ye," she said as she looked up.

"What! Hain't ye Hanner Jones of Jones' Crossroads?"

"No, sir."

"Waal, I s'wore! I'd bet a two-year-old steer agin a cider bar! that ye was."

The next one he accosted was a man fully as old as himself whose crown was bald and who wore spectacles. He was reading a letter, which he had taken from a corn colored envelope, when Uncle Jerry gave him a playful poke in the ribs and called out:

"Lands, you look just like my brother Bill across the back and head. Goin' somewhere, I s'pose."

"Who did that?" testily exclaimed the old man as he looked up.

"I kinder poked ye, but it hain't nuthin' to git mad at," replied Uncle Jerry. "Folks all well at home, I hope. How'd yer taters keep last winter? Hear any demand fur turnips lately?"

"I want you to stop, I say!" yelled the old man as he waved his arms around.

"Then I will. If ye are so techy as all that I don't want nuthin' to do with ye. Lucky that ye hain't goin' to run fur supervisor in my town. You wouldn't git a blamed vote. Howdy do, naybur?"

This last remark was addressed to a rather savage looking man with a weed on his hat who was reading a magazine.

"I warn you to go on," said the man. "I'm wicked. I'm tuff. I'll hurt ye."

"By squash, but what a feller ye be! Haul right off and plunk me 'cause I want to be friendly, eh?"

He seemed to be a bit discouraged for a moment, but presently his eye caught the figures of two females at the far end of the car, and he edged along down to see if anything was wanted in his line. The two were mother and daughter, and the latter didn't look well.

"Did she fall down the cellar stairs or pitch off the haymow?" kindly inquired Uncle Jerry as he sat down on the rail of the seat.

"Are ye speakin' of me darter?" demanded the mother.

"Zactly. Doesn't look just right for this time of the year. If I'd only thought I'd brung along a bunch o' mayweed and told ye how to make tea of it. Beats all creation how mayweed takes the kinks out of the system. She ain't in luv, is she?"

"Sir!"

"Naybur o' mine had a gal about her age who began to ravel out and fade away. They put horseradish drafts to her feet, mustard plasters to her neck and dosed her with catnip, mayweed and sage tea, but she continued to fade off and fade in the wash and finally died. When too late they discovered she had all along bin in luv with Bill Hawes, my hired man, who was so gaul durned bashful that he dassn't say a word about it. Better begin to hunt around the grass and see if some-thin' of that sort ain't troublin' her."

"You old critter, go away from here with yer blarney or I'll be the death of ye!" shouted the mother, and as he jumped back she pulled the girl out into the aisle beside her and waved her umbrella in a threatening manner.

"W-what's the rumpus now?" gasped Uncle Jerry in great astonishment.

"If ye don't go I'll call the police!"

"Waal, by gum, if I was to tell this to Lucy when I git home she'd say I fell asleep and had the nightmare. Don't none o' ye seem to want to be sympathized with. I'll go. I'll git right away, and if I had a hull sack of dried catnip and two dozen red peppers here I'd let the whole caboodle of ye suffer. Waal, I just won't say another word. I'm dished if I dew."

An Improvised Boat

By JOHN TURNLEE

During the war between the states the singular methods used by prisoners of war for escape sound very gauzy today, fifty years after they occurred. But when one considers the number of men under arms, then figures the proportionate number of prisoners and remembers that one in fifty is not a large proportion of prisoners who made attempts to escape, he will see that quite a little army made the venture. For example, suppose there were 100,000 prisoners taken during the war, 2,000 men tried to escape.

Among the curious ventures made by Union prisoners in the south between 1861 and 1865 was that of Charles Dorrance, a private in the Union army. Dorrance was wounded during the operations around Vicksburg and taken to a house on a small plantation, where he was nursed by a young southern girl.

Every one knows how conducive to love is nursing. Mabel Owen captured her patient without any trouble, and he captured her the first time she saw him. She was a country girl, and Charlie was a city boy, with a clear, honest eye and a pleasant smile. It was not to be wondered that she surrendered on sight.

Had the captive of Cupid rejoined his command as soon as he was well enough to do so he would probably not have been made a captive of Mars. He dallied, and a troop of Confederate cavalry came along and took him to the camp of an infantry brigade on the bank of the Mississippi river. Mabel, on seeing her lover taken away from her, was disconsolate. When he bid her goodbye, moved by the strongest impulse in humanity, love, he whispered in her ear:

"Be on the lookout for me, for I'll come back to you if I have to come in my coffin."

The day Dorrance was taken to the Confederate camp two deserters were tried by court martial and sentenced to be shot. A carpenter was at once set to work to make the coffins. He was doing the job in sight of the guard tent where Charlie was confined. Charlie noticed that he was making slow progress and heard an officer berating him, saying that if he didn't work faster he wouldn't get the job done in time for the execution, which was appointed for half an hour after reveille the next morning. Charlie told the officer that he knew all about making coffins—which was false—and would help if permitted. The officer agreed, and Charlie went to work.

One of the coffins was a very large one and the other a very small one. Charlie worked on the large one. He did not finish it till long after dark and was permitted to go on, a sentinel being placed over him to see that he remained in camp.

It was about an hour after taps, and the command was asleep, all except the chain of sentinels surrounding the camp, and so was the guard detailed to watch the prisoners. There was a way open to Charlie—the river. Unfortunately he couldn't swim and had no boat. But Charlie conceived an idea. Boring holes in the upper edges of the coffin, he drove pins in the holes, then roughly shaped a couple of four inch planks into a pair of oars.

The pins were the right distance apart for rowlocks. The blades of the oars were the right thickness, but the rest was rather thin.

He was working within a few yards of the river, and, putting the oars in the coffin, he carried it to the water, launched it, got in, and the friendly current carried him out into and down the river. As soon as he had gone far enough from shore he took up his oars, thereby steadying his improvised boat, which was topkay.

Charlie had been taken up the river some distance above the plantation where he had been nursed and floated back to it. He kept awake till morning; then, being young and the young requiring sleep, he lay flat on his back and settled to slumber.

Mabel Owen arose early that morning, got the breakfast for the family and went out to mourn for her lost lover. She was sitting on a stump on the bank of the river when, looking northward, she saw something like a boat in the distance. As it approached it did not show the curved outline of a skiff. It was rather a parallelogram with bulged sides, at an angle. When it came near enough to be distinguished she saw that it was a coffin with a body in it.

Her first thought was that the ever changing Mississippi had washed into a graveyard and let out a corpse. But she couldn't understand why it had no lid. The gruesome boat came on with the current till it floated directly under the bank where Mabel sat. A recognition of his lover and a remembrance of his promise to come back to her if he had to come in his coffin came to her simultaneously, and she gave a shriek sufficient to raise the dead.

It certainly raised the living, for it awakened Charlie, who opened his eyes and saw his girl bending over the bank directly above him. He sat up, grasped the oars, turned his boat to shore, and in a few minutes the lovers were clasped in each other's arms.

Charlie didn't stay long with her, however. He rejoined his command, but after the war returned for his sweetheart.

There is no record as to how the big deserter got on without a coffin.

Where Pigs Climb Trees.

Presumably the walrus and the carpenter never did settle the discussion as to whether pigs had wings, and there are persons who seriously think it was a foolish theme for an argument.

And yet is it any stranger than the undisputed fact that in Morocco pigs climb trees in search of nuts—not only pigs, but goats too? The puzzle is not in the pigs and the goats, however. They are of the common variety that we see in the back lots in our own communities. It is the tree that is strange. It is called the argan nut tree and grows near Agadir. Usually it shoots out from a steep hillside. The trunk is broad and flat and almost horizontal, and so are the main branches, forming ample and solid foothold for any animal which may be tempted by the olive shaped nuts growing within easy reach of the main branches.—New York Sun.

Recovered Manuscripts.

The Magna Charta manuscript is not the only one that was found by accident. The "Diary of John Evelyn" was found by William Upcott among the waste paper in the lumber room at Wotton, while the tutor of the Marquis de Bonville when playing tennis found that the drum of his racket was formed of some parchment upon which was written a fragment of the lost "Second Decade" of Livy.

One of the oldest fragments of Anglo-Saxon poetry, "The Fight at Finnsburg," was found pasted inside the covers of a book of homilies in Lambeth library, and twelve volumes of the manuscript journal of the house of lords were found in the Walworth road in a cheesemonger's shop about to be used as wrapping paper for butter and lard.

The Monkey's Trick.

The curator of the New York zoo was praising the intelligence of monkeys.

"A Philadelphia man," he said, "was hurrying out Powelton avenue one afternoon when all of a sudden an organ grinder's little monkey dropped dead. The poor grinder's grief was pitiful. The Philadelphia man, touched, gave him a half dollar and hastened away. An hour later, returning through Market street, he saw the same organ grinder, and just as he passed the monkey again dropped dead, and the grinder's grief was even more pitiful than before. The Philadelphia man gave a loud laugh. The grinder, recognizing him, also laughed, but made no motion to return the half dollar."

Great Age of Halley's Comet.

While Halley's comet has been identified as a member of our system for over 2,000 years, certain characteristics of its orbit lead us to believe that it has been with us at least ten or a hundred times as long as that. According to all accounts, it was a magnificent object at the time of the Norman conquest in 1066. Its head was equal to the full moon in size, and its tail increased to a wonderful length.—Century.

Encouragement.

He was very bashful, but she liked him and was willing to encourage him, and she saw her opportunity when he said:

"That's a beautiful dog you have there, Miss Ethel. Is he affectionate?"

"Is he?" she answered archly. "Here, Bruno! Here, good dog! Come and show Charlie Smith how to kiss me!"—Woman's Home Companion.

An Artist's Criticism.

Falguere, the sculptor, told a capital story of Henner, the great artist, who although he lived in Paris all his life, never lost his Alsatian peasant accent or his country manners. But Henner was a very keen critic and had a clever way of showing his dislike of wordy enthusiasm. Falguere, whose talent as a sculptor is known all the world over, was very fond of painting, but he did not paint particularly well. One day Henner was in his studio, and Falguere showed him some of his pictures.

"What do you think of this one?" asked Falguere.

"Superb!" said Henner, with his Alsatian accent. "Marvellous!"

"And this one?"

"Brodituous!"

"And this one?"

"Suplime!"

Then the old man picked up a little bust which his friend had just finished.

"Ah!" he said. "Now, dat's good!"

"I never painted after that," said Falguere.

Wellington's Coolness.

The Duke of Wellington was one day sitting at his library table when the door opened and without any announcement in stalked a figure of singularly ill omen.

"Who are you?" asked the duke in his short and dry manner, looking up without the slightest change of countenance upon the intruder.

"I am Apollyon. I am sent here to kill you."

"Kill me? Very odd."

"I am Apollyon and must put you to death."

"Bilged to do it today?"

"I am not told the day or the hour, but I must do my mission."

"Very inconvenient; very busy; great many letters to write. Call again or write me word. I'll be ready for you."

The duke then went on with his correspondence. The maniac, appalled probably by the stern, immovable old gentleman, backed out of the room and in half an hour was in an asylum.

Barcelona's Leather.

In the Barcelona district of Spain alone there are from 10,000 to 12,000 tanned and finished sheepskins produced daily and probably as many goatskins. The sheepskins in particular find their way into the shoe trade as well as the goatskins. Both kinds, converted into morocco leather, the goatskin being the genuine article and the sheepskin the imitation, are used extensively in the bookbinding trade.

When Turtles Were Big.

Of the turtles it may be said that they represent the most ancient type of all vertebrates, resembling closely as they do the reptiles of their kind which existed so far back as the mesozoic era. There were sea turtles during that epoch which measured twenty feet in spread of flippers, while some tertiary turtles were not less big in body, measuring twelve feet from head to tail.

I like it better for children than any other cough medicine because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.

Age of Granite.

It used to be thought that granite was the oldest of all rocks and that it formed the globe's first crust. Now, however, geologists believe that granite may be of any age or epoch. The granites found in Germany and the Vosges mountains of France date from one period of the world's history, those found in the British Isles from an entirely different period and those found in the United States from still other periods. Enormous pressure, combined with heat and water, must have been necessary to produce granite. Some scientists declare that the granites in the highlands of Scotland must have been formed when 60,000 feet of overlying rocks were piled above them and that those of Cornwall required 40,000 feet of rock pressure. In other localities it is estimated that the pressures under which granite consolidated must have been equal to that of an overlying mass of rock nine miles in thickness.—New York American.

Investment and Speculation.

When any one is buying a coat or a fishing rod or a rose tree or laying down a cellar or setting up a library either he knows what he wants, where to get it and what to pay for it or else he takes earnest counsel with his friends and with the most trustworthy professional advisers that he can find and uses all the wits that he and others can bring to bear on the subject in order to make sure that his purchase is prudently conducted. He attends sales, rummages in shops and discusses the matter in his club until he and it are voted a nuisance. If only half as much time and trouble were devoted to the careful selection of investments there would be fewer bad companies, unscrupulous promoters and ornamental directors, the world would be very much richer, and its riches would show less tendency to gravitate into questionable hands.—Cornhill Magazine.

DUTCH BULBS FOR THE FARM HOME

Growing Them Successfully Out Of Doors.

B. W. ANSPON,
Maryland Agricultural College.

Hyacinths, tulips and narcissi can be grown in all parts of the State where the temperature drops low enough to freeze the soil for several weeks during the winter and are an addition to the attractiveness of any farm home. Although we generally find them planted in beds or boards on the lawn, better effects can be secured where they are allowed to become naturalized among the shrubbery or where they can remain permanently. Secure your bulbs now. The leading seed houses show attractive bulb catalogs giving descriptions and cultural directions for the same. Bulbs may be planted any time during the fall, provided the ground is not frozen. In this State, the latter part of October is a good time for planting. Since we generally plant bulbs in beds that are occupied by annuals, it will be necessary to wait until after the growth of such plants have been checked by frost. These should be removed and the bulbs planted. Any well-drained, light, loamy soil will do for bulbs, but soil that is sandy will give better results than one which is composed of clay. In heavy soils it is advisable to place a layer of sand under the bulbs; in very heavy soils it is best to surround the bulbs with sand to insure drainage. Although rich soils gives best results, fresh manure should never come in contact with the bulbs where the soil does need fertilizer at time of planting add only well-rotted manure or compost. Dig up the soil to a depth of 8 to 10 inches and prepare it thoroughly. Rake the bed so as to leave it in a rounded shape so as to shed water.

Tulips should be planted 4 inches deep, while hyacinths and narcissi should be planted 6 inches deep. Be sure to measure to the top of the bulb. In order to secure uniformity in time of blooming, it will be necessary to have bulbs of the same size and to plant them at a uniform depth. After the ground has become frozen, cover over the bed or border with several inches of straw manure. This should be removed in the spring when danger of severe freezing is over.

COLCHICUM AUTUMNALE.
(Fall Crocus.)

A bulb of unusual interest for the amateur is the Colchicum. This bulb produces flowers in the living room without the aid of soil or water to bring about its growth. The bulb can be placed on a shelf in the room where it will come into bloom. It produces its flowers in the fall, outdoors, during the early winter, inside. As is shown in the accompanying illustration, the flowers are produced without leaves. The bulb produces its leaves in the spring. This bulb may be purchased from any reliable seed store.

MOVABLE SCHOOLS FOR MARYLAND NEIGHBORHOODS.

Plans are now being made by the Extension Service, in co-operation with the Farmers' Institute Department of the Maryland Agricultural College to continue the work inaugurated last year, of holding Movable Schools or Neighborhood Short Courses in Agriculture and Home Economics, in different sections of the State during the winter months.

These courses were a great success last year. They are not in the nature of an Institute, but supplement this class of instruction. Short courses will be conducted for four days at any given place. They are designed to furnish to the farmers and farmers' wives, and particularly the young men and women in the farm homes, an opportunity to secure, through a series of complete and regular lectures, and practical demonstrations, information in a given phase of farming in which the individual or community is especially interested. On account of limited funds and men and women available for the work only a small number of these Neighborhood Courses can be conducted this year. Every effort will be made to make these practical and useful to the community. For this reason courses can only be held in those places where the people are deeply interested, and are willing to put time and energy behind them so as to make them a success from every standpoint.

Local communities interested in these Neighborhood Short Courses should communicate with the Extension Service, Maryland Agricultural College, College Park, Maryland.

USE THE CHEAPER CUTS OF MEAT

How the Careful Housekeeper May Reduce the Cost Of the Family Food Supply.

FLORENCE J. HUNT,
Extension Service.

How can I lower the cost of the family food supply is a question constantly before every housekeeper. To find the answer look over your month's bills for food. Is not the meat bill usually one of the largest. In her desire to find a remedy, the housewife decides to try the cuts of meat which retail at a low price. Often she fails to produce a palatable dish and goes back discouraged to the use of well known and easily prepared tender steaks, chops and roasts.

Why don't the cheaper cuts taste as good? Although they are just as nutritious, unless properly handled these cuts are usually lacking in flavor, the long, coarse fibers, and the large amount of connective tissue which is often called "gristle" making them less palatable.

To give these cuts flavor, they should be cooked with vegetables and carefully seasoned. Try doing this method and these cuts will soon become as much a favorite as the tender steak.

From such cuts as the lower round, the tail pieces of the porterhouse steaks, and even plate meat, you can fashion delicious combinations as: Salisbury Steak, Mock Duck with dressing, and garnish of vegetables, cannon of beef or beef loaf with tomato sauce.

The fibers of some of the cuts which we do not care to grind can be broken by pounding with the edge of a heavy saucer or a specially devised hammer. In doing this, be careful that the juices do not escape, because if they do the piece will lose flavor. These can be absorbed by pounding flour into the meat, which, when browned, will give added flavor.

Meat treated in this way is called "Swiss Steak." In cooking at first have a high temperature; then very carefully cook at a low temperature. Other variations may be made by using ground, chuck, flank, or skirt steaks with vegetables, finishing the cooking at a low temperature. A pot roast should be cooked slowly for several hours, thus the connective tissues is softened and the meat made more tender.

In cooking meat, first sear it on the outside so as to retain the juices, thereby preserving the flavor; then cook slowly over a slow fire. A fireless cooker is good to use at this stage of the cooking. Cross ribs, boned and rolled, are fine cooked this way, or rolled flank, chuck or rump.

When meat is put in cold water and allowed to heat gradually, a large amount of juice is extracted and the meat is tasteless. By long cooking the connective tissue is softened and dissolved, which gives to the stock when cold a jelly-like consistency. This principle is applied to soup making.

By putting meat in boiling water, allowing the water to boil for a few minutes, then lowering the temperature, juices in the outer surface are quickly coagulated, and the inner juices are prevented from escaping. This method of cooking is used where nutrition and flavor are desired in meat.

In solving the meat problem, the housekeeper must keep clearly in mind the retail price, the time she uses in cooking and preparing, the waste in fat and bone and the cost of the fuel consumed in preparing the especial cuts.

Last Thursday morning traffic was delayed for several hours owing to a wreck about one mile south of Princess Anne on the N. Y. P. & N. Railroad. Because of the heavy smoke from the forest fires of that section the engineer threw his emergency brake on and one of the flat cars buckled, fell across both tracks while the end of another car loaded with lumber blocked the north-bound track. The County Agent Come To Stay

Those who doubted the success of the county agent movement find small consolation in the way it is working out in most counties. Instead of proving the failure predicted by them, it is daily gaining in importance and popularity. The reason is that it is accomplishing a real service—one that is needed and bound to be appreciated by progressive farmers. The county agent is making good and there is no mistaking the fact. He is returning value received to every community he serves, and in most instances this return equals the expenses incurred many times over.

Will county, Illinois, presents a good illustration of how the county agent idea is proving out. This Improvement Association has more than doubled its membership during the last year and is still growing at a rapid rate. In two years the alfalfa acreage has increased three-fold, more than 7,500 tons of limestone and phosphate have been used by members and others; good results are plentiful. This showing in Will county represents very well similar situations relative to the pronounced success of the county agent work in the other counties in Illinois and other states—Farmers' Review.

A BLAZE IN JAPAN

Yelling Mobs Throng the Streets
When a Fire Starts.

IN A FRENZY OF EXCITEMENT.

Every Native in Town Makes a Mad Dash for the Scene of the Conflagration and Chaos Reigns Supreme. Even a Small Fire is a Big Event.

A fire is a great event in Japan. One would think that, inasmuch as the flimsy construction of the Japanese houses and their packing together make fires of almost daily occurrence in the cities, at any rate—fires would have lost a portion of their novelty during the ten or fifteen centuries Japan has regularly been burning down. They have not, though. When the fire bell begins to toll the whole population goes to the fire.

I was in a jirikisha in Yokohama on my way to the railroad station when I heard the clangor of a bell, and the coolie who was drawing me shouted: "Kwaji! Kwaji!" or what sounded like that—and displayed strong evidences of breaking into a gallop.

"Sore wa nanigoesuka?" I inquired politely, remembering from my phrase book, "What is that?"

"Kwaji!" he shouted. "Kwaji!" And so it fell out that we went to the fire—the coolie, the jirikisha and myself—for I had no words to stop him except a very uncertain "Tomaru!" and he did not choose to tarry.

The coolie galloped down one street and up another, and in ten minutes I was in the midst of 20,000 people clad in every style of Japanese dress, and all running backward and forward. Not a man walked. All ran. They were so interested and excited that I thought they must be shareholders in the shanties which were burning.

A man dashed wildly to one end of the street elbowing people out of his way, stepping on them, pushing against them, and then he stopped, emitted a wild screech and dashed back again. I say one man did that. In reality a thousand did it on each of the four sides of the block in which the fire was, unconcernedly and in a casual and unhampered manner, demolishing some small houses.

Other thousands—many of them—ran this way a few steps and that way a few steps, all by-ah-ing. Not a man stood still except myself, and I soon got away, for the Japanese, frenzied with excitement, were bumping into me from all sides.

Presently the firemen came. They dashed in from all quarters of the city, dragging little hose carts painted red and tying white and red flags.

The hydrants in Yokohama are in manholes below the surface of the street. The firemen joined in the milling throng. They ran back and forth, too, and the spectators ran back and forth after them. There was much shouting and gesticulation. Every fireman, whether regular or volunteer, seemed to be a chief. They all gave orders that nobody obeyed, like a volunteer fire outfit in a country village at home.

There were ten or fifteen minutes of this running back and forth and shouting by the firemen; then some tiny streams of water began to sprinkle on the fire. Also, a few big engines began to squirt. Meantime the firemen were paying no attention to the houses on fire, but were trying to keep other houses from burning. A few of them tore slates from adjacent roofs and cast them indiscriminately into the crowd. Women with bundles of household belongings struggled out of the houses that might catch fire. More thousands came. For four blocks each way the streets were packed from wall to wall with excited people, all running back and forth and all shouting.

I had to club my coolie with my cane to make him start with me to the station, and he looked backward over his shoulder all the way. I was depriving him of a real pleasure—taking something out of his life by not allowing him to stay and help put out that fire.

It seems almost superfluous to say I missed my train or that the jirikisha man, bowing and smiling, remarked, "I am sorry for you!" However, that night, as I went up dark and deserted Water street in Yokohama I heard music ahead of me—a kind of music and tune that sounded familiar.

Presently I overtook the musician. He was a Japanese youth, stumping along on his wooden clogs, wearing a derby hat and clad in a kimono, and he was playing on a mouth organ "Shall We Gather at the River?" Wherein was illustrated and exemplified the old and the new Japan.—Samuel G. Blythe in Saturday Evening Post.

Three Greatest Lawyers.
It would be rather difficult to pick out the "three greatest criminal lawyers" in the history of our country. Pluckney, O'Connor, Ingraham, Pringle, Choate and many others were very great criminal lawyers. Probably the three greatest criminal lawyers in our country's history were Burr, Prentiss and Brady.—New York American.

Dr. B. B. B.
"I see you keep a little box—all the pennies and small coins for the helplessness and improvident, I suppose?" "Brady. My husband must have some place to which he can turn for car fares and luncheon money."—Philadelphia Ledger.

He shall win the upward race who makes the top his breathing place.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

POOR PULLMAN PORTERS.

Come to Think of It, Their Jobs Are Not Such Easy Ones.

George or Lemuel or Alexander of the Pullman car—whatever the name may be—has no easy job. If you do not believe that go upstairs some hot summer night to the rear bedroom—that little room under the blazing tin roof which you reserve for your relatives—and make up the bed fifteen or twenty times, carefully unmaking it between times and placing the clothes away in a regular position. Let your family nag at you and criticize you during each moment of the job, while somebody plays an obligato on the electric bell and places shoes and leather grips underneath your feet. Imagine the house is bumping and rocking—and keep a smiling face and a courteous tongue throughout all of it!

Or do this on a bitter night in mid-winter, and between every two or three makings of the bed in the overheated room slip out of a linen coat and into a fairly thin serge one and go and stand outside the door from three to ten minutes in the snow and cold. In some ways this is one of the hardest parts of George's job. Racially the negro is peculiarly sensitive to pneumonia and other pulmonary diseases. Yet the rules of a porter's job require that at stopping stations he must be outside of the car—no matter what the hour or condition of the climate—smiling and ready to say:

"What space you got, guv'nor?"—Edward Hungerford in Saturday Evening Post.

Pasture's Tribute to Lister.

Of all the tributes to the genius of Lord Lister, the discoverer of antiseptic surgery, probably the most touching was that paid to him by Pasteur, the famous French scientist. At a meeting of savants in Paris many years ago Lord Lister was present, and his brilliant achievements were explained to the audience by Pasteur. As he progressed in his speech he became more and more emotional, and at last he was so carried away by his own eloquence that the tears stood in his eyes. Finally he stepped down from the platform, took Lord Lister, who was in the front row of the audience, by both hands, led him back on to the platform and kissed him on both cheeks, after the manner of the French, in full view of the assembly. Few could have looked on unmoved at the great Frenchman's act of homage to the distinguished English surgeon.

Looking Through a Periscope.

It is an experience to glance through a periscope of a submarine when submerged. It is also something that needs getting accustomed to before any distinct image can be made out. The first thing that strikes the novice is the extraordinarily wide range of vision. The whole outline of a vessel can be clearly made out, though the ship may be comparatively close at hand, while farther away the ocean can be swept to a very considerable extent. Those who have been accustomed to submarines since their early days state that vast improvements have been made in periscopes lately over the former patterns, when the view was very restricted. Submerged watchers were then often puzzled to know whether it was the hull of a ship or a portion of the coast they could see.—London Standard.

Trivial Annoyances.

It is surprising how trivial are the annoyances which suffice to make some men miserable. A lump of soot falling on a man's linen, a beefsteak overdone, losing a railway train by forty seconds after running himself out of breath, a visit from a bore when he is overwhelmed with cares, the rasping of his nerves by a hand organ when he is weary, inclined to headache or trying to sleep, even the want of a pin or a shirt button flying off at an unlucky moment, as when he is dressing for a dinner party and has scant time in which to do it—all these are annoyances which sorely try a man's patience and chafe and vex many a person more than a serious misfortune. Alexander Smith goes so far as to say that if during thirty years all the annoyances connected with defalcating shirt buttons alone could be gathered into a mass and endured at once it would be misery equal to a public execution.

Sword of Damocles.

According to a classic legend, Damocles, who lived about 400 years before Christ, was a courtier and flatterer of a tyrannical ruler named Dionysius, whom he declared the happiest man on earth. To convince him of his mistake and prove that even the office of king had its drawbacks Dionysius invited Damocles to take his place and do his job for awhile. So Damocles donned royal robes and was seated at a banquet enjoying himself when he suddenly perceived hanging over his head a sword suspended by a single horse hair, which was liable to break at any moment. This so terrified him that he immediately resigned his temporary kingship. Whether the story is true or not, it has served for a long time to point a moral. Thackeray says in "Vanity Fair," "Let us who have not our names in the red book console ourselves by thinking comfortably how miserable our betters may be and that Damocles, who sits on satin cushions and is served on gold plates, has an awful sword hanging over his head, in the shape of a bailiff or hereditary disease or family secret."

A Novel Prescription.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy, who lived more than 100 years ago, not only loathed circumlocution in others, but avoided it himself. The Rev. Dr. Tuckerman of New England went to London for his health, where he consulted Dr. Abernethy and, oblivious of scowls and jerks of the body, expatiated on the importance of health to him, as the pastor of "a little parish in Chelsea, Mass.," until the physician lost his patience completely and cut him short with:

"No matter about your little parish, go home and build a barn!"

And now comes the proof of the great doctor's cleverness as a diagnostician. Although inclined at first to resent the abrupt and unsympathetic dictum, Dr. Tuckerman followed the advice and found it perfectly adapted to his case.

He got plenty of outdoor exercise and a mechanical employment that occupied his mind. When the barn was finished his health was restored.—Youth's Companion.

High Explosive Shells.

High explosive shells are strong steel cases with a fuse, usually placed in the base. The charge employed may be either lyddite, which is a preparation of picric acid or trinitrotoluol. The metal in the shell is fairly thick. The explosion is very violent, and has a thoroughly destructive effect upon anything near the point where the shell explodes—concrete, walls, entanglements, steel shields for the trenches or for guns.

Shrapnel are quite different projectiles and are serviceable against infantry in the open or lightly entrenched. They are thin steel cases containing a very small charge of low explosive power, which operates the cases and liberates a large number of bullets in them. These cover an oval area as they scatter and kill unprotected men. Shrapnel are useless against fortified positions, strongly built houses or deep and well planned intrenchments.—Pearson's.

How He "Looked."

Two young men were standing in a hotel where they had gone to use the free comb and the free brush. One of them seemed to think he looked rather nifty. He had on a new suit of clothes and he turned and twisted as he admired himself in the glass. Finally he could not resist the temptation to hear the spoken word of commendation.

"How do you think I look?" he asked his companion.

The other looked at him and smiled. "You look like an accident going out somewhere to happen," was his retort.—Indianapolis News.

Doesn't Feel Put Out.

Tess—I broke my engagement with him because he wouldn't give up tobacco. Jess—Then he is an old flame of yours? Tess—Yes, and he's still smoking.

Selfishness is that detestable vice which no one will forgive in others and no one is without in himself.

CONFIRMED TESTIMONY

The Kind Princess Anne Readers Cannot Doubt.

Doan's Kidney Pills have stood the test: The test of time—the hardest test of all. Thousands gratefully testify. To quick relief to lasting results. Princess Anne readers can no longer doubt the evidence.

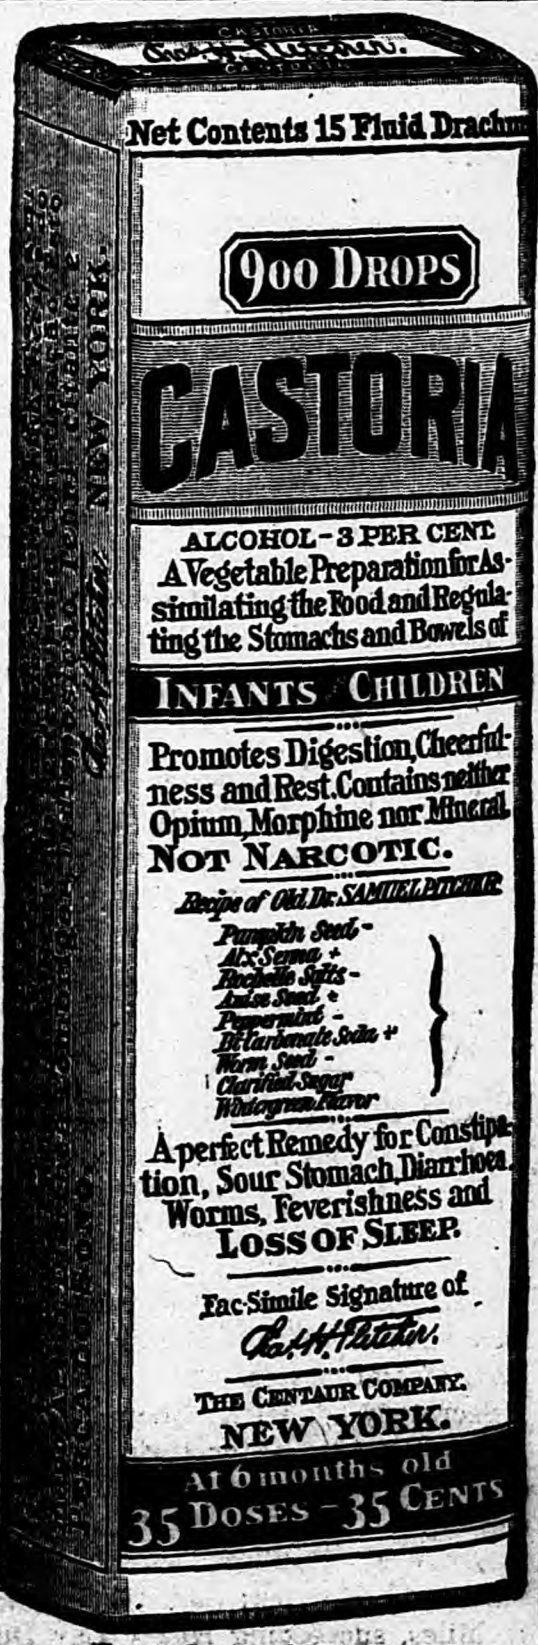

It's convincing testimony—twice-told and well confirmed. Princess Anne readers should profit by these experiences.

C. F. Parks, prop. general store, Landonville, says: "I suffered for several months from irregularity of the kidneys and at night my rest was disturbed. I had soreness in the kidneys and if I attempted to stoop or lift, I had sharp twinges. I heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I decided to give them a trial. I could not have received better results for I was relieved." (Statement given May 8, 1908) Over two years later Mr. Parks said: "The cure I got some time ago is still permanent."

TAMING A BAD MAN

With a Passing Glimpse of Native Life in Alaska.

AN INDIAN WHO WENT WRONG

In the Absence of Uncle Sam's Commissioner He Cut Loose and Terrorized His Tribe, and Then the Judge Returned—The Meeting and Result.

There are precincts in Alaska with a large native population where it is policy to try a case at times without actually having a session of court. writes H. S. Farris. There are a few isolated cases of Alaska natives who have been bluffed into becoming law abiding persons after the commission of a misdemeanor, when if they had been tried and given a term in jail they would have become confirmed jail-birds.

A good illustration of this is the case of a native in one of the small interior towns. Now, most Alaska Indians are tame—very tame—and this fellow became a bad man unexpectedly and accidentally. He suddenly pointed a rifle at a small group of his fellows and let out a yell. His act struck terror in the breasts of all the tribe, which was much to his liking.

This native knew that the commissioner for his precinct had gone to Seattle, and "going to Seattle" means, to the Alaska native, all or any part of the universe outside the boundaries of the territory. Also the "gubment" had been considering the appointment of a deputy marshal for this section of Alaska, but the "gubment" moves slowly, and as yet no deputy had been named.

So every day it was necessary for this wild native to make a demonstration before one or more members of the little tribe. It amused him, and besides, it was profitable. He would suddenly appear in the home of one of his neighbors, brandish a knife or a gun, emit one terrifying "whoop" and the field was his. He would then take any article of furniture or anything in the way of provisions that suited his fancy or appetite, after which the village would be normal until the next outbreak.

At times they uttered feeble protests. "I think maybe judge come back pretty quick; maybe you ketchum it."

To which the wild one asserted, "Injun no 'frail judge, no 'frail marshal, no 'frail 'skookum house" (jail).

At last the news came to the village that the commissioner had returned and was now at his headquarters, twelve miles down the river. So that night some of the bravest of the natives slipped quietly into the bad man's cabin, and before the enemy had recovered from his surprise he was tied hand and foot. The following morning he was placed in a sleeping bag, trussed as he was, and sledged to the mining camp where the commissioner was located.

A committee of three natives waited on the commissioner at his office that afternoon and explained the situation. Among other things their spokesman stated that "this Injun talk, no 'frail judge, no 'frail marshal, no 'frail 'skookum house; that's whatsumter!"

The commissioner went at once to the house where the bad Injun had been taken. The native lay on a caribou skin in the middle of the room, bound hand and foot, while around the room were squatted some fifty members of two neighboring tribes. All awaited the "trial" with much interest and anticipation.

The commissioner ordered the native released. One fellow produced a knife, cut the bonds and assisted the bad one to his feet.

There were only two ways out. The native must be jailed or bluffed into being good. As the native's family must be provided for, the latter course was adopted. The commissioner stepped close to the bad man, looked him in the eye and asked, "You no 'frail judge, no 'frail marshal, no 'frail 'skookum house?"

All was perfectly quiet. The eyes of the natives were centered on the two men in the middle of the room. For almost a minute the two men looked each other in the eye, but at last the bad man wilted. His eyes fell, and he stood like a small boy caught in some mischief. "Yes, me 'frail," he said—Case and Comment.

Ancient Oath Taking.

A method of taking the oath far more hygienic than kissing the book was that observed at the Forest of Dean Mine court for about 500 years, beginning in the thirteenth century. It was not for any hygienic reasons, but to prevent soiling the book, that the miners before giving evidence touched the four gospels with a stick of holly. The witnesses wore their hats to show that they were free miners.—London Chronicle.

The Giant's Organ.

One of the most interesting features of the Giant's causeway is "the giant's organ." This huge "instrument" consists of a group of pillars of various lengths set apart on the side of the main cliff. The larger columns being in the center and the smaller ones tapering off on either side after the fashion of organ pipes admirably sustain the idea which the name "giant's organ" conveys.

There is no possible success without some opposition as a fulcrum.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

My Longer's 'Corn Belt'

The "corn belt" used to be a strip of country running generally from Pennsylvania to Kansas, and including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri and the southern half of Iowa.

But the fashion in belts is changing, as all fashions are liable to do. The corn belt is spreading itself out. It goes further east and further west, and most emphatically it is moving to the north and south. Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and even the Dakotas and Montana are now in the corn belt. The southern states are knocking at the door. Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas are showing that a hundred bushels to the acre is nothing to them.

The corn belt in the future will extend from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico, and it will reach to the Rocky mountains, if not beyond. It is no longer a belt, but a section, comprising almost the entire arable portion of the United States, and may even include the deserts and the mountains to a limited extent.—Farm Life.

Story of a Bunch of Keys.

After Mary, queen of Scots, had succeeded in effecting her escape from the grim old fortress of Lochleven her deliverer, William Douglas, threw the keys which had brought her her freedom into the waters of the lake. There they lay till the parching summer of 1805, when a boy named William Honeyman, while strolling on its banks, picked up a bunch of five keys of antique workmanship fastened by an iron ring. These the boy carried to the parish schoolmaster, who forwarded them to the Earl of Morton, hereditary keeper of Lochleven castle, near Edinburgh, where they still remain. They are without doubt the old keys which William Douglas threw into the loch on the eventful night when the queen escaped, only to be taken again and consigned to life long captivity.

Trick of the Lemon Growers.

By an interesting yet simple method two crops of lemons are obtained in Sicily during the year, though the second is in every way inferior. The abnormal fruit is known as the Verdell lemon and is marketed during the summer months. The Verdell lemon, green in color, grows contemporaneously on the same trees with the ordinary or yellow lemon of commerce and is obtained by the following method: The lemon tree, which flowers in April, is kept without water from that period until July, when the roots are heavily flooded for a time. This results in a second set of blossoms, from which will come the Verdell lemons. The ordinary lemon crop is picked in the months beginning with October, but the Verdell lemons do not mature until the next May.—Argonaut.

The game of "living chess" has been given frequently in out of door fetes. WINTER CARE OF ROADS

Keep Ditches And Drains Open To Prevent Injury By Freezing

Water, not cold, is the cause of the deterioration of roads in winter, according to the road specialists of the department. Cold weather does not in itself injure roads, no matter whether they are earth, gravel, or macadam. In fact, an earth road will stand more traffic when it is solidly frozen than at any other time. Excess water, however, is always detrimental to a highway. When cold weather turns this water into ice, the damage that it does is greatly increased. Ice occupies considerably more space than the water from which it is formed, and every person who has lived in a cold climate is familiar with the powerful bursting effect of water when left to freeze in a confined vessel. The same action takes place when a wet road freezes to any considerable depth. It simply bursts, or, as we generally term it in road parlance, the road heaves. Later, when the frost leaves, the road is disintegrated and rutted badly. If this process is repeated a number of times during the winter, a gravel or macadam road may be practically destroyed, while an earth road may become entirely impassable.

The remedy is self-evident. Keep the water out of the road. The time to begin preventive measures is early in the fall, before the rains begin. If the road goes into the winter thoroughly dry, with the surface and drainage in good condition, the chances are extremely favorable that it will come out all right the following spring.

Keep the ditches and drains open. Remove all accumulations of weeds, grass, etc., which tend to retain moisture and obstruct drainage. Furthermore, do this work early, while the ground is still dry and hard. Vegetation and litter hold water like a sponge and allow it gradually to soak in and soften the earth. The job before the road man is to keep the hard, dry surface formed in the summer time from becoming softened by the fall and winter rains and snows. When the fall rains begin the earth or gravel road should be dragged frequently to prevent the formation of ruts and the collection of water. All raveled places on macadam surfaces should be carefully filled in and consolidated.

During the winter, whenever a thaw is coming on, the cross drains and side ditches should be opened up as far as possible so as to prevent water collecting along the roadway. If the thaw is so pronounced that the roadway is softened, the drag should be used; sometimes one round trip of the drag, with the hitch reversed, will entirely rid the earth road of slush and melting snow and leave the road surface practically dry.

Winter destruction begins in the early fall. The best way to prevent such destruction is to forestall it. Keep the road dry and remember that so long as it remains so it will not be seriously injured by frost. Keep the drains open, the ditches clear, remove all vegetation and litter, and use the drag frequently. If the road is kept dry to a depth of 2 feet below the surface there will be little trouble from the coldest winter.

Lewis, of Cumberland, who has made a nationwide reputation in the House through his advocacy and authorship of the Parcel Post act, has formally announced his candidacy for the United States Senate from Maryland to succeed Senator Blair Lee, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries next year. Mr. Lewis is now serving his third term in the House from the Sixth district.

Mr. Lewis' announcement was made in letters sent from Cumberland to members of the delegation of farmers who called upon him last Tuesday and asked him to enter the contest for the Senate. Copies of the letters were made public in Washington by Charles T. Clayton, Mr. Lewis' secretary.

In his letter Mr. Lewis declares he is with Woodrow Wilson heart and soul and wants to be in a commanding position to help him round out his program for remedial legislation in Congress. He also declares he is without money to make this fight, but as he has won Congressional honors in Maryland without funds he is willing to make an effort to reach the Senate without the expenditure of large sums of money to influence the electorate. He adds that the contest will be one which he will wage with his "bare fists."

To Guard Naval Secrets

Congress may be asked to adopt measures for the more adequate safeguarding of military secrets with reference to torpedoes, guns and other devices designed by the Navy Department and turned over to private contractors for use in connection with government vessels under construction.

Solicitor Egerton in his annual report made public Wednesday called attention to litigation with the E. W. Bliss Company in connection with contracts for manufacturing torpedoes from Government designs.

The solicitor says a new method of determining the amount of insurance to be carried on Government ships under construction in private yards has been prepared. In his report Egerton notes an increase in public sentiment in favor of the eight hour working day.

The Right Ring

It is refreshing to find that Mr. Harrington's late public comments differ no whit in either substance or emphasis from those made by him before election. He is still with the Goodnow Commission, heart and soul.

He is still bent on carrying out the platform pledges to the letter. He is still determined to name men of unimpeachable character and ability for the important boards of Baltimore city.

This is in line with the new spirit in politics in Maryland. It is in line with the thoughts of the voters as expressed at the polls last week. With conditions as they are now the public official who lives up to such professions will go far in this State.—Baltimore Sun.

100,000,000 Meat Animals Killed

Secretary Houston, of the Department of Agriculture, urges the safeguarding of the meat supply. He cites figures to show that there is great waste in the slaughtering of diseased animals.

"More than 50,000 meat animals," says the Information Bureau of this Department, "were slaughtered in establishments under Federal inspection during the fiscal year ending June 30. Since approximately from 58 to 60 per cent. of the animals killed are slaughtered in establishments where Federal inspection is maintained, it appears that about 100,000,000 meat animals are now being killed each year."

"Of the animals subjected to Federal inspection 299,958 were condemned as unfit for human use, and 644,688 were condemned in part. This is a little more than 1.5 per cent. of all the animals inspected which were condemned either in whole or in part. These figures include only cattle, calves, sheep, goats and swine."

Tuberculosis was the chief cause of the condemnations. More than 32,644 carcasses of cattle and 66,000 carcasses of swine were entirely rejected on account of this disease, and in addition parts of 48,000 cattle and 440,000 swine. Hog cholera was responsible for the next largest loss, nearly 102,000 swine being condemned entirely on this account.

Thanksgiving Day

ROBERT BRIDGES in Collier's Weekly

We give thee thanks, O Lord,
Not for the turrets of our men-of-war,
Not for the glory of the well earned fight
Where brave men slay their brothers, also brave,
But for the millions of thy sons who work
And do thy tasks with joy and never shrink
And deem the idle man a burdened slave.
For these, O Lord, our thanks!

We give thee thanks, O Lord,
Not for the turrets of our men-of-war,
The monstrous guns and deadly steel they pour
To crush our foes and make them bow the knee,
But for the homely sailors of thy deep,
The tireless fisher folk who banish sleep
And lure a living from the miser sea.

"THE PIONEERS WHO PLOW THE FIELD,
MAKE DESERTS BLOSSOM AND THE MOUNTAIN YIELD."

We give thee thanks, O Lord,
Not for the mighty men who pile up gold,
Not for the phantom millions bought and sold
And all the arrogance of pomp and greed,
But for the pioneers who plow the field,
Make deserts blossom and the mountain yield
Its hidden treasures for man's daily need.
For these, O Lord, our thanks!

We give thee thanks, O Lord,
Not for the palaces that wealth has grown,
Where ease is worshiped, duty dimly known
And pleasure leads her dance the flowery way,
But for the quiet homes where love is queen
And life is more than baubles, touched and seen,
And old folks bless us and dear children play.

Give Thanks For These
"Good NEW Times"

Sydney Smith wrote the thanksgiving text when he said, "Let in the sunshine and glorify the room." To think rightly, feel finely and warmly respond to the gifts, privileges and joys of our estate is sound sense, good religion and a perpetual feast. We thus get at the facts and throw experience into the proper perspective. If the heart is in tune all our surroundings catch the melody. Things are largely as we think they are, and to maintain a cheerful spirit at all seasons is the first step toward proving the dictum of Goethe that man is not the victim but he is the architect of his circumstances.

The American spirit sanctions this by celebrating Thanksgiving on the threshold of winter. By so much may we learn that the lowest denominator of life's seasons is far richer than we commonly imagine.

And thereby we can afford to take another look at an old score of assets. Health, friends, food, raiment, home, country, work, mind and manhood—all stand substantial as ever. But they also mean more to us in this day than they could possibly import in the "bad old times" of our ancestors. And in this favored land some of these items mean more than they express within any other nation on the globe. We cannot dictate the harvest of nature. The all around harvest of domestic and social conditions which in America ranks humanity in men higher than titles and makes the modern artisan better circumstanced than ancient kings is a blessing for which above all it becomes our citizens to be thankful.—Philadelphia Press.

One Cause For Thanksgiving,
Although our sky looks dull and gray
As we approach Thanksgiving day,
We all may see one golden ray
Strike through the storm clouds murky,
For he is an ungrateful beast
Who, coming to this annual feast, Cannot give thanks for this at least—
That he is not a turkey!
—George B. Morewood in New York Sun.

WEATHER AND THE SCHOOL.

Cold, Calm and Clear Days Show the Pupils at Their Best.

Teaching children is not the easiest thing in the world. It presents a problem complicated by many and diverse factors. Some of these are only now beginning to be properly appreciated. One such is the influence of weather conditions.

Investigation has shown that the state of the weather has a marked effect both on the children's conduct and on their mental and physical powers. This was first clearly brought out a few years ago by an American psychologist. Professor E. G. Dexter, whose researches still are among the most exhaustive and informing that have been made in this novel field of inquiry.

Professor Dexter, studying conditions in the schools of cities at sea level, like New York, Boston and Philadelphia, and of others at high altitudes, found that in the former the pupils were best behaved on cold, calm and clear days. Muggy days were productive of the greatest unruliness. A marked tendency to misbehavior was also noted on hot days and on windy ones.

In high altitude schools, such as those of the city of Denver, where mugginess is seldom in evidence, windy days were found to have the most disastrous effect on conduct. Cold, calm and clear days were again the days of best behavior.

With respect to working ability the same results were observed. Both mental and physical tasks were best performed on cold, calm and clear days.—H. Addington Bruce in New York Globe.

MACE OF THE SPEAKER.

Ancient Emblem Used in the House of Representatives.

In one respect the house of representatives surpasses the senate in dignity. The senate has no mace. Now, a mace is not much in the way of furniture. It is a silver eagle mounted upon a staff around which are bands of silver.

This mace is always an emblem of the house of representatives. It is the duty of one employee to look after it. Just before a session of the house begins he takes it from the office of the sergeant at arms into the house chamber, and as soon as the speaker's gavel falls he inserts it in a socket in a stone pillar at the right of the speaker's chair. The mace remains there while the house is in session and is taken out and stood beside its pedestal when the house is in committee of the whole. When the house adjourns the mace is carried back to the office of the sergeant at arms.

This ancient emblem has not a thing to do with the order of business of the house save as one of the old time regulations that are continued. When the house is turbulent an officer seizes the mace and walks through the aisles. Only once or twice when the speaker failed to preserve order, said a Washington correspondent, have I seen an officer seize the mace and walk through the house, waving it backward and forward. Possibly the sight of it brought members to their senses and they retired to their seats. At all events, that is about the only real use for the mace that I ever have observed.

What a Toad Enjoys.

There are few things more amusing than to watch a toad submitting to the operations of a back scratching. He will at first look somewhat suspiciously at the twig which you are advancing toward him, but after two or three passes down his back his manner undergoes a marked change, his eyes close with an expression of infinite rapture, he plants his feet wider apart, and his body swells out to nearly double its ordinary size, as if to obtain by these means more room for enjoyment. Thus he will remain until you make some sudden movement which startles him or until he has had as much petting as he wants, when, with a puff of regretful delight, he will reduce himself to his usual dimensions and hop away, bent once more on the pleasures of the chase.

Competent.

The Thanksgiving Table

Vegetables can be used for decoration of the Thanksgiving day dinner table, making an appropriate adornment. The centerpiece can be formed of vegetables piled up in the center of the table. Carrots, turnips, parsnips, sweet and white potatoes, celery tops, a red and a green cabbage, can all be used if they are scrubbed clean and wiped dry. Their colors are beautiful, and if they are neatly mounded and then edged with a border of fresh green parsley they will be quite effective.

About the centerpiece candlesticks formed of vegetables can be grouped. Big carrots make good candlesticks. Cut off the big end to make a solid foundation on which these candlesticks can rest and cut off some of the tapering end so that the end left will be half an inch bigger in diameter than the candles used. Then scoop out a little cup to hold the candle.

Cucumbers cut on one side so that they will sit solidly on the table, with a little cup hollowed in each end, can be used for holding two candles each. Turnips, potatoes and parsnips can all be used.

The place cards to go with this sort of decoration might be hand painted vegetables, with waving, rootlike arms.

and legs and funny faces formed by the creases and eyes and knots in the vegetable themselves.

There are poppy crackers on sale that would make appropriate favors to go with these vegetable decorations. They cost about $1.25 a dozen. Three are decorated with tiny ears of corn, three with tomatoes, three with pumpkins and three with cucumbers. Each contains a favor.

A big paper turkey that costs about $1.25, filled with candies, might serve as the centerpiece, and at each place could be put small paper turkeys, also filled with candy, which cost from 15 to 25 cents apiece.

There are small fruit boxes sold, filled with candies by some confectioners, that are also attractive favors.

More useful favors can be found in the small silk fruits and vegetables that are sold for prices that range from 25 cents to $1. Carrots and parsnips, apples and pears are included in these fruits and vegetables, and they are all pincushions. The tiny vegetable souvenirs that sell for 15 cents each and the tiny wax vegetables and fruits that cost 10 or 15 cents also make appropriate and acceptable favors.

Half of success is in seeing the significance of little things.—Henry F. Dope.

Round About Thanksgiving Time

Oh, the time is getting nearer when
I'll pack my grip and fly
To the little home off yonder where the meadows touch the sky,
Where the crabs are fairly bursting with the corn they've gathered in
And the orchards now are sleeping till the days of spring begin,
Where the dear old mother waits me and the dear old dad looks wise
As he views the shining turkey and the row of pumpkin pies,
And I almost hear him chuckle: "It's Thanksgiving day once more!
Soon a mighty hungry feller will be knockin' at the door."

"WHERE THE DEAR OLD MOTHER WAITS"

I can see the dear old mother in the kitchen baking things
That would gladden the eyes and palates of the proudest of our kings.
I can see the pumpkin glowing as she fills the bowl with orange And my soul this very minute feels the old time wanderlust.
Oh, I'll soon be treading backward o'er the paths that once I knew
To the old home in the valley, to the old folks, good and true.
You were right, dad, when you chuckled as you paced the kitchen floor,
"Soon a mighty hungry feller will come
knockin' at the door."

You can bet I'm mighty hungry—mighty hungry just to see The old smiles beaming brightly and to feel they're all for me.
Oh, I'm hungry just to kiss you and to feel your arms again Sort of loving-like around me as you once embraced me when I was leaving for the city, and I'm hungry just to squeeze
Dear old mother as I used to and to sit upon her knees.
Oh, there is no use denying it's Thanksgiving day once more.
"Soon a mighty hungry feller will come
knockin' at the door."

A Plain American's Thanksgiving

Having lived more than a half century in America, a descendant of the early settlers, and having given to my children the message of hope received from my parents, I am qualified to express publicly a word of thanksgiving, says a correspondent of the New York Evening Post. Inseparable in my mind are our Father, my country, my home, my neighbor. Thus apply:
"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want."
"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth me beside the still waters."
"He restoreth my soul; he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake."
"Yea, though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."
"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over."
"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life, and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."
And America, like the good wife in Proverbs, "shall do me good and not evil all the days of my life."
My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing.
Here more than elsewhere on earth is practiced that sum of knowledge,
"Love one another."
America, I thank, I love, I serve thee.
Thy honor is mine. My best, my all,
are thine.
America's best is yet to be.

One Little Boy's Thanksgiving

CERTAIN Little Boy who lives in a family where children and holidays and dogs are all important factors in everyday life was talking about the next holiday. The Little Boy has a trait common to childhood of living largely in anticipation and very little in memory.

On the morning of Dec. 26 he awakes unfatigued and alert, not to discuss yesterday's triumphs nor the wholesale unwise generosity of uncles and aunts. No, indeed! He begins his list for next Christmas.

This Little Boy had finished a glorious period of Halloween preparations.
There was nothing he had not cut and painted and planned that the mind of a five-year-old child could conceive of. He had had a glorious month of anticipation, and it had been crowned by a satisfactory Halloween revel, but memory was to him only an incentive to further pursuit of joy, not a state wherein to rest awhile.

asked Little Boy.

"Thanksgiving, dear," answered mamma rather absently. Memory in-gers with mamma, as there is debris

THANKSGIVING (SCENE AT FURBIO DIN-NER).

enough to keep any feast in her mind for a day or so.

"Oh, goodie! How soon is it?"
"About three weeks."
"Oh, that's a long time! What shall we do to get ready?"

"Why, we'll make pies and cookies."
"What else?"

"Pump pudding and ice cream."
"And—go on, mamma, please."

"Nuts and raisins and cranberries."
"But—but, mamma, do you mean that Thanksgiving is just nothing but eating?" came the horrified rejoinder.

Isn't it too bad that this holiday that meant so much to our forefathers almost 300 years ago is now almost "just nothing but eating?"

What could the mother do? She cast around in her mind—a mother's mind is really more resourceful than the mind of a mere being who is not a mother—for something with which to glorify Thanksgiving to her child.

Of course she finally dug up the story of the sufferings and triumphs of the pilgrims. She didn't just read it out of a book to Little Boy. She word painted that forest and the little log houses, the pilgrim maids and men and the few queer, sober, hardworking little children, the great bronzed Indians and the sunlight that glinted through the forest and through the hearts of these pioneer folk when they realized that God had so prospered their hard, hard work that there was food enough to last them during the coming winter.

When the mother pictured the log barns and the rude bins and cells, all full of grain, Little Boy said, "Oh, I'm so glad!"

"So were they, son, and so they set aside a day for their children's children forever to thank God for all the good things that grow."

asked Little Boy.

So then mother told him that, although there is enough for everybody, still everybody doesn't get enough. She told him of all the kind people who try to help the "left out ones" on Thanksgiving day, and Little Boy, while they picked raisins and cleaned currants and made cookie men, planned one of everything for themselves and one for

Thus Little Boy found something in Thanksgiving besides just eating—

What Makes Prosperity

Professor William Howard Taft gave an amusing instance of Republican logic, or lack of it, when he remarked in an address at Chicago that "present prosperity is no reason for continuing the present national Administration in power. The Wilson Administration was not an agency in bringing on this prosperity." This is the line of reasoning usually followed by G. O. P. spellbinders. When the Republicans are in power and the country is prosperous, that prosperity is exclusively due to the authorities at Washington. If business troubles come, the Democrats are to blame for them. This argument does not apply to Democrats, however. When they are in power and the country is exceedingly prosperous, as at present, that prosperity is in spite of them, and they must receive no credit for it. In a word, all prosperity is Republican and all depression Democratic. It is the simplest thing in the world when you once grasp it.

The weak point in this theory is that there is nothing in the history of the United States during the last half century to support it. During that time there have been three tremendous financial panics here—more than any other country in the world has had—and they all came under Republican tariffs. The panics of 1873, under Grant, and 1897—under Roosevelt, were exceptionally severe. That of 1893 came under the McKinley Tariff of unblemished memory. As a matter of fact, the Wilson Administration is entitled to a great deal of credit for the present exuberant prosperity. It gave the country a sound financial system, which has been of inestimable value in enabling it to meet the crisis caused by the European war. By moderate legislation it has put an end to the Trust agitation, which so long disturbed the nation, and by a careful revision of the tariff it has put all parts of the country upon an equality. The Administration has fostered American shipping, which is now more numerous than ever, and in many other ways it has given aid to the American business man.

The old G. O. P. yearn that the sun shines only for Republicans, and that nature gives bountiful crops only when high tariffs prevail, is an argument fit only for idiots. Mr. Taft out to be above such nonsense. His occasional reversion to it shows that he is still narrowly partisan when the painful memories of 1912 are evoked.—Philadelphia Record.

Loss To The Negro And To The South

Booker T. Washington, who died at Tuskegee recently at a comparatively early age, was perhaps the greatest real benefactor that the negro race ever had. He scattered all over the South negroes who are educating their race in the sound and sensible ideas which he himself taught, and this influence can hardly be overestimated.

Washington wasted no time lamenting the "wrongs" of his race, or howling for social and political equality, like the colored demagogues of Boston and elsewhere, and their white compatriots of the same ilk. He knew that the South must be the home of a great majority of the negroes for many generations at least, and he faced conditions as he found them. He established his great school in the midst of the black belt and called for help and encouragement from the Southern man as well as the Northern; nor did he call in vain.

Instead of emphasizing wrongs, Dr. Washington emphasized opportunities. He always declared that the Southern man was, generally speaking, the negro's best friend; that the negro would be fairly treated if he respected the white man's convictions on a few subjects which involved nonessentials so far as the advancement of his race was concerned. He taught that the way for the negro to be respected was to be respectable, industrious, useful in the community and thrifty. Such conduct he always maintained would secure for the negro any rights or opportunities that he now lacked. He taught negroes to become good mechanics rather than lawyers, preachers and politicians.

The intelligent people of the South liked and respected Dr. Washington and always treated him well, as he so often acknowledged. His death will be a loss to the South as well as to his race, but the influence of his teaching and example will, it is to be hoped, last long.—Baltimore Evening Sun.

Aid For The Belgians

"More than three million people in Belgium and Northern France, mostly women and young children, must be clothed and shod by Christmas." This is the official announcement made by the Commission for Relief in Belgium, sent from headquarters in New York City.

This announcement is somewhat startling. It has been known in a general way that the victims of German invasion in Belgium were still in need of assistance, but it was not supposed the field included so many innocent victims of war's brutality who are still in a condition that calls for active assistance from the outside world.

The people of Delaware have nobly responded to the calls from the suffering people of ravished Belgium for assistance, and they will continue in the good work. These stricken Belgians are under the iron rule of ruthless conquerors and cannot help themselves; they look in vain for assistance from those who reduced them to their sad plight, and the Christian world outside of the horrid circle of war will have to extend them relief.—Wilmington Evening.

Booker T. Washington Dead

Booker T. Washington, the ablest leader of the negro race, died at Tuskegee, Ala., on Sunday the 14th inst. Bright's disease and arterio sclerosis caused his death.

Dr. Washington, founder of Tuskegee Institute, was born a slave near Hale's Ford, Va., in 1858. He was educated at the Hampton Industrial Institute, at Hampton, Va., and the Wayland Seminary, at Washington. He became an instructor at Hampton Institute and later a teacher in the public schools of West Virginia.

Practical education of the negro was Dr. Washington's life work. In 1881 he founded Tuskegee Institute at Tuskegee, Ala. Here hundreds of negroes have been educated and turned into useful citizens.

Dr. Washington earned a great deal from his lectures and writings. Practically every dollar was devoted to the work at Tuskegee. He spoke all over the United States and in several European countries. "The Story of My Life," and "Up From Slavery" are two of his most successful books.

He once told how he got his name. His fondness for books, when he was a small boy, led somebody to call him "Booker." When he realized that he needed another name he helped himself to that of Washington, after the first President, whom he greatly admired.

Ever Eat "Spread Eagle" Turkey?
"Spread eagle," a young turkey, split and broiled over a hot wood fire and served with a sauce of chopped oysters, crabs, wild celery and apples mixed with old brandy and Madeira wine, a dish popular among clubmen and army and navy officers, was first brought out by a shipping merchant of New York from fifty to seventy years ago—Jerry Weinberg. He was the inventor of lobster a la Weinberg, which became afterward known as lobster a la Newburg—why Newburg nobody ever knew. Weinberg's bill of fare for his special annual banquet to the good liver of the New York exchanges was land crabs and mangoes from Haiti, "spread eagles," mallard ducks, candied yams, Virginia corn pones, South Carolina boiled rice, apple pie, white brandy, New Jersey peach brandy, claret, champagne and coffee from Aden, Arabia.

Thanksgiving Thoughts.
Gratitude is the fairest blossom which springs from the soul, and the heart of man knoweth none more fragrant—Hosea Ballou.

Children.
What are children? Flowers! They are flowers of the invisible world, indestructible, each with a multitude of angels and evil spirits underneath its leaves, toiling and wrestling for dominion over it. Blossoms! They are the blossoms of another world whose fruitage is angels and archangels. Or dewdrops! They are dewdrops that have their source not in the chambers of the earth nor among the vapors of the sky, which the next breath of wind or the next flash of sunshine may dry up forever, but among the everlasting fountains and inexhaustible reservoirs of mercy and love.—John Neal.

Quickness of Mind.
Quickness is among the least of the mind's properties and belongs to her in almost her lowest state. Nay, it doth not abandon her when she is driven from her home, when she is wandering and insane. The mad often retain it, the liar has it, the cheat has it, education does not give it, and reason takes away from it.—Landor.

SAVAGE ATHLETICS.

Canary Islanders Who Would Have Made Star Ball Players.

The Canary Islands came into subjection to Spain about the time Columbus discovered America. The conquest was due solely to the superiority of European weapons and not to better skill and prowess. Native soldiers were trained athletes developed under a system that held athletic sports to be an important business, like military drill.

Spanish chronicles have left accounts of sports of the islanders. From babyhood they were trained to be brisk in self defense. As soon as they could toddle the children were pelted with mud balls that they might learn how to protect themselves. When they were boys stones and wooden darts were substituted for bits of clay.

In this rough school they acquired the rudiments of warfare which enabled them during their wars to catch in their hands the arrows shot from their enemies' crossbows.

After the conquest of the Canaries a native of the islands was seen at Seville who for a silver piece let a man throw at him as many stones as he pleased from a distance of eight paces. Without moving his left foot he avoided every stone.

Another native used to defy any one to hurl an orange at him with so great rapidity that he could not catch it. Three men tried this, each with a dozen oranges, and the islander caught every orange. As a further test he hit his antagonists with each of the oranges.

FIFTH WHEELS.

They Are of Many Varieties, and Some of Them Are Human.

I am what is known as a fifth wheel—a useless piece of paraphernalia carried along as necessary impediments on other people's journeys.

There are lots of fifth wheels in the world. Some are old and rusty and out of repair, and down in their inmost hubs they long to roll off into the gutter and lie there quiet and undisturbed. These are the old people, silver haired, self effacing, who go upstairs to bed early when guests are invited for dinner.

Some are emergency fifth wheels, such as are carried on motorcars, always ready to take their place on the road if one of the regular wheels breaks down and needs to be sent away for repairs. These are the middle aged unmarried aunts and cousins—staunch, reliable—who are sent for to take care of the children while mother runs over to Europe for a holiday.

And some are fifth wheels like myself—neither old nor self effacing, neither middle aged nor useful, but simply expensive to keep painted and very hungry for the road. It may be only a matter of time, however, when I shall be middle aged and useful and later old and self effacing; when I shall stay and take care of the children and go upstairs early when young people are having a party.—Olive Higgins Prouty in American Magazine.

Disenchanted.
There is a maiden lady in Boston who used to be very fond of Omar Khayyam. She quoted the Rubaiyat on all possible and some impossible occasions as though it were her Bible. But a short time ago she went to the play, "Omar, the Tentmaker," in order that she might see her favorite hero in propria persona. But instead of being pleased with the play she came home disgusted. Her copy of the Rubaiyat (limited edition, numbered copy, Holland paper, vellum binding, Veder illustrations) has been burned or buried. She neither mentions Omar nor allows any one else to quote him in her presence. When asked the reason of her change of taste she replies gently, but firmly, "I didn't know he was a drinking man."—Independent.

Her Thanksgiving Pie

"I HOPE he'll like it," said Ruth Harkness to herself as she put the seasoning into the rich mince pies she was making.

There was one—she held an old fashioned green edged scalloped plate in her hand and looked at it thoughtfully—yes, there was just meat enough for one more pie. She would sprinkle it full of whole raisins, carefully stoned, and a clove stuck in each one, and she would put a little butter in—just a little, lest it might not be rich enough—and about a spoonful of brown sugar, to make it extra sweet and dark, and then she would save it—she knew for what. It was only that perhaps John Prouty would come around on Thanksgiving evening.

John was always fond of mince pies, as she remembered perfectly well, and now his mother was dead, and he was living at Uncle James', and Aunt James Prouty had rheumatism, and altogether there was not much prospect for John to have any Thanksgiving unless he came there for it.

And so Thanksgiving day came, and there were uncles and cousins and friends of all parties by dozens and dozens gathered beneath Farmer Harkness' hospitable roof, and in the cool gray twilight, as Ruth fitted back and forward, always intent on some busy mission, she was watching down the lane for John. She would know his broad shoulders and his well worn brown surtout, and even as she watched they came in sight—they and a bright plaid cloak which belonged to

SHE HEARD A SOFT RAP AT THE WINDOW, the schoolmistress from Perkinsville. Ruth set her teeth together hard and tight.

So that was where John was going for Thanksgiving—and she had been up there taking tea—just as though that girl didn't know that Aunt James Prouty was no place to go for tea, and she down with rheumatism! Well, she hoped he'd have a pleasant evening. As for that pie—and she looked at it ruefully—she'd taken too much pains with that to waste it on a lot of overgrown boys and cider drinking men. She'd give it to the pigs—that's what she'd do with it. Nobody else should eat it if John couldn't.

Then as she looked at the pastry that had given her so much pleasure and so much disappointment she said she'd give it to old Ma'am Jefferson, down the valley. She was living there alone, lonesome-like, and it would make her Thanksgiving day happier to know that somebody thought of her up there on the hill.

So when the cider and apples were brought and everybody was fixed cozily enough around the kitchen fire and in the neat big square sitting room Ruth strolled out with the pie in her hands folded in a white towel, and tripping lightly across the fields, she knocked at the door of the little cottage where Ma'am Jefferson lived alone, but received no answer. The latchstring was hanging out. She pulled it gently to rattle the latch; but, still hearing no sound from within, she pushed the door open and entered. No one was there, but a big Bible lay open on the stand, and the iron bowed spectacles were upon it. Ma'am Jefferson had evidently been called away in a hurry, probably to see some sick neighbor, Ruth said to herself, and she would be glad to find some trace of loving thoughtfulness when she returned.

Then Ruth wrote a little note, sad from the feelings that oppressed her, yet kindly from the wealth of her own kind heart, and left it with the pie. "There's company up at our house," the note said, "and I can't wait until you come back, aunty, but I have put the teakettle over the fire and set the tea drawing, and I hope you will find everything warm and comfortable."

Hours and hours Ruth sat alone by the kitchen fire waiting for the last sound of life to die out in the house that she might ruke up the embers and lock the doors, for she was a notable housekeeper, this brave young girl, and took her invalid mother's place as far as possible in all things.

But while she was sitting alone by the kitchen fire she heard a soft rap at the window, and, looking up, she saw John's face in the moonlight, earnest and smiling as he beckoned to her.

In the instant the thought flashed over her, proud and decorous Yankee girl that she was, that he had been spending the evening with Miss Gregory, and it was worse than impertinent for him to call there on his way home. She would not answer his summons. She thought he would go away, and so he did—from the window, but only to come quietly in at the door.

Sitting down on the settee beside her, he spread his hands over the dying embers to warm them and said, with a slight shiver:

"It is chilly out tonight, Ruth, and I have been thinking of you."

She turned up her nose a little at this; but, dreading to hear anything more that she would think was false, she told him very quietly:

"I saw you go down the lane with Miss Gregory early this evening. I should think it most likely that you had been thinking of her since then."

John turned and looked at her, lots of fun brimming up in his brown eyes. But when he saw how tired and sad she looked he answered her gently:

"No, little girl, I have been thinking of you, as I said, and the last thing I did before coming here was to drink a cupful of tea and eat a piece of pie of your making. While I drank the tea I was thinking—no doubt it will sound foolish to you—but I was thinking how every one of those little grains had been cuddled in the palm of your hand as you measured them out, and the pie was as sweet as though you had stirred the mince with your finger before putting it between the crusts."

Ruth was laughing and blushing at his foolish words, and he, enjoying her confusion, put up one hand and drew her head down on his shoulder.

"I don't know what you mean," she said presently. "I haven't turned cook for Miss Gregory."

"No," he interrupted her; "I forgot that you didn't know where I had been. Tom Gregory was thrown from a colt tonight, and they thought his leg was broken. His sister came across lots for me to go down there and see what I could do for him. We didn't like to stop at your house for help, because you had so much company, so we went and got Ma'am Jefferson and took her over with us. We made the best as comfortable as we could, and she said no bones were broken. So then I went home with her, and there was the fire your care had brightened, and the tea and the pie."

The girl's heart was beating very fast as John said, "My Thanksgiving will be complete, Ruth, if you will promise to be my wife."

After they were married she told him that the pie had been made on purpose for him.

A Thanksgiving Song

By ANNETTE KOHN, Independent

All our days
We give thee praise.
O God, who holdest in Thy hand
And didst exalt and bless our land
And givest it from sea to sea
To all embracing liberty,
We give thee praise
All our days.

For the golden glow of the orange tree,
For the purple grapes, for the honeybee,
For the waving plumes of the yellow grain,
For the glorious sunshine and for the rain,
The coal in the mine, the ore in the hill,
The throb of the engine, the whistles shrill,
The fire of the forge and the anvil's ring,
For the tinkling phone and the cable string,
The whir of the loom, the clack of the mill,
For the auto's speed and the airship's thrill,
For the horse of flame on the road of steel
And the wireless voice that makes loud appeal,

For our busy marts and our busy streets,
Where the white, black, brown and yellow man meets;
For the strong true arm of the workman brave,
For our churches and schools with power to save,

For hearts of our women, brains of our men,
For the laureled harvest of brush and pen,
For the wealth of herds on the prairies wide,
For the new homes rising on every side,
For the law that shields where our flag is unfurled,

For peace in our land and with all the world,
For our mighty name, in all men's sight,
The pledge we must walk for aye in thy light,

All our days

A Pine Whooping Cough Remedy
Mothers, Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is just the remedy for your children's cold ailments. The fact is that pine is a quick enemy of cold conditions. Its qualities loosen the mucous in the throat, soothe the lungs and open up the air passages. The combination of honey, soothing and pleasant, with the loosening pine quality makes this an ideal cough remedy for children. Each passing year brings for it, new friends. A family of growing children cannot afford to be without it. 25c. a bottle.

Two Hundred And Fifty Stories
And every story a good one. They are entertaining, but that is not all you can say about them. You know there is hardly a periodical published that is not full of time-wasting stories, but not a single story in The Youth's Companion is a time waster. Take the stories of C. A. Stephens. It would be hard to pick out one from which you cannot learn something useful and yet entertaining.

Some of The Companion stories refresh your knowledge of geography; some tell you the mysteries of chemistry, some reveal the secrets of forestry and of general farming. They cover a wide range. They are chosen with an eye to the possible likings of every member of a Companion family—stories of vigorous action and stirring adventure for boys, stories of college life and domestic vicissitudes for girls, stories that range all the way from sheer drollery to deep seriousness for men and women. There are no stories quite like those in The Companion.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1916.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for 1916 will receive free a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1916, in addition to all the remaining 1915 issues from the time the subscription is received. The Youth's Companion, Boston, Mass.

Thanksgiving Donation Week

Mrs. J. W. Moore, president of the Board of Lady Managers of the Crisfield Hospital, makes the following appeal for donations during this week and we hope our readers will contribute liberally for our county hospital:

"We would like to remind every man, woman and child, white and colored, rich or poor, that the week beginning with Monday, November 22, is Thanksgiving Donation Week, for the hospital at Crisfield.

"We hope that everyone will be kind and generous enough to give a donation of some kind, to the hospital, and be it much or little, be sure the gift will be helpful and highly appreciated. If only a box of matches, few potatoes, cake of soap, eggs, a chicken, fruit, canned goods, etc., and any and everything will help. The hospital under the able and conscientious management of Mrs. Florence Smith as superintendent, is doing a splendid work, and every donation will be kept account of and used to the best advantage for the hospital. So many friends responded very generously to the Thanksgiving Donation for the hospital last year, especially the children of the public schools that we hope for a repetition of the same generous kindness this year. We trust that all teachers in the schools of Somerset county and the neighboring islands will talk this Thanksgiving Donation up among their people, and ask them each to bring to the school during Thanksgiving week some little gift or donation for the hospital. That the teachers will take a list of each donation and the name of the giver, and will forward same to the hospital, with their collection of donations.

"We shall also appreciate the kindly assistance of all ministers and superintendents of Sabbath schools, who can help much, if they will, by asking their congregations to contribute to the Thanksgiving Donation for the hospital.

E. A. LANKFORD NOW POSTMASTER

Appointment Pending For Over A Year And Ends Bitter Contest

Eugene A. Lankford, of Marion Station, entered upon the discharge of his duties as postmaster at Marion last week, having received his commission from the Postmaster-General on Saturday, the 21st. The issuance of the commission to Mr. Lankford ends a most bitter contest. There were two applicants for the appointment, Mr. Lankford, who was endorsed by Senator Blair Lee, Joshua W. Miles and the Democratic State Central Committee for Somerset county, and William S. Miles, who was backed by Congressman Jesse D. Price and the leaders of the anti-Miles faction.

The appointment has been pending for more than a year, Edward R. Coulbourne, a Republican, holding over until the fight among the Democrats could be settled. When Mr. Coulbourne's term expired Marion was a fourth-class office and a civil service examination was taken by Mr. Lankford and Mr. Miles, but before the appointment under the civil service rules was made the receipts of the office had increased to such an extent that the office was raised to the third-class, the appointment being then made by the President.

A short time before the last election President Wilson named Mr. Lankford for the place, but the commission was not sent out by the Postoffice Department because of objection filed by Congressman Price.

An Agreeable Conference

Messrs. E. W. McMaster and William H. Dashiell, superintendents of the public schools of Worcester and Somerset counties, held a most agreeable conference with Mr. W. J. Holloway, superintendent of the public schools of Wicomico county, at the latter's home in Salisbury, on Monday of last week. The three Superintendents were slated to take part in the exercises of the Tri-County Institute for colored teachers in Salisbury, and after their addresses had been made they repaired to Mr. Holloway's home, where the conference was held. It was determined that the Tri-County Institute, which has been held at Ocean City for the past eleven years, was too valuable an institution to be omitted and that it should be held again the latter part of next August. Mr. Holloway was requested to correspond with suitable instructors, one of whom should be Prof. Lunt, who lectured in 1915, and to report the result at a succeeding conference.

The conference was made doubly interesting by the presence of Mrs. McMaster and Mrs. Dashiell, in whose honor a superb dinner was served by Mrs. Holloway, at the close of which the visiting Superintendents and their wives were escorted to the station to take the train for their homes.

New Officials' Commissions Arrive

Commissions for the various county officials recently elected were received last week. Mr. George A. Somers qualified as a County Commissioner and accompanied by Robert F. Duer, Esq., went to the County Commissioners' office to have a reorganization of the Board. It was then nearly 2 o'clock and as some of the officials were to leave on the 2.09 train, the meeting for reorganization was postponed. Mr. Duer, it is understood, wishes to be elected counsel to the Board and is favored by Mr. Somers. Dr. Ward, the other Republican member, it is said, favors the election of Mr. Robins, of Crisfield.

Mr. Lafayette Ruark, will enter upon his duties as Register of Wills tomorrow (Wednesday). The Judges of the Orphans' Court have not yet qualified. The old Court meets to-day.

Mr. Charles Dryden has been appointed by Sheriff J. Edward Pruitt, as jailor and he will move to the jail the latter part of this week.

Mrs. Dashiell's Card Party

Mrs. W. H. Dashiell gave a card party last Friday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Emily I. Dashiell and her cousin, Miss Caroline E. Jesse.

Among those present were the following: Misses Olive Dashiell, Bernice Thompson, Marian Stanford, Mildred Beauchamp, Aline Wallop, Mary Miles Dashiell, Dorothy Jones, Amanda Lankford; Messrs. E. H. Cohn, Gordon Tull, Walter Long, Stewart Fitzgerald, H. L. Brittingham, Maurice Adams and Dr. Charles T. Fisher.

Mr. H. S. Lippincott, County Farm Agent, spent yesterday, Friday, in Crisfield, arranging an exhibit of the prize corn grown by Somerset boys, which won prizes in the recent tri-county contest. The corn is on exhibition at Dr. C. C. Ward's drug store.—Crisfield Times.

EMERGENCY HOSPITAL DEDICATED

New Building For Talbot, Caroline and Queen Anne's Counties

The new building of the Emergency Hospital, which is a tri-county hospital for Talbot, Caroline and Queen Anne counties, was opened for public inspection last Tuesday. Situated on the southern suburbs of Easton, on a large hill, it faces south and west, and commands a beautiful view of the surrounding country. The grounds are being graded and laid out by a landscape architect, and Harrison Brothers, of Berlin, have donated trees and shrubbery that will add greatly to the attractiveness of the place.

The exercises were presided over by Francis G. Wrightson, president of the Hospital Association, and Bishop William Forbes Adams, of the Diocese of Easton, offered prayer. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Charles P. Noble, of Kensington Hospital, Philadelphia; T. Alan Goldsborough, Denton; Dr. A. D. Harrison, Baltimore; J. H. C. Legg, Centerville; Mrs. Elizabeth Scanlan Noble, former superintendent of Kensington Hospital, Philadelphia; Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood, Baltimore, and Dr. Edward R. Trippe, of Easton. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. W. L. White, of Ebenezer Methodist Episcopal Church, of Easton. The reception committee comprised the board of directors and hospital staff.

The building is of brick, three stories high, with stone trimmings, and is of the colonial type of architecture. It has accommodations for 50 patients, public and private wards, with sun parlors; a maternity ward, a children's ward, an invalid ward, diet kitchens, two operating rooms, an accident room, dispensary, a laboratory, X-ray room and every modern hospital equipment. Not only have the residents of the communities interested contributed most liberally to the building fund, but they now are helping to furnish and equip it, which means that in the ten years of the existence of the Emergency Hospital it has gained the confidence and won the approval of those it has sought to serve.

Petition Dismissed by Judge Stanford

States Attorney Gordon Tull last week filed a petition to the Circuit Court for Somerset county to have a suspended sentence of suspension against Charles R. Porter, a Justice of the Peace of Princess Anne, carried into effect, because of an alleged defective bond filed by Porter in a case against Marbury Heath, for an attack upon Herbert Holland on election day. Heath had been put under a $200 bond and the offense charged by the State's Attorney was that the date of the April term of Court had been willfully omitted by Justice Porter. The petition was dismissed by Judge Stanford last Saturday morning as the signers of the bond, after examination, stated that they felt bound and were perfectly willing that the missing date should be supplied. Mr. Porter claimed that he did not know the exact date of the April term of Court and hence the omission.

Holstein-Friesian Breeders' Club

G. H. Hibbard, secretary of the Holstein-Friesian Breeders' Club of Maryland, has extended an invitation to the members of the club to the annual meeting to be held in Baltimore, at the Hotel Emerson, at 10.30 a. m., next Thursday. Among the speakers will be A. L. Brockway, of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, and A. B. Davis, of Chester, N. Y. A free lunch will be served at the hotel. All persons interested in Holstein-Friesian cattle are also invited.

R. D. Bowland Qualifies As Register

Mr. Rufus D. Bowland, newly elected Register of Wills for Cecil county, received his commission from Governor Goldsborough last Tuesday and took the oath of office. He succeeded Thomas B. Miller. Mr. Bowland served several terms as deputy register under Mr. R. E. Jamar and Mr. Miller. Mr. Bowland will be remembered in Princess Anne, as he was engaged in the printing business at the office of the old Somerset Herald under the late C. W. Fountain, who was then the editor and publisher.

THOUSANDS SEE GRANO HANGED

Italian Slayer Of Mr. And Mrs. Robinson And Alonzo Redden

Frank Grano was hanged at 9.15 o'clock last Friday morning at the Worcester County Almshouse about three miles from Snow Hill. The crime for which Grano paid the death penalty was the most brutal in the history of Worcester county. On September 6th he shot and killed Mr. and Mrs. Levin P. Robinson and their farm hand, Alonzo Redden.

Five minutes after the trap fell Grano was pronounced dead by the jail physician, Dr. John L. Riley.

Trembling from head to foot but nerved before the ordeal, Frank Grano stood on the top steps at the front door of the county jail and said "Good-bye, boys," to the 500 persons who had gathered to see his departure for the place of execution. A moment before he had been preceded by Rector George Martel Gallaneau, of All Hallows' Episcopal Church, his spiritual adviser, who had spent the night with him. Grano slept about four hours during the night.

There was no demonstration, nor was there any along the three miles of road to the woods of the county almshouse, where the gallows had been erected. Of foreign birth and used to the customs of Italy, the place of his birth, Grano did not understand all of the arrangements, and was surprised that the place of execution should be in a dense woods.

Spectators began to arrive in Snow Hill as early as nine o'clock Thursday night, and from that hour until the time of execution there was almost a continuous passing of automobiles and all kinds of horse-drawn vehicles through Snow Hill. Three hundred and ninety-six automobiles were counted in the woods adjacent to the place of execution. The Berlin state road was lined with automobiles and neighboring farm-yards were the resting places of many more.

A conservative estimate placed the number of persons who gathered around the court house at Snow Hill at 5,000. Many camped in the woods during the night and the glare from the numerous camp-fires presented a weird appearance at an early hour Friday morning—it resembled a large detention camp.

Adams—Knotts Wedding

An assembly of friends and relatives gathered at the Rehoboth Presbyterian Church last Wednesday at noon to witness the marriage of Miss Mary Knotts to Mr. Frederick Adams, of Marion. The ceremony was impressively performed by her pastor, Rev. Henry G. Martin.

The church was tastefully adorned with ivy trimmed arch, potted plants and yellow and white chrysanthemums. The bride and groom were preceded to the altar, accompanied by the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, by Messrs. Lee Carroll and Lloyd Matthews, cousins of the groom and Louis Adams and Stanley Adams, brothers of the groom.

The bride was attired in a going-away gown of midnight blue poplin, a gold lace hat trimmed with plumes, carried a bouquet of yellow and white chrysanthemums. Mr. and Mrs. Adams left immediately for a trip North. After their return they will reside near Marion.

Miss Toadvin A Bride

A beautiful wedding was solemnized at the home of ex-Judge and Mrs. E. Stanley Toadvin, when their daughter, Katherine Holland, was married to Thomas H. Lewis, Jr., at noon last Thursday.

The father of the groom, Thomas H. Lewis, president of Western Maryland College, officiated. Among those present were the guests at the wedding of the bride's father and mother 26 years ago. Thursday being the wedding anniversary of ex-Judge Toadvin and his wife.

The bride wore a traveling gown and carried white orchids. The couple left by motor shortly after the wedding for northern cities. Mr. Lewis is an attorney of Salisbury.

An Unfortunate Delay

Mr. F. E. Matthews, of the Board of County Commissioners, who is a notable fruit grower near Pocomoke City, sent to Baltimore during Maryland week, twelve barrels of fine apples for exhibition at the Fifth Regiment Armory. Unfortunately, owing to an accident to the steamer Tivoli, the apples did not reach their destination until after the premium awards had been made. This was a most regrettable occurrence and was most disappointing to Mr. Matthews and his friends.

STEAMER TIVOLI DESTROYED BY FIRE

B. & A. Liner Burned To Water's Edge And Several Lives Lost

The steamship Tivoli, of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic, Maryland, Delaware and Virginia Line, plying between Baltimore, Snow Hill and Crisfield, was burned to the water's edge early last Friday night several miles below Thomas' Point, about fifty miles from Baltimore.

At least two lives were lost and four persons are missing. More than 80 persons, including many women and children, were saved. The dead are: Mrs. Thomas Bowden, of Crisfield, and an unidentified colored woman. The missing are Virginia and William Heward, children of Capt. Richard Heward; Ed. Young, watchman, and Edward Murray, fireman.

The death of Mrs. Bowden, which resulted within 15 minutes after the fire broke over the steamer, was due to her weakened condition. She was returning to her home in Crisfield from a Baltimore hospital.

A number of Somerset people were passengers on the steamer among whom were Mrs. Thos. S. Hodson, of Crisfield, and the warped hull and a tangled mass of machinery remain of the vessel, which was one of the largest on the line. The origin of the fire is unknown.

The steamships Florida, of the Bay Line, City of Richmond, of the Chesapeake Line, and the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic steamer Dorchester, picked up those who had leaped from the burning ship or had been lowered in the lifeboats. So far as could be learned there was no disorder aboard.

The Tivoli was the second steamship of the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Atlantic Railway Company to be destroyed by fire this year. On January 22nd the steamer Maryland was burned at the mouth of the Magdohy River, in the Chesapeake Bay.

The Tivoli was one of the most widely known ships of the local line. It had been in service since 1891. It had a gross tonnage of 704 tons, and a net tonnage of 509 tons.

The ship was 175.5 feet in length, 53.9 feet in depth. It carried only moderate freight, the company devoting the service principally to the passenger trade. The Tivoli carried a crew of 34. It was built at the plant of the Maryland Steel Company, at Sparrow's Point, Md.

James H. Covington Dead

A victim to a sudden attack of pneumonia, James H. Covington, father of Chief Justice James Harry Covington, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, died rather unexpectedly at his rooms, 1019 Linden avenue, Baltimore, last Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Covington was 80 years old and one of the most prominent figures of the Eastern Shore.

Born in Delaware, he early moved to the Eastern Shore of Maryland, where he lived on his estate in the neighborhood of Easton for many years. It was only in later years, when his son became prominent in political matters, that he moved to Baltimore.

Chief Justice Covington was holding a session in Criminal Court No. 1, Washington, Tuesday when he received word of the critical condition of his father. Adjourning the court he made a hurried trip to Baltimore and was with his father when he died. The body was taken for burial to Easton Thursday.

The President Works On Address

Thanksgiving Day was spent by President Wilson at his typewriter working on his annual addresses to Congress, and he typed away until late that night so as to have the document in the hands of the Public Printer last Friday.

Abandoning plans he had made for spending the day with Mrs. Norman Galt, his fiancée, the President locked the door of his private study and emerged only for a short automobile ride in the afternoon and to eat Thanksgiving dinner with his family.

In view of the probability that the contest over national defense at the next session of Congress will be one of the most important of his administration, Mr. Wilson devoted more than unusual care and time to preparation of the address. While he consulted with members of his Cabinet about general features, the actual writing has been done in seclusion and without the advice of anyone.

The Automobile Club of Maryland now has 2,800 members, a gain of 400 members since the last annual meeting. The gross receipts for the fiscal year ending October 31st, 1915, were $17,605.68, and the expenses $15,227.16. The club has sign-posted the State of Maryland with permanent signs over about 600 miles of State road, including the Eastern Shore.

Two Fishermen Blown To Pieces

Harry Pattey and Samuel Monkhouse, Sr., while removing poles used for fish pounds with dynamite off Ocean City, were blown to atoms last Tuesday. Only small fragments of their bodies were found.

It is a regulation of the War Department that these poles must be removed after each fishing season, and the engineer's office of the War Department sends an inspector there after each season to see that the obstructions are removed. It was while this work was being done that a charge of dynamite exploded in the boat. Men in another large fish-pound boat near the scene of the accident were knocked unconscious by the force of the explosion.

The boat in which the dynamite exploded had about 110 pounds of dynamite aboard, and there was not a fragment of the boat left as big as one's hand.

The dynamite is exploded by means of an electric battery, and it is presumed that the switch was thrown on in some way, exploding the charge in the boat.

CHILD RESCUED FROM FILTHY ROOM

Crulley To Grace Marshall For 11 Years Horrifies All Maryland

There are many peculiar features in the case of Grace Marshall, the young woman found locked in a room in her father's cottage near St. Michaels, Md. The fact that neither the uncle of the girl, who, it is said, was the first to discover her condition, and other relatives did not know of it in all the 11 years during which, according to the story, she was kept in solitary confinement.

Frank Marshall, the father of Grace, and her stepmother both declared that they never intended to harm the girl. The father said that before she was 16 years old his daughter began to act in a queer way and to show signs of a weak mind. He said he called a physician, who examined her and recommended that she be sent to some institution where she could be given good care. This he intended to do, but found, upon inquiry, that it would cost more than he could afford. So he decided to do the best he could by keeping her at home.

It was not until she jumped from a window, broke a leg and otherwise injured herself that he and his wife decided to keep her under lock and key at all times. She became worse, and, according to Marshall's statement, he felt that there was nothing more he could do for her. The father expressed his deep regret for what he had done, but insisted he believed he was doing the best for his daughter.

The brutal treatment of the child by her parents was unearthed by Miss Emma Davis, local agent in Easton for the Children's Aid Society of Maryland, and the girl was taken to the home of her aunt, Mrs. M. H. James, at Easton. Dr. Charles F. Davidson, who made an examination of the girl, said that she did not have two ounces of solid fat on her body, and that she had barely enough blood left to keep her alive, and that of the poorest kind. In fact her condition was deplorable, she being nothing but skin and bones. She only weighed 57 1/2 pounds.

Grace Marshall was moved to the new Emergency Hospital, at Easton, Wednesday morning and thus became the first patient to occupy a room there. She was removed from the home of her aunt, Mrs. James, because her condition became so serious early Wednesday morning that Dr. Charles H. Davidson, fearing that it would be necessary to transfuse blood into her veins to keep the small spark of life remaining in her wasted and neglected body still burning, wanted every facility for an operation. On Thursday the doctor stated that from all indications she would recover, but that he thought blood transfusion was advisable and would perform the operation as soon as possible.

Frank Marshall, father of the girl, was arrested Tuesday afternoon and held without bail on the charge of assault with intent to kill and placed in the jail at Easton. Mrs. Marshall, the stepmother of the girl, was arrested Wednesday morning and locked up in jail, charged with assaulting Grace.

Frank Marshall and his wife, Mrs. Rose Virginia Marshall, were held last Friday morning for action of the Talbot County Grand Jury, which will meet on the third Monday in May, by Police Magistrate Tharp. Bail for the couple, which was fixed at $2,500 each, was promptly furnished by a delegation of residents of St. Michaels.

Long before the time set for the hearing throngs of persons began to arrive there, and because of the crowd it was deemed advisable to hold the hearing in the Court House. After much delay, during which the spectators became very restless, General Joseph B. Seth, who represented the Marshalls, announced that he waived the hearing and asked that the couple be released on bail. Those who furnished bail are: Former Senator Richard S. Dodson, James G. and Thomas B. Jones and son, Captain, all of St. Michaels. The courtroom was crowded, the steps were filled and the corridors were thronged. Some disappointment was manifested when the Marshalls were released.

153.76 Bushels Corn On Acre

Dewey Hanes, of Arcanum, Darke county, Ohio, is the champion boy corn grower of Ohio. He raised 153.76 bushels on one acre this year in the juvenile contest conducted by the State Board of Agriculture, and as a reward will make a trip through the East on board the Buckeye Corn Boy's Special train, with his expenses paid by the State.

Other winners in the contest are Erwin Neiding, of Vermillion, Lorain county, with 143.12 bushels; Russell Shiffley, of Bucyrus, Crawford county, with 130.06 bushels, and Dewey Goddard, Amesville, Athens county, with 124.08 bushels.

A Secret Marriage

It Was Between a Prince and a Girl In Wooden Shoes.

By F. A. MITCHEL

"I see in this proposal, your majesty," said the prime minister, Van der Donken, to King Hubert, "a scheme to unite our kingdom of Litoria to that of Pomaria. Your majesty is well aware that the area of Pomaria is three times that of Litoria. If the Princess Catherine marries your son it will result in the annexation of your dominions to those of your hereditary enemies."

"That shall never be," said King Hubert, grinding his teeth.

"Unfortunately, the prince has met the princess, and she has captivated him."

"What sort of woman is she?"

"Inordinately ambitious. She is described by those of her suit as being avaricious, selfish and cruel."

"What can we do to turn the prince from her? I fear that to attack her will only enlist him in her defense."

"Your majesty is right. We must accomplish our ends by diplomacy. The princess has your son in thrall. To win him from her we must inveigle her into a trap, and once she has entered it we must exercise all our ingenuity to prevent her getting out."

"Have you a plan?"

"I have. It is this: Let us give out that your majesty has been attacked by a disease that must prove fatal within a few months; that you desire the prince, who will inherit the throne after you, to marry at once on pain of your naming his cousin, Oscar, to succeed you in his stead. Catherine will not marry him without his inheritance. But she will not hesitate to permit him to sacrifice it for revenge upon your majesty for not consenting to the match. I shall endeavor to make some compromise with her by which we may rescue the prince from her."

Van der Donken was a marvel of astuteness, being regarded as equal in chicanery even to a woman. The king gave him carte blanche to do as he liked, and he set out at once for the capital of Pomaria, where he found Prince Carl in dalliance with the Princess Catherine. The minister announced to the young man that his father had not long to live, that a proposal had been made by King Otto of the neighboring kingdom of Brentino that the two kingdoms should be united by the marriage of Carl and King Otto's daughter, Xenia, and that the marriage should be celebrated at once. If the prince refused the crown should pass at his father's death to his cousin.

This interview between Van der Donken and Carl took place in the presence of Catherine. The prince looked at her for instructions as to his reply. She replied for him by stating that he was betrothed to her and would marry her. If any usurper took her place at his father's death the king of Pomaria would send an armed force to Litoria to seat its rightful sovereign on the throne.

Now, the kingdom of Brentino was even more powerful than that of Pomaria. The hand of the Princess Xenia had indeed been offered to Carl, and doubtless if Carl had seen her he would have obeyed his father. On receiving a refusal to King Hubert's plans the wily Van der Donken proposed to Carl and Catherine a compromise. He suggested that Carl marry some girl of low degree. His father, to withdraw him from such a union, would consent to a divorce and his marriage with Catherine. Again the prince looked at the princess for instructions. She agreed to take the matter under consideration and after long reflection consented to the plan, making it a condition that she should approve of the girl the prince married.

Van der Donken agreed to this, though he well knew that Catherine would not consent to the prince marrying any girl who was capable of drawing him away from her.

The prince returned to Litoria with Van der Donken, it having been arranged that the princess should follow to inspect the girl he would marry as soon as one could be found to do so on receiving a price and giving her consent to a subsequent divorce. In due time the princess was called for and introduced into the home of a poor widow whose daughter had consented to the terms.

Anneke was the name of the bride, a little Dutch girl in a number of petticoats and wooden shoes. Her complexion was brown, her face covered with pimples and her hair a fiery red. Her appearance was that of a half-witted person. As soon as Catherine saw her she gave her consent to the marriage, which took place in her presence and that of Van der Donken and Anneke's mother. Then Carl went back to Pomaria with Catherine.

Meanwhile King Hubert had kept himself in seclusion, but as soon as his minister announced to him that his son had been married he appeared again in public apparently as well as ever. Catherine, hearing of his recovery, was quite taken aback, fearing that she had been tricked. But, remembering the wedding with the homely Dutch girl, she took heart.

Then came Van der Donken to the prince with an order from his father to appear at court and prepare to go on a visit to the Princess Xenia, with whom a marriage for him had been contracted. The prince and Catherine after consultation agreed that the time had come for making known to his father his marriage and refusing to be divorced unless he were permitted to marry Catherine and inherit the crown as well. But Van der Donken said that King Hubert's mind was set on the Princess Xenia, and he believed that if she could be persuaded to decline Prince Carl the matter would be simplified. He suggested that Carl pay the visit to Xenia, but so made up that he would appear unattractive to her, and he could treat her so indifferently or even rudely that she would refuse to marry him.

The minister finally persuaded Catherine to agree to this, and the prince went back to Litoria with Van der Donken. Then, having made his preparations for the journey, taking with him only two friends who were in his secret, he set out for the capital of Brentino. On the way he darkened his complexion. One of his friends, an artist, painted little pimples all over his face, and the prince put on a red wig. He had been much repelled by these features on the part of Anneke and thought they might repel the Princess Xenia.

When the formal introduction took place the princess raised her fan to her face—what for no one knew, but Prince Carl presumed that it was to conceal her disgust for him. But it seemed rather to conceal a smile, for she offered her hand to him most cordially. He bowed and kissed it, then looked up at a very beautiful girl. There was that in her appearance to remind him of some one he had seen before, but he could not place the person. He tried to say something disagreeable, but the words stuck in his throat. The princess slipped her hand on his arm and drew him away from the others into an apartment where they would be alone together.

From the moment the prince saw the Princess Xenia he was attracted to her, and it was not long before he regretted having disobeyed his father in refusing to marry her. The saying "Absence makes the heart grow fonder" did not pertain to him. The Princess Catherine being out of sight was out of mind. Nevertheless he had been so long dominated by her superior will that the idea of being unfaithful to her filled him with terror. At the same time the influence of the woman present became steadily stronger. The Princess Xenia did everything needful to concentrate his mind upon herself. She gave fetes in her honor, and in each her costume was designed to enhance her beauty.

Prince Carl had promised Catherine that every day he would send her a message telling her how he was getting on in repelling the Princess Xenia. The day after his arrival at Brentino he wrote that he was acting as brutally as possible. But those about him noticed that his pimples had suddenly been healed. The second day he wrote that he had offended the princess. But while dressing in the morning he washed off his dark complexion. The third day he wrote that he was very near being sent away. This he really believed to be true, for when sitting by Xenia she pulled off his wig and appeared to be very much displeased with him for coming to court disguised.

On the fourth day Carl wrote Catherine that something special had happened; he would write her a full account of it soon. This is what he referred to:

When he joined the Princess Xenia he found in her stead his wife, Anneke. She threw her arms around his neck, but he repelled her. Then she pulled off his red wig and, turning to a fountain, washed her face. Turning to him, he recognized the Princess Xenia.

"What does all this mean?" he asked.

"It means that your father, King Hubert, having received from my father an offer of my hand for you, informed us that so far as he was concerned the offer was accepted, but unfortunately you had fallen under the spell of another woman. If, however, I would agree to a plan to defeat this other woman devised by his prime minister he hoped all would be well. I assented and was married to you as a homely simpleton."

The princess kicked off her wooden shoes and displayed a pair of tiny feet incased in kid shoes. She unfastened her petticoats and appeared in a morning gown of silk and lace. Next her bodice came off and showed a corsage to match her other apparel. Then the prince folded her in his arms.

The prince at once sent for Van der Donken, who came posthaste and was informed that Prince Carl and Princess Xenia, having been married secretly, desired that preparations for their public wedding should be made with as little delay as possible. The prince never wrote Catherine what had happened, having forgotten all about her. Van der Donken returned to King Hubert, and the king was so pleased with his management of the problem that he at once created him a duke.

An announcement made that the kingdoms of Litoria and Brentino would be united by the marriage of Prince Carl and the Princess Xenia filled the people of both kingdoms with delight. A few weeks later a public marriage took place at the capital of Brentino, at which there was great rejoicing. For many years Queen Xenia preserved the red wig and wooden shoes in which she had been privately married to King Carl, and after her death they were removed to the royal museum.

As for the Princess Catherine, she was so cut up by being tricked that she never married, and after her father's death the crown of Pomaria passed to another branch of the royal family.

TESTING A FREIGHT CAR.

Shower Baths Are Used For Detecting Leaky Roofs.

Shower baths for freight cars? Certainly. Treating the cars to a good bath every now and then is the method which railroads have devised to prevent having to pay for freight damaged while in transit by water leaking through the car roofs.

To detect a leak in the roof of a freight car before it has caused any damage to the goods inside is no easy matter. Previous to the introduction of the shower baths for cars railroads frequently had to pay heavy bills for damage caused by roofs which were supposedly in the best of condition.

To overcome this difficulty on several large railroad systems every car is given at regular intervals a severe test for leaks by means of shower baths.

The bathing apparatus is rigged over a track along which the car is run at slow speed. Enormous volumes of water are poured upon the car and with such force that water will find its way inside if there is any fault in the roof, sheathing or ends.

As soon as the car emerges from the bath inspectors examine it carefully and mark with chalk any signs of leaks.

A car thus marked is sent to the shop to be made waterproof. Before it is sent out to resume its work it is subjected to a second shower bath to determine whether the repairs have been satisfactorily made.—New York American.

MODERN GREEKS.

Those at Home Outnumbered by Those in Other Countries.

What and who are these modern Greeks? The most skeptical investigators admit that in most of them is some blood transmitted from ancient Greece and that there is a proportion of Greek descent in Greece about equal to that of Anglo-Saxon descent in America. For the rest the modern Greeks are either Albanian or Slav or Vlach.

Besides the Greeks in Greece, there are other Greeks who far outnumber them. They are found on all the coasts of the Ottoman empire. Crete and the other islands until very lately under Turkish sovereignty have no other inhabitants important in numbers. They are numerous in Asia Minor, in Syria and in Egypt.

While domiciled elsewhere they remain passionate in devotion to the Greece they style Hellas, the modern kingdom, whose people are called Hellenes, and, being masters of commerce and finance, many of them have gained enormous fortunes, from which they pour great sums into Athens particularly, but into Greece generally, for public buildings and endowments. From "The Balkans—A Laboratory of History," by William Milligan Smith.

Cleopatra and Poisons. Cleopatra, assembled all kinds of deadly poisons and began experiments with all the criminals sentenced to death in order to see if the action of the poison was painless. As she observed that those which acted quickly brought death with great pain and that the milder poisons worked slowly, she began experiments with poisonous animals, setting them upon other animals in her presence. This she did daily and noted that among them all only the bite of a certain poisonous snake evoked without tremor or pain a certain numbness and invincible desire for sleep so that the victims gradually died with a light sweat upon the face and gradual darkening of the senses, and when one tried to awaken them or to brighten them were as unwilling as those who are in a deep sleep.—Plutarch.

The English of the Diamond. In the National league is an umpire who is a stickler for correct deportment on the diamond. In a game in which he officiated at the Polo grounds early in the season as Chief Meyers, the Indian catcher for New York, came to bat, certain of the Boston players sitting on their bench began to guff the brawny red man.

In an instant the umpire had left his place behind the catcher and was running toward the visitors' bombproof. "Cut out them personalities!" he ordered. "Cut out them personalities!" As he turned away a high pitched voice filtered out from the grand stand behind him, saying:

"Cut out them grammar!"—Saturday Evening Post.

In "Tod Sloane," by himself, the once famous jockey says that a horse exceeds even a dog in intelligence and that if a thoroughbred were small enough to run about a house like a dog and have the same chances instead of being so much alone surprising results would follow. "Cussedness" in horses, he thinks, may be caused by too much inbreeding, bringing about an extraordinary temperament. The best jockey, says Sloane, is the boy with a nervous temperament. The Grimshaw-Greene Secret

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS

In one of the regiments that sailed from Florida for the Spanish American war were Privates Tom Grimshaw and Oliver Greene, who appeared to be intimate friends. Grimshaw was cut out for a soldier, but Greene was not, of slight build and feminine in appearance. He gave his age at enlistment as eighteen, but it was doubted by his comrades if he were so old as that. Either his voice had not changed from that of a boy to manhood or it was naturally high pitched and squeaky.

During the early part of the term of service of the two friends they were very companionable. Whenever they were permitted to leave camp they went together and came back together. Their comrades wondered why Grimshaw chose a chum of such different make-up from himself, but some one suggested that most men's friendships were of that kind. When two persons come together permanently one should be yielding.

After awhile it was noticed that a soldier named Evans was added to the duo, making a trio. He was more like Grimshaw than Greene, being a larger man and stronger than either of the other two.

The trio friendship lasted but a few days, and it was noticed from the first that Grimshaw did not relish the advent of Evans into the companionship. Then the trio changed. Greene was alternately hobnobbing with Evans and with Grimshaw, while the two latter had nothing to do with each other.

Evans was made a sergeant, and this gave him some authority over Grimshaw and Greene. He never lost an opportunity to domineer over the former nor to make Greene's duties lighter. Greene was frequently seen arguing earnestly with Grimshaw, and although little or nothing was heard of what he was saying to his friend it was supposed that he was trying to keep the peace between his two friends. He seemed to incline to his first friend, Grimshaw, but the more he did so the more Evans seemed to be antagonized against both the other two.

During an interval in the fighting at Santiago Grimshaw and Evans were seen to go off by themselves, and after awhile Grimshaw returned with a black eye. When Evans came in a little later it was noticed that there was blood on his shirt. Since he gave no sign of a wound it was surmised that he had received a blow on the nose which had drawn the claret. Neither of the men would give any explanation as to what had happened, but it was evident that they had had a fist fight, and this view was confirmed by their keeping apart thereafter.

For the next few days Greene seemed to be much troubled. He evidently sided with Grimshaw, for he had very little to say to Evans, who was glum, keeping much by himself except when performing military duties. Then the fighting increased, and the regiment was so incessantly engaged that this little play being enacted between three soldiers was dwarfed by more important matters.

Toward the close of the fighting at Santiago Greene was severely wounded. He was picked up and carried to the rear on a stretcher. A surgeon attended him, and he was placed in the hospital.

Wickersham, of his company, who was discharged from the hospital, reported that Greene had been taken from the ward in which he had been first placed and given a room by himself. This was considered remarkable, for it would not have likely happened unless the invalid had been dangerously wounded, which was not the case.

Then it became known that Grimshaw had visited his chum, but there was no evidence that Evans had done so. By this time the boys had begun to chaff Grimshaw and Evans about their rivalry for the friendship of Greene and asked Evans why he did not also visit his wounded friend. Evans turned on his heel and walked away without a reply.

Soon after this the war closed, and the troops were removed to Montauk Point, on Long Island. Grimshaw was one of the few who went home in good health. Evans was down with typhoid fever. Grimshaw was devoted to Greene, and as soon as he received his discharge he took his friend away from the camp, and this was the end of the matter of the trio friendship so far as the regiment knew anything about it.

One day Grimshaw met one of his war comrades on the street and asked him to dine with him, stating that he had been married and wished to introduce his companion in arms to his wife. When the guest met Mrs. Grimshaw he looked at her in a sort of bewilderment.

"Are you or are you not Oliver Greene?" he asked.

"I am Olivia Greene Grimshaw."

Then Tom Grimshaw explained. He and Olivia Greene had been married before the Cuban war, and, either from a desire to be with her husband or a love of adventure, or both, she had enlisted in the same company with him. Evans had discovered her sex, but not that she was a wife. He had made love to her and, jealous of Grimshaw, had threatened to reveal her secret. That was all there was to the mystery. Mrs. Grimshaw's sex was discovered by the surgeon who attended her when wounded, and she was placed in a room by herself.

THE CURIOUS KANGAROO.

A Theory Its Queer Style of Animal Architecture Suggests.

The kangaroo family is unique and is found only in Australia. It is the most remarkable branch of the order of the marsupials, or pouched animals, the pouch being a kind of pocket in which the young are nourished and protected for a long time after birth. The opossum is an example of a marsupial inhabiting America, but it bears no outward resemblance to a kangaroo.

The marsupials arose in very ancient geological times somewhere in the mesozoic age, and later on nearly disappeared except in Australia and neighboring islands, where today they constitute the characteristic native fauna.

There is one curious fact about the kangaroo which appears all the more singular when we reflect upon the great antiquity of the order of the marsupials. It almost looks as if this extraordinary Australian animal represents a survival of a style of animal architecture which was once a favorite with nature, but has since been abandoned.

The frames of these creatures are characterized by an enormous development of the posterior parts, including gigantic tails and massive thighs and hind legs. If any of the dinosaurs had a leaping power comparable with that of the kangaroo, the terror inspired by their forms must have been matched by that arising from their movements.

HIS DAY OF REST.

A Town in France Where a Legal Holiday Is Strictly Observed.

The jeweler's face expressed bewilderment and astonishment and amusement. He looked from the artist to me and back again at the artist. He started at the end of every sentence to say something, but the artist didn't give him a chance. The artist kept on talking, while I kept on trying to control my sense of humor. I wanted to shriek. I longed for the ability to write shorthand, so that I could put it all down for posterity.

The artist had left a watch to be mended, and we were standing in front of the jeweler's shop on one of the narrow streets of Douarnenez, a town in the extreme west of France. The shutters were up in front of the shop, and the jeweler was in his shirt sleeves, looking as if he had been waked up by our knock from an enjoyable after-dinner sleep. The artist and I were leaving by the 3:15 train for Pont Croix, and we didn't intend to come back this way. It was Thursday, but the jeweler had politely explained that he could not give us the watch until tomorrow, although it was all ready and was hanging from its little hook in the shop at whose open door we stood. The reason was that Thursday had been chosen by the jeweler for his repos hebdomadaire—the one day in seven rest imposed by law.—Herbert Adams Gibson in Harper's Magazine.

Light of a Deep Sea Shrimp.

One of the most extraordinary crustacea ever discovered was dredged up by the Prince of Monaco from a depth of 16,000 feet. It has been named Ophiophorus grimaldi. It is a sort of shrimp, and its peculiarity is that it squirts from two holes near its mouth a liquid which, on coming into contact with salt water, produces a fine pale blue light.

Absolute darkness reigns in the depths where it lives, but the little shrimp does not find it necessary to keep its light always burning. This would use up too much energy, so it squirts out the illuminating fluid only when it wants to look at something, or perhaps to attract the minute animalcules that form its food.—New York World.

A Poverty Stricken Queen.

Partly owing to the fact that she was wedded to an avaricious king and partly because she was generous with the little money allowed her Elizabeth of York, queen of Henry VII., spent but a small amount for dress. She was very often in debt, and the sums she spent were ridiculously small, 20 shillings ($5) being the greatest amount expended at any one time. Her gowns were mended and turned, and new waists were made for them, as is shown by the record of bills paid to her tailor. These bills prove that she wore her clothes for a long time, for her gowns were obliged to be newly hemmed, and also that, though a princess of the great house of Plantagenet, she wore shoes costing but 24 cents, which were decorated with tin buckles.

Charm Cures.

Belief in charm cures is not quite extinct even today. Only a short while ago a child in East Anglia went to a chemist with a request from her mother for a spider in a nutshell to hang round baby's neck to cure his whooping cough. In the west country some still pin faith in the cure of whooping cough by administering cooked dormouse or by plucking a hair from the sick child's neck, hiding it in a piece of meat and giving it to a dog. No child will ever have the malady, others affirm, if it has ridden on the back of a bear!—London Telegraph.

Friday Weddings.

Friday is a day of which about to wed couples are extremely nervous. It is a matter of record in most cities that fewer licenses are issued on that day than on the other five of the working week. In the divorce court no such hesitancy is manifest.

Aridity.

He—The town you live in is rather arid socially, isn't it? She—Arid? Well, I should say so. Why, the soil there is so arid socially that you can't even raise your eyebrows.—Vanity Fair.

Wicks' Forecasts for December

The first regular storm period is central on the 3rd, its disturbing forces lasting from 1st to the 6th, inclusive. The Mercury period projects at least half way through the regular Vulcan period. The Mars period is, of course, continued in full strength. The Moon is in conjunction with Earth and Sun, and also in perigee on the 6th. Threatening, Mercurial conditions will, most likely, last throughout this period. The New Moon in perigee on the 7th, will tend to a prolongation of such weather, holding barometric pressure below normal, and keeping back boreal change until after that date. A sudden and intense cold wave is now probable, attended by blizzardous puffs of wind and snow, immediately on the heels of this storm center.

The first reactionary storm period is central on and touching the 9th and 10th. The December solstice period will make itself felt at this time, and boreal storms of wind and snow will begin to rush out of the polar regions "in good shape." From this period, to the end of December and into January, 1916, look for marked winter storms and weather.

The second regular storm period conjoins its center with that of the Earth's winter solstice period on the 15th. It extends from about the 12th to the 18th, inclusive. About this time the Earth's north pole, and hence its northern hemisphere, is turned at widest angle away from the Sun and into frigid outer space. The south pole and its hemisphere is at the opposite storm and weather breeding position, in its relation to the Sun and the influences that lie outside the Solar System.

The second reactionary storm period is central on the 20th, 21st and 22nd. These are critical days, at the turning crisis of the winter solstice. The Venus period is nearing its center, the Mars influence still holds, and the Moon is in opposition to Earth and Sun on the 21st—the shortest day of the year. On and touching Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 20th, 21st and 22nd, a storm center, one or more, will pass from west to east across the country. This means a low and falling barometer, increase in temperature, cloudiness and rain and snow.

The third regular storm period is central on the 26th, extending from the 24th to the 29th inclusive. Added to this regular Vulcan period, the Venus period is central on the 28th, the Moon is on the celestial equator on the 27th and at last quarter on the 29th. The Mars period will be closing about this time. The barometer will give notice in all western sections by the 24th to 25th, of growing storm conditions, and from about Saturday the 25th, to Tuesday the 28th, marked and intense midwinter storms will visit all sections of the country in their progress eastward. On and about the 27th, these storms will be attended with winter lightning and thunder, especially in southern sections.

ANOTHER ARREST IN CHATHAM CASE

Blood On Richard Gordon's Shirt Directs Suspicion To Him

Richard Gordon, a white man about 65 years of age, was taken to Snow Hill Monday of last week and placed in jail under suspicion of being connected with the murder of Samuel Chatham, a crime which has baffled the efforts of the best detectives in the State.

Policeman Hurley Esham, of Snow Hill, has been conducting an independent investigation of murder for the Chatham family, and this investigation resulted in State's Attorney Johnson ordering Gordon brought to Snow Hill and his detention during the investigation of the suspicion which rests upon him.

Gordon admits that he visited the Chatham home on the day of the murder and that Mr. Chatham told him tour men would be there that day to pay him money. One man did go and pay Mr. Chatham a dollar, but another man, who was to have paid Mr. Chatham $150 that day for a horse, did not put in an appearance.

It was a bloody shirt that caused the arrest of Gordon. It is alleged that the shirt in evidence was worn by Gordon on the day of the murder and that the shirt now has evidence of having been stained with blood and having been washed repeatedly in that particular spot. Dr. Wisheart has examined the spot and declares it to be blood. Gordon says if it is he knows nothing about it; that some one must have entered his home and placed the blood on the shirt, or that it was caused by his teeth bleeding. He stoutly denies that he is in any way connected with the crime.

HIGH EXPLOSIVES.

SCIENCE IN THEIR MAKING

These Terribly Destructive Agents Are the Outcome of Serious Research Work—Smokeless Powders and How They Are Produced.

A word of caution to amateurs who wish to experiment with high explosives—don't. The manufacture of high explosives is now a highly specialized branch of chemistry and chemical engineering, and great technical knowledge and experience are necessary if one wishes to go through life whole. Another caution—not one of the present explosive compounds has been discovered and made practical by an amateur; they are as much a growth of scientific research as is the manufacture of aniline dyes.

The bases of the most terribly destructive explosives are very innocent substances themselves and of high importance in the arts of peace. Cotton and glycerin are the two most important raw materials used for high explosives; next come phenols, benzol, toluol, etc. Cotton is by far the most important, as its nitro compounds are the base of all smokeless powders used in cannon and rifles and explosive shells and torpedo heads.

Smokeless powder is now the most important military product of gun cotton and nitroglycerin. Broadly speaking, smokeless powder is a gelatinized form of gun cotton or gun cotton and nitroglycerin in varying proportions, with small proportions of other substances to modify its action or to stabilize it. The general method of making each of the two types is as follows: Gun cotton powders are made by dissolving a mixture of dinitro and trinitrocellulose in a mixture of alcohol and ether, working the mass until a plastic jelly is formed and then working this up with its other ingredients and finally pressing the mass into threads and cylinders or cutting up sheets of it to make small grains.

Smokeless powder for big guns and smaller rifled cannon is usually made in the form of perforated cylinders of varying sizes by forcing the plastic mass through dies. These cylinders are from an eighth of an inch to an inch in thickness and from half an inch to two inches long, the size and number of perforations varying with the size of the gun for which intended. The cylinders are perforated so that the same from the combustion can burn them more evenly, thus securing uniform pressure in the gun and its maximum effect.

Smokeless powders are exploded by direct flame, from a friction or electric primer, the combustion being almost instantaneous. Set after in open air smokeless powders burn fiercely, but without explosion. Unless badly deteriorated by age and consequent formation of excess of free acids, smokeless powder seldom explodes by concussion. When excessively acid it will explode spontaneously.

In appearance smokeless powder resembles yellow or amber celluloid, has a horny texture and can be cut with a knife. The powder used by the United States is a gun cotton powder, a small proportion of diphenylamine and calcium carbide being added to stabilize it. The process and methods of manufacture are closely guarded secrets.

Nitroglycerin smokeless powders have as a base both gun cotton and nitroglycerin. The gun cotton is dissolved in the nitroglycerin, a jelly-like mass being formed. This is then dissolved in acetone or a mixture of alcohol and ether, stabilizing ingredients added and the whole worked into a plastic mass. This mass is then pressed into sticks or perforated cylinders or granulated from sheets by the same process as gun cotton powder, and the finished product is similar in appearance.

Nitroglycerin powders have a greater explosive force than nitrocellulose powders, but have the drawback of being unstable and irregular in action. In fact, all smokeless powders have these defects. The perfect smokeless powder is yet to be invented, and meanwhile those who handle and store it must keep a constant watch for signs of deterioration and consequent liability to spontaneous explosion.

The most stable and effective type of smokeless powder is the English "cordite," so called because molded into strips or cords of varying length and diameter. The new type cordite is composed of approximately 65 parts of trinitrocellulose, thirty parts of nitroglycerin and five parts of mineral jelly or petrolatum, acetone being used for making the jelly and dissolving the nitrocellulose.

Originally petrolatum was added to cordite with the idea that it would lessen the erosion of the charge on the rifling of the gun. Later it was discovered that the petrolatum acted as an almost perfect stabilizer by preventing oxidation mechanically. Cordite formerly contained a higher proportion of nitroglycerin, but this formula has been abandoned for the later one, as the old powder was too subject to decomposition.

Blasting gelatin is similar in composition to this type of smokeless powder and is made by dissolving gun cotton in nitroglycerin, the proportions of each varying as to the class and uses of the explosive. In all smokeless powders effort is made to retain some of the solvent used, as this makes it safer to handle and more uniform in composition. Camphor and similar substances are sometimes added as stabilizers—American Druggist.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

If your work is tiring; if your nerves are excited; if you feel languid, weary or depressed, you should know that Scott's Emulsion overcomes just such conditions.

It possesses in concentrated form the very elements to invigorate the blood, strengthen the tissues, nourish the nerves and build strength.

Scott's is strengthening thousands of mothers—and will help you. No alcohol. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

GETTING AN EDUCATION.

After the Age of Thirty is the Time to Start in Earnest.

According to the Saturday Evening Post, the best time to get an education—perhaps the only time—is any time after one has passed thirty. The stuff that one learns before twenty is not meant to be remembered. It is only a placing of the chutes and an arrangement of the bins for the permanent contents. From twenty to thirty one is all torn up with courting, marrying and getting a foothold in life. After that is the time for education—from then on until death or senile debility.

A man or woman past thirty is exactly at the most favorable period for mastering knowledge, training the mind, forming the taste. Some systematic effort is all that is necessary. Notice the silly and tiresome ways in which enormous numbers of people spend some of their holidays. They know what to do with their working hours, but not with their leisure.

Most of them by a little direction and a little systematic effort might develop some special interest. Boys quickly tire of mere aimless and painless play. Naturally they want a method and a goal in it. Having a goal is exactly what gives zest to the game.

And having a goal is both easy and delightful. To study anything with interest, from logarithms to caterpillars, gives one fun and profit at the same time. Try it.

PROVED ITS WORTH.

Dramatic Test That Was Made With a Bullet Proof Shirt.

"A well known war correspondent, who is a personal friend of mine," writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, "tells an amusing story. While in Paris at the beginning of the war in 1914 a French inventor persuaded him to obtain an opportunity for demonstrating the usefulness of a thin chain armor shirt, which he claimed would resist any bullet or bayonet."

"A sample shirt had been hung up and fired at with satisfactory results, but it was with a certain journalistic skepticism that my friend attended the official demonstration at Hendon later. Anyway, to oblige the inventor he put on one of the shirts to show its comfort and flexibility. It was then that the French inventor achieved a dramatic effect, for he whipped out a Webby automatic and blazed away straight at my friend's chest."

"He is still alive to tell the tale," adds the correspondent. "Before he had recovered breath a war office official grasped him warmly by the hand."

"Sir," he said, "you are a brave man."

"My friend disappeared with becoming modesty. He had gone where he could get a stiff brandy and soda."

How American Cities Grow.

Nobody knows how fast an American city, state or town may grow. I recall some twenty-five years ago meeting a friend in Denver. He was an investor from the east. I think Denver had about 80,000 people then. He had come to buy real estate. He said to me: "This place is overgrown. Real estate is too high. None for me!" And he went away. Had he invested wisely at that time he could have multiplied his money ten to twenty fold. I was in Los Angeles about the same time. It had had a serious reaction after a sudden boom. It was a little place, not one-tenth its present size. It seemed like a doomed city. An investment of $500 then in outlying acreage property, I am told, would be worth $500,000 today. So nobody can tell what may be the future of any of the new, wide-awake cities of Alaska—Leslie's.

CLAY FOR BRICKMAKING.

The Wealth That Lines the Shores of the Hudson River.

Magnificent and inspiring as the scenery is along the towering banks of the lordly Hudson, it isn't anywhere near as much of a money maker as the lowly bricks which are made along the shores of that favored stream. In the ten years past some 11,390,110,000 bricks, valued at $80,407,258, have been fashioned out of the clay close to the water's edge. These bricks, if laid flat, would make a sidewalk that would reach around the world. And it is estimated that there is still enough clay left on the banks of the Hudson to make 1,200,000,000 bricks a year for the next fifty years.

This stratum of clay extends along both sides of the Hudson from New York to Cohoes, above Troy, and takes in ten counties, one of them in New Jersey. It is the greatest brickmaking district in all the world. For a century the industry has thrived, and strangely enough, the method of manufacture has changed hardly any in the lapse of years.

It was in 1817 when the industry began to thrive. James Woods, an Englishman, had learned the trade of brickmaking in his native land and was attracted to Haverstraw, up the west bank of the river a few miles from New York. The vast quantities of fine brick clay there and the abundance of wood for fuel appealed to him, and he started the first successful brickyard in Rockland county. The Woods is given the credit for discovering that coal dust made a fine ingredient for good bricks. He also invented tempering, mixing and molding machines, and these, but little modified, are used even in these times of new appliances for all forms of the industry.—New York World.

A MEMORY OF RACHEL.

The Great Actress After a Night of Triumph on the Stage.

Lord Glenesk gave me an account of his first meeting with Rachel. He had gone to Paris for the first time as a youth, and for the first time his father had taken him to the Franciscans to see Rachel act. The entire audience had been stirred to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm and excitement. The next morning early he had ridden to the Bois with his father, and on the way his father had said, "We will turn out of the avenue a moment, down this street; I want to show you the house of the marvelous woman we saw act last night."

It was barely sunrise, and as they pulled their horses up outside a high wall inclosing a small villa they were astonished to hear, proceeding from within, what appeared to be the ranting of the very scenes they had witnessed the night before at the theatre, but spoken in dead tones, as if by a somnambulist. Dismounting from their horses, they entered the garden. There they found Rachel, clad in loose garments, dull eyed, with disheveled hair and wan face, utterly void of all the flaming magnetism that a few hours earlier had filled her frame.

To the questions of Lord Glenesk's father she answered wearily that she had been rehearsing there under the trees since it was scarce day, trying in vain to find means of expressing certain passages in which she had "failed at the night's performance"—that performance which had so thrilled those who witnessed it, marking an epoch in their lives.—Princess Lazarovich in Century.

ODD MEMORY TEST.

A Bit of Nonsense Literature Whose Author is Unknown.
There is an odd bit of composition that has figured in nonsense literature as follows:

"So she went into a garden to pick a cabbage leaf, to make an apple pie of, and a she bear, coming up the street, put her head into the shop and said, 'Do you sell any soap?' So she died, and he very imprudently married the barber, and the powder fell out of the counselor's wig, and poor Mrs. MacKay's puddings were quite entirely spilt, and there were present the Garmelins and the Goblins and the Pickaninies and the great Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top, and they played at the ancient game of 'catch who catch can' till the gunpowder ran out of the heels of their boots."

The origin of the passage is obscure. Maria Edgeworth (1767-1849), quotes it in one of her stories, attributing it to Samuel Foote (1720-77). The British Quarterly Review said that Foote wrote it in order to test a certain lecturer who claimed that he could learn anything by rote on once hearing it.

Another account says that it was written by an actor named James Quinn (1693-1768) to puzzle Foote, with whom he had a wager that Foote could not memorize something that Quinn would write. Foote and Quinn both were noted actors in their day, and the nonsensical passage probably was the outgrowth of some convivial contest of wits between them.

It is used to figure in school rhetorics to illustrate the difficulty of memorizing something that had no sense to it.

COLORING METALS.

Almost Any Hue, Bright and Lasting. Quickly Imparted to Brass.

It has been found that metals may be colored quickly and cheaply by forming on their surface a coating of a thin film of a sulphide. In five minutes brass articles may be coated any color, varying from gold to copper red, then to carmine, dark red and from light aniline blue to a blue-white like sulphide of lead and at last a reddish white, according to the thickness of the coat, which depends on the length of time the metal remains in the solution used. The colors possess a very good luster, and if the articles to be colored have been previously thoroughly cleaned by means of acids and alkalis they adhere so firmly that they may be operated upon by the polishing steel.

To prepare the solution dissolve half an ounce of hyposulphide of soda in one pound of water and add half an ounce of acetate of lead dissolved in half a pound of water. When this clear solution is heated to from 180 to 200 degrees F. it decomposes slowly and precipitates sulphide of lead in brown flakes. If metal be now present a part of the sulphide of lead is deposited thereon, and according to the thickness of the deposited sulphide of lead the above colors are produced. To produce an even coloring the articles must be evenly heated. Iron heated with this solution takes a steel blue color and will retain the coloring unless some abrasive is used to remove it.

In the matter of the tax sale of real estate in Tangier Election District of Somerset county, assessed to Nannie (Annie) Richardson, made and reported by John E. Holland, County Treasurer for Somerset county. William J. Phillips, purchaser, ex parte.

No. 3082, Chancery. In the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity.

Whereas a certain John E. Holland, County Treasurer for Somerset county, in the State of Maryland, has reported to the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, a sale made by him to William J. No. 22, folio 204, and assessed to the said Nannie (Annie) Richardson on the assessment books for said election district, for the said year 1915, and sold for the payment of taxes due and in arrears, together with all the proceedings in relation thereto; and whereas upon examination it appears to the said Court that the said proceedings are regular and that the provisions of law in relation thereto have been complied with.

Now, therefore, it is hereby ordered this 1st day of November, in the year 1915, by the Circuit Court for Somerset County, in Equity, that notice be given by publication of this order once a week for four successive weeks, in the Marylander and Herald, a weekly newspaper published in Somerset county, before the 10th day of December, in the year 1915, warning all persons interested in the said real estate to be and appear in this Court on or before the 20th day of December, 1915, to show cause, if any they have, why said sale should not be ratified and confirmed.

The report shows the amount of sales to be $7.65.

KEEPING YOUNG.

Old Age is Not by Any Means Merely a Matter of Years.

There is no scientific evidence to show that late youth and middle age are the periods of commencing decrepitude and "old age." Man grows old because he is injured; because his body cells are poisoned, and not because he has lived just so many years. There is no relentless law determining when a man shall grow old. The tradition "three score years and ten" is conditioned mainly on the manner of living and not by any natural law. But man has it in his power to modify these conditions either for better or worse.

Probably a greater luxury of living which is not balanced by proper physical exercises is a primary condition to be reckoned with. But temperance all along the line—in eating, drinking, working, playing and even in resting—has been suggested as a wiser principle to hold to. This avoids the possibility of rusting out on the one hand or of wearing out on the other.

Yet there is another way and a more worthy reason for retaining youth and deferring old age—cultivate health for the love and pleasure of it. The monthly letter of the Life Extension Institute says of this suggestion: "It is not a fear of illness or of death that we should encourage, but of love of health, a sense of responsibility for the care of our bodies, a desire for bodily endurance and efficiency and full achievement. If the mind is fixed on these ideals and the already known means of approaching them are utilized, heart disease, kidney trouble and the need of so many may be left to take care of themselves. It is no so much necessary to fight disease as to cultivate health for the happiness, contentment and moral gain that it brings."

AGE OF THE EARTH.

Different Systems of Computing It and Their Varying Figures.

As long ago as 1830 John Phillips, the geologist, estimated that the time required for the deposition of the stratified rocks lay between 38,000,000 and 96,000,000 years. This was probably the only estimate prior to Kelvin's epoch making paper of 1862. Since that time many estimates have been made, varying all the way from 17,000,000 years to 400,000,000 years.

Kelvin was the first to discuss the age of the earth considered as a cooling body. In 1893 Clarence King introduced the important criterion of tidal stability and reached the conclusion that 24,000,000 represented the conditions. This result was adopted by Kelvin in 1897, and then he placed the limits as 20,000,000 and 40,000,000 years.

Only Sir George Darwin has discussed the age of the earth from a purely astronomical point of view. From his theory of the earth moon system he derived an estimate of more than 66,000,000 years, which for a long time stood between groups of higher and lower figures. J. Joly was the first to base estimates of the age of the earth in 1899 on the sodium contained in the ocean. Adopting the hypothesis that the sodium content of the ocean is derived at a constant rate from that of the rocks, he arrived at an age of 80,000,000 or 90,000,000 years and increased this by 10,000,000 in 1900. In 1908 Mr. Sollas made a searching inquiry into this subject and placed the age of the ocean at between 80,000,000 and 150,000,000 years.

The Acme of Proposals

By EDITH V. ROSS

One day Marguerite Phillips was walking in the grounds about her father's stately mansion when she heard something drop. Glancing about her, she saw on the ground a bit of paper fluttering in the wind. Going to it, she found it attached by a string to a stone. Opening the paper, she read:

I am not free to enter your grounds for a near view of your ravishing beauty, but there is nothing to prevent my sailing over you and admiring you from a distance.

Naturally Marguerite turned her gaze upward and saw an aeroplane passing over her head. She had read many stories of wooings, but never anything like this. Huntsmen had appeared to maidens in the depths of forests to speak their love; sailors had been washed ashore from wrecked vessels to love fisher lassies who had rescued them; fugitives from an enemy had suddenly arisen from the earth before girls to excite pity which is akin to love, but never before had Marguerite known a case of woman being wooed from the clouds.

As to her own experience, she had been courted by numerous suitors, but never except in commonplace fashion. In the whole list of her wooings there was not a single new idea for a proposal. It was therefore natural that by this strange method of announcement of a man's love for her she should be much moved. A pleasurable excitement stirred within her, tingling to the tips of her fingers. She followed with her eyes the disappearing aeroplane and pictured a man fit to ride among the clouds looking down upon those who were crawling like worms on the earth.

How godlike seemed this heavenly wanderer compared with any of those who had yet sought her love! Soldiers, sailors, men of wealth, men of intellect, men of genius had been rejected by her, and, though she did not realize the cause of their failure to win her, there was one fundamental reason—none of them had wooed her in a way to strike her imagination. He who had come nearest to success was one with whom she was riding in an automobile. Driving toward a precipice, he swore that if she would not love him both should go down to a frightful death. She yielded, but when safe on terra firma availed herself of a woman's privilege to change her mind. The aeronaut passed from her sight toward the setting sun, his albatross rocking gracefully, like a bird, between two clouds, at last plunging down behind another, as if going to his home in the blood red orb. Clapping her hands and raising her eyes still higher into the unhorizoned heavens, she exclaimed:

"Was ever a Greek girl more honored by the wooing of a god than I by this daring rover of the ethereal blue?"

Marguerite waited in anxious expectation for the ethereal lover to appear again, or, rather, for his next message, for she had not yet seen him. She sat at her window in the uppermost story of the house gazing skyward, and every time she saw a bird soaring in the far distant heavens she pressed her hand to her heart, exclaiming, "It is he!" When the weather permitted she mounted to the roof, where a bower had been built, and there waited for her eagle lover.

One day while on the roof she saw coming an aeroplane. It flew not more than a hundred feet directly above her, and a bit of paper fluttered down upon the roof. But, alas, she saw not the aerial driver, for until nearly over her head he had kept a high altitude, dropping like a stone and catching himself a moment before the white paper came down like a snowflake in the sunlight. Disappointed in not seeing her lover of the clouds, Marguerite feverishly read her message:

Tell me that you will be mine. If you refuse I will soar higher and higher till I am lost to earth.

Marguerite provided herself with an immense piece of cardboard, laid it flat on the roof and with a brush and a pot of black paint wrote in enormous letters, "Come to me."

A few days later the aeroplane flew over the house, turned and settled down on the roof. Marguerite's heart was in her throat.

Out stepped John Williams, the man she had last refused. "Marguerite," he said, "when you refused me a year ago you told me that my proposal was the most matter of fact, the most distasteful, that had been spoken or written by all the men you had refused. Loving you madly, I resolved that if this absence of romance was all that separated us I would strive to renew my offer in a manner more suited to your taste. I studied to enable myself to woo you from the clouds. I can do no more; I can rise no higher into the heavens for your sweet sake. Love me, dearest, or I will fly from here and you shall see me sail into the infinite ocean of space never to see me more."

He knelt, took her hand and kissed it. "John," she said, "you are the only man of all my suitors who has made a proposal that dwarfs any of those pictured by the most skilled novelists."

She fell into his arms. "Let our bridal," she whispered, "be as beautiful as your wooing. I will sit beside you in your flight, and above the golden edged cloud we will be made one."

"How about the parson?" asked Mr. Williams.

"The eagle shall marry us." Not finding the eagle, when they came down they called on a justice of the peace.

It Exceeds That of the Land, Square Mile For Square Mile.

The sea teems with plants and animals, and it has been estimated that the amount of life in the sea exceeds that of the land, square mile for square mile. Animal life is found nearly everywhere, even at the greatest depth; but it flourishes best at or near the shore. On the other hand, plant life seems to be absent over the bottoms of the ocean basins, but plentiful at the surface, where the sunlight plays an important part in its growth.

It is believed that the original forms of life began in the ocean many millions of years ago, and at no time since has life there ceased. Many of the earliest forms are now extinct; others have gradually increased in number and variety from their beginning to the present time. How long ago life began no one has definitely determined, but it is known to have been many millions of years ago, for the remains of extinct animals and plants are found in the oldest sedimentary rocks.

According to geologists, the oceanic waters have made many incursions upon the continents and at times have nearly submerged them. Long ago, even in a geologic sense, before the birth of the Appalachian or Rocky mountains, the sea made frequent visits to the interior of our continent and left, after each retreat, a sandy, muddy or silty deposit mixed with shells and other organic remains, which later became solidified into rock. Were not the organic remains still found in the deposits it would be difficult to believe that the ancestors of many present day sea animals once lived along the beaches of an ancient inland sea.—Geological Survey Bulletin.

FATE HAD WILLED IT.

So, In Typical Far Eastern Style, They Made the Best of It.

We were standing round a small fire—wrote Arminius Vambrey, the Hungarian linguist and traveler, in his account of a caravan journey to Bokhara—when we were startled by two reports from firearms and the loud yelling of some person who was badly hurt. The whole caravan was alarmed, and we all ran to the rear, where we found one of our companions with a shattered arm.

The cause of the affray was this: Several horsemen who were conveying the annual taxes from Shiraz to Tehran had come up with two Jewish shopkeepers, whom they first insulted and then started to assault, when a Persian of our company interfered. One of the horsemen became so enraged that he lifted his rifle and shot at the Jews. He afterward declared that he had intended to frighten one of the Jews by shooting through his cap, but he missed his aim and hit the Persian's arm.

The incident so exasperated the whole caravan that our men pursued the culprit and brought him back securely tied. The poor wretch was given such a beating that he was unable to walk and was placed with his victim on one of the caravan mules. Left to themselves, the would be murderer and his victim became quite friendly. They tied up each other's wounds, consoled one another and went so far in their newborn friendship as to kiss each other, for according to the eastern way of thinking neither of them was to be held responsible for what had happened. Fate had willed it.

Hit Him Coming and Goings.

An attorney went to a livery stable and hired a team for two or three hours and at the end of that time, in a state of absentmindedness, left the team at another livery stable, where it remained eight days. At stable No. 1 there was no worry about the team. They knew the attorney was perfectly good for the pay. At stable No. 2 there was equal freedom from anxiety. The attorney came there, left the team and went away, saying nothing. They put the horse into a stall and "chained it down" on the office slate, knowing him to be a business man who paid cash. Discovery came at last, and the lawyer was presented with two bills, one for eight days' hire and the other for eight days' keep. He paid both bills promptly, but it cured him of being absentminded for nearly a whole month.

A Fearful Poison.

From the microbe which gives rise in human beings to the disease known as tetanus, or lockjaw, a poison called tetanine is obtained which is over 100 times more powerful than strychnine. A fragment of tetanine as small as is to be invisible to the naked eye would kill almost instantaneously the strongest man. One fifteen-thousandth part of a grain of it has caused the death of a horse 1,600,000,000 times its own weight.—Pearson's.

Purely Feminine.

Persons are advised to do their Christmas mailing early. Mr. Burleson is confident that if the public will aid to that extent the holiday mails will be promptly and efficiently handled.

Cost Democrats $21,652.89 To Win

The State campaign cost the Democratic party exactly $10,286.91 less than it cost the Republicans in the gubernatorial election just closed, according to the figures which were filed at Belair by Gen. Murray Vandiver, chairman and treasurer of the State Central Committee. The figures filed by Galen L. Tait, treasurer of the Republican Committee, showed that the Republicans had collected $32,408.98 and had spent $31,939.80. General Vandiver's report showed that the collections of the Democrats amounted to $21,652.89 and that the disbursements were exactly equal to the collections.

A balance of $967.72 from the campaign of 1914 remains in the hands of the Democratic Committee; the indebtedness for past campaigns remains $5,890.19.

BOYS' CLUBS AND THE COUNTY AGENT

The County Agricultural Agent Also Devotes Time To Interesting the Farm Boys.

REUBEN BRIGHAM,
 Extension Service.

Among the varied activities of the county agents of Maryland which are proving of practical helpfulness to the farmer and his family, none are deserving of more appreciation than their Boys' Club work. The aim of this work, in which over 300 boys were enrolled in 1915 in Maryland, is to arouse in the country boy a live interest in farming as a business. To accomplish this purpose the County Agent visits the schools whose teachers are awake to the possibilities of giving to their boys lessons in everyday life and practice. He explains that to belong to the National Corn Club with its thousands of members throughout the South, a boy must get his parents to consent to his renting an acre from them on which he can grow a crop of corn. This crop the boy is to grow himself, doing as much of the actual labor as possible. His teacher, if she is interested, will visit his acre occasionally and explain to him the directions which the County Agent has given him. The County Agent will send letters, also, both to the boy and his teacher, telling what can be done from time to time to improve the crop, what the other boys in the county are doing, why the boy should keep up his interest, and how to form a neighborhood boys' club in which his school mates can join. During the growing season the County Agent will visit a number of the acres calling field meetings to which neighboring boys and their fathers are invited to discuss the growing of the crop and the selection of seed corn. Later the County Agent plans with the teacher for a school exhibit to which her children, including her corn club boys can bring exhibits and where they can submit their accounts and read their essays telling how they grew their crop and followed the directions of their teacher and the County Agent. In this work our county agents are developing a spirit of loyalty to farm life and a knowledge of farm business among our boys that will show remarkable results in the agricultural production of the future. What better training could the boy have than in attempting to do better than anyone else what thousands of other men and boys are doing? In what better work can the county agent be engaged than in welding together the young life of his county into a united effort to make their neighborhoods and the county itself a leader in agricultural production and the seat of a happy farm life?

Rare Fowl To Be Exhibited

Chickens, turkeys, ducks, geese and other fowls of all colors and sizes, some as prim and slick as a Puritan maid going to service, others as "flossy" and as colorful in appearance as the damsel put in the poultry class by modern slang, but all birds of high and aristocratic lineage, will be included in the exhibition to be held this week in the old Fifth Regiment hall over Richmond Market, Baltimore.

The show will be opened today (Tuesday) afternoon and will continue until and including the coming Saturday. It will be a comprehensive display at which the best that is being produced by Maryland raisers and fanciers of finely bred fowls will be seen. The exhibition is the seventh held under the auspices of the Maryland Poultry and Pigeon Association.

Table and ornamental silverware will be given as prizes instead of cups and the awards will include as extras 18 or 20 ribbons and badges offered by various specialty clubs. In the display contest first prize will count 6 points, second prize 4 points, third prize 3 points, fourth prize 2 points and fifth prize one point.

CLEAN UP YOUR POULTRY HOUSE BEFORE PUTTING IN YOUR PULLETS.

ROY H. WAITE,
 Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

At this time of the year when the pullets are being put into their winter quarters there should be a thorough house-cleaning. Clean the house by scrubbing it with a broom and water if necessary and then spray it with some good spray mixture. You can use to advantage one of the so-called sheep dips or coal tar products that are on the market. Directions for applying vary somewhat, but are always given on the cans of containers in which the products are sold. If the house is badly infested with mites, which, by the way, are worse than lice, it might be well to use a kerosene emulsion which is made as follows:

Hard soap, ¼ lb.
 Kerosene, 2 gallons.

This can be applied with a spray pump or a white wash brush or broom may be used. The important thing is to get the solution well into the cracks and other hiding places of the mites. Sometimes poultry houses are white washed to free them from lice and mites and this is a very efficient method especially if well done. However several poultrymen have reported cases of eye trouble caused by the lime from the wash getting into the eyes of the fowls. Where the birds run out doors a great deal of the time this trouble probably will not occur. It only seems to appear in housed flocks.

White wash containing carbolic acid was once widely recommended for poultry houses, but it is doubtful if the acid does any good for its action is neutralized by the lime.

Tomato Pack One-Half Less Than 1914

The tomato pack of 1915 for the States of New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, including Baltimore, was only one-half of what it was last year. A report to this effect was submitted at a meeting of the Tri-State Packers' Association, held in Wilmington recently, and the shortage is due to weather conditions. In the State of New Jersey 320,282 cases were packed; in Delaware, 783,811 cases, and in Maryland, 2,863,375 cases, a total of 3,067,468 cases. These same States packed 5,850,000 cases in 1914. The pack of this year was only 40 per cent. of that for 1913.

Andrew Carnegie's 60th Birthday

Andrew Carnegie celebrated his 60th birthday anniversary last Thursday in quiet fashion at his home in New York City. A few friends, mostly comrades or associates of his earlier years, called to tender their annual congratulations, and that night he entertained others at the family dinner.

Asked for a birthday message, he said: "All goes well with me. The world grows better and we are soon to see blessed peace restored and a world court established, when, the words of Burns, 'Man to man the world o'er shall brothers be for a' that.'"

Distress In The Stomach

There are many people who have a distress in the stomach after meals. It is due to indigestion and easily remedied by taking one of Chamberlain's Tablets after meals. Mrs. Henry Padghan, Victor, N. Y., writes: "For some time I was troubled with headache and distress in my stomach after eating, also with constipation. About six months ago I began taking Chamberlain's Tablets. They regulated the action of my bowels and the headache and annoyances ceased in a short time." Obtainable everywhere.

The Philadelphia Sunday Record

The circulation of the Philadelphia Sunday Record is steadily growing, and deservedly so. This condition has been brought about by the fact that The Record is printing a most complete Sunday newspaper. Always noted for the value of its new columns, which include more worth-while news articles than any other Philadelphia paper, The Sunday Record has greatly enlarged its special features.

Its attractive colored fiction magazine, containing short and continued stories by the best authors, is well worth the price of the paper alone.

Its colored comic section is rapidly coming to be recognized as the most interesting and amusing, yet without the objectionable features of many colored comics. Its comic section may safely be permitted to enter any home.

The Record's sporting section is the most complete printed, giving more space to a wider range of subjects, such as shooting, bowling, golf, soccer football, horse news, automobile news, and scholastic athletic activities, (besides its usual baseball and football space,) than is usually found in other Sunday papers.

The Record's theatrical news is largely read by amusement lovers, and recently enlarged space was given to its society news and this branch of its special service placed under the direction of Miss Agnes Repplier, 2nd, who is well known to all Philadelphia and suburban society.

The Record's "Black and White" magazine section is a newspaper of specialties in itself. It contains news of interest to every member of the family, son, daughter, father and mother. The pattern page included in this magazine section is making a big reputation for its variety of ideas and the attractiveness of its designs. There is a page for boys and girls, of stories and puzzles; another of jokes and the inimitable "Willie Green," several pages for mother on domestic science and fashions; the school page, conducted by Grace F. Pennypacker; as well as special pages of intense interest to father.

Altogether, The Sunday Record gives the greatest value, at its retail price of 5c, that it is possible to obtain. Your local newsdealer will serve you upon request.
