BE CAREFUL IN SELECTION.

One week from today, on Saturday next, the Democrats of this County, will meet at the polls to decide upon the men who are to be the party's nominees this year. All the candidates have been out hustling for votes and the last week will see them more active than ever before. Doubtless all of them have been telling the Democrats all over the County why they should receive the nomination—and perhaps some few have been telling why the other men running for the same office should not be given the preference—inferentially at least.

The voters are sitting as a Jury of the whole and should carefully weigh the different arguments and sift out the best and then taking a careful measure of the men, vote for what is best, in each case. The duty of selecting our officers is not one to be lightly considered and carelessly disposed of, but one that we should bring our whole intellect into play and vote—not because some man has asked for our support—or that some man needs the pay—nor because he has rendered services to ourselves personally—but because he stands for the things we believe in and has the character and ability to carry out what he stands for when elected.

The campaign so far has had but little real-alting or dealing in unpleasant personalities, and it is hoped for the sake of all concerned that the last few days before the primaries will not see anything of this nature indulged in. A bitter campaign of personalities will not do the party any good nor will it do the man making a campaign of this kind any good, but will more than likely not as a boomerang to either defeat him in the primaries or at the general election.

The corrupt practice act applies to the primaries and each candidate will have to give an account of the money spent in his canvass. A man who wins at the primaries by means of bribery had better have lost, both from the practical as well as the moral standpoint. This community is opposed to bribery in any form and will not get so easily behind any man who has to win his primary fight by such methods.

The amount of money which is handled each year by our County Commissioners makes this office one of the most important and one that the voters should use great care in filling. In the light of the present movement for good roads—a movement that we believe meets with the approval of the taxpayers—it will be recognized that it is more than ever important to have good men in our Board of County Commissioners. There are but few men in the county who would select a man to handle close to $100,000 without first going thoroughly into the character and ability of the man selected, and so it should be with the voters. Before trusting any man to properly expend $100,000 they should first be sure that the man is fully competent to be put in charge of the affairs of this county.

Many matters of public interest and public importance will come before the next Legislature and before casting a vote for any man for the nomination to this office on next Saturday, the voter wants to be sure that when in Annapolis he will carry out the wishes of this community on the questions which are sure to come up. The Local Option Bill will certainly be an issue—as will the formation of a Public Utility Commission—as will increased representation from Baltimore City. That the corporations are preparing to fight the establishment of a Commission to fix rates and otherwise supervise the affairs of our public service corporations, can be seen in the attitude of the Gas Company of Baltimore City, which is now trying to get a binding contract from the State relieving from any chance of supervision by a Commission.

These questions will take men of backbone and sterling qualities of character to fill the duty of making laws for the interest of the state and people. The voters had just as well send a man to the Legislature who is in favor of the saloons, or against public service regulations as to send a man who has not the character and backbone to stand firmly for the principles which he professes to believe

USEFUL IN THE BEDROOM.

Medicine Cupboard Inexpensive and Easy to Construct.

A very useful article in a bedroom is some kind of little cupboard—in which may be kept medicine-bottles and other things which are better out of sight. It should also be a place from which they may be readily removed and replaced when required. It is to meet this want that we give the accompanying sketches, and a small hanging cupboard may be easily and quickly arranged with little or no expense.

Any strong wooden box of suitable size may be used, and the lid may be dispensed with. A case that has contained a dozen bottles of wines of spirits will answer the purpose admirably.

Two holes should be cut in the bottom of the box, and it may then be suspended from the wall by means of two strong nails in the manner shown in the upper sketch.

The front and sides can be draped with a pretty odd remnant of material that we happen to have by us, and an opening arranged in the center so that the articles inside are easily procured when required. The space on the top will form a nice place for perhaps a pot with a fern or other ornaments. A little cupboard of this kind will also make an excellent "smoker's cabinet," in which may be kept a jar of tobacco, cigars, etc. In the latter case it is not difficult to fit up a small rack for the pipes at one side of the cupboard.

FOR HOLDING THE LAUNDRY.

Bag More Ornamental Than the Common Linen Receptacle.

The ordinary laundry bag, though it may answer its purpose well, is not a very slightly article, and our sketch shows a bag of prettier and more ornamental shape. It is made with a turn-over flap on which a floral design or the words "laundry bag" may be worked, and it is also ornamented with a hem-stitched frill and a bunch of ribbons.

A loop of tape or ribbon can be used for suspending it in its place, and to further improve its appearance the hem-stitched frill may be carried all around the edge of the bag, if desired. The size must be regulated by whether it is intended to hold all the personal lines that is to be sent to the laundry, or only small things, such as handkerchiefs, gloves, collars, etc.

To Save the Hands.

If you live in an apartment and have the work of pulling the dumb-waiter up and down, try doing it with the aid of an iron-holder. It will make the task easier, and save the ropes from cutting your hands considerably. Or, if you prefer, keep a mitten or loose glove in the kitchen for the same purpose. But although the latter method is perhaps better in some respects, it takes a moment's time to slip the glove on.

Women at the University.

"Woman's place at the University of Berlin," says the "Tagblatt," of that city, "has already become an important one, although her rights have not yet been fully recognized there. According to the latest report, 449 women were entered at the largest high school last summer and 761 attended the winter session. Degrees were conferred on twelve; ten in medicine and two in philosophy."

Business in Eyeglasses.

Woman opticians, not a few, but by the dozen, proves that ever broadening field for those of the fair sex who will work.

The Kid You Have Always Bought

RICH AND PROFITABLE

Baltimore Should Be Able to Win The Eastern Shore Trade.

Other things being equal, the people of the Eastern Shore of Maryland and Virginia, we believe, would rather give their trade to Baltimore than to any other city. They are bound to Baltimore by many ties, social, political and commercial. Mr. W. B. Cooper, the prominent Chesterown banker, who is president of the Maryland Bankers' Association, drew a graphic picture of the situation in his address at the bankers' convention.

He pointed out that the trade once controlled almost exclusively by Baltimore now goes largely to Philadelphia and other Northern markets. The grain of Kent, and the other Eastern Shore counties goes to the north, the truck and produce move largely in the same direction, and naturally the trade of the merchants and farmers has followed.

Mr. Cooper clearly sets forth the reasons for this change. One of the principal factors in the New York, Philadelphia and Norfolk railroad, which furnishes the Eastern Shore counties facilities for the rapid movement of freight and passengers to the North, while between that section and Baltimore the only communication is by slow steamers, and though Baltimore is much nearer the Eastern Shore than Philadelphia, the Northern city has a great advantage in time and ease of communication. The Pennsylvania Railroad controls not only all the rail lines in that section, but also the steamship lines. It seems to be the policy of the company to divert the trade to Philadelphia, and how well it has succeeded every merchant, banker and producer man knows.

Another important factor is the enterprise of Philadelphia and New York business men in "going after" the trade of Eastern Maryland, Virginia, and Delaware. In the grain trade they have their representatives on the spot to buy the grain, and Mr. Cooper says that they pay from one to five cents a bushel more than the farmers receive in Baltimore.

Baltimore should be able to win back the Eastern Shore trade. It is rich and profitable and is well worth bidding for. But in order to secure it she must have better transportation facilities, both passenger and freight, advantageous freight rates and rapid and efficient service. And the Baltimore merchants, both wholesale and retail, the Baltimore grain and produce dealers, will have to make a strong and united effort to recapture the trade of that section. In this connection Mr. Cooper points to the enterprise of Mr. Jacob Epstein in making a bold bid for the Southern trade. "With nine Epsteins," he says "one for each Eastern Shore county, Baltimore would have another tale to relate."

Baltimore needs this trade. Baltimore wants it, and Baltimore should have the courage and influence to compel better freight and passenger service, and enterprise enough to win back the confidence and trade of the garden spot of Maryland—the Eastern Shore—Editorial Baltimore Sun.

OTTERS GIVE CHASE

And Give Two Colored Men A Lively Run Along River.

Stewart Parnell and Thos. Martin, colored men of Worcester county, were given the scare of their lives on Monday while cutting timber in the swamp near Porter's Bridge. They went to their work in a boat and were on a high place in the swamp about one hundred yards of the main shore, when they were startled to see coming toward them seven large otters, making the water fly and bearing directly for the two men both of whom were scared as they saw the animals were evidently angered of their presence and meant to attack them. The men did not tarry long, but made a rush for their boat. They managed to get aboard all right, but the otters were close behind and endeavored to cut them off from reaching shore. Parnell and Martin both declared that some of the otters were five to six feet long and avowed that they counted seven and heard more of them breaking through the glades of the swamp as though wild horses were dashing through. The men believed the otters were angered and were attempting to protect their young from harm.

Otters are great fighters, and will often kill a dog so quickly that hunters for them are surprised at their ferocity and skill in fighting. They have teeth an inch long and as sharp as a needle. Their fur is very valuable and much in demand for muffs and neckpieces.

Why The Clothes Thoroughgood
ings Than All Others.

A suit that has to be sent to the presser twice a week or even twice a month to be kept in shape is not a good suit. Something is wrong when the style dodges out of a garment every little while and has to be ironed into it again. Yet eight suits out of every ten suits have just that fault. The shape does not stay. The style does not last. That is why the cleaners and pressers of this town do such a rushing business. The reason is that the cloth in the garment shrinks, it knuckles to the weather elements and lets every little attack of moisture knock it shapeless. When the cloth puckers and bags, when the coat front wrinkles, when the trousers bag, even without rough usage; the cloth is shrinking; that's the trouble. Now, the clothes sold by Lacy Thoroughgood are treated by a secret process that takes all of the shrink out of them. That process renders the cloth absolutely proof against the shrink element; that is why the good shape in Thoroughgood's Clothes lasts so long. Do you know that Lacy Thoroughgood has sold more suits this spring than he ever sold in one spring before and he will replace every suit that does bad. Thoroughgood has not sold a bad suit this spring. Thoroughgood has SIX HUNDRED Suits now, the very cream of suits for Men and Young Men, that can be bought CHEAP. These suits were made by B. Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago, and every suit has a silk label sewed on the inside coat pocket which reads: A NEW SUIT WITHOUT CHANGE IF THIS ONE PROVES UNSATISFACTORY. Just buy one suit from Lacy Thoroughgood.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it, Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have tried with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it. Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then ask him to show you the contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and not to the small one in a family. The large bottle contains five times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

No one finds it pleasant to discover, after a purchase for the home is made, that some more attractive style could have been secured had a little more "looking round" been done.

We carry very much larger assortments than any other store, so that our customers can have the widest scope for selection, and thus be protected against the possibility of disappointments.

We also protect our customers fully in the matter of price—guaranteeing our prices to be the lowest, and promptly refunding money if any article bought of us can be bought elsewhere at a lower price.

Our credit arrangements for those who desire the accommodation of time-payments are in keeping with the balance of our business policy—attractive to people of self-respect; simple, sensible, dignified, and affording the utmost convenience.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE HONEYBIRD.

IN the African jungle dwells a pretty little bird that lives on honey. The saccharine dainty is there found in the hollows of trees and under the bark, where what is known as the carpenter bee bores and deposits his extract from the buds and blossoms of the tropical forest. The bird is called the "honeybird" because it is a sure guide to the deposits of the delicacy. The bird fulfills the laborious task of pecking its way through the bark to reach the honey, and so, wise in the ways of men, it procures help. It locates a nest of honey, then flies about until it sees some natives or hunters, to whom it shows itself. They know the honeybird and know that it will lead them to the treasure store. Following the bird, which fits just in advance, they reach the cache of the sweet substance and readily lay it open with hatchets or knives. Taking what they want, there is always enough left clinging to the tree and easily accessible to satisfy the appetite of the clever little bird.

Senator Stevens of Mississippi bears a marked resemblance to the honeybird—so much so that he has well won the bird's appellation for himself. Abnormally keen at locating possibilities for extracting "honey" from the governmental affairs in Washington, he invariably led Peabody, representing the hunter with the ax, to the repository. He would then rely on the Pennsylvania's superior force to break down the barriers. Stevens would flutter about and gather up the leavings.

Equally as mercenary as "the boss of the senate," he lacked Peabody's iron nerve, determination, resourcefulness and daring. He needed many hours of sleep. Peabody could work twenty hours at a stretch. He had to have his meals regularly or else suffer from indigestion. Peabody sometimes did a day's work on two boiled eggs and a cup of coffee.

The senior senator from Mississippi had been the first to point out to Peabody the possibilities for profit in the Gulf naval base project, but the morning following the conference with Stelner when he rejoined them for breakfast at the Louis Napoleon he was far from comfortable. He did not mind fighting brain against brain, even though unprincipled methods were resorted to, but indications were that more violent agencies would be called into play owing to the complications that had arisen. Stevens ate heartily to strengthen his courage. Stelner ate hugely to strengthen his body. Peabody ate scarcely anything at all—to strengthen his brain.

"Honeybird" Stevens.

"Unless you got the right kind of woman."

Waving away the hotel waiter who had brought the breakfast to his apartment, Senator Peabody outlined the probable campaign of the day. "If our best efforts to weaken and scare off Langdon fail today," he said, "it will naturally develop that we must render it impossible in some way for him to appear in the senate at all, or we must delay his arrival until after the report of the committee on naval affairs has been made. In either event he would not have another opportunity to speak on that subject."

"Of course later, at 12:30, we will know his plan of action. Then we can act to the very point, but we must be prepared for any situation that can arise."

"Cannot the president of the senate be persuaded not to recognize Langdon on the floor? Then we could adjourn and shut him off," asked Stevens.

"I've gone over all that," answered Peabody quickly. "It would only be delaying the evil hour. You wouldn't be able to move that old codger away from the senate chamber with a team of oxen—once he gets to his seat. His secretary, Haines—another oversight of yours, Stevens"—the latter winced—"will warn him. Langdon would stick pins through his eyelids to keep from falling asleep."

"I've been thinking," put in Stelner slowly, "that a little fine-ess like this might keep him away. When Langdon's in his committee room before going to the senate send him a telegram signed by some of his friends' name that one of his daughters is dying from injuries in a automobile collision a few miles out a town. That 'ud—"

"Ridiculous," snorted Peabody. "He'd know where they were. They're all ways—"

"Huh, then put in more fine-ess."

"How, what?"

"Hev some'un take 'em out a-a-town!"

"No, no, man!" snapped Peabody.

"They'd stick in town to hear their father's fondle speech!"

"Well," went on the lobbyist, "I'll hev Langdon watched by a careful picked man, a nigger that won't talk. He'll pick a row with the colonel on some street, say, 'wen he's comin' from his home after lunch. The coon kin bump into Langdon an' call him names. Then wen ole fireworks sails into 'im, yellin' about what 'ed do in Mississippi, the coon pulls a gun on the colonel an' fires a couple o' shots random. Cops come up, an' our petticlever copper 'll lug Langdon away as a witness, refusin' to believe 'es a senator. I kin arrange to hev 'im kept in the cooler a couple o' hours without gettin' any word out, or I'll hev 'im entered up as drunk an' disorderly. He'll look drunk, he'll be so mad."

"But the negro—how could you get a man to undergo arrest on such a serious charge, attempted murder?" exclaimed Stevens.

"There, there," said Stelner patronizingly; "coons has more genteel home life in jail than they does out. An' don't forget the District of Columbia is governed by folks that ain't residents of it, only durin' the session. Th' politicians don't leave their fren's in the cooler very long. Say, Senator Stevens, are you kiddin' me? Is it any different down in your?"

"The Mississippians choked and spluttered over a gulp of unusually hot coffee, and Peabody again decided Stelner to be on the wrong track."

"That proceeding would attract too much attention from the newspapers," he added.

"Well, I thought you wanted to win," grunted Stelner. "I've been offerin' you good stuff, too—new stuff. None of yer druggin' with chloroform or ticklin' with blackjacks. Why, I've gone from the fine-ess to common sense. But come to think of it, how about some woman? I c'n get one to introduce to—"

"This is the wrong kind of a man," interrupted Peabody.

"Unless you got the right kind of a woman," went on Stelner.

Senator Stevens choked some more.

"The boss of the senate" sank down in his chair, crossed one knee over the other and drummed his fingers lightly on the table. He gazed thoughtfully at Stevens.

"Yes," he observed slowly, "unless you've got the right sort of a woman."

Rising, he led the Mississippi to one side.

The lobbyist heard the southerner give a short exclamation of astonishment as Peabody whispered to him.

"It's all right. It's all right," he then heard the Pennsylvania say irritably. "She'll understand. She can be trusted. She expects you."

Stevens gave a violent start at the last assurance, but his colleague hurriedly helped him into his coat.

"Go in a closed carriage," was Peabody's final warning. "Be sure to tell her to get hold of his two daughters on some pretext at once. She knows them well. Maybe we can influence the old man through his girls, don't you see?"

And while Senator Peabody and Jake Stelner hurried to a previous discussion concerning one J. D. Talfer, mayor of Gulf City, Senator Stevens started on the most memorable drive of his career on this bright winter morning, to the house of the fascinating Mrs. Spangler—who for the past week had been considering his proposal of marriage.

Spaniards' Taste in Reading.

The librarian selected a book entitled "Farming in the Ohio Valley."

"Will you give this to that young man waiting at the desk?" she said to an assistant. "He is a Spanish student learning to read English, and I think this will suit him."

"That sounds like a very unpromising subject for a student in English to tackle," a friend remarked to the librarian, "it would be uninteresting to anybody but a Spanish student," said the librarian, "but the Spaniards run to farming literature. When training beginners in English of any other nationality something slightly in the way of action or travel usually is recommended. But not to the Spaniard. Nine times out of ten it is a work on agriculture that he will make the best progress in."—New York Press.

Had to Bow to Custom.

The late King Oscar of Sweden was the least conventional of monarchs, but he had to courtesy to custom nevertheless. The king and M. Bonnier, the botanist, met as strangers while out in search of flowers near Stockholm. They were soon the best of friends, and Bonnier suggested lunch at his inn.

"Come home with me instead," said the other.

When the way led to the palace gates Bonnier hesitated.

"I'm sorry," said his companion, "I happen to be the king of this country, and I'm in the very place where I can't do anything but bow."

Brattan-Hitch Wedding At Mardela.

An unusually interesting wedding took place Tuesday evening in the old Presbyterian Church at Mardela Springs when Miss Emma Porter Brattan and Mr. Samuel G. L. Hitch, of Norfolk, Va., were married by the Rev. W. T. M. Beale. The bride entered the church to the soft strains of Lohengrin's wedding march with her brother, Mr. J. Y. Brattan, by whom she was given in marriage. She wore a trained gown of soft white satin trimmed in Princess lace and veil caught with orange blossoms and carried bride roses. The maid of honor was Miss Susan Robertson Brattan, sister of the bride, who wore a pink princess gown and carried pink carnations. The ushers were Messrs. Cyrus Risher, Jr. of New York, M. W. Bounds, of Salisbury, Herman Robertson and Ralph Bounds of Mardela Springs. The ceremony was followed by a small reception after which the bridal couple left for a northern trip. Upon their return they will reside in Norfolk, Va.

The out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Risher, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. J. Y. Brattan, Misses Elizabeth and Catherine Brattan, of Baltimore, Mrs. L. D. Collier, Mrs. Florence Lowe, Misses Elizabeth, Pauline and Mary Collier, Mary and Willie Lowe, Mrs. Harry Todd, Mr. Henry Todd, Mr. and Mrs. William Phoebeus, of Salisbury, Mrs. Phelps, Mr. Wallace Phelps and Mr. J. Rush Brattan, of Cambridge; Miss Adelaide Griffith, of Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran, of Harlock, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howard, of Hebron and Rev. Wm. Venables, of Philadelphia.

MT. PLEASANT.

We are very glad to have some showmen as we are in need of them very much.

Mr. and Mrs. William Parnell and family, of New Hope, visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Patey, of this place. Hope they enjoyed a very pleasant day.

It seems to be a very sickly time around here. Those on the sick list are Mrs. James Massey Mr. Lemuel Clark, Mrs. Eliza Rayne, Mrs. E. Lewis, Mabel Rayne, Mrs. G. W. Brittingham, Arthur Rayne, Ira Brittingham. Hope they will soon be out again.

His Fond Ambition

All at once Mr. Biglow sighed—not gradually, or by degrees, or little by little: Ah, no. But all at once he sighed, setting the plenitude of his countenance into a cast of woe that resembled a mask of tragedy and sighing as though he simply had to do it or else burst into tears. And while this sound of sorrow in taking physical form and rippling mournfully over the plumpness of him and over the manifold chins of him until it shakes his mighty breast with even mightier tremors of woe, let us look at Mr. Biglow and consider his case.

He was, then, one of those noble men of nature who exemplify the might, majesty and dominion of man, and when he walked across a floor or leaned against a wall the three feet drew three long breaths of apprehension and pitched a penny for it. And yet his cheeks bloomed with the bloom of roses and his utterance trembled in the tenor. When he was measured for his raiment his tailor performed feats of pedestrianism and when he leaned over to pick up a pin for lock the earth trembled and the Goddess of Chance teetered like a lady with the ague. And yet his smile was the smile of wistfulness, and the honesty of his gaze was an illumination at which dyspeptics turned their heads and ground their teeth in envy.

And when he walked he walked altogether and in the perfection of synchronism. And when he slipped on the icy pavement the glaciers presently rubbed their hands together and blessed the day. Yes, even thus was Mr. Biglow, the gentleman who sighed.

"Oh, dear!" he said.

"Why, Mr. Biglow?" exclaimed Miss Gabbleton. "What is the matter?"

Wherefore we will now survey the scene in general and Miss Gabbleton in particular. Saug room, snugly furnished, Mr. Biglow sitting on a lounge, upon which he had installed himself with care through fear that the lounge might spring up on each side of him and slap his ears; green-shaded lamp and a bit of mistletoe still hanging on the chandelier. Let us therefore turn to Miss Gabbleton and reflect.

Speaking boldly, then, and making no bones about it, she was hardly anything else; and jumping quickly from a stare of horror we will seek the shade of smiles and hide ourselves in the elysium of elusion. In substance, so be it, Miss Gabbleton resembled the fourth dimension, and when the focus of philosophy caught the attention of her arms, reason ran riot and marvelled at the mysteries.

"Why, Mr. Biglow!" exclaimed Miss Gabbleton, "what is the matter?"

But with his eye on the mistletoe, Mr. Biglow shook with sorrow again and made no further speech.

"Don't you feel well?" asked Miss Gabbleton.

Mr. Biglow moved forward as though about to speak, but he and the lounge only groaned in concert.

"Is something troubling you, Mr. Biglow? Is there any way I can help you?" she asked, and cooing him all at once with the contralto of her voice, she added, "Tell me, Mr. Biglow!"

"Miss Gabbleton," said Mr. Biglow, blinking his eyes as though in perpetual surprise at the falsetto of his tenor, "I am not a half bad fellow!"

"Why, Mr. Biglow! I should say you weren't! Why, you are one of my dearest friends!"

"But sometimes," he continued, with a rising inflection, "I feel as if—as if—as if nobody cared for me—e-e-e!"

"Why, Mr. Biglow!"

"Nobody," he repeated.

And in an arch, arch manner she lifted her brows and cried: "Am I nobody, then?"

For a moment she seemed to him to be nothing but a spiritual smile floating in the shadows of the room, but knowing that she was there all right, he looked at the mistletoe again and said:

"Miss Gabbleton!"

"Mr. Biglow!"

"Do you know that—"

"Yes, Mr. Biglow!"

"Ever since I—"

"Yes—yes, Mr. Biglow!"

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home Chemists, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

FOR A CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT

Novel Method of Decorating Booths That Charm the Fair-Goer

BOOTHS ARE CLUSTERED TOGETHER

The church of to-day is sure to hold a fair during one month or another, and right after Easter is a favorite time. When an entertainment of this sort is contemplated, the first thing to be considered by the parish ladies is the decoration of the booths. It is here that feminine ingenuity is taxed to the utmost for something novel, something new that will produce a display, that will charm the fair-goer and bring in the money.

For some reason the Southern woman has a peculiar facility in getting up fairs, and with it the decorating of the booths. In a small Virginia town a number of parish members resolved to have a three days' bazaar to help pay off a debt of the church.

THURSDAY'S BOOTH WAS DEVOTED TO AFTERNOON TEA.

and to make certain household articles a feature, which are needed in all homes.

The idea grew that, as a novelty, a number of booths should represent the days of the week, from Sunday to the following Saturday, bringing together every sort of attractive commodity, none of which were to be sold above the current store prices.

These booths occupied one side of the room and were clustered together, making a very showy scheme, being only a few feet apart. The Sunday booth was covered with a cream cheesecloth, the tablecloth trimmed with a lace border, and the edges of the colorings like those used in the church design. This frill was deep, reaching the floor, and made quite full. As corner decorations, there were banners of silk or of very fine cardboard, both in pure white. If of silk, they should be embroidered to show a device of gold and white; if of cardboard, painted in watercolor in some church pattern, and both held in place by gilt streamers in either case the treatment partook of some religious matter and church emblems, accompanied with brilliant and illuminated letterings. As a center ornament, the seven-branched candlestick was utilized, well filled with tall candles. To give a good effect to the whole, green palms of tissue paper made a fine border for all edges and had a harmonizing effect with the white and gilt. This Sunday booth was equipped with Bibles of different sizes, prayer-books, hymnals, church calendars and all the paraphernalia necessary for a church service. All sorts of holy devices were sent in for every denomination, and a variety of religious books which are published each season, all to be sold at the regular publishers' prices.

Monday, being wash day, had its booth given over to an executive housekeeper, who begged or bought all the essentials for a "blue Monday." The lot comprised tubs, wash-tubs, all sorts of soaps, clothes-lines, wringers, boxes of starch and blue, cloths and the like, all of which met a ready sale and reaped a good harvest. To make the booth attractive, it was dressed in a dark-blue cheesecloth with a pure-white border of the same material, with fluffy rosettes at the corners, and as a center decoration there was a child's tub filled with white chrysanthemums and big ferns.

Tuesday, which is generally ironing day in all families, was made a scheme of different shades of red tie dye pattern, which was adjusted according to fancy, festooned in big scallops, decorated with big rosettes and long ends at each corner falling to the floor. The back of the booth, which was decorated in red crinkled paper, was laid in plants, the edges adorned with green paper ferns, which lapped each other as they approached the top. On this stand was found everything pertaining to the day. Every new invention was in evidence for smoothing boards and shirt-boards front, flatirons long and pointed, wax iron stands, holders and the like.

For the Wednesday booth a beautiful shade of pink was selected, the trimming in tones and tints of the same color. For this a silky nateen was chosen, fine in quality and of such a dainty tint and so exceedingly attractive as to give a silken sheen to the whole. The back of the booth was nicely padded, making a soft and pliable background for the various centerpieces of embroidery and lace, the latter so arranged as to form a motive which gave an artistic effect to the whole scheme.

At each of the four corners were piled napkins, traycloths in beautiful

Alcohol to Children

Ask your doctor how often he prescribes an alcoholic stimulant for children. He will probably say, "Very, very rarely. Children do not need stimulating." Ask him how often he prescribes a tonic for them. He will probably answer, "Very, very frequently." Then ask him about Ayer's non-alcoholic Sarsaparilla as a tonic for the young. Follow his advice. French work, table linen of newest patterns, and all the necessary accessories of a well-set table. In the center was a group of dolies of every sort and kind—some in fan shape, some in cornucopias, some in queer designs, but all ready for service and of no greater price than those found in the shops.

Thursday's booth was pronounced to be the most beautiful as well as the most beautiful as well as the most successful, being dressed for an afternoon tea. The foundation used was a light-weight silkoline in a brilliant tone of yellow, over which was a lace cloth of inexpensive make, the needlework of one of the parish ladies. It was so put together as to be available for other purposes after the fair was over. Along all edges were crinkled paper chrysanthemums, fluffy blossoms, and a floral border, which were so grouped as to show a variety of tints of the same plant. To enhance the beauty of the booth was a centerpiece—a copper samovar for coffee, which made a brilliant setting in a wreath of natural smilax. Teapots in different wares formed novel corner pieces. There were cut glass, Colonial china and the like, good, rich cakes from every State, cups of Russian and ordinary tea, sandwiches dainty and delicious, with a fine tea and fruit punch—not usually found elsewhere.

Friday being the cleaning day, the booth was equipped in lavender cretonne with a pretty flower design, with full ruffles of the same on all edges. The articles for sale were brushes of all sorts, new inventions for the saving of labor, polish of all kinds, dusters, home-made and otherwise.

Saturday being the traditional baking day, the booth was dressed in pure white crepe paper, while the attendants wore white lawn gowns with big aprons over them and caps of white paper. The stand fairly groaned beneath its weight of good things. There were biscuits baked to a turn, bread brown and tempting; there were cakes of many and delectable sorts; there were rich layer cakes, perfectly cooked loaf cakes, jumbles, cookies and the like. Then there were puddings, pies—all sorts, with flaky, appetizing crusts; substantial meat pies and fruit pies were represented. In addition to the ready-to-eat dainties, there were certain of their ingredients for sale. Baking powder was there in boxes of varying sizes; the finest of flour, offered in packages of convenient size; butter was supplied in "empty" rolls, and also the freshest eggs were heaped in baskets, each and all being offered at current prices.

The candy booth, little removed, perhaps charmed the children most. It was a small affair, and two little girls, with capable assistants, did admirable work. They were capital sellers, and so gathered in the pennies and nickels with a rush.

At the Dutch booth was every known device from Holland, in which windmill effects did duty in expensive Delft ware and other designs of picturesque make.

The most popular booth was the one in which fancy articles were sold. It was decorated in green, the background forming a charming treatment for home-made accessories, which were hung up in the most effective way. It was a regular up-to-date affair, with all sorts of attractive fingerings, the newest ideas in bags, pin-cushions and the like, handsome buttons and shoe bags, opera reticules made of melon seeds, jewel cases of silk and satin, handkerchief cases of pompadour silks, glove cases of plush, brocade soft silks and the like—McCall's.

Salisbury, Md.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I take this method of announcing to the Democratic voters of Wicomico County my candidacy for the House of Delegates, subject to the Democratic Primaries to be held July 10. I solicit the support of Democrats in every district, promising to abide by the decision of the coming primaries. As it will be impossible for me to get around to see every Democrat in the county, I earnestly solicit their votes.

Rev. Dr. H. S. Johnson's Strong Utterances on Subject of Ill-Advised Marriages.

POVERTY MARRIAGES DISAPPROVED

Boston Pastor Discourages Mating on Insufficient Earnings.—Those with Communicable Diseases, Inherited or Acquired, Should Remain Single.

Boston, Mass.—"I will refuse to marry persons afflicted with consumption or any hereditary or communicable disease if I have personal knowledge of such ailments existing," and I am also opposed to marrying divorced people except in the case of the innocent party," said Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, in this city.

"I do not think it advisable to marry young couples who are in poor circumstances. I believe, through observation and consultation, that a prospective bridegroom should have an earning capacity of at least $15 a week before he should consider the matrimonial venture. This statement, of course, does not apply in all cases, for there are always exceptions, but I think the union of persons in the middle class in this country, who are in poor circumstances, creates nothing but a hell on earth.

"When I made the statement some time ago from the pulpit of my church that I would marry any couple that wanted to get married if they did not have the marriage fee, my remark was a facetious one, made half in jest and half in earnest, but I will gladly perform the ceremony for any unfortunate couple that might have slipped, free of cost, if they apply to me and give evidence of good faith. It is a pitiable sight in a large city to see a young girl carrying a babe on her arm without a husband to show his love, or a father to provide for her and her offspring.

"I wish, perhaps, led to make the statement that I would marry such couples that applied to me through a case that came to me not long ago. Our church is so situated in the heart of the city that practically all our parishioners are interested in a young girl who had sinned, and I appeared in court in her behalf. She was dressed in mourning and carried her babe on her arm. It developed that when her aged mother learned of the sin and disgrace of her daughter, she committed suicide by throwing herself into the river. And that is why I stand ready to help uplift the sinners that are making a struggle to live an upright and honorable life, and our church will assist them in every reasonable manner, such as finding employment for the husband, etc.

"Now as to the marriage of young girls and fellows in meagre circumstances. There has been and is constantly being brought to my attention cases of hasty marriages when neither person is in a financial condition to warrant their marriage. Fifteen dollars a week is little enough to defray the expenses of a home with its furnishings, its doctor's and nurse's bills, the support of children and the mite that should be given to charity by all Christians. Of course, when I place the weekly salary at $15 I refer only to the middle classes, that is Irish-Americans, or those of Anglo-Saxon extraction, and so forth. I don't refer to the lower class of people from Europe who can exist on much less.

"And in regard to persons afflicted with tuberculosis or other diseases of a hereditary nature to which man and woman are subject, it is my belief that a man or woman unfortunate enough to be affected with communicable diseases should be unselfish enough when they are aware of these diseases existing to be content to merely love the man or woman and not ask one to have whole lives blasted. It is a terrible thing to have children born into this world with the taint of disease upon them. Yet there are a great many marriages in this country in the course of the year when one or the other of the contracting persons is a victim of some communicable sexual disease, and is the cause of much misery and the loss to the United States of millions of dollars.

"I will not marry persons whom I know are afflicted thus, and if there is any suspicion in my mind I will ask them frankly about the matter. A man should be as unselfish and sacrificing in such matters as the soldier or the fireman or the hundreds of other heroes, and it is their duty to humanity as well as to their country that they cast aside all thoughts of marriage when they know they are unfitted to become husbands and fathers.

"I have steadfastly refused to marry divorced persons, unless in the case of the innocent parties. There are innumerable cases of innocent persons being divorced through no fault of theirs and they should not be compelled to suffer for the sins of others.

Profitable Labor.
Jimmy's mother was surprised to see him heading toward the garden with a garden rake.
"Why, Jimmy?" she exclaimed.
"What on earth are you going to do with that rake?"
"I am going to rake your flower pot, answered the youngster.
"What for?" demanded the mother.
"Why for money?" was the response. "I heard papa tell Uncle Harry that he raked a pot last night, and got fifty dollars."—G. F. McIntyre.

Waiter, furious, calls the hotel proprietor.
Proprietor (to guest)—Why can't you eat this soup?

MYSTERY OF A LABORATORY

When I was a young woman I was seamstress in the family of Doctor B.—who was one of the most prominent and ablest doctors in Philadelphia; his home was a three-story house in Walnut street below Tenth and was built as were most of the houses at that time with a back stairway which practically cut the house in two. On the second floor was a large bathroom and adjoining this the doctor had a smaller room fitted up as a laboratory. There were three rooms on the upper floor, one mine, the other two occupied by the cook and housemaid.

Like most young girls I was intensely afraid of the laboratory, and usually ran past it, holding my breath and keeping my eyes shut tight; the older women had told me tales of the gawsome contents of the bottles and jars on the shelves, of the skeleton of a man hanging in a rooming of skulls of notorious criminals and the thousand and one things that only menial horror to a young girl. Only once did I look into this chamber of horrors, and that was on a clear winter's afternoon, when I had run upstairs for something forgotten. But all I saw then was a detached bath tub which stood near a door on the opposite side of the room. This door, I learned, opened on a narrow staircase which ran down the opposite wall of the house into the yard.

When I reached my room at night I was usually too tired to worry much about what might be going on in the room below me. One night in the winter I was even more than usually tired. I locked my door as usual, fastened my one window, which looked into the yard, turned out the gas and got into bed. I had not slept long when I heard some one call, "Mary! oh, Mary!" in such a troubled voice that I thought it must be the cook or housemaid taken suddenly ill. I jumped out of bed and answered, "Yes, I'm coming! What's wanted?" I opened my door and looked into the hall, but could see no one; nobody was about on my floor.

I decided I had been dreaming, went into my room again, fastened my door and got into bed, determined to go to sleep at once. I lay with my face toward the wall when some insistent and irresistible force compelled me to turn toward my door. A light was always burning in each hall of the house and there was sufficient coming through the transom over my door for me to see clearly all the familiar objects in my room. As I looked I saw distinctly a woman standing as though she had just come through the door, though I knew it was locked. She had on a white bed gown, quite short (for I could see her white stockings and black cloth low shoes), a black petticoat and a little gray shawl across her shoulders. Her hair was white and her face was the most pitiful I had ever seen; it was pallid and wasted as though with a long sickness, and as I looked at her she wrung her poor, thin hands and said, "Mary, oh, Mary! don't let them"—and that was all.

I jumped from my bed again, lighted the gas and turned to see what she wanted me to do, but she was gone. My door was fastened, so was my window, and there was no other way to get in or out of my room. I again went into the hall, but it was silent and empty.

There was no more sleep for me that night, and I determined to leave my place. Next morning I went down stairs about five o'clock, and as I passed it I noticed that the door of the laboratory was open. Impelled by the same force which drew my eyes toward my door the night before, I went to the tub and looked in. And there lay the woman I had seen in my room. Save that her eyes were shut, she was as I had seen her, dressed in the short white gown, the white stockings and the low cut cloth shoes with the same pitiful white face framed in white hair. I ran screaming from the room, and the cook had to call the doctor to attend me, for I went into a violent fit of hysterics.

I left my place that day, but I have always wondered who that poor soul was. The cook said she had died of a rare disease and her body had been brought to the doctor's house for dissection. Was she dead when they brought her there and placed her in the tub and did her soul have a tenderness for the body that had cradled it so long and have a horror of its being dissected? Why had she come to me a stranger? I have never found an answer to any of these questions.

Ice Is Sacred.
Ice is regarded with a superstitious reverence in Italy, France and England. Common waiters are not allowed to touch the precious product. Instead the head waiter hands it out in infinitesimal fragments with a pair of sugar-tongs. Recently the London newspapers have been clamoring for the advent of some enterprising American with an ice plant. Most of the London editors are Americans or have been in America, and their palates yearn for long, cold things with straws in them in preference to the yeasty British beer.

W. F. LANKFORD DEAD

Near Princess Anne. Postmaster of Maryland Town Expires After Short Illness.

Postmaster William F. Lankford died Thursday morning at 8.45 o'clock at his home, about three miles from Princess Anne in the forty seventh year of his age. Mr. Lankford had been in failing health for several years. He was in Princess Anne on Tuesday, being confined to his home only since Wednesday morning.

Mr. Lankford was a staunch Republican, having served his party as a member of the State Central Committee for a number of years.

He was first appointed postmaster of Princess Anne in 1890 and served four years. In 1897 he was elected Register of Wills for Somerset county and entered upon his duties on December 17, 1897, and served six years. He was a candidate for re-election in 1903, but was defeated by his Democratic opponent, Thomas Dixon. In 1905 he was reappointed postmaster of this town taking charge of the position December 17 of that year. He is survived by a widow, who was Miss Hargis of Pocomoke City, and one daughter, Miss Amanda Lankford.

RAISING A BOAT

From The Wicomico River, "Compact" To Be Taken Up.

The boat "Compact," which has been lying at wharf of E. S. Adkins & Co., near the pivot bridge is being taken up by Capt. M. B. Register, of Lewes, Del. This boat has been sunk for some time and after all attempts of the owners to raise her had failed it was condemned by the government as a menace to navigation and ordered taken up.

Capt. Register, who has charge of this work, says he expects to have all the shells to the amount of 1400 bushels out of her and the boat taken up by Wednesday or Thursday of next week.

The method of procedure is a very plausible one in that it is very simple and feasible. Capt. Register says they will remove the deck from the Compact by means of the windlass and then take the shells out. After taking the shells out, it will be a very easy matter to float the boat. He intends to take the mast off the boat, also to take her apart so they can load the whole boat on two barges.

A FAIR DEAL FOR EVERY CANDIDATE TODAY

Should Be Given By Every Democrat Interested In His Party's Welfare And Success. Then The Defeated Ones Will Have No Just Cause To Kick.

The closing days of the primary fight have brought considerable interest among the people, and the candidates are showing what good hustlers they are. If talk means anything a pretty heavy Democratic vote will be cast today.

The air has been full of rumors about combinations made and combinations broken. It has been reported several times that the organization had made up their minds about the ticket and were quietly sounding around to see how it would take, and as often has been denied by the leaders, who declare that no attempt will be made to bring about the election of anyone in the primaries by the organization as a whole, and that if anything is done it will be done by individuals and merely as a matter of personal choice. It is further rumored that the leaders themselves have never been able to agree upon the men to be selected. At the present time it does not look like a very strong effort of any kind has been made by the leaders to line the vote up behind a complete ticket.

The candidates are all asking for fair play and the leaders are promising that they shall get it. There have unquestionably been combinations made by some of the candidates, and they have in a good many cases found that as usual combinations cut both ways, and some have been kept busy denying that any combination has been entered into according to rumor. Combinations are pretty hard to carry out without the voters knowing of them and the friends of the men outside the agreement are quick to resent the matter. What will be the outcome of today's fight is hard to predict at the present time.

The size of the vote is one of the elements that is hard to calculate upon as this is the first year the Crawford County plan has been tried in this County. The estimates of the vote varies from 800 to 1500 and some even put it higher than the last figure. It is evident that the voters are taking considerable interest and it is probable that quite a heavy vote will be cast. The candidates have all been very active and their friends for them, every district in the county has been canvassed and all public festes have been well attended.

The sheriff contest between Kelley and Brady has been hotly fought and the friends and supporters of both men seem to be confident of winning. The County Commissioners offices have also been well contested by the candidates.

Pernaps however the contest over the Legislative ticket has aroused as much interest as anything else owing to the large number of contestants. While it looks now as though the fight lies between four of the contestants, it is hard to say what the outcome will be, and it would not at all be surprising if some of the other candidates would not run up to the winning class. If no attempt is made to carry through a certain ticket for the Legislature several surprises may be in store for those who have closely followed the fight. After the promises and assurances which have been given to the candidates that no attempt would be made to slate a ticket, it will undoubtedly cause hard feeling if any such attempt is made.

Let every man have a fair chance and a square deal in the primaries and then let the defeated ones bow gracefully to the voice of the people and help elect the successful ones.

The Crawford County plan will be watched carefully both by those who advocated its adoption and those who were opposed to it, to see how it actually works out, and to watch for defects to be remedied at the coming Legislature.

CRUSADE AGAINST

Whiskey Selling. Authorities Are Making Strong Efforts Against illicit Trade.

The complaint of the selling of intoxicants that has been voiced rather loudly for some time has had the effect of getting several alleged violators of the law arrested. Every since the law against whiskey selling was passed for this County the authorities have done their best in keeping down the sale of intoxicants, and with such effect that there is not in Salisbury a single speck of it. But in spite of all efforts to catch and punish violators, there has been a great deal of pocket selling and some selling in woods. The authorities have made up their minds that the walking saloons must stop or leave town and that the illicit selling in the woods and around the edges of town must be stopped. A united and determined effort has been inaugurated to catch the guilty parties, and will be kept up. It is understood that the Anti-Saloon League has actively cooperated in this movement and are giving the authorities every assistance in their power.

The following parties were apprehended this week charged with violating the liquor law:

Wm. Morris, on Tuesday, placed under $500 bail.

Archibald Flemming, placed under $500 bail.

John Williams, placed under $500 bail.

Chas. McGraw, placed under $500 bail asked for Jury trial.

James Scott, col., House of Correction, six months.

Geo. Graham, col. of Fritland, was sent to the House of Correction for six months for carrying concealed weapons at the camp-meeting last week.

Gen. Mack Arrives On Wicomico Fair Track.

Gen. Mack, one of the horses that is going to race here on July 21st arrived by express on Wednesday of this week.

Gen. Mack makes a fine appearance and is said to be in very good shape, and to be faster than before. On a trial test on the Pocomoke City track he is said to have paced mile in less than 2:15. Dry Dock is also in fine condition and one of the best and closest races ever seen on the Eastern Shore is prophesied for the 21st. Both horses have the same record and both will be handled by men who know their business.

KILLED BY TRAIN

On B. C. & A. At Willards. Strong Drink Probably The Cause.

Benton Dennis, 30 years old, son of Mr. James P. Dennis, of Willards, was run over Sunday night by the Ocean City train which leaves Salisbury about 11.40, returning to Ocean City after leaving passengers in Salisbury.

Dennis had been over to Ocean City Sunday to celebrate the 4th and from all reports, had been imbibing wine of Bacchus rather freely, and had returned to Willards on the train which leaves Ocean City at 10.30 P.M. When Dennis arrived in Willards instead of going to his home, as he promised some of his friends, he wandered down the track toward Ocean City, and had staggered or fallen to a recumbent position near the end of the switch at Willards where he remained until the special train being run to Ocean City through the summer season, came along and took him along with her for some distance. His brains were knocked out at the first blow as they were found near the switch and a part of his body was found a little farther down the line, while one limb was carried down the road for a distance of several miles, being found between Whaleyville and St. Martins.

His body, besides being terribly mutilated was also very badly scalded and baked, which, it is surmised, was received by being caught up and held near the furnace of the engine at the place where he was first struck by the train. From all appearances he was sleeping off the effects of the intoxicants in the middle of the track when the train struck him, killing him instantly, or he probably sat down on the rails, thinking he would be able to get up and go home in a short while but was overcome by drowsiness and went to sleep in the middle of the track.

URGING MR. JACKSON

Friends Want Him To Run For State Comptroller.

The friends of Mr. William F. Jackson, Republican National Committeeman from Maryland and a son of former Congressman William H. Jackson, are booming him as a candidate for State Comptroller, and it is believed if he will consent he will be the unanimous choice of his party. He is in Europe with his family and is expected home in September.

The Republican State Convention, which will nominate the Comptroller, does not meet until August 25th, and it is said that between now and then Mr. Jackson's friends will submit his claims to the leaders throughout the State.

Mr. Jackson occupies a unique place in the Republican party, and it is believed that all elements would gladly support him in the convention. By selecting him for national committeeman at Chicago last year, Collector of the Port, William F. Stone, who is now recognized as the head of the Republican State organization, defeated Congressman Sydney E. Mudd, who was supported for national committeeman by Messrs. Thomas Parran and Phillips Lee Goldsborough. It was this selection which gave Mr. Stone control of the State Central Committee and enabled him to depose Mr. Parran as chairman and elect Mr. John B. Hanna.

Mr. Jackson's friends on the Eastern Shore, who boomed him for national committeeman and who were with Mr. Stone in his fight for control of the State Central Committee, are the ones that are now urging him as a candidate for Comptroller. They are closely allied with Mr. Stone in the present organization, and it is believed that Mr. Stone will be glad to join hands with them in nominating Jackson. It is also thought that his candidacy would be acceptable to Messrs. Mudd, Goldsborough and Parran.

Among Republicans it is expected that Mr. Jackson will take his father's place as the Republican leader on the Eastern Shore. His father is advanced in years, and it is said that he is anxious to retire from active management in the campaigns, although he will continue to give his advice whenever it is needed.

Several of Mr. Jackson's intimate friends, it is said, proposed to him to become a candidate for Comptroller before he sailed for Europe. It is said that he did not declare point blank that he would not run, yet he did not say that he would, even if he were the unanimous choice of his party. As a result of his neutral position his friends are now at work in his behalf.

RUDOLPH S. COHN

Dies in Norfolk. Former Residence Princess Anne.

The body of Mr. Rudolph S. Cohn, who died at his residence in Norfolk, Va., on Monday, was brought to Princess Anne on the noon train on July 7th, for interment in the Presbyterian Cemetery. The funeral services were held in the Manokin Presbyterian Church, and were conducted by Dr. Joseph Bonnie, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Norfolk, of which Mr. Cohn was an elder. James H. Howerton, formerly pastor of the same church, and Rev. Lewis R. Watson, pastor of Manokin Church, of which Mr. Cohn was formerly an elder. The funeral was largely attended, not only by relatives and friends in this county, but by many persons from Salisbury, Pocomoke, Norfolk, Philadelphia and other places. The pallbearers were Thomas Dixon, Joshua W. Miles, I. T. James Brown, Henry J. Walters, E. Fildner Lankford, Robert W. Adams, Robert F. Maddox and Wilmer O. Lankford.

Mr. Cohn came to Princess Anne when a very young man, and was successfully engaged in the manufacture of lumber until 1888, when he moved to Norfolk and became connected with the Roanoke Railway and Lumber Company, of which he was a director and secretary and treasurer at the time of his death. Upon his removal to Norfolk, Mr. Thomas H. Book became his partner in the business in Princess Anne, conducted under the name of Cohn & Book. Mr. Cohn married Miss Alice Humphreys, of Princess Anne, who survives him, together with six children—E. Herman Cohn, of Princess Anne; Mrs. Harry L. Cohn, of Annapolis, Md.; Mrs. Norman Cohn, Jr., and Misses Carolyn, Anna, Rose and Dorothy Cohn, of Norfolk, Va.

Last evening was the scene of a delightful feast. The lecture room of the M. P. Church, when members of Division B of the Christian Endeavor magnificently served tea and cakes to the entire of members. An account of the feast was given in last week's issue. Section B went around with a great evening with a cake and tea, saying that they were greater blessing, as the feast was more blessed to the entire of members.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous For Salisbury People To Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, drowsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured people right here in Salisbury.

Mrs. Walter E. Nichols, 371 Elizabeth Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have brought me great relief from kidney complaint and I believe they will do as much for other sufferers. I was afflicted with symptoms of kidney disease from childhood but was never troubled seriously until about two years ago. Then my back began to ache severely and last summer I was laid up for two weeks. I used any amount of medicine but found only slight relief. Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at White & Leonard's drug store went at once to the seat of my trouble and helped me in every way. I consider this remedy worthy of the highest recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Me. "Although, past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 30 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorated all vital organs, cured Liver and Kidney troubles, induced sleep, imparted strength and appetite. Only 50c at John M. Toulson's.

Tortured On A Horse.

"For ten years I couldn't ride a horse without being in torture from piles," writes L. S. Napier, of Ragless, Ky. "When all doctors and other remedies failed, Backen's Arnica Salve cured me." Infallible for Piles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Boils, Fever Sores, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Corns. 50c Guaranteed by John M. Toulson.

A Night Rider's Raid.

The worst night riders are calomel, croton oil or aloes pills. They raid your bed to rob you of rest. Not so with Dr. King's New Life Pills. They never distress or inconvenience, but always cleanse the system, curing Colds, Headaches, Constipation, Malaria, 50c at John M. Toulson's.

If you have pains in the back, weak back, or any other indication of a weakened or disordered condition of the kidneys or bladder, you should get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills right away when you experience the least sign of kidney or bladder complaints, but be sure that you get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. We know what they will do for you, and if you will send your name to E. O. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, you will receive a free trial box of these kidney and bladder pills. They are sold here by All Druggists.

Get DeWitt's Carbolic Witch Hazel Salve when you ask for it. There are a great many imitations, but there is just one original. This salve is good for anything where a salve is needed to be used, but it is especially good for Piles. Sold by All Druggists.

The best pills made are DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little liver pills. They are small, gentle, pleasant, easy to take and get promptly. They are sold by All Druggists.

Feel languid, weak, run down? Headache? Stomach "off"?—Just a plain case of lazy liver. Burdock Blood Bitters tones liver and stomach, promotes digestion, purifies the blood.

Soothes itching skin. Heals cuts or burns without a scar. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheum, any itching. Doan's Ointment. Your Druggist sells it.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Reguline relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since."—A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex.

Cheapest accident insurance—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Stops the pain and heals the wound. All druggists sell it.

Advice to the Aged.

Age brings infirmities, such as sluggish bowels, weak kidneys and bladder and TORPID LIVER.

SOME OUT OF DATE THEORIES.

To Keep Up with Science not at All Easy for the Lay Mind.

To the lay mind it is very discomforting to see the kaleidoscopic changes that are continually taking place in all branches of science. We have no sooner accepted the nebular hypothesis as one of the ultimate laws of nature than the geologist on the one hand and the mathematician on the other tell us that it will have to be abandoned.

One generation of naturalists delights us by teaching us to believe that every coral island is built from the bottom of the ocean by the accumulated remains of millions of generations of polyps and the next would have us believe that they are merely the caps of oceanic mountains.

For a century the very foundation on which chemistry was built was the doctrine that the mass, the total amount of things in the universe, was unchangeable, but now more chemists doubt it than believe it.

Sixty years ago Adam Smith was thought to have said all but the last word on economics, and his principle of laissez-faire was the holy of holies, but now laissez-faire has been abandoned and only a single one of his laws remains unchallenged.

So it is in all lines, theories of inheritance, of chemical affinity, of disease, of health, of life, of death—all come and go so rapidly that we can scarcely keep pace with the procession.
When we look into any specialized phase of a subject the host of ever changing theories simply bewilders us by the extreme speciality.

The interesting part of it is that the man of science is the very one who is not worried by these shifting sand. He is too busy using the various theories to accomplish things.
He seems to think no more of discarding one theory for another than he does of taking up a larger test tube or beaker or of adjusting his microscope to a different power.

Gum-Pickers at Work.

Picking spruce gum and selling it to chewing gum manufacturers is a source of income for a great many men in the Adirondacks and other northern forests—guides and small farmers—while others make it a business, the year through. The gum appears on the tree trunks like a wax.
The gatherer, armed with a pole, on the end of which is a can and a sharp chisel, goes to the chunks of gum, which he cuts out and is transferred to a tin can or bag. The gatherer in a day may travel on snow-shoes ten or twenty miles through the forest, sleep night in some old hunter's deserted shack. There are three kinds of spruce in the Adirondacks—red, black and white. The best gum is gathered from the spruce of the white spruce.
The rarest of the gums is the "blister" which is translucent and turns blue after being chewed. After being scrapped, washed and brightened, it sells for one dollar and fifty cents a pound. There is a coarser grade, composed of blisters scrapings, mixed with particles of bark. Placed on trays of cotton cloth in a steam tank, the gum is drawn out, and yields the prodigious fifty cents a pound, forming the ordinary chewing gum of commerce. Some manufacturers adulterate the gum with paraffin resin and chicle. Some years ago, an old gum-gatherer of Cranberry Lake lost twenty-three bars of gum by the splitting of his boat. It

THE SCALLOP INDUSTRY

Proves a Source of Wealth to Nantucket Fishermen

HARD BUT NOT PERILOUS

Little Capital Required to Engage in the Business—Means Employed to Deceive the Buyer—Sea Water Four Dollars a Gallon—Inspection Vigilantly Carried Out.

Comparatively few persons outside of the Commonwealth have any adequate knowledge of the importance of the scallop fishery of Massachusetts, yet it is safe to say that no single industry within her borders yields so big a profit on the capital invested or possesses greater possibilities for future development. In proof of this, if proof be needed, it is necessary only to point to the situation in the fall and winter of 1905-1906, when 200 Nantucket fishermen "cornered" the scallop markets of New York and Boston and reaped in less than three months a clear profit of between fifty and seventy-five thousand dollars, says the New York Herald.

Yet, unlike other "corners" with which the public is more or less familiar, this one served a good purpose, for it called official attention to what has since been described as "the alarmingly progressive depletion" of this lucrative industry and set on foot determined, scientific efforts for its improvement.

The time was, not so many years ago, when it was possible to gather hundreds of thousands of bushels of scallops on the shoals along the coast of Massachusetts, north and south. Today, although many scallops are taken at Edgartown, and a few at New Bedford, Cotuit, Hyannis and Chatham, quaint old Nantucket, the little "sea girl isle," with 30 miles of ocean between it and mainland, is the chief source of supply. From these waters tens of thousands of dollars worth of scallops are still taken yearly, and there is great encouragement for the future in the recent report of the Commissioners on Fisheries and Game that "the opportunities for development are alluring," and that in a few years the value of the annual catch should be increased tenfold.

Scallop fishing is an occupation involving considerable hardship, but little real danger for those accustomed to the life. The open season extends from November 1 to May 1. Imagine yourself in an open boat in the waters of Nantucket Harbor, the thermometer threatening the zero point, your clothes soaked and frozen, culling ice cold shells in a wind that sweeps in biting gusts from the north or west or east and seems to chill the very marrow in your bones, and you have a fair picture of the scallop fisher in pursuit of the precious mollusk in the winter months. Of course the amount of fishing done during this season depends in large measure upon the ice.

Little capital is required to engage in the business of catching scallops. A dollar bill contributed to the town fathers, provided you are a citizen, will get you a license. If you are not a citizen neither love nor money will buy you the right to fish within the limits of the town. After you have your license you will need a catboat—the type of scallop boat now chiefly used, though there are a few swamped dories and old fashioned whale boats still to be seen in the Nantucket fleet. A suit of oil clothes, three dredges, with the necessary amount of line, a culling board, three or four bushel baskets, a few pails and other minor articles and your equipment is complete. The original cost is comparatively trifling and the same outfit will last for many years, with but little outlay for repairs.

When a scallop returns to the shore with his catch he is met at the wharf by the inspector, whose duty it is to see that the scallop laws are lived up to in every particular. He is extremely vigilant, this Nantucket inspector, striving every day to earn the license fees with which he is paid for his services, and his only complaint is that there are no infractions of the law, a condition which, he fears, may lead the authorities to regard his office as a sinecure and abolish it altogether.

The scallop fisher enjoys the distinction of being the only honest purveyor of "watered stock" of whom there is any modern knowledge. The housewife often wonders what makes the large, luscious looking scallops she has just purchased from the city dealer shrink to half their size in cooking. The explanation is simple. The scallops are shipped in small kegs, called "packages." These packages hold several gallons, but instead of filling them with scallops the wily fisherman puts in four gallons of water, and three gallons of water. By the time the consignment reaches the New York or Boston market the scallops have completely "absorbed" the water, and lo and behold when the dealer opens the package he finds seven gallons of the finest looking "eyes" that one could wish to see, and paying four dollars per gallon for water.

Value of Backbone Clover.
Bokhara clover is not cultivated to any extent in this country as yet, though it deserves to be. As a forage plant, few flowers equal it. It is a very good plant for removing the fertility of worn-out exhausted farmland for it will grow where other clovers refuse to grow at all. It is good for planting along railway cuts and embankments to prevent washing of the soil. It contains a large amount of calcium as a constituent of its leaves.

TUMOR OF FOUR YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

South Bend, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed a four years growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They said that only an operation could help me. I am very glad that I followed a friend's advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it has made me a strong and well woman, and I shall recommend it as long as I live."—Mrs. May Fay, Lindsay, Ind.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

Penal Settlement Where Life is

AMID THE NAMELESS MEAT.

Besides the Merciless Severity of the Labor to Which the Convicts are
cises Every White Man.

The pardoning of the French murderer Soileland created so much indignation because his deportation is looked upon as an encouragement of murder, and probably the murderer himself, too, in his solitary confinement, thinks that after escaping death he is destined to live there a happy, idyllic life and end his days in peace. This is, however, a great mistake. The bagno of French Guiana is worse than death; it is hell on earth. A political criminal, Liard-Couteaux, who, after living five years with the deported, was pardoned on the occasion of the amnesty granted in the Dreyfus affair, gives the description of the penal settlement: "There the most terrible torture ever devised by the modern penal law awaits the unfortunate. Death is a hundred times more desirable than this punishment. Beside the merciless severity with which the convicts are held to their hard labors there, threatens the terrible climate that enervates every white man, however strong his health. No one can stand this nameless heat. During the summer the mean temperature by day is 30 degrees R. in the shade. In the evening it yields to a cold humidity. During the winter there are incessant rain showers, but the heat is not less enervating. If it does not rain for any length of time the swamps become partly dry and produce noxious vapors that are the cause of fatal diseases. The air is permeated with infectious miasma, to which more than half of the new arrivals immediately succumb. After six months the number of the remaining inmates goes to show that of every hundred prisoners eighty die in the first six months. Malaria fever and consumption accomplish with great rapidity the work which the President's mercy spared the executioner. To breathe means, in Guiana, to become infected. Add to this, at night, the swarms of flies and mosquitoes whose sharp stings pierce all covers; of insects that dig into the pores of the skin and carry poison into the body; of vermin of every description that attack the unfortunate when asleep."

There are, to be sure, some privileged prisoners, who are allotted a piece of land and can live with their families; but their number is insignificant—five to every thousand! In 1899 there were 35 of such privilege know nothing but their place of work, where they wear themselves out by incessant hard labor, driven by the whip of the cruel warden, tormented by hunger, despite fever and disease, without a word of complaint that would only entail the severest chastisements.

In a few weeks the new transport of prisoners to which also Soileland belongs will arrive on the vessel La Loire at the Safety Island (between Royal and Joseph Islands), and at the floating wharf they will be subjected to a narrow search. Everything they possess is taken away from them, the dearest article of memory that unites them with the world of yore they have to surrender. "Abandon hope," that dreadful inscription on the entrance of Dante's Purgatory, slowly engraves itself with flaming letters on the hearts of the convicts. In herds of one hundred they are being driven to their places of labor in the interior, and a hopeless life, terrible in its monotonous cruelty, awaits for them. They have to cut timber and transport wood. Profound silence by day and by night, interrupted only by the whistling of the whip, the curse of the supervisors and the groaning of the exhausted. When the convict has borne this wretched life for a number of years and, however dulled and brutalized, is still capable of keeping up his courage by a faint glimmer of hope, he may, perhaps, advance from the third class of convicts, to which he hitherto belonged, to the second class. This, however, means only an insignificant change of life; there is the same hard labor, the same suffering, the same privations, though he has the satisfaction of looking down upon others who fare even worse. And after a number of more years he is admitted to the first class. And, if during the whole time he has not been guilty of the least infraction of discipline, if his supervisors are kindly disposed toward him, if all the conditions required by law are complied with, then he may perhaps be recommended for the dreamed of privilege of being allotted a small piece of land that, despite hard work, affords him a scanty existence and at least allows him to breathe freer. But how many dream this dream in vain, and the only relief offered them is a small spot of earth surrounded with mango trees—the grave.

ALL DEMOCRATS SHOULD VOTE.

Today is the date fixed for holding the Democratic primaries and it is hoped that all Democrats in the county will avail themselves of the opportunity given them to vote for the men they wish nominated on the Democratic ticket. Owing to the lively and thorough canvases made by the men who are asking for the nominations, the Democrats in all sections of the County must be aware of the primaries and the importance to the party and to the people of the result of these primaries. Under the Convention system probably less than 100 Democrats took any part in the primaries and after the nominations it was at once necessary for those nominated to make the acquaintance of the people. If the people want the Crawford County plan which gives every voter of the party in the county a chance to say who he wants on the ticket which he will be expected to vote this fall, then it is up to them to come out to the polls and vote for men to fill the offices. Each man has had several weeks to make inquiries as to the character and standing of the men who are candidates in the primaries either through talking with them personally or by reputation and ought to have made up his mind as to whom they want nominated.

As far as has been heard there is no organization or anti-organization fight but a question as to what will be for the best interests of the party and people. That all will not agree on that proposition goes without saying and every man should decide for himself and not wait for some word to pass down the line. If combinations have been made between some candidates have gotten together and agreed to support each other and regardless of qualifications persuade their friends to do the same, then the voters should show that they are not mere cattle or personal property belonging to any man who had the right to grade their votes off as they should see fit. A man who is a man, naturally resents the dictation of any man when he has a duty to perform, and will vote for the men who he thinks ought to be elected regardless of the wishes either for or against.

If a light vote is polled the opponents of the Crawford County plan will be quick to seize upon it as an argument showing that the people did not wish to have any say as to the ticket, but were willing to leave the making of it out to those who are in the habit of doing so.

We believe that the Democrats in the county want to make out their own ticket—that they want to do so without interference or dictation, and it is the duty of all to make an effort to get to the polls and register their wishes as to the candidates. The organization is quoted as saying that they are hands off and will not attempt to put through a ticket, it is hoped that this will prove to be the facts in the case and that the people will be allowed to do their own choosing. And they should remember that they are on trial and should vote for the best man regardless of mere personal feeling.

If the organization does take hold and attempt to nominate a ticket the fact cannot be hidden but will be known and the candidates who have entered this contest in good faith and under the assurance from the leaders that they would be given an equal chance with the others will feel aggrieved and have a right to feel. But the fact that some of the leaders are in favor of any one man should not be taken as conclusive evidence that a concerted action has been taken in favor of or against any special candidate. They have the same right as any voter in the county to exercise their choice as to the candidates, but to unite and carry a ticket through is a different matter.

The men who are turned down by the people should, if they have a square deal, be prepared to get solidly behind the ticket nominated and help elect as they would expect their opponents to do if the primaries had resulted in their favor.

Fair play and the people to decide what taken in good part—no buying and selling of votes—and a push along after the nomination.

Proceeding Of The Board At Tuesday's Session.

The Board met with all the members present. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and accepted. Mr. Messick reported that he had relieved the situation of draining the private property of Thomas Walter, and others, at Nanticoke, simply by putting in tiling to take the water across the road and that Mr. J. R. Traversa would permit it to be drained across his property.

Several bills were passed and ordered paid.

Mr. Wright reported that he had sold Vienna Ferry for 1910 at $400 to L. H. Cheesman.

It was reported to the Board that John T. Jones had been moving sand from the road that was needed for road work. The Clerk was directed to notify him not to move any more without the consent of the Board.

The Board ordered final notice to be given in the matter of the Tax Ditch petitioned for by Jacob T. Jones, S. E. Traut, J. J. Layton and others.

The City asked the Commissioners for the services of the County Engineer, H. M. Clark, to prepare plans and specification for a bridge at Hamphreys Mill Dam. The Board consented to have the Engineer do the work.

Mr. Wright reported that the road from Hebron to Quantico was in bad condition and needed improvements made.

Mr. Johnson was authorized to have the boat at Wicomico Creek Ferry repaired. The next meeting of the Board will be on July the 30th.

"The Marathon Race."

The long-distance foot race was a popular form of contest more than 2,000 years ago, and its revival in this country has been graphically illustrated in a picture called "The Marathon," by Samuel Nelson Abbott.

It shows the victor in the final desperate spurt of a great contest of speed and endurance. The nearest contender has run himself to exhaustion, and has collapsed on the course within a few strides of the goal; farther back is another runner, badly beaten, but still going to his last ounce of game-ness.

The excitement of the crowd, the cheers, the waving of hats and hands for the victor; the gloom of the friends of the losers, are realistically shown.

This ancient Greek race was one of the principal events of the Olympic games which have been revived. The victory of an American athlete last year at London over the best runners of the nations of the world has renewed the popularity of the race in this country. The picture is founded on the original form of one of value, and was made for Hart Schaffner & Marks.

Claims Duckpin Championship.

Mr. William L. Shenk, champion duckpin roller of Frederick, and Mr. Orrick, of Baltimore, rolled an exhibition game at the Diamond alleys last week for the championship of the State. Mr. Shenk winning by a score of 1,086 to 921. The winners average in eight games was 120 1/4 against 113 for Orrick. Mr. Shenk's highest score was 153, and the lowest 98. He claims the championship of the State and will defend the title against all comers.

Delmar Postmaster

Mr. Chas. C. Tomlinson, postmaster at Delmar received word from First Assistant Postmaster General, C. F. Granfield, of his reappointment as Postmaster of that place. He was the successful applicant of eight who were seeking for the position.

His first term in office expired more than two years ago and owing to so many applicants the appointment was delayed. It has been one of the hottest battles for a postmastership that has been known in Delaware for years.

The Advertiser Keeps Him in Touch With Eastern Shore Affairs.

New York, June 30th, 1909. The Salisbury Advertiser, Salisbury, Md.

Gentlemen:—Please be good enough to change the address of my paper from East Grange to my New York office, until otherwise advised.

As one of the Eastern Shoremen domiciled in the North, I can say that I read your paper every week with great pleasure and find that I am enabled through it to keep in excellent touch with your Eastern Shore affairs.

Yours very respectfully,

Finger-Developing Device.
A recent invention provides a device which may be applied to the hands of a piano player to develop the muscles of the fingers individually, so that the fingers may be able to strike the notes with a uniform blow. The device consists of a wrist band which supports a series of rods, provided at their opposite ends with pads adapted to rest on the knuckles. Hinged to each one of these rods is a short arm connected at its outer end to a stem projecting from a ring slipped over the finger. A series of weights in the form of washers are adapted to be slipped over the stem, thereby permitting the operator to adjust the weight on each particular finger. Thus if one of his fingers is weaker than the rest, it is fitted with a heavier weight, so that in time the muscles will be developed to such an extent as to make it as strong as the rest of the fingers.

Monkey of a Peccare.

A French woman of fashion happening to see an organ grinder's monkey begging for money in the street, took a fancy to it, bought it and made a pet of it, dressing it in a gaudy and fashionable costume. One day she was holding a fashionable reception in aid of some charity. In the course of the proceedings a peccare sat down at the piano, and accompanying herself, sang a pretty song. As soon as she had finished the monkey, which was being made a great pet by the guests, seized a hat, and holding it before each visitor, as it was wont to do in its organ-grinding days, took up a collection. To the amusement of everybody it completed its round and collected a large sum. Then, the task ended, it jumped on the singer's shoulder and amid shouts of laughter, deposited the money in her lap. The charity, therefore, benefited in an unexpected manner.

The Butter

You Will Eventually Buy.

If you want a high-grade butter of the best quality and will supply the want, and whether you are convinced of its superior quality by this advertisement, or the recommendation of some of your friends who speak from actual knowledge, it is the Butter you will eventually buy.

In thousands of homes in Delaware Acadia Butter has filled its place on the family table for years. There is never a question as to its quality—it is always right. That is what has made it recognized here and elsewhere as the best butter sold over any counter anywhere.

Therefore, we say if you appreciate a fine quality of Butter you will eventually buy Acadia.

A Clothes Story.

We ask the attention of the man to whom outfitting means more than "just clothes." We sell a man clothes that will cause him to tie to us and speak well of us to his friends.

For a Suit or a pair of Trousers that will at once mark you as a "good dresser"; for a correct Hat, Shoes, Tie, Shirt, or anything in toggery that's choice and different, we are at your service. Our good outfitting costs you no more than the other sort—often less, and always less in the end. Prices range from $7 to $20.

An Attractive Showing of $10.50 Suits.

Never in the history of our business have we offered such values as are displayed at this price. The materials are cassimeres, chevots and worsteds, in plain effects and the new conceits. Not a suit in the lot that would not readily bring $20.00. But to insure quick selling the price is $10.50.

Why The Clothes Thoroughgood Sells Require Fewer Pressings Than All Others.

A suit that has to be sent to the presser twice a week or even twice a month to be kept in shape is not a good suit. Something is wrong when the style dodges out of a garment every little while and has to be ironed into it again. Yet eight suits out of every ten suits have just that fault. The shape does not stay. The style does not last. That is why the cleaners and pressers of this town do such a cleaning business. The reason is that the cloth in the garment shrinks, it knuckles to the weather elements and lets every little attack of moisture knock it shapeless. When the cloth puckers and bags, when the coat front wrinkles, when the trousers bag, even without rough usage, the cloth is shrinking; that is the trouble. Now, the clothes sold by Lacy Thoroughgood are treated by a secret process that takes all of the shrink out of them. That process renders the cloth absolutely proof against the shrink element; that is why the good shape in Thoroughgood's Clothes lasts so long. Do you know that Lacy Thoroughgood has sold more suits this spring than he ever sold in one spring before? and he will replace every suit that does bad. Thoroughgood has not sold a bad suit this spring. Thoroughgood has SIX HUNDRED Suits now, the very cream of suits for Men and Young Men, that can be bought CHEAP. These suits were made by B. Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago, and every suit has a silk label sewed on the inside coat pocket which reads: A NEW SUIT WITHOUT CHANGE IF THIS ONE PROVES UNSATISFACTORY. Just buy one suit from Lacy Thoroughgood.

The old apple tree was one soft cloud of pink; but the tramp who rushed across the orchard and eluded and claved his way so frantically up among its beautiful blossoms out of the way of the teeth of the wiry little fox terrier who raced so madly after him never stopped to comment on its loveliness.

As he climbed, something glittering fell from his rags to the short young grass; but the tramp didn't see it, and when Bob, tired of barking, ran off to the other side of the orchard to dig for woodchucks, the tramp dropped down on the other side of the tree and silently stole away. When he was safe out of sight and hearing of Bob, he searched anxiously among his rags, and when he found that the glittering thing was gone he swore.

Myrtle Woodford sat on the wide piazza, trying as if her heart would break. When she went to make the biscuits for dinner, she had laid her diamond ring that her old Aunt Jane had left to her on the pantry window sill, and when she went to look for it, it was not there. As she raised her head to wipe the tears away she saw a nice young man standing at the gate looking at her. He raised his hat and bowed low to rest for a while on the piazza. She brought out a chair for him, stopping on the way to bathe her tear-stained face with her well water, and setting herself gazed at him with frank amazement as he put the small instrument he carried in his hand up to his ear and began to talk, as if he were answering someone who was at the other end of a telephone wire.

"Yes!" he said briskly. "It's a good bit over a mile. They said it was a mile at the last farmhouse." He turned to Myrtle. "How far is it from here to the postoffice?" he asked.

quickly: "I—thought—it might be—"

In spite of herself Myrtle giggled. "No! It isn't an engagement ring," she said.

The nice young man looked his delight. To tell the truth the first sight of that tear-stained face and those yellow curls had wiled his young heart quite away from him. Now he decided that he had a fighting chance, anyway.

"Are you sure you've looked everywhere?" he asked again. Myrtle nodded.

"Everywhere I can think of," she said. "Can't you think of some place to look?" she asked, abstractedly. Then she dropped the little instrument as if it had bitten her and looked up at him queerly.

"What is it? What's the matter?" he asked anxiously.

"Why—why—that—that thing said—when I asked if you couldn't think of some place to look—that thing said, just as plain: 'In the shade of the old apple tree.'"

"Oh, that nothing," he said. "That's only some of Jim's funny business. That's the name of an old song, you know."

WOMEN OVERDO IT

WE ARE BECOMING A PEOPLE OF HARD-RIDDEN FADS.

One of the Chief Dangers of the Age—Too Many Theories of Life—The Food Faddist at Fault.

By Rosanna Queen.

"That poor child was washed into heaven," said a witty woman when hearing of the death of a friend's young daughter. "The mother was a believer in cleanliness and little Susanne was the victim."

"The youngster was always put in the tub morning, noon, and night, and many is the day I've known her to have four or five baths. She was a peppy little thing, sick half the time, but the doctors could not make her mother realize that keeping the pores open did not mean an orgy of bathing."

The chief danger of the age is overdoing. We have so many theories of life that often we are worse off than without any. An overdose benefit is like an overcooked steak; the best is lost.

Few of us realize the distinction between a good thing and a good thing, which is one cause that we are becoming a people of hard-riden fads.

The woman who is too fat is told to reduce. Now, reducing is all right, but rapid flesh shedding is a disease breeder. To reduce in moderation is well; to live for reducing is a virtue overdose.

Perhaps our fat friend is told to exercise. Does she go in for a brisk walk twice a day and gentle calisthenics morning and evening? Not she. She waits until she is ready to drop with fatigue, and bends, turns and twists like an aspiring contortionist until she loses her good looks and good health along with her flesh.

If dieting is the order she draws no life between starving and prudent eating; wrinkles and dyspepsia follow.

A lengthened waistline usually means a belt dropped almost to her knees in front and a figure that is a caricature in its shortness of legs. The food faddist is in special need of learning that well done is not overdone. Who has not been tempted with forbidden food, bread told that the hot water cure is the last thing in this life, trust themselves like the tank of a locomotive, or who gazed at beef-steaks when they become nipped with vegetariansism.

It is well to bring up children carefully. It is overdoing to bring them up so carefully that their young lives are made miserable by rules and regulations, and they are robbed of childhood's heritage of romping.

The successes in life are not always the happy and gentle whose parents have advanced ideas in child-training. Perfection forced into too close range has a way of getting distorted.

A mother with ultra views of decorum was horrified to see her 15-year-old daughter smoke a cigarette and dance a skit dance for the amusement of her friends the first time she went unchaperoned. The girl explained that was like a derelict running amuck from an overdose of goodness.

The sanitarians are full because women do not seem able to learn that to work is well; to overwork is nervous prostration. Tell an indiscriminating woman that the polite hostess is never tentative to her guests, and that is the house where the guest feels like shrieking "For heaven's sake give me a minute alone!" There's nothing more tiresome than overdone hospitality.

The crank is usually the person who overdoes a good idea.

To make pleasant remarks means popularity; to always make pleasant remarks is sycophancy or insincerity.

Solid reading is good; never to read anything in lighter vein is to have a brain with as few high lights as a silhouette.

To learn that well done is not overdone is the surest safeguard against life's excesses. Moderation may not be exciting, but it wears well.

Queens Who Smoke.

Somewhat it seems unimaginable that Queen Alexandra or the German Empress or the Queen of Rumania should have taken to the "cigarette habit," to which most of the younger consorts of European rulers conform. Yet German Sylvia is one of the "Queens who smoke," which has just been published, and explains that she has never yet put a poetic thought into writing without that best of nerve soothers, the cigarette, between her lips. The Dowager Empress of Russia, Queen Amelia of Portugal and the Dowager Queen of Spain are also among the smokers, and, of the younger generation, the Empress of Russia, who had never smoked a cigarette before her marriage, is now probably the one whose daily allowance of cigarettes is the largest. But, then, "ladies' cigarettes" in Russia are of the mildest kind—almost as mild as chocolate imitations.

QUANTICO.

On last Wednesday, June 30th, the Death Angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith, at Quantico and took from them their dear little baby, Edgar Adkins, after an illness of more than eight weeks. It is hard to know to give him up, but God knows best. May the bereaved family live so as to meet him in Heaven where there will be no parting, no sickness, no pain; for in Heaven the inhabitants will not say they are sick for God will wipe away all tears from the eyes of his people.

This life's a dream an empty show. But the bright world to which we go Hath joys substantial and sincere: When shall we wake and find ourselves there.

O glorious hour! O blest abode! We shall be near and like our God And flesh and sin no more control. The sacred pleasures of the soul.

Our flesh shall slumber in the ground. Till the last trumpet sounds. Then burst the chains with sweet surprise. And in our Saviour's image rise.

The funeral was preached at the home by Rev. F. B. Adkins, assisted by Rev. A. W. Gibson. The body was then laid to rest in the Quantico Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith desire to thank the good people for their kindness shown them during the child's illness. A Friend.

BIVALE.

SHARPTOWN.

Our Nation's birthday was celebrated here on Saturday evening by the Daughters of Pocahontas. The children of town preceded by Delmar Band marched from the Knights of Pythias Hall on Church Street to Odd Fellows Square on Main Street. They assembled in the grand stand and entertained the public with flag drills, recitations and national songs after which speeches, appropriate to the occasion were delivered by Rev. E. H. Miller, H. W. McCaslin, and Mr. L. T. Cooper. Supper and all kinds of refreshments were served by the ladies. Music, songs, fireworks, etc., furnished amusement for the little ones.

The Sharptown Base Ball nine played the Delmar team at Delmar on the fifth, the score being 6 to 4 in favor of Sharptown.

—Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Brody entertained a number of young people on a moonlight launch party Friday evening of last week and all report a good time.

The Taster's Club held a business meeting on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Clah. Miss Berkley Wright was elected president and Mrs. G. W. Gameway, secretary and treasurer, these offices being made vacant by resignations. After the meeting the Club was entertained with refreshment by Mr. P. T. White.

A GOWN OF LAVENDER SILK

By MRS. BESSIE D. DUCY

Jackson Gray and I had quarrelled on Thanksgiving eve, but as we were both guests at Aunt Elizabeth's we had agreed to say nothing of the broken engagement until after the holiday. Under protest I consented to wear the diamond circlet a few days longer.

It was Thanksgiving night. At dinner Jack and I managed to carry on a desultory conversation, but I was conscious that my laughter was strained and that Aunt Elizabeth was covertly watching us. There were to be tableaux in the evening and the young people had been given the freedom of the garret, with its trunks and chests of dainty, old-fashioned linens. I felt little interest in the general merriment and hastily selected a gown of lavender silk, from whose folds I shook out little sprigs of its fragrant namesake. I slipped it on, brushed back my hair and tied it with a wide lavender ribbon, and then ran down to the library to be alone with my unhappy thoughts.

Aunt Elizabeth was sitting by the open grate and sprang to her feet with a low cry as I went up to her. "Child, how you frightened me!" she exclaimed as she drew down my face and kissed me tenderly. "For a moment I thought I was seeing my own ghost."

I curled myself up on a rug at her feet. "Was this your gown?" I asked curiously.

She slipped her fingers under my chin and lifted my face until I met her glance, but she chose to ignore my question.

"Hush, you and Jack quarrelled Marian?" she asked, gravely.

I dropped my lashes lest she see the quick tears in my eyes, and I felt a hot flush creep up in my cheeks.

"Tell me, child, there is no trouble between you and Jack, is there?" Her voice was troubled.

"I'll tell you to-morrow," I said at last in a husky whisper.

I attempted to rise, but she gently pushed me back and drew me closer to her.

"You asked me if the gown you are wearing was mine," she said, quietly. "Am going to tell you a story about it."

Her voice was very low and sweet, and she faltered now and then as she continued.

"I wore it, only once. It was on another Thanksgiving night years ago, way back in '61. That night the One Man in the world asked me to be his wife and I gave him my promise. He slipped onto my finger a little gold circlet, much simpler than yours, dear"—she touched the bright stones on my hand that caught the red gleams from the firelight—"and I was the happiest girl in the town. But soon a cloud came between us—the dark war cloud that was shadowing the nation. Nearly every other young man in the neighborhood had enlisted; he alone remained at home.

"Occasional slighting remarks aroused my temper, and Christmas eve I told him plainly that his duty was to be at the front with the others. He was deeply hurt, and said sadly that his mother was a Southern woman and he could not break her heart by fighting against her own people. I taunted him and called him 'coward!' a name a man never forgives or forgets from a woman's lips. He pleaded with me to take back the word, but I was reckless and passionate and we parted in anger, forever."

The last word was a wall of hopeless sorrow wrung from her by memories of the past.

"The next day he enlisted," she went on, sadly, "and he did not return until the war was over. He found his mother dead and his home desolate. A year later he went South again to bring back his bride."

She bent down close to me and again lifted my face to hers.

"Child, don't break Jack's heart and your own. He is worthy of you, I know it. Trust him."

A sudden illumination came to me; Jackson Gray's mother was a Southern woman. "It wasn't his father?" I asked wonderingly.

She bent her head silently and hot tears fell on my forehead.

"Jack's father!" And now I was sending Jack away, perhaps forever. The thought was unbearable and I broke into choking sobs, while her arms held me still closer in their tender clasp.

"It was all my fault," I whispered, "but it's too late now to call him back."

Then someone sprang from a crouch that stood in a far corner, completely concealed by the deep shadows. In an instant Jackson Gray was kneeling by my side at Aunt Elizabeth's knee, holding my hands tightly.

"Forgive me for listening," he pleaded, "I must have been asleep and your voices woke me."

"Marian, dear," he said tenderly, looking searchingly into my wet eyes. "It isn't too late. I've just been waiting for you to tell me so."

Aunt Elizabeth bent swiftly and kissed me, then laid one hand lightly on Jack's head. Before he could speak she rose and turned away, but he sprang to his feet and overtook her before she reached the door.

"I might have been your son," he said, wistfully, for his own mother had been dead for some years.

She read his unspoken wish in his eyes, for she drew down his face and kissed him with quivering lips.

Then the door closed behind her and Jack came back to me.

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance it will attack the vital organs, causing irritation of the bladder, brick-dust or sediment in the urine, head ache, back ache, lame back, dizziness, sleeplessness, nervousness, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles don't let a person rest from a derangement of the kidneys, and better health in that organ is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. Swamp-Root corrects inability to hold urine and scaling pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because of its remarkable health restoring properties. A trial will convince anyone.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address: Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

The Choice

Brenton Strang stood motionless in the doorway of his modest frame house, staring with unseeing eyes out over the blue waters of the Pacific. Less than a mile away the smoke curled upwards from the fishing town of Kalkiak, and far away to the eastward, across the shimmering stretches of the strait, rose in dim grandeur the glaciers and snow-clad mountains of the mainland.

Close at hand the wide fields were green with high meadow grasses, where the cattle grazed in blissful peace, unheeding the golden beauty of the daisies; the sapphire grace of the blue bellies and the dainty blushes of the wild roses, making a rich riot of color and perfume. For this is the warm garden of that chill north country—a bit of the gracious southland that nature has transplanted to these islands of the sea, and carefully nurtured and blessed with warm ocean currents, sunny skies and soft breezes.

Strang frowned impatiently at his thoughts, and turned on the threshold. He stepped to the low carved mantel and took in his hands the photograph of a fair-haired girl. Her eyes smiled straight into his sombre ones, but still unsmilingly he laid the picture down and tramped restlessly back and forth, the frown on his forehead growing ever deeper.

He needed no visible reminder of the face into which he had looked that afternoon when Lolita, the daughter of the white superintendent of the cannery by his Aleut wife, had walked beside him on the shore.

There had been a short, perilous moment when he had caught her in his arms to save her from the unsuspected quicksand that had sucked her feet downward. But in that brief instant her arms had held him tightly and he had seen in her dark eyes a strange light that told its tale of warning.

The girl was young and utterly unlearned. Her slim, supple girlhood appealed to him, and she had become a part of the free, open-air life he had led for two years. But Brenton Strang was a true man at heart, and he faced his problem with unflinching candor.

Should he woo and wed the girl—half Indian and almost wholly pagan—with her passionate love of nature in the wild northern land; should he bring her into his home which he had bulidied with the thought of another woman always in his heart, and so settle down to the quiet farming life that opened before him?

Or should he go back to civilization and to the girl whose face watched him from the simple gold frame? She belonged to the life behind him, her dainty, almost fragile beauty found its rightful setting in the luxury to which she had been born. And yet! There had been a time—two short weeks of camp life—when they had lived very near to the heart of the world, and the days had glided by in the deep and true channels of life. He looked around his empty home, picturing her there, as he had so often done. Not until this hour had he realized how closely he had wrought the thought of her into his life.

Three months before he had written her of his decision to remain permanently at Kadiak, save for an occasional winter in the South. The old life which they had known together had lost its grip upon him, and the new, broader, saner life held him fast. He needed her and so he had told her, at the same time leaving her free to choose.

Weeks had passed and no word had come, and his heart and some were very lonely. Lolita's youth charmed and tempted him, but the love of the other woman still filled his soul.

Again he took up the picture and studied its silent beauty.

"Virginia," he whispered, "why have you deserted me, when I love you so?"

The face of the Indian girl had vanished from his heart, and the fair Southern woman reigned supreme once more. With grave tenderness he kissed the sweet lips and spoke to her again.

"It shall be the best or nothing, dear," he told her, and placed the little frame on the shelf.

Then he went to the open door, and his eyes dwelt sadly and calmly on the glory of the scene before him. Suddenly he saw a woman's figure coming swiftly along the road from Kadiak.

His breath came fast, his pulses bounded, then his heart stood still with a great joy. He brushed his hand across his eyes, as if to sweep away the dream.

But the reality of his hope was drawing near, for he beheld Virginia coming toward him, half-running, her cheeks glowing above her dark furs, her lips parted eagerly, and her gray eyes alight.

He dashed toward her with outstretched arms.

"Virginia, Virginia," he repeated over and over again and even she wondered at the solemn tenderness of his voice.

"I came to you, Brent," she said, shyly as soon as she could speak. "I had to since you wouldn't come back to me."

She smiled tremulously, but Brenton Strang drew her closer in his arms and answered reverently:

"Thank God, you came, Virginia."

Her Supreme Pleasure.

Probably nothing pleases a woman more than her ability to look younger than some other woman who is the same age, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FOR THE TRINKETS.

PRETTY BOX ORNAMENTED WITH EMBROIDERY.

Linens with Wadded Silk or Satene, Receptacle Has Proper Place on the Dressing Table in the Boudoir.

Any light wooden or very firm card-board box may be used for the foundation; it should be carefully lined with wadded silk or satene, the edges of which may be drawn on to the outside and fixed by mullage; then cover the sides with silk, or, if preferred, art linen might be used.

EMBROIDERY DESIGN.

The embroidery design for the top is shown, the little spray being repeated at each corner. Cut the silk for covering the top to fit it, allowing half an inch to turn over to the inside; work the design shown with ribbon and sequins, the stalks being in cording stitch with embroidery silk. When the work is finished, iron it on the wrong side over a thick ironing blanket. Put a thin layer of wadding over the lid, then stretch the embroidered silk over it, fixing the edges on inside of lid with mullage, a pretty silk or tinsel galleon or ship finishes the edge. To line the lid, cut stiff paper on thin card a trifle smaller than lid, cover with a thin layer of wadding, then with silk or linen, fix this lining inside the lid by mullage.

When Entertaining.

In giving a series of luncheons or dinners there is always a temptation to have the same dishes and to pick out those which the cook can prepare particularly well. I think this is the universal experience of the givers of small dinners. Now it happened to me to be invited several times to the same courses, and I was reminded of the children's verse, "Same old soup, same old fish; same old sauce in the same old dish." In order to avoid this with my own guests, I have a little book in which I write down the names of the persons entertained, with the dates and the menus in full. Whenever anyone is to be invited, I look this over carefully to see that I am not continually repeating myself for the benefit of the same persons. It serves another purpose as well, for a comparison of the lists of dishes which have been possible of accomplishment in my household is useful in suggesting new arrangements of the same old things.

No More Rice at Weddings.

Paper slippers and rose petals are taking the place of rice at fashionable weddings in Europe. The silver slippers—to replace the old shoes—are about half an inch long, and are made of silver paper cut in the shape of dainty slippers. The rose petals—to replace the rice—are the real thing—thousands of petals stripped by hand from pink roses. The slippers and rose petals are heaped in great bowls in the hall. When the bride and bride-groom emerge, instead of being cannonaded with course rice and old shoes, a pink and silver cloud of rose petals and little shining slippers envelopes them.

To Save Stoopings.

A pair of diminutive sawhorses on which to elevate a trunk when packing, is of the greatest help in relieving the strain on one's back, and makes a very acceptable part of the guest-room's appointments.

To Sprinkle Clothes.

By turning the garden hose to a fine spray, and using it to dampen clothes while they are yet on the line, saves once handling them, as they can be taken down and rolled or folded up, ready for the iron.

To Repair a Torn Page.

Quite the neatest way to repair a torn page in a book is to paste over the best a piece of wadded paper found in candy boxes. The print shows through perfectly and the page is nearly as strong as new.

Skull & Cross Bones.

The Russian Duma, a primitive, struggling effort to bring constitutional government out of autocracy, appointed a commission on the drink question.

The sale of alcohol in its stronger forms is a government function in Russia. Witte, who came here to represent Russia in the Peace Conference, was the father of Russian Government ownership of the vodka trade.

The Russian Government sells the vodka—which comes near to being pure alcohol—to Russian subjects, and the amount of profit from the sale of alcohol is about enough to pay the expenses of the Russian army.

On every bottle of this vodka there is now printed the imperial eagle of Russia.

The Drink Commission of the Duma, with interesting originality and intelligence, offers as its first suggestion this:

"Take the imperial eagle off the bottles of strong alcoholic drink and substitute a skull and crossbones, mark the bottle 'poison,' and print warnings against indulgence."

There are a good many bottles and a good many "packages" in this country that would be improved, from the citizens' point of view, if they were labelled with skull and crossbones and the word "poison" and a warning.

Every alcoholic drink containing over ten per cent. of alcohol, at the outside, is a poison, and no sane human being should have anything to do with it.—New York Evening Journal.

Only Temperate Men Wanted.

For one to enter the navy of the United States, he must be a man of correct habits. There are, indeed, a few intemperate men in this branch of our service but to gain their places they have had to conceal their habits and control their appetites. No man on our ships of war can command wine, beer, whiskey or cider. Strong drink is prohibited by a strong hand. The government says, "Our naval men, the men behind the nation's big guns, shall be sober men!" In this, the powers that be are wise and the result is, our navy is recruited, almost wholly, from our best families.

As in the navy, so should it be in the army, but such is far from the case. The army is largely recruited to-day from saloon-ranks and these men of appetite have been encouraged to enlist because the canteen was at hand to soothe, comfort and satisfy their appetites. But the canteen has gone now, no soldier-camp has its beer-hall to-day, and the result is, that fewer men of intemperate habits are making enlistment in the army. The fewer the better! The nation needs no inebriate to man its guns, large or small, and the demand for high, moral characters should be as great for the army as for the navy. The drinking man should be refused place in the ranks. Sober men can be found, and with their coming the canteen question would be solved.

Denmark and Suicides.

The Statistical Bureau of the State of Denmark has published a report on suicides and addicted deaths in the years 1898 to 1905. The number of suicides was 22.4 per 100,000, the incidence for men being four times greater than that for women. Suicide caused by addiction to drink is twice as frequent in Copenhagen as in the country. Of the male suicides between twenty-five and sixty-five years of age every second was a drunkard. More than 600 deaths by accident are registered yearly, 150 of which happened during works, which only 60 are covered by the Workman's Liability act. Of the aggregate number of males about fifteen years of age having perished by accident one-fifth were addicted to drink. The statistics for men between forty-five and sixty-five years present a still darker aspect, one-third of the perished being drunkards.—New York Medical Record.

Liquor Men's Mean Method.

The brewers of St. Louis alone have spent over $200,000 in the last six months to defeat the law in Kansas towns by this method, which is confidential. We send two or three trusted men into a town with a quantity of beer and other liquors, get the names of the hardest drinkers in town, get them into a room, get them drunk, put them out on the streets, then have certain men to call the attention of the public to the fact that this is a pretty town in prohibition Kansas. This will be kept up regardless of expense.—Office of Brewers' Association of St. Louis, quoted by Rev. W. N. Alsworth in Georgia Issue.

Public Interest Supreme.

No private or public business, whether it is a saloon or dynamite factory, has private rights which are superior to public interests.

Skull and Crossbones.

The Russian Duma wants to put a skull and crossbones on every bottle of vodka sold by the Government.

Sash Curtains Pretty and Clean.

When you get window rods for either top or bottom, buy a small can of white gloss paint and a small brush; give the rods a coat, and when dry, give them another coat; the more they are done, the better it makes them. They don't bend so easily, or get out of shape. No matter how new or fine the curtains are, they will come off as nicely as they went on; the paint will not show. Let us rust.

Sash Curtains Pretty and Clean.

The enormous feminine demand for artificial collars and bouffants is leading to a famine in human hair. Formerly Swiss German and Hungarian girls supplied the world of fashionable women with luxuriant tresses of all tints.

BEAUTIES OF THE BLACK ROD.

He is the King's Messenger, Yet Doors are Slammed in His Face.

Black Rod is perhaps the most picturesque functionary of Parliament. His titles are Chief of All the Ushers of England and Custodian of the Doors of the High Court called Parliament. As such he sits in a box to the right of the bar in the House of Lords and controls the admission of strangers.

But his chief title is Messenger of the Sovereign. When the King appears in the House of Lords the members of both chambers must be present. In his capacity as royal messenger Black Rod has to go and summon the Commons.

As he walks through the lobbies one of his ushers heralds his approach with cries of "Black Rod! Way for Black Rod!" Yet it would seem from his reception at the door of the lower chamber that he is regarded there with hostility.

The moment he is heard coming, the sergeant at arms springs from his chair, which is close to the main entrance to the chamber, and rushing to the open door, not only closes it with an inextinguishable clang in the very face of Black Rod, but proceeds securely to bolt it. Presently three faint knocks are heard. The sergeant-at-arms peers into the lobby through a grated peephole with a wooden set in the stout oaken door and sees Black Rod.

According to the program not a word is spoken. All that is heard is the subdued knocking at the portal. That soft and humble request is irresistible, and at a nod from the Speaker the door is flung open by the sergeant-at-arms and in walks the King's messenger.

The post of Black Rod, it must be explained, is in the personal gift of the King. It is invariably bestowed on old naval or military officers, a sailor and a soldier alternately enjoying its dignity and emoluments. The Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod gets £1,000 a year, and he has a deputy known as Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, whose salary is £500.

But whether he is a soldier or a sailor, Black Rod is not a very formidable looking person as he is seen on his visits to the House of Commons. On occasions of state he dons his full military of naval "fig." When he comes to summon the commons he wears his official dress—a black cut-away tunic, knee breeches, silk stockings, and silver buckled shoes.

There is not the faintest suggestion of aggressiveness in his appearance, notwithstanding the sword that dangles by his side, and the short ebony rod of office, surmounted by a golden lion rampant, which he carries in his hand. His message, too, is absolutely blameless.

When the door of the House of Commons is opened to him, the loud voiced usher preceding him stands at the bar and cries: "Black Rod!" If there be any business in hand it is at once interrupted. The Speaker respectfully rises to receive the message of the sovereign. Members retain their seats, but uncover.

Black Rod advances slowly to the table with solemn mien, as it is to show that he is becoming impressed by the dignity and sanctity of the chamber. He further manifests his awe by making three low obeisances to the chair. On reaching the table, he simply says: "The Lord's Commissioners desire the immediate attendance of this honorable House in the House of Peers."

When the King is personally present in the House of Lords the message which Black Rod delivers to the Commons is more peremptory worded. It runs: "The King commands this honorable House to attend his Majesty immediately in the House of Peers to hear the King's speech read."

Having thus said what he was sent to say, Black Rod retires respectfully backward, bowing as he goes, to the bar, where he awaits the Speaker, and escorts him, followed by the Ministers and others of the Commons, to the House of Lords. Sometimes so awestruck is Black Rod in the presence of the mighty Commons that he forgets even the words of his short and simple and innocent message.

There was the case of Gen. Sir Michael Biddulph, R. A. He was a brilliant soldier. He served through the Crimean campaign with great distinction. For his gallant services at the occupation of Candahar in the Afghan war he received the thanks of both houses of Parliament. Yet I have seen this great soldier shaking with nervousness when, as Black Rod, he stood at the table to deliver the presence of the Commons in the House of Peers.

What then is the meaning of this hostile banging of the door of the House of Commons in Black Rod's offensive face? Why must the King's messenger humbly knock three times for admission and wait submissively on the mat outside until the representatives of the people decide to open their doors unto him.

We find in this most interesting spectacle a demonstration of the right of the representatives of the people to conduct their deliberations in secret, should they deem it necessary, to shut their doors, especially against messengers of sovereigns or peers, and also a declaration that no stranger, low or high, dare enter their chamber without permission, humbly asked and expressly granted.

Seven times too long.

NEW COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS

No Longer Are They Debonair Mashers and Lady Killers, But Solid Business Men

AMBASSADORS OF COMMERCE

The New Types are Splendid, Optically, Energetic Fellows Plodding Cheerily Along Into Every Town and Hamlet.

Sheffield Ingalls, son of the late and eloquent Senator John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, pays his respects to the Commercial Traveler of to-day in this article, which appeared as a leader in the Atchison (Kan.) Daily Champion.

In these shimmering days of commercialism when the fight for trade supremacy is so uncompromising it is interesting to pause and reflect upon the potential agencies that are at work to keep red-hot the path which leads to the coveted goal of money success and regular dividends. In the development and extension of trade, there appears that same indomitable courage and energy and that same splendor of genius and power on the part of its captains, that has characterized the great leaders in every department of life since the world began to move and throb upon its axis. Despite the creation and organization of gigantic corporations, with the object of stifling competition, simplifying methods and doing business on a cheaper scale, there yet remains so many independent concerns that commercial warfare is an ever present reality. So to-day in addition to the post, the telegraph and the telephone, the business houses of this country, large and small, have available themselves of a great army of professional traveling salesmen, who being armed with samples of their wares and other proper credentials, are delegated to go out into the world and sell goods.

It is a practice far too common among a great many people to make these men the subject of much derision, which upon proper observation and investigation they would find to be unjust. The impression is largely based upon old notions of the professional "drummer." He of an earlier day with the waxed mustache, the oiled hair, the loud clothes, the glass diamond and the vulgar, insinuating manner, whose pictures used to appear in the columns of the funny papers. As a class they were "mashers" and "lady killers" in those days, with wild, careless and unsteady habits. In a manner they represented the times. But as conditions changed this class disappeared and to-day we find upon the cars and in the hotels all over the country a body of self-respecting, serious-minded, modestly attired intelligent men who can rightfully and quite properly be called envoys and ambassadors of trade. At all hours of the night and day, in sunshine or in rain, in snow or in cloudy weather you can find these splendid, optimistic, energetic fellows plodding buoyantly along into every town and hamlet, spreading the gospel of trade and contributing of their time and talents towards the prosperity and success of their employers' business, at so much per month. As a class the commercial traveler of to-day is a creditable and desirable citizen. He is industrious and temperate. He is the faithful husband of a good wife. The proud father of happy children. He owns the house he lives in. He has money in the bank and stock in the company he travels for. He is upright and square with his fellows and he is always a gentleman.

Too Greedy. Robert Herrick, novelist, said at a recent luncheon in Chicago: "There is a type of American wife who, in her greed for display, brings unhappiness on herself. She rather reminds me of the fat man and the table d'hôte dinner.

"One man entered a restaurant that served a dinner at the fixed price of 75 cents. He knotted a napkin about his neck and fell to heavily—so heavily, in fact, that the waiter, after a whispered conversation with the proprietor, approached him and said: "Beg pardon, sir, but I'll have to charge you a quarter extra; you eat so much."

"The fat man, red and short of breath from his excessive gorging, said earnestly: "For goodness' sake, don't do that! I'm nearly dead now from eating 75 cents' worth. If you make me eat another quarter I'll bust."

A Curious Story. The Queen of Hanover, wife of King Ernest Augustus of Hanover (better known as the Duke of Cumberland, son of George III.), died at Hanover about 1842 of an illness which baffled the skill of her doctors as to its real cause. During her illness a clairvoyant was consulted, who wrote certain curious signs and words on the door of her bedroom, but although these mystic words were repeated over and over again the Queen died.

The King of Hanover after his wife's death gave orders that her bedroom should always be kept as the Queen would sleep there at night. The bed was turned down, the pillows shaken, hot water brought and daintiest slippers laid in readiness for her.

Sea of Velvet Blue. The Mediterranean sunset is one of the glories of the world. The sea is a velvet blue. When evening comes the clouds forsake the sky and the sun takes on the color of molten gold, gliding the purple waters as the great glowing disk approaches the level line of the horizon; wide waves of crimson intervene across the azure heavens, and sea and sky leap together in a vivid embrace of color. The sun vanishes, the sea turns from gold to silver, and the sky grows crystal clear. Then night falls slowly down.

TELEPHONE COMPANY OBTAINS RESTORATION OF RATES

Bell Telephone Company Accedes To Demands Of Salisbury And Agrees To Maintain Former Charges Of $25 And $15 Which Are To Be Uniform Throughout The City.

The committee appointed by the subscribers of the Diamond State Telephone Company at the mass meeting held in the Court House last May to protest against the raise in rates of telephone service in Salisbury, and if possible, to have the Company restore the old rates, has at last finished its work and the Diamond State Company has agreed to maintain the old rates of $15 for residence and $25 for business phones. They have also agreed to rewrite the contracts which were taken at the higher rates in consideration of raising the rates of the old $12 subscribers so as to have uniform rates throughout the city.

Immediately after the mass meeting held in the Court House the committee met, and organized by electing Mr. E. H. Walton, chairman, and distributed the city among themselves, and after securing the signatures of practically all the subscribers to a declaration that they would terminate their contracts and remove the phones of the Diamond State Telephone Company on July 1st, unless the old rates were restored. The committee notified the Diamond State people of the action and sent them a copy of the declaration with the signatures attached and requested an answer by June 7th. They received a reply from the Company saying they could not accede to the request as they were losing money in Salisbury.

At the request of the Mayor of Salisbury the Committee organized themselves into a corporation known as the Citizens Telephone Company of Salisbury, Md., and made application for a franchise, which had been assured by the Mayor would be granted. The Committee also went before the City Council and urged them to pass an ordinance to take effect on July 1st, restraining any and all Telephone Companies doing business or expecting to do business in Salisbury from charging more than $15 for residence phones and $25 for business phones within the city limits. The Committee, acting as the Citizens Telephone Company, thought at this time that it might become necessary to have the lines of the Diamond State so as to maintain the rates, or finding that impossible to have the city engage in what would have been a long and expensive suit in Court.

The Committee, we are assured, was at all times desirous of saving the city this expense if they could obtain the rates without it so they continued to urge the Diamond State people to restore the old rates without a suit.

Several members of the Committee were under the necessity of going to Philadelphia to consult with the authorities of the Diamond State Company and on Thursday morning the delegation received from Mr. F. H. Bethell, the Vice President of the Bell Telephone Company, of Pennsylvania, the owners of the Diamond State Company, the following letter:

The Bell Telephone Co., of Philadelphia, Pa.
Office of the Vice President,
17th and Filbert Streets,
Philadelphia, Pa.
July 14th, 1909.

Mr. E. H. Walton,
Salisbury, Md.

Dear Sir:—On behalf of the Diamond State Telephone Company, I beg to advise you and the gentlemen of your Committee that, after due consideration of the question, the Diamond State Telephone Company has decided to maintain the following rates for telephone service furnished its subscribers within the City of Salisbury:

Direct Line—Business, $25 per year.
Direct Line—Residence, $15 per year.

It being understood that the Company reserves the right to increase these rates when it installs in Salisbury a modern telephone plant. It is the intention of the Company at some future time to erect in Salisbury a building suitable for telephone purposes and to install therein the modern telephone equipment referred to.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) F. H. Bethell,
Vice President.

Arthur W. Lankford.

Mr. Arthur W. Lankford, a well and favorably known farmer, of Somerset County, near Pocomoke City, died Sunday morning of General Debility, aged 72 years.

Mr. Lankford was a native of this County, being born and raised near Salisbury. He moved to Somerset at the age of 21 where he has since resided. He was twice married, his last wife, who has been dead over twenty years, was Miss Elizabeth Morris, daughter of the late Wm. P. Morris, of near Frontland.

Up until a few years ago Mr. Lankford led an active life, taking a deep interest in politics. He leaves four sons and three daughters, Mrs. J. Ooston Goslee, of near this city, being one of them.

Funeral services were conducted by Dr. Bowen in the Presbyterian Church at Pocomoke City, Monday afternoon.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES UNDER THE CRAWFORD COUNTY PLAN

For First Time In Wicomico County Primaries Received. Large Interest Manifested And A Big Vote Polled Throughout The County.

One of the biggest votes ever cast in a primary election in Wicomico County was one of the big surprises of last Saturday's primaries. Some of the highest estimates which had been placed on the size of the vote did not exceed 1500 and most thought the total number cast would be something less than this figure; few were prepared for the large vote actually cast—close to 2900.

The sheriffly fight proved to be a very close contest and was not settled until the last district was heard from. Brady carried Barren Creek, Quantico, Tyaskin, Sharptown and Nantuxco by large majorities, while Kelley's strength in Salisbury, Camden and Parsons' was great enough to overcome these majorities and give him the nomination by a majority of 92.

The commissioner fight between the nine candidates was warmly contested and the result long in doubt. It became evident early in the evening when the returns commenced to come in that Mr. Cooper would be nominated by a large vote and that Mr. Taylor, of Quantico, would be a close second. For a while it looked as though Mr. Seabreeze, of Mardela, would be the third man, and it was not until Parsons' (the last district to be heard from) vote was known that it was certain that Mr. Ward was the successful contestant.

Although it had been freely prophesied that Mr. Cooper would be out all over the county the returns showed that his vote was large in all sections.

Mr. Ward made one of the best and hardest fights of the campaign. The legislative contest, however, was where as much interest was centered as anywhere else in the ticket. In this contest Messrs. Twilley, Wingate and Baker were successful. The early returns seemed to indicate the nomination of Mr. Jones despite the heavy majorities for Twilley, Wingate and Baker, in Nantuxco, Quantico, Mardela and Nantuxco Districts. Although in Camden and Parsons districts a hard fight was put against Mr. Jones yet his vote in these districts was not far behind the others. The first named districts were mainly responsible for his defeat.

The vest pocket method of voting resulted in a number of workers in the district marking tickets for the voters as they came up and in this way various combinations were carried through. While it is stated that the organization as an organization did not get behind any ticket yet it was very evident that some of them were strongly behind some of the candidates.

A comparison of the votes received in many of the districts will show that the combinations entered into by some of the candidates was a potent force in deciding the contest.

It is understood that all the candidates have taken their defeat in good part and all are ready to get behind the ticket nominated and help elect it.

The ticket nominated is generally considered a good one and while many voters had personal preferences and would for this reason have liked to have seen others nominated, yet it is not because of any objection to the men nominated—the spirit of the fight for the most part was not against anyone but for some one else. The ticket nominated will probably receive the support of the entire party with but little, if any, exception.

MR. ROSCOE JONES

Takes Defeat In Good Part And Volunteers His Services To The Nominees.

When seen by a reporter for the ADVERTISER early in the week, and asked what he thought of the result of the election, Mr. Roscoe Jones, one of the defeated candidates for the House of Delegates said, "Under the circumstances the first thing I would naturally think of is to express to the Democratic voters my thanks for their very complimentary support in the recent contest. I very sincerely appreciate the earnest efforts of those who thought that I would make a suitable representative for the County in the Legislature.

However, a strong ticket has been nominated, and will be overwhelmingly elected, because it is the choice of the people, as designated at the post. Personally, I shall give to every man on it a hearty and ungrudging support. I wish to take this opportunity to say that if my services can be used to any advantage during the campaign in any way, that the campaign committee is at full liberty to call upon me and no matter how arduous the work, I will do it cheerfully.

When asked for an expression of opinion as to the causes which contributed to his defeat, Mr. Jones laughingly replied "After looking over the returns and considering the matter from every standpoint, I am forced to conclude that I was defeated simply because I did not get enough votes."

Houston Todd, Has Narrow Escape.

Houston, the son of Mr. H. S. Todd while standing on the corner of Division and Main Streets watching the antics of a monkey, that belonged to an organ grinder was knocked to the street by a passing wagon laden with lumber and had one of the wheels pass over both of his limbs just above the ankle. The wonderful and fortunate escape from two crushed limbs was certainly phenomenal. The bicyclist which he was holding alight when he fell and some how regained the weight of the wagon on one of the rims of the wheel, splitting the rim some ten or twelve inches.

Young Todd was hastily carried, by a bystander, to the office of Dr. Geo. W. Todd who pronounced to the wonder and amazement of the spectators of the accident, that no bones were broken at all.

Millionaire Crane, Who Began Life Without Chance to Study, Decries Higher Education

THEY DEMORALIZE OUR YOUTH

Make Them Despise Labor—"Every One of These Institutions is a Fraud and Imposition on the Public"—Are a Positive Curse.

FOUR YEARS' PLAYGROUND SAYS PRESIDENT WILSON.

"Men go to college now for association and sentiment. It is a four years' playground. This is what President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, said to Princeton alumni in Louisville. President Wilson spoke of the American college under the present system of education and said that within a decade it will have been determined whether it shall stand or fall.

Chicago—Richard T. Crane, multi-millionaire, like Robert Louis Stevenson, author, believes more men are spoiled than made by college education. The multi-millionaire, who spent his early life chiefly in labor, "having little time for study," feels much more strongly on the subject than the famous graduate of the University of Edinburgh, for he favors putting the torch to the universities supported wholly or partly by the various States.

The occasion for this latest expression of the views of Mr. Crane, who made his millions in building elevators, is that members of the Legislature asked his advice on the question of increasing the appropriation for the University of Illinois. The university was organized in 1867. This year's appropriation was $2,300,000. For fifteen years the appropriations have averaged $2,000,000. Before that they were not so large. The university, situated at Urbana, has 4,600 students who pay from $50 to $110 a year for tuition, and has a library of 100,000 volumes. Mr. Crane, in his letter to the legislature, says: "I have given thought and study to the subject of higher education, and have conducted several systematic investigations with regard to this and many other institutions engaged in advanced lines of education. In fact, as far as I know, I am the only one who has ever taken up this subject in a businesslike way, and the conclusion I have reached is that practically every one of these institutions is a fraud and an imposition on the public."

"In trying some years ago to find out the utility of an academic education for young men who have to earn their own living, inquiries were made not only of graduates from the college and universities, but also of those who had engaged these graduates in a business way, and the result as shown was anything but creditable to the university."

"I am prepared even to go much further than this, for I maintain that instead of being a benefit, such institutions as this are a positive curse, and are doing a vast amount of harm by demoralizing the youth of this country."

"Instead of appropriating funds for such institutions it would be a good deal better for the State to put a torch to them and burn them down, to go out of the 'higher education' business, and permit the boys to go back to their homes and assist in supporting their families instead of causing them a heavy expense."

Mr. Crane is now seventy-seven years of age. In 1862 he married, as his second wife, Miss Emily Hutchingson, who was then under thirty, and settled $1,000,000 on her in lieu of dower. His company has a profit sharing system under which more than $300,000 is distributed each year among its employees.

LAZY MAN IN BED TEN YEARS.

Mummers Not Sick, But Refuses to Get Up—Lives at County Farm.

Jerseyville, Ill.—The latest man in the world lives in this village. His name is John Mummers, and he has been in bed ten years because he is unwilling to comply with the rules of the Jersey County Farm, which say that every one living there shall rise at 5 a. m. Mummers is not sick. He eats regularly and is in perfect health. "I am ready to hold up my hand and swear that he has kept his word," said Superintendent Moulton of the County Farm. "John has been in bed ten years, and he says he will stay there the remainder of his life."

"He just lies there and looks at the ceiling, or rolls over once in a while and takes a nap. When he talks it is all about how foolish a man is to get up every morning when he knows he'll have to go back to bed again at night."

Coughs Up a Trick.

Justice Decides that Donor Cannot Recover 'Baubles at Law.

Norfolk, Va.—A jilted fiance may not legally recover the engagement ring, and his only redress is by way of breach of promise suit, holds Justice Andrew Jackson Dalton of the Norfolk Magistrate's Court, in a decision just handed down. The decision reverses Justice Denning of similar jurisdiction, who, according to Justice Dalton, should not have tried the case, which has now for a third time been thrashed out in the courts.

J. D. McFarland, after being rejected by Miss Lula B. Short, sought to recover his $55 ring. The girl pleaded that it was a Christmas gift, and Justice Dalton upheld her. Justice Denning later, not knowing that Justice Dalton had already tried the case, ordered the ring returned to McFarland. Justice Dalton, saying his decision was original, reaffirmed his ruling, declaring that all engagement rings are necessarily gifts, and that Miss Short is entitled to keep out in the courts, he said, was either a gift, or a contract, and as there was no written contract engagement rings not being given upon the condition that the girl marry the donor; but after she agrees to marry, there can be no forcible recovery of the ring.

McFarland is held to be without right of appeal.

Dr. Newton Says the Human Race Is Fast Becoming Whopper-Jawed.

Montclair, N. J.—Dr. Richard Cole Newton, who has devoted years of study to the health of babies, says "whopper jaws" are becoming common in the human race because so many mothers continue feeding their little ones on bottles when they should have hard food to chew. Dr. Newton says every baby should be trained to eat hard foods as soon as it is weaned. The early chewing of hard foods, the doctor says, develops strong, well-balanced characters.

Glidden Believes He Has Proven Value of Balloons in War.

Paterson, N. H.—After being in the air for three hours and a quarter and traveling before varying winds for seventy-five miles, the balloon Boston, with Charles J. Glidden of Boston as pilot and Atherton D. Converse of Winchendon, Mass., as passenger, landed at the foot of New Ipswich Mountain, in Sharon, only twenty-five miles in air line from the starting point, Fitchburg, Mass. The balloon ascended at Fitchburg at 3.55 o'clock and landed at 7.10.

Mr. Glidden took along a quantity of eggs to demonstrate the practicability of dropping explosives accurately upon objects below. After allowing for a peculiar curving of the eggs the pilot said he was able to drop them upon almost the identical spot shown from a height of a mile.

ROADS AND ROADMAKING

A GOOD ROADS BOOM.

Present Impulses Toward Their Building Never Equalled.

There has been manifested in the several States of the East and South, the past year, an impulse toward the construction and maintenance of good roads, that has never been equalled in the past and that is likely to grow as the years come and go. In almost every one of the older commonwealths there has been an awakening to the economic value of such improvement. Perhaps the multiplication of automobiles has been one of the impelling causes of this larger movement but the farmers and all others interested in local transportation have caught its spirit, and have come to realize that business as well as pleasure would be promoted by the establishment of these conditions toward which it tends. When a husbandman masters the simple calculation that because a span of horses can draw twice as much over a good road as a poor one he is therefore getting twice as much service at no additional expense, he is pretty sure to give his approval and support to the enterprise.

Almost every State along the Atlantic slope has taken action within the past year looking to the betterment of its highways. Although Massachusetts has been a leader in this respect for a number of years, the new distribution of a percentage of the appropriation made for this purpose among the small towns is bound to show material improvement in a very short time. It will not give all sections such roads as the highway commission constructs for demonstration purposes, yet it will inevitably raise the general standard and stimulate local interest to a larger extent in this form of improvement. New Hampshire has projected a decided advance in this respect by taking steps to build three trunk highways through the State. New York has bonded herself for millions for a like purpose and the result will doubtless promote her internal interests to a greater extent than her large canal and at a much earlier date. By much pressure the governor of Pennsylvania succeeded in having authority given by the recent Legislature for the construction of a great highway between the principal cities of the State, representing the eastern and western halves. With her comparatively limited resources, Maryland has appropriated millions for this purpose and in conjunction with West Virginia has arranged for a highway that will be a revelation to the people of those States.

Similar action, even if on a less extended scale, might be instanced in other States, but, comparatively speaking, Georgia seems to have girded up her loins for the most significant advance in the whole sisterhood.

Saw Dust Roads in Florida.

They are making roads of sawdust mixed with earth on a new plan in Leon County. Two ridges of earth are thrown up with a road machine at the required width from each other and the space between is filled with a six-inch bed of sawdust. This is followed with a smaller machine which glows up and mixes the earth with the sawdust. This makes a roadbed on which the tires of the heaviest loaded vehicles make no impression. The contractor, G. H. Averitt, has kept an accurate account of expenses in connection with this section of sawdust and earth road and says the cost aggregates $297 a mile, showing it to be about the cheapest road material in use. It may be suggested that sawdust is not a durable material but the True Democrat meets this objection with the statement that one or two roads were constructed in a south Georgia county 20 years ago, and are still in good condition, showing the durability. As is well known, Leon County soil is clayey—Florida Times-Union.

Bad Roads a Tax.

Bad roads are an extravagance that no farming community can afford. Just what they cost in unnecessary expense it takes but a moment to determine.

A team and driver is reasonably worth $2.00 a day and by the use of these it is possible to deliver to market, from your home, 100 bushels of corn. Hauling over good roads, the cost of delivery is three cents per bushel. But, if in consequence of bad roads but fifty bushels can be delivered, the cost is doubled and the difference is what the impassable roads cost you. Continue this calculation, applying it to the hauling of all of your crops and it quickly becomes apparent that it amounts to a very burdensome tax.

The French Method.

The excellence of the French road is due not to the superior quality of the material used in their construction, as the same materials exist most everywhere, or to the perfection of the French method of construction, for their roads are built according to the Macadam plan, which is also used in this country, but to the superiority of the French method of administration, which places all roads under constant and intelligent supervision.

The value of commercial fertilizers depends on their containing the elements which the soil needs.

Value of Bokhara Clover.

Bokhara clover is not cultivated to any extent in this country, yet, though it deserves to be. As a plant, few flowers excel it. It is a very good plant for growing the fertility of worn-out, misused farming land for it will grow where other clovers refuse to grow at all. It is good for planting along railway cuts and embankments to prevent washing of the soil. It contains a large amount of sugar as a substitute for molasses.

What Moppet Did

Moppet and Mary had been playing hide-and-go-seek all the morning. They had hid in the house in the barn, in the shed, and in the play-house, and had had a beautiful time.

It was Mary's time to "seek," and Moppet meant to find a new, new place to hide, as she went scampering around the house past the juniper-tree.

It was just at that minute that her eyes were dazzled by a sudden glitter down the lane. It was the gleam of the bright new pails on the tinman's cart. The tired old horse stood at the gate with drooping head. The cart was heaped high with bundles of rags that the tinman had got from the farmers' wives in exchange for his shining pans and kettles.

The door at the back of the cart stood invitingly open, and there was not a soul watching; for the tinman was at the back door haggling with Aunt Lou over the exchange of a suit of Ben's for a stew-pan with a long handle. Moppet saw all with her round bright eyes. Mary would never think of looking for her in the tinman's cart—never in the wide world!

Back of the lilac bushes through the fence she scudded to the lane. The old horse stood as if asleep. Moppet rose on tiptoe and peeped through the open doors of the cart. It was lined with shining things, but there was plenty of room inside for little Moppet.

She giggled and giggled, she pushed and she pulled, lying flat on her little stomach, until there she was, breathless but happy, safe in the tinman's cart.

Once inside she cuddled down on a blanket she found there and peeped out. There was Aunt Lou and the tinman at the back door. There was Ben at the barn and grandpa sitting on the veranda reading his paper; and O goodness me! there came Mary Smith pell-mell around the corner of the house past the juniper-tree! Suppose she, too, saw the glittering pails and the open cart! Quick as a flash Moppet reached out and pulled to the swinging doors. They came together with a muffled bang and a sudden snap!

Moppet lay just as still as a little mouse, giggling to herself. Moppet Moppet," she could hear Mary faintly calling. "Too far away is no fair—no fair!"

Nearer, nearer came Mary's voice. Moppet held her breath. "Moppet, Moppet!" nearer still—then just outside the cart—then farther—farther, and fainter—fainter. "Moppet, Moppet!"

And still Moppet giggled away in the darkness.

Then something fell with a soft thud on the top of the cart! "Get up!" cried the tinman, cracking his whip, "get up, old lazy-bones!" And away swung the sleepy old horse and the tinman's cart; and there in its dusky depths crouched Moppet, with the giggle frozen in her throat.

"Mr. Tinman, Mr. Tinman!" she wailed, when she could catch her breath.

But over the clatter of the jolting tinware rang the jolly tinman's voice,— for the tinman had made an excellent bargain, in spite of Aunt Lou's haggling, and he was in a singing mood. "Mr. Tinman, Mr. Tinman!" sobbed Moppet, banging on a tin pan with dimpled fists.

"I was walkin' by the river. In the flowery month of May."

"'Twas there I met sweet Ellen, A-singin' by the way."

roared on the jolly tinman. Clitter-clatter, clitter-clatter, rang the jingling tinware; and all poor little Moppet could do was to bang and call, and bang and call—but nobody heard.

"Whoa!" called the tinman, after it had seemed hours and hours to Moppet, "whoa!" And the tinman slowed up and stopped.

"Mr. Tinman, Mr. Tinman!" wailed Moppet, shaking the locked doors, "Mr. Tinman, Mr. Tinman!"

There was no answer. One minute, two minutes, three minutes, and still the minutes dragged.

Then suddenly there was the sound of some one approaching. The doors of the cart flew open—into its dusky darkness flashed the dazzling sunshine, in rushed the sweet fresh air, and a familiar voice said,—

"I want a quart cup and a stew!"

"Granny Murry! Granny Murry!" shrieked Moppet. A rush, a scurry, and, if it hadn't been for the tinman, somebody would have had a bad fall; for there was sobbing Moppet clinging to startled Granny's neck.

"My child you scared me half out of my wits!" gasped Granny when the tinman had helped her to sit down on the grassy bank with Moppet still in her arms. "I won't get over that in a year."

"I'll never, never, never get over it in all my born days!" sobbed Moppet.

But when she had had a bowl of bread and milk and three sweet cookies and a pink peppermint candy out of Granny's little silver box, she did get over it.—Agnes McClelland, Daulton, in Little Folks.

Theme:

MATERIALISM OF THE DAY

By George Clarke Peck, D. D.

Text: "Is not the life more than meat?"—Matthew vi., 25.

Time was when a transatlantic trip made the event of a lifetime. People prepared for it with all but fasting and prayer. When an outgoing passenger went up the gangplank his friends had good reason to fear and his enemies just ground for hoping that he would never return to his native shore.

But in our day all is changed. An ocean voyage now instead of being an epoch in life is scarcely an event. Travellers count their voyages as a commercial man might reckon his trips to Boston. One's chief anxiety nowadays is concerning the size and location of his stateroom and the excellence of the chef. Few ocean travellers wake in the morning with a sort of wonder at being alive so far from shore, but rather speculating as to whether the coffee will be better than yesterday's.

Nevertheless the voyage itself is the real thing. What matters anything or everything else as compared with the safety of the voyage? Who cared afterward that the salon was luxurious and the cuisine unexcelled when the ill-fated Bourgoin lunched at her frightful doom? It needed only the jar and shudder of steel to declare that the voyage itself is the real thing. Nothing really counts as against that: the stewards may gather the tips, but the crew deserve the lives.

So in life, the voyage ought to be the paramount concern. The real business of manhood and womanhood is to make port at length. Yet what preponderance of emphasis we put upon things which do not really matter twenty-four hours afterward. "What we shall eat, and what we shall drink, and wherewithal we shall be clothed"—these are the considerations that rouse us. It might almost be said that we gauge the values of life in terms of the stomach.

"What do I think of your cities?" said a much-travelled man in my presence. "I do not think of them. I care nothing about them. I do not want to see your famous buildings or your historic sights. If you can recommend me to a luxurious hotel I shall call your city good and remember it with pleasure. It is not sentiment but beefsteak that counts with me."

Not twenty-four hours later I heard a prominent American just so describe his recent visit to Nuremberg. He went into rapturous reminiscences over that portion of his trip. Yet the object of his rapture was not the historic walls of the city, nor its great chapters of action, nor the shrine of its famous church, but rather a little restaurant where he procured the best sausage and beer he had ever tasted. Indeed, he might have forgotten the church altogether save that it served to localise the place where he bought the sausage and beer. "Is not the life more than meat?" It would not seem so; not much more, at any rate. At least it is difficult to raise life above that level.

Such is the condition we are set to fight. Not in the interests of asceticism, but of manhood; with a generous thought for every creature comfort, but with supreme concern for character, we may need to ask ourselves more frequently, "Is not the life much more than meat?" Then, how much more? Life without a definite port at the end; life unthrilled and unfed by the Father; life unsanctified, however sleek, is the sorriest failure.

True and Best Humanity.

We in our pride are apt to think that to humble ourselves is to be forced to an unwilling surrender, a hard necessity of submission. But with our great faith, to humble is not to humiliate. The true and best humanity is that which love wins from us as the sunshine and soft breath of spring woo the flowers from the hedgerow. Of old, when God would humble Israel, He fed them with angel's food, or, as it is rendered in the margin, "Every one did eat the bread of the mighty."—Psalm 78:25.—Mark G. Pearce.

His Strength Enough.

The answer to prayer may be, as it was to Paul, not the removal of the thorn, but instead, a growing insight into its meaning and value. The voice of God in our soul may show us, as we look up to him, that his strength is enough to enable us to bear it.—James Freeman Clarke.

Love and Truth.

O Truth who art Eternity, and Love who art Truth, and Eternity who art Love! Thou art my God; to Thee do I cry night and day!—Saint Augustine.

Christianity.

God and one man could make any other religion, but it takes God and two men to make Christianity.—Joseph Parker.

The Two Powers.

The two powers which in my opinion constitute a wise man are those of hearing and forbearing.—Epictetus.

TUMOR OF FOUR YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

South Bend, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound removed a cyst tumor of four years' growth, which three of the best physicians declared I had. They said that only an operation could help me. I am very glad that I followed a friend's advice and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it has made me a strong and well woman, and I shall recommend it as long as I live."—Mrs. MAY FRY, Lindley, Ind.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

If you would like special advice about your case write a confidential letter to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

CRAWFORD COUNTY PLAN TRIAL.

The workings of the Crawford County plan of holding primaries were eagerly watched by both those who had advocated this method of nominating the ticket and those who were opposed to a change in plan.

There is one thing which was settled conclusively last Saturday and that is that the Democrats in this County want to nominate their own ticket.

It was said at the time of deciding for this method of making nominations that it would be impossible to get the voters to take enough interest in the primaries to come out to the polls and vote; that as a result of this indifference of the voter the ticket would be nominated by but a small portion of the Democracy of the county after all. The result shows that close to 3000 Democrats came out and voted—over 80 per cent of the total vote cast in the last Presidential election by the Democratic party in this County.

This large vote was a surprise to all, and shows, if it means anything at all, that the Democrats of this County do take an interest in the party nomination and do want to nominate them by direct vote.

The other question is how did the people show, by the selections made, that they were as competent to make out the ticket as those, who, under the old system, did this for them.

While there are a number, of course, who had rather some one else had received the nomination, yet this feeling is due for the most part more to personal feeling than any criticism of the men nominated. All must admit that the ticket nominated is, on the whole, fully the equal in ability and character to those which have been made out under the convention plan.

The geographical distribution of the votes, about which so much was said does not show that the small districts suffered on account of the large vote in those districts adjoining Salisbury.

It looks as though the law could be amended as to divide the County into five Commissioner districts, so as to guarantee each section of the County a Commissioner, with benefit.

Owing to the fact that the Commissioners could, perhaps, keep in closer touch with the needs of every section of the County, if they were so divided as to come in daily contact with the conditions, it seems as though this office could be divided into districts with advantage.

As all the other offices pertain to the entire County the same necessity for division does not seem to exist.

As to the method of casting the vote at the polls, this certainly could be changed with great benefit to all. The vast pocket method of voting gives too much chance for manipulation and complications. The allowing of tickets to be marked outside of the booth gave the workers at the polls the opportunity of carrying out pre-arranged plans and made effective several combinations. In Salisbury, around the polls of the three districts, could be seen the effect of this method of voting, as the workers were kept busy marking the ballots of all those who would let them. If a real hot fight should ever bring money into our primaries then this system would give all the chance anyone would want, as they could be absolutely sure of getting the vote paid for. It is hoped that the time of corrupt use of money at the polls has passed, never to return, but the system of voting is a bid for its improvement as it is now.

The voting should be under a secret ballot as is the case in a general election and no tickets should be given out for the purpose of marking before the day of the primaries, and every voter should be required to mark his ticket inside the booths, as he now has to do in the general election.

The Crawford County plan has fully demonstrated the fact that a man can go out and make a winning fight under it with or without the consent of the leaders. On the whole it has proved to be better than the old method and the voters in the county are said to be very much pleased with the new plan.

Considerable complaint was made by some of the candidates that it calls for too much work and trouble, but to the successful men the work of meeting the people and getting acquainted will help materially in the work to be done before the general election—and the defeated men have today more friends in the county than they did before the canvass.

TELEPHONE QUESTION SETTLED.

The Diamond State Telephone Company has acceded to the request of the citizens of Salisbury in the matter of establishing uniform rates of $15 and $25 for all subscribers. The committee appointed to carry this matter through are to be congratulated upon the successful outcome of the matter and the citizens of Salisbury are under obligations to them for the hard work they have put in. We understand that outside of their work they have expended close to $100. As they should not be expected to suffer this loss in addition to their time and work, the fair thing for the citizens to do is to refund to the committee this money.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED

On Wednesday To See The Great Race Between Noted Horses. Convenient Railroad Service, Excursion Rates.

The interest in the race between Dry Dock and Gen. Mack, which is to take place on the Fair Grounds here on Wednesday next, July 21st, continues to grow as the day for the race approaches. One of the peculiar conditions in regard to this race is the confidence of both owners in winning.

Although both horses are known and well known to them, yet each seems to think that his horse alone stands any chance of winning, and it is reported that both are backing their horses to a considerable extent.

While there has been considerable talk about odds being given, there seems to be no truth in the rumor of odds being given on either horse. Considerable money has been placed on the race all over the shore where the horses are well known.

Special trains will run over the N. Y. P. & N. from Onpe Charles all the way down. The Pennsylvania has put on excursion rates and the B. O. & A. have made arrangements to take care of the large traffic expected over their lines. It is estimated that close to ten thousand people will be in Salisbury next Wednesday to see the race. Both of the horses are reported to be in fine condition and able to make better time than ever before, and it is to this fact that some attribute the confidence of the owners. Knowledge that his horse is able to go faster than on any occasion in the past. It is predicted that the winning horse will have to do one or more of the heats in 2:10 or less.

Notice.

The picnic at Trinity M. E. Church South, near Allen Wharf, will be held Thursday, July 22nd, if it should be a fair day, if not the first good day. A basket auction and refreshments will be served. Proceeds for benefit of the church. Committee.

A Clothes Story.

We ask the attention of the man to whom outfitting means more than "just clothes." We sell a man clothes that will cause him to tie to us and speak well of us to his friends.

For a Suit or a pair of Trousers that will at once mark you as a "good dresser"; for a correct Hat, Shoes, Tie, Shirt, or anything in toggery that's choice and different, we are at your service. Our good outfitting costs you no more than the other sort—often less, and always less in the end. Prices range from $7 to $20.

An Attractive Showing of $10.50 Suits.

Never in the history of our business have we offered such values as are displayed at this price.

The materials are cassimeres, chevots and worsteds, in plain effects and the new conceits. Not a suit in the lot that would not readily bring $20.00. But to insure quick selling the price is $10.50.

SNAKES DRINK OIL; SCARE AUTOISTS

Hundreds Take Possession of Turnpike and Grow too
Fat to Crawl

ONE GETS IN THE RUNNING GEAR

Driver Tries to Crush It with Car, but Wiggler Climbs Up and Robs Lubricating Cup of Beverage Reptiles Seem to Crave.

Jacksonville, N. J.—Snakes now are so numerous in the Shepton turnpike that automobilists of convivial habits are fighting shy of that thoroughfare. When driving in it they never are sure whether they are in their right minds or suffering from delirium tremens. Rather than be compelled to fight out the question with themselves they are making long detours to escape the snake-infested section. There is no telling how many automobile tours have been abandoned by New Yorkers and others who, as soon as they reached the turnpike and saw it filled with wriggling blacksnakes, ranging from one foot to eight feet in length, decided it was time to quit riding in autos, return home quickly and get front seats on the water wagon.

Until the turnpike was oiled heavily by the township officials there was none of this snake trouble. Seemingly the reptiles think the oil was spread for their refreshment. Anyway, at any hour of the day or night, hundreds of blacksnakes may be seen lying out in the roadway, licking the oil-soaked ground and seeming to be supremely happy. They are at their happiest, however, just after a heavy rain. Then the water lies in puddles on the turnpike and on top of each puddle is a heavy coating of oil. The snakes go into these and swim around and around. Their mouths are open and as they swim they skim the oil from the top of the water and swallow it. Many of the snakes have become so fat from the oil diet they scarcely can move.

Elston Washburn of Singac does not drink liquor. Therefore, when he sees a snake he knows it is one and not the product of a rum-soaked imagination. He was running his auto in the turnpike this afternoon. Directly in front of him he saw an eight-foot black snake, feeding on the crude oil. "See me kill that fellow," Washburn said to a companion.

He put on speed and steered for the snake. When his machine was several feet beyond the place where the snake had been feeding, Washburn looked back to see if he had cut it in two. He was surprised to observe it had disappeared.

"Geel! I guess it must be tangled up in the running gear," he said. "It's up to me to get it boxed out."

Washburn stopped his car and got out. He looked closely, but could not see anything of the snake.

"Hand me that lantern," he said to his friend.

Washburn stuck his head under the machine and heard a hiss close to his ear. He came out in a hurry and then began flashing the light from part to part under the auto. Around the oil box on the rear wheel the autoist found the snake. Between hisses it licked the oil from the cap on top of the box. Washburn stuck the flashlight close to the reptile's face. That frightened it. It uncoiled and dropped to the roadway. Washburn reversed his machine and ran over it several times before finally killing it. He was exceedingly careful to dodge at least a score of snakes encountered farther along in the turnpike.

RAISES SKUNKS IN SPITE.

Trenton Man's Revenge on Owner of Animal Rendering Plant.

Trenton, N. J.—Because Oscar Neldt refused to move his animal rendering plant on the White Horse road upon the request of a neighbor, Ephraim Rockhill, the latter has started a skunk farm for spite, and the combination of odors in the vicinity is likely to result in the closing of a public road which passes the properties.

The skunks are making things unpleasant for Neldt, and he threatens suit. He is likely to keep out of court, however, as for years he has been fighting legal proceedings in order to keep his plant in its present place. Neldt and his employees and Rockhill and his hired men have to go about their places with rubber protectors on their noses.

HORSE CATCHES A THIEF.

Drops Him to Take Hold of Policeman and Pile Driver Escapes.

Youngstown, Ohio.—Tom, a big horse owned by Richard Probst, 120 West Boardman street, proved his worth to the title of a thief catcher, but failed diametrically in capturing a would-be pilferer of the Probst chicken coop, because of lack of respect for authority.

Tom is given the run of the yard at night. He noted the stealthy approach of the would-be chicken-eater. Tom gave chase and seized the seat of the marauder's trousers just as the man was leaping the fence. Tom shook the man, then dropped him.

Patrolman Whitney ran up at this moment. Tom's teeth sunk into the policeman's sleeve and remained there, while the thief sped into the darkness.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering. Therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit. The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health-restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

The Ways of Charleston

Where Even Dogs Are Well Treated On Street Cars

Even a dog may ride on the street cars in Charleston, S. C., as many as dogs as three to a man, provided the master happens to be a hunter. The conductors are polite and apparently protest at nothing. If about Christ mass time a woman traveller is over loaded with bundles and packages she hands the excess to the conductor who gently deposits both her and her extras in a convenient seat.

The old signs "White" and "Colored" have been done away with. The same car does duty for both races. The old mammy's effects, often cumbersome, are as those of the white woman.

Saturday evening the mechanics quit an hour earlier than usual and do their marketing and shopping for the week. By common consent the whites undertake no shopping at these hours, so that King street and the market show a preponderance of colored people.

As house servants the negro women seem to be efficient. They are proud of long service and "their families," are deferential and speak softly.

If the service of a tailor or a shoemaker is required consult with the chambermaid. She will assume the responsibility of a choice. You settle your bill with her. If you are curious you may learn that she has a friend or relative whom she favors. All the little shoe shops and tailoring establishments are run by negroes. Many milliners and dress makers are colored, an old resident says, "but then they are not so very dark."

The visitor commenting on the absence of street loafers is answered by the industrious carpenter: "If a man is loafing and hanging around you just naturally suppose some one has to pay for his keep, so the policeman asks him 'Why?' If he don't give a good reason they put him on the chain gang. Mostly if they don't work they keep out of sight."

The canning of oysters is to one who has never seen it of interest. The vessel in which the oysters are one oyster enough to make the measure full and complete.

Checks are cashable at 6 o'clock if the holder so wishes. This method is preferred by the management. By morning the money is spent and the worker has to provide for the coming day's needs. With the former way of weekly payments it was found that too much money in one sum meant idleness for more than Sunday. Monday morning's force was never up to the mark in numbers.

After shucking the little oyster gets another bath and is put into cans by nimble fingers, and from this on the process is mechanical. After being soldered the cans are steam cooked, labelled, boxed and prepared for market.

Executed for Burning Coal.

Curious and little known facts about the house-fire were mentioned by Mr. E. H. Blake, addressing the Survivors Institution last evening on warming and ventilation. Five were at one time a great luxury, he said, and even the right to use the fire had been bequeathed. Thus the will of one Richard Byrchet (1516) read:

"I will yt the sayd Nell my wyfe shal have ye chamber she lyes in and lyberte at ye fyre in the house; all yese thyngs shal she have so long as she ys wido."

Coal, continued Mr. Blake, was first imported into London at the end of the thirteenth century, but the smoke produced by burning it in improperly constructed grates caused such a prejudice against it that in 1306 a law was passed making it a capital offence to burn coal in the city. The Tower records give details of a man's trial and execution for the offence.

Ivory a Government Monopoly.

There are doubtless still places in Central Africa where money may be made in trading ivory and other things, but at the present time these places are few. In British East Africa ivory is now a Government monopoly, and you may not trade in ivory.

CRAWFORD COUNTY PLAN TRIAL.

The workings of the Crawford County plan of holding primaries were eagerly watched by both those who had advocated this method of nominating the ticket and those who were opposed to a change in plan.

There is one thing which was settled conclusively last Saturday and that is that the Democrats in this County want to nominate their own ticket.

It was said at the time of deciding for this method of making nominations that it would be impossible to get the voters to take enough interest in the primaries to come out to the polls and vote; that as a result of this indifference of the voter the ticket would be nominated by a small portion of the Democracy of the county after all. The result shows that close to 3000 Democrats came out and voted—over 90 per cent of the total vote cast in the last Presidential election by the Democratic party in this County.

This large vote was a surprise to all, and shows, if it means anything at all, that the Democrats of this County do take an interest in the party nominees and do want to nominate them by direct vote.

The other question is how did the people show, by the selections made, that they were so competent to make out the ticket as those who, under the old system, did this for them.

While there are a number, of course, who had rather some one else had received the nomination, yet this feeling is due for the most part more to personal feeling than any criticism of the men nominated. All must admit that the ticket nominated is, on the whole, fully the equal in ability and character to those which have been made out under the convention plan.

The geographical distribution of the offices, almost which so much was said does not show that the small districts suffered on account of the large vote in those districts adjoining Salisbury.

It looks as though the law could be amended so as to divide the County into five Commissioner districts, so as to guarantee each section of the County a Commissioner, with benefit.

Owing to the fact that the Commissioners could, perhaps, keep in closer touch with the needs of every section of the County, if they were so divided as to come in daily contact with the conditions, it seems as though this office could be divided into districts with advantage.

As all the other offices pertain to the entire County the same necessity for division does not seem to exist.

As to the method of casting the vote at the polls, this certainly could be changed with great benefit to all. The real pocket method of voting gives too much chance for manipulation and combinations. The allowing of tickets to be marked outside of the booth gave the workers at the polls the opportunity of carrying out pre-arranged plans and made effective several combinations. In Salisbury, around the polls of the three districts, could be seen the effect of this method of voting, as the workers were kept busy making the ballots of all those who would let them. If a real hot fight should ever bring money into our primaries then this system would give all the chance anyone would want, as they could be absolutely sure of getting the vote paid for. It is hoped that the time of corrupt use of money at the polls has passed, never to return, and the system of voting is a bid for the people to express all their views at the polls.

The voting should be under a secret ballot as is the case in a general election and no tickets should be given out for the purpose of marking before the day of the primaries, and every voter should be required to mark his ticket inside the booth, as he now has to do in the general election.

The Crawford County plan has fully demonstrated the fact that a man can go out and make a winning fight under it with or without the consent of the leaders. On the whole it has proved to be better than the old method and the voters in the county are said to be very much pleased with the new plan.

Considerable complaint was made by some of the candidates that it calls for too much work and trouble, but to the successful men the work of meeting the people and getting acquainted will help materially in the work to be done before the general election—and the defeated men have today more friends in the county than they did before the canvass.

TELEPHONE QUESTION SETTLED.

The Diamond State Telephone Company has acceded to the request of the citizens of Salisbury in the matter of establishing uniform rates of $15 and $25 for all subscribers. The committee appointed to carry this matter through are to be congratulated upon the successful outcome of the matter and the citizens of Salisbury are under obligations to them for the hard work they have put in. We understand that outside of their work they have expended close to $100. As they should not be expected to suffer this loss in addition to their time and work, the fair thing for the citizens to do is to refund to the committee this money.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED

On Wednesday to See The Great Race Between Noted Horses. Convenient Railroad Service. Excursion Rates.

The interest in the race between Dry Dock and Gen. Mack, which is to take place on the Fair Grounds here on Wednesday next, July 21st, continues to grow as the day for the race approaches. One of the peculiar conditions in regard to this race is the confidence of both owners in winning.

Although both horses are known and well known to them, yet each seems to think that his horse alone stands any chance of winning, and it is reported that both are backing their horses to a considerable extent.

While there has been considerable talk about odds being given, there seems to be no truth in the rumor of odds being given on either horse. Considerable money has been placed on the race all over the shore where the horses are well known.

Special trains will run over the N. Y. P. & N. from Cape Charles all the way down. The Pennsylvania has put on excursion rates and the S. O. & A. have made arrangements to take care of the large traffic expected over their lines. It is estimated that close to ten thousand people will be in Salisbury next Wednesday to see the race. Both of the horses are reported to be in fine condition and able to make better time than ever before, and it is to this fact that some attribute the confidence of the owners.

Knowledge that his horse is able to go faster than on any occasion in the past. It is predicted that the winning horse will have to do one or more of the heats in 2:10 or less.

Notice.

The picnic at Trinity M. E. Church South, near Allen Wharf, will be held Thursday, July 22nd, if it should be a fair day, if not the first good day. A basket auction and refreshments will be served. Proceeds for benefit of the church. Committee.

A Clothes Story.

We ask the attention of the man to whom outfitting means more than "just clothes." We sell a man clothes that will cause him to tie to us and speak well of us to his friends.

For a Suit or a pair of Trousers that will at once mark you as a "good dresser"; for a correct Hat, Shoes, Tie, Shirt, or anything in toggery that's choice and different, we are at your service. Our good outfitting costs you no more than the other sort—often less, and always less in the end. Prices range from $7 to $20.

An Attractive Showing of $10.50 Suits.

Never in the history of our business have we offered such values as are displayed at this price. The materials are cassimeres, chevots and worsteds, in plain effects and the new conceits. Not a suit in the lot that would not readily bring $30.00. But to insure quick selling the price is $10.50.

Local Department.

News is the truth concerning men, nations and things. That is, a truth concerning them which is helpful, or pleasant, or useful, or necessary for a reader to know.

—Miss Tilghman, of North Carolina, is the guest of the Misses Darby, Camden Ave.

—We are glad to report Mr. E. S. Adkins greatly improved from his recent illness.

—The Episcopal Sunday School gave their annual excursion to Ocean City Tuesday, July 13th.

—It is expected that Elder Ker will preach in the O. S. Baptist Meeting house on July 21st.

—Prof. N. Price Turner is at Harvard University taking an extra course during July and August.

—Mrs. W. O. Gallett and daughter, Miss Louise, are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Cahall, at Bridgeville, Del.

—Mrs. G. W. Taylor can order you "hair goods" to match your hair on short notice. Reasonable prices.

—Miss Ruth Smith returned home this week after a visit to friends in Tennessee, Asheville, N. C., Portsmouth and Norfolk.

—Bro. W. A. Cooper will preach at Trinity Church, South, Sunday morning at eleven o'clock and at St. Andrews' Sunday night at eight.

—The Sunday Schools of Trinity and St. Andrews' M. E. Church, South, will hold their annual picnic at Ocean City on Tuesday, July 27th.

—Mr. James Pierce, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Grier, of Millford, and Mrs. William Pennell, of Dover, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Grier this week.

—Mrs. C. W. Ralph, who has been the guest of her parents for the past two weeks returned to Oriskany today. She was accompanied by her sister Miss Grace Ellingsworth.

—Mr. Edward Cook, of the firm of New York and Boston, where he will buy all the newest styles and shades in Mids for the coming season.

—Rev. Dr. D. C. Ridgeway, formerly of the Wilmington Conference, now living at Fort North, Texas, is visiting Dr. Martindale and will preach at Ansbury M. E. Church Sunday morning.

—The Parsonsburg and Pittsville Sunday Schools will run an excursion to Ocean City next Tuesday, July 20. Tickets good to remain over that evening for the moonlight, train leaving there at 10.30.

—The annual festival will be held at Mr. Hermon, Tuesday, July 20th. The Sunday School of that church will also run an excursion to Ocean City, Tuesday, August 10th. All are cordially invited.

—Rev. Dr. Graham at Bethesda M. E. Church on Sunday, 11 A. M. "Morning on Neb." 8 P. M., "The Evening and Morning of the First Day," Sabbath School, 9.30; Christian Endeavor, 7.15; Mid-week service Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

—Miss Annie Peters has assumed her duties as Principal of the Shorthand Department of the Salisbury College of Business. Several have already arranged for a special summer course, although the college year does not begin until September 1st.

—The work on the boat "Compact" laden with oyster shells in the Wicomico River at the foot of Main St. is being executed with great swiftness. People in every business and profession should imitate "Uncle Sam" in the effectiveness of his work when he once starts at it.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Macedonia M. P. Church will hold an Apron and Tea Social Saturday, July 24th in the Sunday School room and church yard. We cordially invite the public. We hope the ladies will not forget their apron and tie. There will also be something else connected with this to complete an enjoyable evening.

—The jury dam, just completed a few days ago, across Hampshire Lake, gave way under the pressure of the water coming down from Shoemaker's pond, and practically destroyed all the work done by the city. Several thousand people are inconvenienced by the delay in making this street passable and means for opening the street to traffic should be devised at the earliest possible date.

—Carl Wilkins, 21 years old, killed by the engine of train No. 10 and express on the New York and Norfolk railway, is lying at the General Hospital in a very critical condition suffering from internal and external injuries on head and chest. Wilkins was crossing the bridge on and account of the heavy load and not see the approaching train. Slight hopes of his recovery are entertained.

—A straw ride was given by some of the young men of Salisbury to their lady friends last Wednesday evening on the picnic at Parker's M. E. Chapel. It was a beautiful evening and a very congenial bunch and all say that they had a delightful time. In the party were Mrs. Dr. Traut, Mrs. Hugh Inley, and Mrs. David Uman, of Baltimore, Misses Amanda Pollitt, Helen and Sarah Uman, Rose Elliott, Colorado, Gertrude Martin, Carrie Adkins, Mary Butcher, Lottie Robertson, Grace Hardesty, Dorothy Gruntz, Meena Maria Uman, Hugh Haley, Chas. Wilkins, Dr. Robertson, and Chas. Balthus.

SALISBURY HEAVILY HIT.

One Of The Fiercest Storms In Many Years A Little Damage.

On Tuesday evening, between eight and nine P. M., Salisbury and vicinity was visited by a severe electrical cloud outburst, and things looked pretty dark for awhile.

There seems to have been two clouds approaching the town, one from the Northwest and the other from North of Southwest, the cloud from the Northwest striking the town first. It seemed to change its course and hover over until the two clouds came together above this city causing great damage.

Among the damages was that of rundering asunder the tin roof on the store house of H. S. Todd, on Main Street, occupied by W. E. Sheppard & Co. Some people seem to think that the lightning struck the Northwest corner of the house and the wind did the rest, rolling it over until suspended in air for a few seconds, it fell to the pavement dislodging bricks in its fall. Others think that the wind alone did the work as there is no sign of the escape of the bolt of electricity to the ground, which it would naturally do in any case. Their opinion is that the corner of the roof at the Northwest end was loose and that the wind in the first cloud, which came with a great velocity and force, started to roll the tin roof up bringing some of the lathes or boards with it. The damage in this case is estimated at $1000.

A bolt also struck the Masonic Temple dislodging two of the chimneys. No other material damage to the Temple has been discovered.

The home of Miss Christina Sutherland, on the road to Shoemaker's Mill, was struck, considerable damage being done.

A tree in the Court House yard was separated from some of its branches by the wind and about eight of the swinging doors of the Grand Stand at the Fair Grounds were torn from their hinges and thrown to the ground.

The electric lights of the town were put out of commission for the time being.

Several of the farmers report that some damage was done to the corn by the wind and hail accompanying the storm.

Death Visits Heavily Home Of Mr. Lambert Powell.

The angel of death was very busy the first of this week and made a very distressing record, in that the angel took three members of the family of Mr. Lambert J. Powell, a prosperous merchant of this city last Saturday night and Monday.

The first of the family to be taken was Miss Clara Powell, aged 23 years, who had been ill for several weeks with typhoid fever. Miss Powell was a graduate of the Wicomico High School and she came from Powellville to this city with her father's family when they moved to Salisbury about three years ago. She was the daughter of Mr. Josiah Powell, who is a well known resident of Dennis' District.

The heaviest blow came to Mr. Powell shortly after the death of his sister, when his wife, Annie Johnson Powell and infant child passed away. Mrs. Powell was just past 31 years, and her sudden death was a great shock and surprise to her friends and relatives.

The remains were laid to rest in Parsons' Cemetery, there being a double procession, the two hearsees along side of each other. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Undertaker Geo. O. Hill.

Mr. Powell and family have the heartfelt sympathies of the people of this community in their severe loss.

—Mrs. Ida Williams is visiting relatives at Wango.

—Mrs. Henry Rowe, of New York is the guest of Mrs. Florence McBristy.

—Don't fail to see Kennerly & Mitchell's display of Lion Brand collars. Every known style here.

—Misses Ruth and Louise Gunby are visiting Miss Nettie Warren, Oceanock, Va.

—Mr. Lawrence Clarke, of Baltimore is the guest at the home of Mrs. L. D. Olliver, Division Street.

—Mrs. Jackson Rounds and daughter, Miss Adeline are visiting friends and relatives at Sharptown, this week.

—There will be a picnic held at Bethel, (Porter's Mill.) M. P. Church Saturday, July 24th.

—Don't fail to see Kennerly & Mitchell's collar display. 150 dozen collars in this sale.

—Miss Rachel DeWolf, of Washington, D. C., is the guest of Miss Margaret Woodcock, Camden Avenue this city.

—Mrs. Samuel Sterling and daughter, Mabel, of Jersey City are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Browning, on Walnut Street.

—Mrs. O. M. Ellinger and two daughters of Baltimore, are the guests of Mrs. Ellinger's mother, Mrs. Sallie A. Oannon, on Division Street.

—News reached Salisbury Thursday of the death of Mr. G. M. Fisher's mother as Marion, Va. Mr. Fisher has been at her bedside for about two weeks.

—"A woman of Canaan, the Mother who Provided," will be the subject of Rev. Mr. Seale's sermon at the Wicomico Presbyterian church tomorrow evening.

Prof. Adam's Royal Entertainment At Music Hall.

The entertainments given by Prof. Adams this week at the Music Hall are of the best ever produced here. He carries enough paraphernalia to enable him to give an entire change of program every night, many of which are entirely new productions never before seen here, also his reels are new and will only be reproduced by request.

Mr. Mohan is a very clever juggler; his stunts are new and unique.—Easton Ledger.

Sells Require Fewer Pressings Than All Others.

A suit that has to be sent to the presser twice a week or even twice a month to be kept in shape is not a good suit. Something is wrong when the style dodges out of a garment every little while and has to be ironed into it again. Yet eight suits out of every ten suits have just that fault. The shape does not stay. The style does not last. That is why the cleaners and pressers of this town do such a rushing business. The reason is that the cloth in the garment shrinks. It knuckles to the weather elements and lets every little attack of moisture knock it shapeless. When the cloth puckers and bags, when the coat front wrinkles, when the trousers bag, even without rough usage, the cloth is shrinking; that's the trouble. Now, the clothes sold by Lacy Thoroughgood are treated by a secret process that takes all of the shrink out of them. That process renders the cloth absolutely proof against the shrink element; that is why the good shape in Thoroughgood's Clothes lasts so long. Do you know that Lacy Thoroughgood has sold more suits this spring than he ever sold in one spring before? and he will replace every suit that does bad. Thoroughgood has not sold a bad suit this spring. Thoroughgood has SIX HUNDRED Suits now, the very cream of suits for Men and Young Men, that can be bought CHEAP. These suits were made by B. Kuppenheimer & Co., Chicago, and every suit has a silk label sewed on the inside coat pocket which reads: A NEW SUIT WITHOUT CHARGE IF THIS ONE PROVES UNSATISFACTORY. Just buy one suit from Lacy Thoroughgood.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have suffered with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only

CHAPTER XXVI.
THE BATTLE OF WASHINGTON.

Twenty minutes after 12 Senator Langdon and Secretary Haines were still undisturbed by any move on the part of Peabody and Stevens, who maintained a silence that to Haines was distinctly ominous. His experience at the capitol had taught him that when the senate machine was quiet it was time for some one to get out from under.

Miss Williams, the naval committee's stenographer, entered.

"Senator Langdon," she said, "Senator Peabody and Senator Stevens are in committee room 6, and they told me to tell you that they'd be—I can't say. Please, sir, I—"

"D—d," interpolated Langdon, laughing.

"Yes, sir, that's that—if they come in here at 12:30. You must come to them, they say."

"The gentleman I'm sitting here with my hat on the back of my head smoking a good sea-gar with nails driven through both shoes into the floor—and looking at the clock."

At 12:25 Senator Stevens entered.

"I came to warn you, Langdon," he said, "that Senator Peabody's patience is nearly exhausted. You must come to see him at once if you expect the south to get a naval base at Altacoola or anywhere else. If you do not agree to take his advice this naval bill and any other that you are interested in now or in future will be trampled underfoot in the senate. Mississippi will have no use for a senator who cannot produce results in Washington, and that will prove the bitterest lesson you have ever learned."

"I'm waiting for Peabody here, Stevens."

"Oh, ridiculous. Of course he's not coming. Why, Langdon, he's the king of the senate. He has the biggest men of the country at his call. He's—"

"He's got one minute left," observed Langdon, looking at the clock, "but he'll come. I trust Peabody more than the best clock made at a time like this when—"

"The figure of the senator from Pennsylvania appeared in the doorway."

"Good day, Senator Langdon," he remarked icily.

"Same to you. Have a sea-gar, senator," said Langdon. He turned and winked significantly at Haines.

The three senators seated themselves.

"I suppose you wouldn't consider yourself so important, Langdon, if you knew that we now find we can get another member of the naval affairs committee over to our side for Altacoola," began Peabody. "That gives us a majority of the committee without your vote."

"That wouldn't prevent me from making a minority report for Gulf City and explaining why I made that report, would it?" the Mississippian asked blandly.

Peabody and Stevens both knew that it wouldn't. Stevens exchanged glances with "the boss of the senate" and in low voice began making to Langdon a proposition to which Peabody's assent had been gained.

"Langdon, we would like to be alone," and he nodded toward Haines.

"Sorry can't oblige, senator," Langdon replied. "Bud and I together make up the senator from Mississippi."

"All right. What I want to say is this: The president is appointing a commission to investigate the condition of the unemployed. The members are to go to Europe, five or six countries, and look into conditions there, telegraphically, of course, so as to formulate a piece of legislation that will solve the existing problems in this country. A most generous expense account will be allowed by the government. A member can take his family. A son, for instance, could act as financial secretary under liberal pay."

"I've heard of that commission," said Langdon.

"Well, Senator Peabody has the naming of two senators who will go on that commission, and I suggested that your character and ability would make you."

"Good story," exclaimed Langdon, "you mean that my character and ability would make me something or other if I kept my mouth shut in the senate this afternoon? Stevens, I've been surprised so many times since I came to the capital that it doesn't affect me any more. I'm just amused at your offer or Senator Peabody's."

"I want to tell you two senators that there's only one thing that I want in Washington—and you haven't offered it to me yet. When you do I'll do business with you."

"What's that? Speak out, man!" said Peabody quickly.

"A square deal for the people of the United States."

"Good Lord!" exclaimed "the boss of the senate." "Is this Washington or is it heaven?"

"It is not heaven, senator," put in Haines.

"Man alive," cried Peabody. "I've been in Washington so long that—"

"So long you've forgotten that the American people really exist," retorted Langdon, "and there are more like you in the senate, all because the voters have no chance to choose their own senators. The public is not going to take the kind of a senator that the legislature made no mistake of politicians. Well, like making them, you, Peabody, wouldn't be in the senate today if the voters had anything to say about it."

The Pennsylvanian shrugged his shoulders.

"And now I'll tell you honorable senators," went on Langdon, thoroughly aroused, "something to surprise you. I have discovered that you were not working for yourselves alone in the Altacoola deal, but that you intend to turn your land over to the Standard Steel company at a big profit as soon as this naval base bill is passed. Then that company will squeeze the government for the best part of the hundred millions that are to be spent."

The senator sank back in his chair and gazed at the two opponents. Those two statements jumped to their feet.

"Come, Stevens, let him do what he will. We cannot stay here to be insulted by the ravings of a madman," cried the Pennsylvanian. But he brought his associate to a standstill midway to the door. "By the way, Langdon, what is if you are going to do in the senate this afternoon?" he asked. "You said you were going to make us honest against our will. You know you can't do anything."

Bud Haines turned his face toward the speaker and grinned broadly, to the senator's intense discomfort.

"I'll do more than that," announced Langdon, rising and pounding a fist into his open hand. "I'll make you and Stevens more popular than you ever were in your lives before."

"But," shot Peabody.

"I'll do even more yet. I'm going to make you generous patriots. And, I regret to say, I'll give you the chance to make the hits of your careers."

The polished hypocrites looked at him, too astonished to move.

"How? What?" they gasped.

Swept on by his own enthusiasm and the force of his own courageous honesty, the voice of the southerner rose to oratorical height.

"This afternoon," he exclaimed, "when the naval committee makes its report I will rise in my place and declare that for once in the history of the senate men have been found who place the interests of the government they serve above any chance of pecuniary reward. These men are the members of the naval base committee."

"With this idea in view, realizing that dishonest men would try to make money out of the government, these members of the naval base committee, after they settled on Altacoola, went to the land that will be needed for the naval base, and these men secured this at a very nominal figure. Now they are ready to turn over their land to the government at exactly what they paid for it without a cent of profit."

"Then they're going to sit up over there in that senate. They're going to realize that a new kind of politics has arrived in Washington—the kind that I and lots of others always thought there was here."

"And, gentlemen," he advanced on his colleagues triumphantly—"when I, Senator Langdon of Mississippi, your creation in politics, have finished that speech I dare one of you to get up and deny a word!"

"The boss of the senate" and his satellite were dumfounded. Firmly believing that Langdon could find no way to pass the bill for Altacoola and yet spoil their crooked scheme, they were totally unprepared for any such development. To think that a simple, old fashioned planter from the cotton fields of Mississippi could originate such a plan to outwit the two ablest political tricksters in the senate!

Langdon eyed his colleagues triumphantly.

Peabody, however, was thinking quickly. He was never beaten until the last vote was counted on a roll call. He knew that, no matter how apparently insurmountable an opposition was, a way to overcome it might often be found by the man who exercised strong self control and a trained brain. This corrupt victor in scores of bitter political engagements on the battlefield of Washington was now in his most dangerous mood. He would marshal all his forces. The man to defeat him now must defeat the entire senate machine and the allies it could gain in an emergency; he must overcome the power of Standard Steel; he must fight the resourceful brains of the masterful Peabody himself.

Peabody whispered to Stevens, "We must pretend to be beaten."

Then the Pennsylvanian advanced, smiling, to Langdon and held out his hand.

"Senator Langdon," he said, "I'm beaten. You're beaten the leader of the senate. Something difficult to be done. What's more, you've given me the chance of a lifetime to become known as a public benefactor. As soon as you've finished your speech in the senate I will get up and make another one—to second yours. Here's my hand. Anything you may ever want out of Peabody in the future shall be yours for the asking."

Langdon refused to grasp the proffered hand.

Senator Stevens made a show of protesting against his superior's seeming surrender.

"But," he objected, "look here—"

Peabody turned upon him instantly. "Oh, shut up, Stevens; don't be a fool. Come on in. The water's fine."

The pair of schemers, with Norton at their heels, hurried away.

The Pennsylvanian drew Stevens into committee room 6 and, ordering the stenographer to leave, drew up chairs where both could sit, facing the door.

"We've thrown dust in that old gander's eyes," whispered Peabody. "It's now ten after 1. He is to be recognized to make his speech at 3:30. That gives us two hours and twenty minutes—"

"Yes, but for what?" asked Stevens excitedly. "I've been trying myself to think of something. What will you do—what can you do?"

"The boss of the senate" smiled patronizingly on the senior senator from Mississippi, as though amused and scornful of his limitations as a strategist, as a tactician, as a tactician's fighter. Then his jaw set hard, and his brows contracted.

"I will not do anything," he said. "I cannot do anything."

—he hesitated a full ten seconds—

"But Jake Stein-ert can."

Stevens' hands twitched nervously.

"And," continued Peabody, "I'm expecting a phone call from him any moment. I told him this morning that he might be able to make $1,000 before night if—"

The telephone bell at the desk interrupted him.

Peabody leaned over and eagerly clutched the receiver.

The senior senator from Mississippi jerked himself to his feet. He stood at a window and looked out over the roof tops of the city.

EDISON READY TO MOLD HOUSES

Great Inventor Says $1,200 Will Build Homes Ordinarily Costing $30,000

HE USES REINFORCED CONCRETE

New York Plumbers are Doubtful—Wizard of Menlo Park May Have Overlooked Wage Scales in Estimating on Concrete Structures.

New York City.—Thomas A. Edison has announced that he has completed his scheme for building a concrete house for $1,200, which, if constructed of stone in the same design, would cost between $20,000 and $30,000. The fact that Edison includes in his $1,200 estimate the heating and plumbing for the house is construed by practical men here to mean he has fixed his figures without previously having consulted plumbers and steam fitters and without taking into consideration the eight-hour day and the prevailing rate of wages. The price he cites could not prevail if only a single house were to be built. That he wants to be understood clearly. What he means is that if the reinforced concrete houses were built in blocks, by his design and through the use of his molds, the cost of each house in a block would not be greater than about $1,200.

He also says that figure is dependent upon the houses being built on soil which yield sand and gravel from the excavations. Even after making due allowance for those conditions, practical builders here in New York said they felt sure Edison would find himself in a losing case if he contracted to put up three blocks of detached one-family houses for $1,200 each, with the plumbing and steam-heating apparatus included. Opinion was expressed that a mistake had been made in the estimates, and before contracts were entered into for building such houses the estimates would be revised and changed materially.

The Edison housebuilding plan calls for a one-family house, on a lot 40x60 feet. The floor plan of the house is 32x20 feet. The front porch extends eight feet and the back stoop three feet. Each house will contain six rooms and a bath, and the ceiling will extend to the top of the house. The house will contain a boiler, wash tub and coal bunker. The main living room and also the outside of the house will be richly decorated. The decorations will be cast with the house and therefore will come from the molds as part of the structure and not merely be stuck on.

The entire house will be of reinforced concrete. That includes the walls, roof, floors, porches, bath tub and the laundry tubs. The only wood in the building will be the doors, door frames, windows and window frames. The inside walls also will be of concrete and there will be no plaster finish. The surface will be smooth and may be tinted or painted, as the owner may desire. Edison seems to think that with his plan in working shape it will do much toward relieving the congestion which now exists in cities and practically enable every workingman to own his home or to be a tenant in a detached house at an expense—that is, for rent and carefree—of not more than $9 a month.

Cast-iron molds will be used in building the houses, and they will vary in design. After the concrete foundation has been laid and has hardened the molds will be set up upon it. The term foundation is not to be construed as meaning the cellar walls, but merely a base of concrete upon which the molds will rest. Edison estimates that the molds needed to begin the work of building such houses on wholesale lines will cost $25,000, and that the necessary plant will cost $15,000 more. At least six sets of molds must be used to keep the men and the plant busy.

Edison says it will take four days to set up the molds. The liquid concrete can be poured into them in an hour. The molds will be kept in use for four days until the concrete hardens and then it will require four days to remove them. That means the house will be finished in a fortnight. With the six sets of molds, if that schedule is adhered to, about 120 houses can be built in a year. The initial cost of the cast iron molds will be comparatively great, but they may be used indefinitely, Edison says, and in the long run will be much cheaper than the wooden molds now used in which, because of their destructibility, increase greatly the expense of concrete construction.

Edison has George E. Small and Henry J. Harms, Jr., engineers, working with him now. They designed the house and molds and made the experiments. The first house will be poured in sections for experimental purposes and to discover and remedy defects. Then an entire house will be molded with one pouring. In other words, a lot of liquid concrete will be run into the molds and when they are removed that muddy-looking mixture will have been turned into a handsome home where a workman can live and rear his family cheaply and in comfort—that is, if the Edison estimates are right.

INDIAN MOTHER'S SACRIFICE

Get Flesh from Her Body for Bait in Order to Feed Her Starving Children.

Port Arthur, Ont.—William McRory, who has returned from an exploring expedition in the wilds of the Hudson Bay region, confirms a thrilling story of an Indian woman's devotion to her children, which filtered down from the northland a few days ago.

The woman and her children were starving, having eaten their last scrap of food several days before the mother determined upon her almost unparalleled sacrifice. The snares remained empty and all the traps set for wild game were unprung. Not a living creature could be seen, although the woman, spurred by the cries of her children for food, hunted until her strength was spent.

In this pitiable emergency, and made desperate by the sufferings of her little brood, she seized a knife and cut strips of flesh from her body which she used to bait hooks to lure fish from their haunts in a nearby lake. In this manner she managed to sustain the lives of her family until help arrived and the famished babes were fed.

HAL, A MULE, KILLS HIMSELF.

Main Cause of Suicide, Say Police and Stable Watchman.

New York City.—Hal, a mule, killed himself by jumping from a window of the stable at No. 245 West Nineteenth street into the basement of the tenement house at No. 232 West Twentieth street. His neck was broken. The police say he committed suicide on account of grief for a team mate.

Mrs. Kate Hyland, who owns the stable, also was the owner of Hal. The mule was used for trucking purposes, and until six months ago was hitched alongside Dalay. After Dalay died, Hal never went to sleep, according to James Wilson, the night watchman, who says the mule moaned continually, night after night. Wilson went out to get breakfast. Hardly had he left the stable than Hal started to look at a brick partition, and finally he made a space large enough to get his head through. Then he went to a large window at the rear of the stable, and jumped. The distance was only ten feet, but he died almost instantly.

"It was suicide pure and simple," the watchman at the desk of the police station said.

MULE WITH REPUTATION.

Has Killed One Man, and Even Tried for Birds in Trees.

Owensville, Ind.—To the great relief of the drivers of a big lumber firm here, a mule known as Maude, an inveterate kicker, has been placed on the idle list until she can either be sold or given to any person who will take her as a gift. Maude firmly established her reputation as a kicker about a year ago at Evansville when she kicked James Stine, killing him instantly. Clarence Withrow, of this city, received a broken arm when he got too close to Maude's heels.

John Wiseman was the next victim. He tried to get on the gentle side of Maude and received a broken rib. Maude has been known to kick at birds hanging in the trees, and her disposition to kick without due notice has placed her on the retired list. Every mule works in this neighborhood but Maude.

TOLD SUICIDE STORY CRUELLY.

Woke Wife at Night to Describe First Wife's Death—She Gets Divorce.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"He used to wake me up in the night to tell me how his first wife committed suicide," said Mrs. John C. Hemmeter testifying against her husband in a divorce action in Common Pleas Court. Mrs. Hemmeter said the story was "gross" and that at its conclusion her husband would twist a revolver about his finger and say: "One wife is dead, another on her way, but the old general lives."

This was not all. Mrs. Hemmeter testified, nor would she be contradicted by the cross-examination of Hemmeter, who acted as his own attorney. "I wanted my parrot and when we separated asked him to send it to me. He mailed it—dead," she said. The divorce was granted on the ground of cruelty.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous For Salisbury People To Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lameness, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured people right here in Salisbury.

Mrs. Walter E. Nichols, 371 Elizabeth Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have brought me great relief from kidney complaint and I believe they will do as much for other sufferers. I was afflicted with symptoms of kidney disease from childhood but was never troubled seriously until about two years ago. Then my back began to ache severely and last summer I was laid up for two weeks. I used any amount of medicine but found only slight relief. Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at White & Leonard's drug store went at once to the root of my trouble and helped me in every way. I consider this remedy worthy of the highest recommendation.

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Mo. "Although, past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 30 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at John M. Toulson's.

Tortured On a Horse.

"For ten years I couldn't ride a horse without being in torture from piles," writes L. S. Napier, of Raleigh, Ky. "When all doctors and other remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me." Infinitely for Piles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bolls, Fever Sores, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Corns, etc. Guaranteed by John M. Toulson.

A Night Rider's Raid.

The worst night riders are calomel, croton oil or aloes pills. They raid your bed to rob you of rest. Not so with Dr. King's New Life Pills. They never distress or inconvenience, but always cleanse the system, curing Colds, Headache, Constipation, Malaria, etc. at John M. Toulson's.

If you have pains in the back, weak back, or any other indication of a weakened or disordered condition of the kidneys or bladder, you should get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills right away when you experience the least sign of kidney or bladder complaint, but be sure that you get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. We know what they will do for you, and if you will send your name to DeWitt & Co., Chicago, you will receive a free trial box of these kidney and bladder pills. They are sold here by All Druggists.

Get DeWitt's Carbolic Witch Hazel Salve when you ask for it.

There are a great many imitations, but there is just one original. This salve is good for anything where a salve is needed to be used, but it is especially good for Piles. Sold by All Druggists.

Scorches, itching skin, Heals cuts or burns without a scar. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheum, any itching. Doan's Ointment. Any Druggist sells it.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulax relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since."—A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex.

AT BREEZY OCEAN CITY

500 Club Have Enjoyable Outing As Guests Of Salisbury Hosts At Beach.

The entertainment of the members of the Salisbury "500" Club and escorts by Mrs. John D. Showell, of Ocean City, at her cottage Saturday evening and Sunday last was a great success.

The party took the train leaving Salisbury at 7:28 and were swiftly transported to the sands of the beach. Immediately upon arrival at Ocean City the party "hied" to the Cottage of the hostess and received a hearty southern welcome. After the young ladies and gentlemen had removed the cinders and dust they forthwith betook themselves to the pier which the generosity of Mr. J. D. Showell had thrown open for their use and pleasure.

The party was fortunate in having some members of the choir of this city in their midst which added to the pleasure of the trip.

Mrs. Bradley, of this city, entertained the Club at dinner Sunday evening, at the Linmar, and at both places the party was royally entertained.

Sunday evening the young people spent very pleasantly promenading the boardwalk and sitting on the porches of the cottages.

Mrs. E. A. Todd and Mrs. H. S. Todd chaperoned the guests.

Those in the party were Mrs. E. A. Todd, Mrs. H. S. Todd, Mrs. Ernest Ellis, Misses Lettie Leatherbury, Louise Perry, Winnie Trader, Eloise and Ethelyn Ringgold, and guest Miss Urie, of Chestertown, Martha Todd, Margaret Woodcock, Alice and Laura Waller, Florence Grier and Sadie Cooke, Messrs. R. K. Trotter, William B. Tilghman, Ernest Ellis, Thos. Perry, Frank Perry, William Phillips, H. M. Clarke, Claude Dorman, Marvin Evans, W. H. White and Mr. McCanley.

The Club returned Sunday evening on the train which leaves Ocean City at 10:20 P. M.

Prof. Adams' Entertainment.

Prof. Adams, with his Carnival of Novelties, High Class Moving Pictures and Palace of Illusion, has given nightly entertainments in the Town Hall this week. The performances have entertained and delighted the large audiences, as without exception they are, in every particular, the finest of the kind ever seen in this town.

The feats of magic are equal to the best to be seen in the cities, while the juggling of Mr. Rehan amazes even those accustomed to seeing expert juggling. The moving pictures, with which each entertainment closes, are the acme of the moving picture art, and Miss Lacey's rendition of popular songs is not the least enjoyable of the entertainments. There is a complete change of program each evening. —The News, Preston.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of Emory, William Smith, beloved son of Charles and Jennie Smith, who died one year ago today, July, 14th, 1908.

He was just a baby boy,
Mother's love and Father's joy,
Until the Lord above did say
I have called my love today.

Mother's little lamb has gone
To dwell with Him who gave Mother's little darling boy
Is sheltered in the grave.

God needed one more angel child
Midst His shining band
And so he bent with loving smile
And clasped our Emory's hand.

A tear within a father's eye
A mother's breaking heart,
Can only tell the agony
How hard it is to part.

Oh Emory, could you speak to us
And could you live again
Our aching hearts would then be healed
But this we wish in vain.

By Father and Mother.

SNAKES DRINK OIL; SCARE AUTOISTS

Hundreds Take Possession of Turnpike and Grow too Fat to Crawl

ONE GETS IN THE RUNNING GEAR

Driver Tries to Crush It with Car, but Wrangler Climbs Up and Robs Lubricating Cup of Beverage Reptiles Seem to Crave.

Jacksonville, N. J.—Snakes now are so numerous in the Shepton turnpike that automobilists of convivial habits are fighting shy of that thoroughfare. When driving in it they never are sure whether they are in their right minds or suffering from delirium tremens. Rather than be compelled to fight out the question with themselves they are making long detours to escape the snake-infested section. There is no telling how many automobile tours have been abandoned by New Yorkers and others who, as soon as they reached the turnpike and saw it filled with wriggling blacksnakes, ranging from one foot to eight feet in length, decided it was time to quit riding in autos, return home quickly and get front seats on the water wagon.

Until the turnpike was oiled heavily by the township officials there was none of this snake trouble. Seemingly the reptiles think the oil was spread for their refreshment. Anyway, at any hour of the day or night, hundreds of blacksnakes may be seen lying out in the roadway, licking the oil-soaked ground and seeming to be supremely happy. They are at their happiest, however, just after a heavy rain. Then the water lies in puddles on the turnpikes and on top of each puddle is a heavy coating of oil. The snakes go into these and swim around and around. Their mouths are open and as they swim they skim the oil from the top of the water and swallow it. Many of the snakes have become so fat from the oil diet they scarcely can move.

Elston Washburn of Singac does not drink liquor. Therefore, when he sees a snake he knows it is one and not the product of a rum-soaked imagination. He was running his auto in the turnpike this afternoon. Directly in front of him he saw an eight-foot black snake, feeding on the crude oil.

"See me kill that fellow," Washburn said to a companion.

"I'll put on speed and steer for the snake. When his machine was several feet beyond the place where the snake had been feeding, Washburn looked back to see if he had cut it in two. He was surprised to observe it had disappeared.

"Gee! I guess it must be tangled up in the running gear," he said. "It's up to me to get its body out."

Washburn stopped his car and got out. He looked closely, but could not see anything of the snake.

"Hand me that lantern," he said to his friend.

Washburn stuck his head under the machine and heard a hiss close to his ear. He came out in a hurry and then began flashing the light from part to part under the auto. Around the oil box on the rear wheel the automobilist found the snake. Between hisses it licked the oil from the cup on top of the box. Washburn stuck the flashlight close to the reptile's face. That frightened it. It uncoiled and dropped to the roadway. Washburn reversed his machine and ran over it several times before finally killing it. He was exceedingly careful to dodge at least a score of snakes encountered farther along in the turnpike.

RAISES SKUNKS IN SPITE.

Trenton Man's Revenge on Owner of Animal Rendering Plant.

Trenton, N. J.—Because Oscar Neldt refused to move his animal rendering plant on the White Horse road upon the request of a neighbor, Ephraim Rockhill, the latter has started a skunk farm for spite, and the combination of odors in the vicinity is likely to result in the closing of a public road which passes the property.

The skunks are making things unpleasant for Neldt, and he threatens suit. He is likely to keep out of court, however, as for years he has been fighting legal proceedings in order to keep his plant in its present place. Neldt and his employees and Rockhill and his hired men have to go about their places with rubber protectors on their noses.

HORSE CATCHES A THIEF.

Drops Him to Take Hold of Policeman and Piffers Escapes.

Youngstown, Ohio.—Tom, a big horse owned by Richard Probst, 120 West Boardman street, proved his right to the title of a thief alarm, but failed miserably in capturing a would-be pilferer of the Probst chicken coop, because of lack of respect for authority.

Tom is given the run of the yard at night. He noted the stealthy approach of the would-be chicken-stealer. Tom gave chase and seized the coat of the marauder's trousers just as the man was leaping the fence. Tom shook the man, then dropped him. Patrolman Whitney ran up at this moment. Tom's teeth sunk into the policeman's sleeve and remained there, while the thief sped into the distance.

Often The Kidneys Are

Weakened by Over-Work. Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for much sickness and suffering, therefore, if kidney trouble is permitted to continue, serious results are most likely to follow. Your other organs may need attention, but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. A trial will convince you of its great merit.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root, the great kidney and bladder remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable health-restoring properties have been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and don't let a dealer sell you something in place of Swamp-Root—if you do you will be disappointed.

The Ways of Charleston

Where Even Dogs Are Well Treated On Street Cars

Even a dog may ride on the street cars in Charleston, S. C., as many as dogs as three to a man, provided the master happens to be a hunter. The conductors are polite and apparently protest at nothing. If about Christmastime a woman traveler is overtaken with bundles and packages she hands the excess to the conductor who gently deposits both her and her extras in a convenient seat.

The old signs "White" and "Colored" have been done away with. The same car does duty for both races. The old mammoths' effects, often cumbersome, are as those of the white woman.

Saturday evening the mechanics quit an hour earlier than usual and do their marketing and shopping for the week. By common consent the whites undertake no shopping at these hours, so that King street and the market show a preponderance of colored people.

As house servants the negro women seem to be efficient. They are proud of long service and "their families," are deferential and speak softly.

If the service of a tailor or a shoemaker is required consult with the chambermaid. She will assume the responsibility of a chaperon. You settle your bill with her. If you are curious you may learn that she has a friend or relative whom she favors. All the little shoe shops and tailoring establishments are run by negroes. Many milliners and dress makers are colored, an old friend says, "but then they are not so very dark."

The visitor commenting on the absence of street loafers is answered by the industrious carpenter: "If a man is loafing and hanging around you just naturally suppose some one has to pay for his keep, so the policeman asks him 'Why?' If he don't give a good reason they put him on the chain gang. Mostly if they don't work they keep out of sight."

The canning of oysters is to one who has never seen it of interest. The vessel in which the oysters are one oyster enough to make the measure full and complete.

Checks are cashable at 6 o'clock if the holder so wishes. This method is preferred by the management. By morning the money is spent and the worker has to provide for the coming day's needs. With the former way of weekly payments it was found that too much money in one sum meant idleness for more than Sunday. Monday morning's force was never up to the mark in numbers.

After shucking the little cove oyster gets another bath and is put into cans by nimble fingers, and from this on the process is mechanical. After being soldered the cans are steam cooked, labelled, boxed and prepared for market.

Executed by Burning Coal.

Curious and little known facts about the house fire were mentioned by Mr. E. H. Blake, addressing the Surveyors Institution last evening on warming and ventilation. Fires were at one time a great luxury, he said, and even the right to use the fire had been bequeathed. Thus the will of one Richard Byrchet (1516) read:

"I will yt the sayd Nell my wyfe shal have ye chamber she lyes in and lyberte at ye yerl in the house; all yese thyngs shal she have so long as she ys wido."

Coal, continued Mr. Blake, was first imported into London at the end of the thirteenth century, but the smoke produced by burning it in improperly constructed grates caused such a prejudice against it that in 1306 a law was passed making it a capital offence to burn coal in the city. The Tower records give details of a man's trial and execution for the offence.

Ivory a Government Monopoly.

There are doubtless still places in Central Africa where money may be made in trading ivory and other things, but at the present time these places are few. In British East Africa ivory is now a Government monopoly and you may not trade in ivory.

His Fiongsay

"Ain't he the swell thing, though!" exclaimed the girl with the genuine coral necklace. "Me for him. I'm just crazy over brown eyes."

"You're crazy anyway," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "I didn't see nothin' particular about him. I think his fiongsay was awful classy."

The girl with the genuine coral necklace tilted her nose. "That embroidery on her waist was the cheapest kind," she said. "I seen some like it for 11 cents a yard. How do you know that she's his fiongsay?"

"What's he doin'?" asked the girl with the lopsided bang. "He's a fiongsay," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "Course he is."

"I guess she'd like to be, all right," admitted the girl with the genuine coral necklace. "She won't let him get away from her if she can help it. It tickled me to death the way she acted."

"How?"

"You wasn't watchin'. She kep' me pullin' out the stock an' cuttin' off samples for about ten minutes. She didn't know what she did want. First she thought she'd take the pink an' then she didn't know but she liked the blue better. Then she'd ask him, 'what he thought about it. He looked at me an' smiled, as much as to say, 'Ain't this fierce?' I guess she'd have pawed over everything on the shelves, but she happened to look up an' seen him lookin' at me, an' then I noticed she made up her mind right away. 'I'll take ten yards of the blue,' she says. 'Charge it.' Then she gave me the address an' flipped out like she had to catch a car."

"Did he go along with her?" asked the girl with the lopsided bang.

"He had to," replied the girl with the genuine coral necklace.

"I s'pose so," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "Poor fellow! I bet he'd have liked to stay an' make goo-goo eyes at you. Did she take him by the ear?"

"No," replied the girl with the genuine coral necklace. "She hooked her umbrella in the collar of his coat an' dragged him off backwards."

"Well, I don't blame her," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "All I wonder at is that she was foolish enough to let you wait on her. She might have known she was makin' trouble for herself."

"She ought to have got you," said the girl with the genuine coral necklace.

"That's right," agreed the girl with the lopsided bang. "If she had got me I'd known better, even if I had your fatal beauty."

"Known better than what?"

"Known better than to come between her and the man she loved. I wouldn't do a thing like that, honest. I'll bet the marriage will be broken off now."

"That'll be too bad," said the girl with the genuine coral necklace.

"You don't seem to feel bad about it," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "You that she's got to return all the presents an' then pine away an' maybe go into a decline. What do you care? Say, I wouldn't be as heartless as you are for anything. How would you like it yourself?"

"How can I help it?" protested the girl with the genuine coral necklace. "I ain't to blame for him lookin' at me."

"No, I s'pose not," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "Nobody can't help it. The only way I see would be for you to go up to the toy department an' get one of them false faces."

"I would only I'm afraid Mr. Tapes would make a roar about it," said the girl with the genuine coral necklace.

"No, he wouldn't," said the girl with the lopsided bang. "I heard him talkin' to a friend of his that come into the store the other day an' he said he thought it would be an improvement."—Chicago News.

A New Cure.

A doctor whose practice lies mostly in the country districts was recently called to attend a plover's boy, whom he found to be suffering from whooping cough. Among his instructions he told the mother to "put some ice in a bag and tie it around the boy's head." Next day he called again and was met at the door by the girl, who, in answer to his query, replied, "Aye, Joe's a heap better the day, but the mice are a' doid."—Dundee Weekly News.

Oldest Treaty.

The oldest text of a real treaty extant is that of the convention between Ramesses II., King of Egypt, and the prince of Kheta, which embraces the articles of a permanent offensive and defensive alliance, with clauses providing for the extradition of emigrants, deserters, criminals and skilled workmen. This treaty was drawn up in the fourteenth century B. C., and is the earliest record that we have of any international transaction.

Morocco's Trading Centres.

The principal trading centres of Morocco are Tangier, Agadir, Casablanca, Rabat, Safi, Tituan, Mazagan, Ceuta, and, in the interior, the cities of Fez and Marrakech. The coast town of Larache is also coming more to the front commercially.

Defective Culverts.

The sands of little culverts may be found covered with loose or broken planks. They are a fearful nuisance and a source of danger all the time. The driver must bring his horses to a practical standstill before attempting to cross with a load, and the old family horse is trotting along in a comfortable mood, he is startled by the sound of a load being put on a culvert, and the danger is averted.

Liberalism of Race.

Nearly all birds have the faculty of hibernating. Their hibernation, however, is not perfect. That is to say, that when the warm days occur in the middle of winter they wake up, together with the insects which are their food. Still, there is a true sleep, with very low rate of pulse, heart action and respiration. Probably they would endure immersion in water for an hour or two without drowning, as other hibernators have been found to do.

BAR STIFF BRIMMED STRAWS

Governors of Stock Exchange Rule Them Off Floor—Many Smashed On Heads of Violators.

New York City—Merry Widow straw hats, with rims which cut like a saw when violently inserted into one's features, have been barred on Cutting a Dash on the Stock Exchange the floor of the Exchange, and careless brokers who neglect to look at the bulletin board and abide by the ruling thereon suffer the loss of more or less valuable head coverings, members who knew of the rule giving the chairman every assistance in enforcing it by pouncing with unholly glee upon the violators and smashing the hats into shapeless masses of straw.

The reason for the new rule is several minor accidents. In rushing into the Exchange with the various posts wearers of hats with stiff brims have cut other members, some quite painfully, and as the easiest way out of the matter the rule was voted.

Hence the market for Panamas took an upward turn in the vicinity of Wall street.

DYING, WROTE IN DIARY.

Euried by Snowalide, Settler Starves to Death in Cabin.

Silverton, Col.—A diary found beside the body of Louis Fleitas in his cabin, fourteen miles east of Silverton, told in a few sentences the pathetic story of his death and revealed that he had lived for at least three weeks buried under a snowslide, through which he was unable to dig.

Here is the story the diary tells: "December 13—I have been taken suddenly ill and am in great pain."

"December 16—I am getting worse."

"December 18—A snowslide covered my cabin to-day."

"December 25—Christmas Day. I am too weak to dig out of the slide, and I can't get to town."

"January 1—I believe I am dying."

"January 2—I am too weak to get up."

"January 3—I can't."

On January 5 the page bore only a few unintelligible scratches, and the dates following were untouched.

Fleitas died from starvation, there being absolutely no food found in the Lime Creek cabin, where his body lay on the rude bed. Fleitas had lived in this section for twenty-five years. His long absence from town finally started the search that resulted in the discovery of the body.

THIS JAIL A FRONT PARLOR.

Only Prisoner Carries the Key to His Cell When Visiting.

Liberty, Mo.—Mr. Parsons of the State Board of the Society for the Friendless, who does prison work, arrived here to work among the county prisoners. He looked up the Sheriff and was informed that the only prisoner was a negro serving a sentence for vagrancy, and that the prisoner was out visiting.

Mr. Parsons explained that he wanted to reform the man and was informed that the negro attended church and mid-week prayer meeting and did not need any religion.

"This is the way Clay county takes care of her prisoners, treats them so well that they would not escape for any money," said the Sheriff. The jail is one of the old style and each cell has a key eight inches long. Negro Marshall, the prisoner, carries it with him and explains that it is the key to his "office."

"TALCUM BABY" KILLED.

Tragic End of Child Made Famous in Advertisements.

Chicago.—Climbing upon the seat of an elevated car and placing his hands trustfully against what he imagined to be the window pane, Paul Maurice Monfort, four years old, known as the "Talcum baby," plunged to the stone sidewalk, thirty-five feet below, and died two hours later. The child's face is familiar to hundreds of thousands of persons, his photograph being used extensively in advertisements of talcum powder and safety razors.

The boy had just boarded the train, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Achilles W. Monfort. The frenzied mother was carried to the next station by the train. When told that her boy was dead she had to be restrained from doing herself bodily injury.

Offers $1 a Head for Porcupines.

Wilkes Barre, Pa.—A war of extermination was declared by Col. R. Bruce Ricketts, of this city, against the porcupines in his forest preserve on North Mountain, which are destroying the only virgin tract of hemlock trees in this part of the State. Col. Ricketts offered to pay $1 a head for every porcupine killed in his preserve.

JOHN W. WILLING.

A Prominent Citizen Of Nanticoke Passes Away.

The Democratic Party lost one of its most energetic and ardent workers in the death of Hon. John W. Willing, of Nanticoke, at his home, from an attack of the heart, Monday. Mr. Willing had been having some slight trouble with his heart for some time past, and in the past week suffered from a severe attack on Thursday but was relieved by his physician.

On Monday afternoon he felt some trouble at his heart while at the barn, but soon after rallied. About five o'clock Monday he was seized by another attack from which he never recovered, the last spark of life being extinguished about 6.45 Monday evening.

Mr. Willing was born and reared at Nanticoke in 1840, and succeeded his father in the mercantile business there, where he had been very extensively engaged in canning, general merchandising and farming.

Mr. Willing was one of those who took an active part in the organization of a Savings Bank of which he was vice president at the time of his death. He took a great interest in politics in the county and state, and served his county in the Legislature of Maryland in 1885, being a member of the committee on Chesapeake Bay and its Tributaries, which framed the oyster legislation of that session. He received the nomination for House of Delegates and was elected in 1907, and served again as a member of the same committee.

Mr. Willing was a man of fine appearance, eloquent address and gentlemanly manners. He was a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal Church, a member of the Improved Order of Hephazaphs and the Ancient Order of the United Workmen.

Mr. Willing is survived by a widow and five children, viz: Lena, Carrie, Ethel, Ora and W. Harrison Willing. His funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock.

A FINE, BIG CROWD

Orderly And Well Behaved Attend The Opening Race Of Fair Association.

The much talked of race between Dry Dock and Gen. Mack came off on the track of the Wicomico Fair Association on Wednesday of this week. Much to the surprise of many who had put their faith in Gen. Mack, Dry Dock won in a walkover. Both horses were cheered and cheered again as they were brought on the track. The first heat started off with Gen. Mack at the pole, Dry Dock however taking same away before the first eighth was reached. Gen. Mack however regained his place and won the heat in 1.14, the fastest heat paced during the race.

In the second heat General Mack kept the pole until the quarter pole was reached at the half. Dry Dock then swept past General Mack as if the latter was standing still and made a gap that General Mack was unable to close winning the heat easily in 1.16. The third heat was a clinch. Dry Dock was driven to the pole, kept it for the entire mile and virtually paced away from the horse from Marlboro. He did the mile in 2.10.

It was after this heat that Allan appeared on the stand, representing W. O. Hall, the owner, and drew General Mack out of the race. The $8000 purse and 60 per cent of the total receipts of the gates, grandstand and quarter stretch go to the winner D. C. Armstrong.

In the judges' stand were Starter Joseph Davidson, of Wilmington; Judge R. E. Biggs, of Arlington; Purcell Horsey, of Crisfield; Dr. George R. Collier, of Salisbury; Timers, E. Lee LeCompte, of Cambridge; A. W. Taylor, of Parkley, and Dr. G. F. Floyd, of Bridgetown, Va. Mr. Frank Barnes, of Princess Anne, the final stakeholder, was on hand and presented the handsome purse to the winner. Mr. N. J. Wimbrow, of Whaleyville, was clerk.

Results In Other Races.

The other races were won as follows:
2:30 Trot—Purse $150.
Baby Lou, Willie G. Wimbrow, Snow Hill, 2:33
Richard Prince, S. H. Richardson, Salisbury, 2:32
Ruby Wilkes, J. D. C. Armstrong, Salisbury, 2:32
Pansy, W. J. Taylor, Jr., Princess Anne, 1:11
Quince Annie, Thos. Savage, Berlin, 4:40
Time, 2:45, 2:31, 2:30
2:18 Pace and 2:17 Trot Mixed—Purse, $150.
Judge Linkwood, W. T. Hudson, Selbyville, Del., 2:33
Little George, Jas. Tyson, Princess Anne, 1:11
Peter Case, D. C. Armstrong, Princess Anne, 2:32
Time, 2:29, 2:31, 2:33

The race was witnessed by probably the largest crowd Salisbury has ever seen, and despite talk and rumors of possible trouble on the grounds, due to the intense feeling of the backers of the two horses, a better natured or better behaved bunch was never gotten together. The absence of drunkenness on the grounds was remarkable in a crowd which is estimated at over 10,000.

This race was the first try out on the new track built here by the Fair People and is regarded as a good opening for the Association.

Salisbury is easily reached from points all over the Peninsula and should be able to draw large crowds from all sections. It is understood that the management of the Fair are going to put forth strong efforts to bring good, clean attractions here during Fair week.

FOR 7,000,000 OYSTERS

Huge Project In Maryland Now Nearing Completion Near Ocean City.

With the completion Thursday of the great dam across Sinepuxent Bay, below Ocean City, the promoters of the project by which 60,000 acres of barren bottoms are to be converted into fertile oyster fields, see their plans nearing fruition.

A canal across the narrow strip of sandy beach that separates the bay from the ocean is so nearly completed that in a few days the salt water from the ocean may be made to flow into the bay. It is estimated that these bottoms will produce a crop of 7,000,000 oysters a year, or one fourth the oyster output of the world. The company which has carried out the project in the face of great obstacles is to receive 30,000 acres of the land; while the State will have the other 40,000 acres at its disposal.

Notice.

There will be services D. V., in Spring Hill Parish, on Sunday next, July 25th, as follows:
Quintico—Sunday School, 9 A. M.
Spring Hill—Sermon and Holy Communion, 10:30 A. M.
Quintico—Evening Prayer and sermon, 8 P. M. Franklin B. Adkins, Rector.

—Mr. J. Alvin Canaan, of Bristol, Tenn., is spending a week or two with friends in Salisbury.

HURLER OF BAD EGGS

To Be Arrested. Warrant Out For One Man Who Bombed Minister At Cambridge.

Cambridge is still excited over the recent egg-throwing of Rev. Ralph T. Coursey, pastor of Zion Methodist Episcopal Church. A warrant is to be issued for the arrest of a man believed to have been one of the principal offenders. The man has apparently gotten wind of the fact and is said to have left town for the time being.

State's Attorney Andrews was in conversation with the pastor when the latter's house was bombed and he at once gave chase. He would doubtless have caught one or more of the miscreants had he not suddenly run into a barbed wire fence, on which he hung while the assailants of ministerial dignity got away.

Blue Sunday Laws.

It is the pastor's activity in enforcing the Sunday blue laws that started the trouble. From his pulpit he pilloried the town's police force with a reference to "drumsticks dressed up like men." He called upon Mayor W. H. LeCompte and demanded that the latter enforce the laws against selling tobacco, soda water and newspapers on Sunday.

The Mayor promptly did as requested and last Sunday signs were not to be had anywhere for love or money. Swains and sweethearts went without the customary Sunday evening soda water and the colored supplements of the Sunday newspapers failed to adorn the newstands.

Druggist Was Incensed.

Druggist Frank Naylor, of the firm of Wolf & Naylor, was so incensed at the enforcement of the minister's demands that he sent a negro on Sunday to Mr. Coursey's house to ask the pastor for a permit to sell a two cent stamp. The latter replied that this action was an insult, and intimated that Mr. Naylor would hear from him again in a way that would not be pleasant.

"I am in the second year of my pastorate," said Rev. Mr. Coursey, "and I do not propose to have a gang of hoodlums drive me out."
The sympathy of the community is with Mr. Coursey so far as the egg-throwing episode is concerned although a large element does not agree with his ardor in enforcing the blue laws.

Alleged "Eggers" Arrested.

Cambridge, Md., July 23.—Omar Willey, a printer of this city, and J. Alvey Branner, proprietor of the Cambridge Bowling Company, were arrested about noon today on a writ sworn out before Justices W. H. Shenderson by State's Attorney W. N. Andrews, charging them with unlawfully throwing rotten eggs to and against the house of Rev. Ralph T. Coursey on July 19, 1909, at Cambridge. The State's Attorney was not ready to try the case and the young men gave bond for their appearance next Thursday in the sum of $300.

CAMP LIFE BEGUN

Religious Services Out In The Open.

The camping season in Wicomico County began yesterday with the opening of Willards camp. From now on covering a period of more than four weeks hundreds of tenters will worship in the woods. Work on tents and grounds has been in progress for several weeks, and many improvements over last season is the result. Preparations have been made to accommodate large crowds at the three leading camps—Willards, Hebron and Parsonsburg. There will be more tents at each of these camps than last year. At Hebron the ground will be lighted by electricity, which will be quite an improvement in camp life.

Willards Camp began on Friday, July 23; Hebron will begin Friday, July 30; Parsonsburg, Friday, August 6. The big days at each camp will be the first Sunday, when excursion trains will be run from all points on the B. O. and A. Railway.

Death Of Mrs. John L. Coates.

Mrs. John L. Coates, of Wilmington, Del., died Saturday of tuberculosis, aged 47 years. She was the daughter of the late Wm. P. Morris, of near Fruitland and has resided in Wilmington since her marriage, nearly twenty years ago.

She had many friends in this county who knew her as Miss Nellie Morris. The following are her brothers and sisters: Miss Mary and Emma Morris, John E. and Jacob Morris of Fruitland, Mrs. Leroy A. Cox, Sewall, New Jersey and Mrs. Edward B. Lanford, Pocomoke City. Beside her husband she leaves the following children to mourn the loss of a mother: Miss Bertha and Masters Harold and Stanford Coates. Funeral from her late home Tuesday afternoon July 26th, interment in Mount Salem Cemetery.

HEALTH OFFICER TRUITT

Makes Timely Warning On Sanitary Conditions In The City.

The bulk of summer Typhoid is still due. Prompt action will prevent a large amount of sickness and death. Will you help prevent the spread of this disease by cleaning your premises and cutting weeds on the same and if your neighbors premises are in an unsanitary condition report at once to the Health Officer for investigation. The draining of Lake Humphreys is a fertile field for Typhoid and other diseases, as vegetation is growing rapidly and grass and weeds are over two feet tall in some places with no chance of destroying them unless the Lake be covered with water. All weeds in vacant lots must be cut or they will be out by order of the Health Officer and property owners will pay the expense. Many cases of Typhoid Fever are caused by polluted water, due to the carelessness of some people who have Typhoid allowing the fecal matter to be thrown upon the ground before being disinfected and this will be carried by rain into the drinking water supply and may infect many people. If you are suspicious of your drinking water and wish same examined take a sample in a clean bottle to Health Officer and he will have it analyzed.

Dr. C. H. Truitt,
Health Officer.

HELP FOR THE BLIND

An Institution To Be Established In Baltimore For Them.

It is intended to establish an institution or workshop in Baltimore City, where those who are so unfortunate as to be deprived of sight may have an opportunity to learn to become self-supporting, and occupy their time, so that they may escape that terrible feeling of loneliness which those must suffer who are without occupation and without sight.

The State has appropriated Five Thousand Dollars per year for the advancement of this work for two years, and if enough can be raised from other sources for a plant, further aid may confidently be expected.

Fifty blind persons are now being trained in broom and mattress-making, chair-caning, weaving, knitting, crocheting, basketry and hammock work. A classroom has been opened in connection with the shop where articles made by the blind are sold without commission.

It is estimated that Fifty Thousand Dollars will pay for and thoroughly equip the old "Orchestra Club" building, Peace and Payette Streets, Baltimore, which has been secured for this purpose.

Twelve Thousand Dollars has already been pledged and Mr. Geo. W. Connor, Manager of the Maryland Workshop for the blind, himself a blind man is on the Eastern Shore in the interest of the movement. He will be in this community shortly.

Excursion Party Spend Night On Steamer Virginia.

More than 400 of the excursionists from Salisbury to Hooper's Island Camp-meeting last Sunday, were compelled to spend the night on the steamer, Virginia, although on the return trip they were within two miles of Salisbury. The steamer was scheduled to reach Salisbury at 10 P. M., and was running on time, when off Quaker's old wharf, Capt. Johnson noticed the three-masted schooner Kimball, lying aground directly across the narrow channel so that it was impossible for the steamer to pass. There was nothing else to do but to tie up and wait for high water, so that the schooner could float. About a score or more of the party were brought to the wharf by the gasoline launch, Bebecc, and safely landed. All the state rooms were thrown open to the passengers, and they were made as comfortable as possible. The steamer reached her wharf at 5 o'clock Monday morning. The steamer carried 640 passengers to the camp, 318 of whom were from Salisbury.

Death Of Emory Arvey.

Emory Arvey, a young man residing near Parsonsburg, died of tetanus early Monday morning at the Peninsula General Hospital, here. The young man was brought to the Hospital about noon on Sunday, and his condition was such that the physicians had little hope of his recovery. Quantities of antitoxin were used, but had no effect.

More than a week ago Arvey, while playing with a cat rifle, shot himself through one of his legs. Some attention was paid to the wound, but no luck was developed on Sunday, when he was hurried to the Hospital. It was too late to save him.

POULTRY

GOOD POULTRY HOUSE.

Can Be Made Either a Very Costly or a Very Cheap Affair.

As a great many farmers take the hen fever when eggs are high, I have with present a pen sketch which will be of service to some one who is contemplating the building of a poultry-house in the spring.

The ground plan is 15 feet by 30 feet, and is divided into parts each 15 feet by 10 feet.

The compartment on the right is used as a winter roosting and laying place.

The center as a scratching shed in the winter and a shelter from rain and sun during the summer.

The room at the left is used during the winter as a place of exercise and in which to feed mash and to water the fowl. This room also contains the dust boxes and where the feed is stored.

A, A, A, in the dotted squares represent the windows or their location in the front of the house. B, B, is sided up solid to the line running from B to B one and one-half feet high.

The line running from C to C is the top of a four-foot high poultry netting which runs the entire length of the house.

There is a drop curtain arranged in each room to come down next to this wire in stormy weather or cold nights.

From C, C, to top of the house is planked up solid except the windows, as shown in A, A, A, D, D, D, the nest boxes under the dropping board N.

There are two rows of nests— one facing the scratching shed, the other facing the right-hand room. A trap nest may be arranged very conveniently here.

E is a drop curtain in front of the roosts in the winter department, which is to be let down at night. F is the roosting poles in the winter quarters.

G is the roosting poles in the summer roosting quarters.

H, H, the doors of poultry netting. I the little door that leads from the scratching shed to the end room.

J, cut straw scattered on the floor of the scratching shed in which to scatter wheat, rye, oats and corn.

K, the dust box.

L, drinking fountain.

M, M, M, the floor, which should be of sand and gravel.

N, the dropping board in winter roosting department.

A house of these dimensions should be nine feet in front and seven feet tall in the rear. It may be made of any stuff at hand, or to suit the builder.

It can be made a very costly affair, or it may be gotten up very reasonably.

STARTING A FLOCK.

Should the Beginner Buy a Breeding Pen or Eggs for Hatching.

While attending the Maine State Poultry Exhibition, I was asked by a man who was contemplating starting a flock in the spring which was the better way—to buy a breeding pen or to buy eggs for hatching. This question is puzzling a good many at this time. There are points in favor of each course.

To get a start either way with birds of reasonably good quality one should consider that he must invest at least $10. He can spend this and get two sittings of eggs from prize winning stock, and if he waits until the stock is on range he should be reasonably sure of sixteen chicks. These chicks, with proper care and feeding, would most likely develop into birds superior to any he might get from a $10 trio, for the mating would doubtless be better done by an amateur. In many cases the surplus males would be of quality to sell for sufficient to pay the initial cost of eggs. Before beginning with any breed one should make a sufficient study of the breed to be able to judge with reasonable accuracy of the merits and value of his birds, so as to sell understandingly.

For a beginning with little money to spend it would seem safer to purchase a trio or more of good, representative birds, and grow into the fancier step by step by selection and grading up. In this way he will better understand his business, and from a small flock, by buying other hens for brooders and prolonging his hatching season, he can raise a considerable number of chicks, some of which should be superior to their sire and dams, which can be used for still further improvement the following year.

Good Dry Mash.

A mixture of bran, shorts, and corn meal in equal parts kept in the kitchen makes the preparation of a mash for laying hens easy. While the mash is cooking throw all table waste, vegetable and apple parings into a kettle and boil till done, season with salt and pepper, and mix with the mash. There are no meat scraps left a teaspoonful of beef scraps for each hen every other day.

Value of Bokhara Clover.

Bokhara clover is not cultivated to any extent in this country as yet, though it deserves to be. As a leguminous plant it grows well in a very good plant for renewing the fertility of worn-out exhausted farmland for it will grow where other clovers refuse to grow at all. It is used for planting along railway cuts and embankments to prevent washing of the soil. It is a very hardy plant, and is a valuable forage.

LID OFF KISSING IN PARKS

Love Open and Above Board What the Police Superintendent Likes in Pittsburg.

Pittsburg.—When it comes to kissing, Pittsburg now is a wide open town. The lid was taken off by Superintendent Thomas A. McQuade today. He thinks that if any fellow can kiss a girl, in public or in private, it is his duty to do it. Free trade and reciprocity in the kissing line is the policy of the McQuade administration.

"Let them kiss their heads off and give them plenty of room in which to do it," the Superintendent said in an order issued to the police force. "How can a fellow court a girl if he can't kiss her? Courtship without kisses is like rhubarb, pie without sugar. I'll suspend any policeman who arrests any man or woman who is guilty of nothing more serious than kissing. I don't care whether the kissing is done in the parks or out of the parks. Instead of arresting these young folk, put more benches in the park and increase the accommodations. Deal with this question from an entirely human point of view. If a fellow wants to take his best girl to the park and there give to her a little squeeze and a few kisses, why, the more power to both of them, I say. I'm their friend. Down with the calamity howler who looks upon the soul kiss as a germ breeder. My platform is more light, more benches and more kissing in the parks. I believe that platform is a winner. The folk who howl against kissing are in the minority. Give to me the kissers in this community, and I can sweep every election precinct against any anti-kissing ticket that may be put up. Give to me the kissers in this country, and there won't be a doubtful State. I'll have them all. The Electoral College will be unanimous for Thomas A. McQuade."

McQuade thinks more harm is done by forcing spooning couples to seek secluded places in which to kiss than by permitting them to kiss in the open. He thinks it outrageous that in years gone by young folk have been arrested and locked up for kissing and hugging in the parks.

"I'm going to make our parks popular," McQuade continued, "and from this time on I'm the guardian angel of the kissers. If a girl comes to me and tells me her fellow won't kiss her, he'd better look out. There is such a thing as an inquiring hue and cry."

HUMAN SACRIFICE IN RUSSIA.

Police of Perm Investigating "Sect of the Crimson God."

St. Petersburg, Russia.—Dispatches from Perm, European Russia, say the local police have begun an investigation into the "Sect of the Crimson God," the members of which are accused of human sacrifices and various other horrible practices. Repeated disappearances of people in the region where the members of the sect dwell drew suspicion to the organization, which worships a red wooden idol colored, according to the statements of the country people, with human blood.

The police have located a secret grave containing the mutilated body of a man supposed to have been sacrificed, and they expect to find others.

The Ural region, of which Perm is the center, is a breeding ground for many fanatical cults. It is a meeting place of the Pagan tribes of Asia, as well as persons who flee from Russia on account of religious persecution. These refugees have lived for centuries in the dense forests of the district, and their beliefs have developed along the most fanatical lines.

PETRIFIED HEADCHEASE.

Forgotten in Well for Years, Turns Into Stone-like Substance.

Marine, Ill.—In scattering the matted hair brought up in cleaning an old well, Leo F. Wentz found a peculiar-looking stone.

Prior to becoming a drink dispenser, Leo conducted a meat stand at Union Market in St. Louis. This rock looked to him very much like that German delicacy known as "schwarzwurst."

He broke the formation with an axe, and it proved to be a petrified headchease. It had probably been hung in the well years ago to cool and fell in, the well being one of the "oldest in town."

All the component parts of the "cheese" are distinctly outlined in natural colors.

The stone is now ornamenting Leo's lunch counter, and one after another the customers make a slash at their favorite dish, only to find that they are up against a hard proposition.

CARRIER PIGEON A THIEF.

Entered on Station House Blotter as Purveyor of Gold Chain.

Milwaukee, Wis.—A carrier pigeon known as "A. A. 66,886," was placed on the police station blotter as guilty of a series of thefts in an exclusive apartment building.

The bird had been around the court for days entering houses and helping itself to food and articles for a nest, including a gold chain.

Man with Longest Name Drowns.

Pedunc, Ky.—Death by drowning came to the man who is said to have had the longest name in the world. The body was found in Perkins Creek, near Paducah.

His full name was Arthur Hugh Thomas T. De Witt Talma Hardin Eddy Lane Arland Lila Marion Branch Sam Jones Pigg Reuben Walker Chiles. He was the son of the Rev. R. C. Chiles, Superintendent of the Rescue Mission of Paducah, and each name was for some preacher of note.

Short Sermons For a Sunday Half-Hour

Theme:

STRENGTH OUT OF WEAKNESS

By Edwin Whittier Caswell, D. D.

Text: "Out of weakness were made strength."—Hebrews, xii. 34.

The one hundred thousand spectators witnessing the Olympic at London were filled with wonder when they saw a mere boy from New York City, the smallest of the fifty-five competitors, win the great Marathon race. Little was better than his; quality than quantity. That the unseen forces of will, courage, purpose and faith are mightier than visible prowess was proven when David met Goliath, when the Japanese defeated the Russians, and when John Hayes won the twenty-six mile race.

Consciousness of weakness means preparation, discipline, progress and development, and these mean victory. Necessity is called the mother of invention; therefore if the young man of wealth feels no necessity he will fall of the greatest achievement.

Carnegie and Rockefeller struggled up from the weakness of poverty to the summit of wealth and influence. Dante, Ruskin and Carlyle fought against the weakness of bodily ill till they attained the climax of intellectual greatness. The handicap of blindness enabled Milton, of England, Milburn and Mathewson, of Scotland, to behold visions of thought and beauty beyond their fellows.

Hardships, deprivations and great difficulties in early life lifted Lincoln and Grant into their loftiest seats of power. Prisons have palaces proved to minds like Paul and Bunyan, where they were inspired to produce pen pictures that have delighted and blessed mankind in every land. Is it not a sublime truth that there is a pathway upward for every one? No wonder that Paul gloried in his infirmities, persecutions and distresses, for he exclaimed: "When I am weak, then am I strong, for the power of Christ will rest upon me."

The little child becomes strong because it stretches out its hand to the parent. The father is nobler when he bears his child out of danger into safety. So the sinful and troubled soul that stretches out its hands of faith to the Heavenly Father feels underneath the everlasting arms and nestles in the bosom of forgiveness and fatherhood; and who shall say God is not happier and mightier because of His embrace of helplessness?

Do you feel crushed by the law of "the survival of the fittest," or that "the weakest go to the wall"? Heaven's law of grace creates fitness and meekness for the highest inheritances. Do you agonize in the convulsions of pain? It is the Divine Hand leading you to greater riches, as earthquakes reveal the gold in the rended rocks.

If God in nature can produce the diamond from the black carbon, the white lily from the black earth and bulb, the great tree from the tiny seed, He can bring purity out of sinfulness, strength out of weakness and heaven out of hell. His power will overcome the soul that trusts in Him to enable the dangerous hereditary tendencies, untoward environments and unspeakable difficulties, so that you may become the author of opportunities and the creator of circumstances.

And though at last, like John Brown, you go down to ignominious death, your liberty loving soul will go "marching on" through all millenniums, in blessed companionship with Him who arose from the weakness of the manger, the cross and the sepulchre to become Conqueror and Ruler of all worlds.

If we put our little crosses at the foot of His great cross He will lift them up until they become transfigured into crowns of glory for evermore.

Fountains of Happiness.

If self be denied for the good of others, we receive immensely more than we bestow; we multiply our avenues of enjoyment; we are refreshed and gladdened by every stream and rill of beneficent, kind office and genial feeling that flows from our abundance or trickles from our scanty resources; we have as many fountains of happiness as there are hearts and lives to whose happiness we minister.

—Andrew Peabody.

Taking No Thought.

It is one thing to be thought for want of thought, and another to take no thought from suffering thought, whose flower is confidence. The one way is the lovely way of God in the birds, the other his lovelier way in his men and women.—George MacDonald.

Flames Not Needed.

God discovers the martyr and confessor without the trial of flames and tortures, and will hereafter send many to the reward of actions which they had never the opportunity of performing.—Addison.

Patriotism.

In peace, patriotism really consists only in this: that every one sweeps before his own door, minds his own business, also learns his own lesson, that it may be well with him in his own house.—Goethe.

Comforting.

Ellis—I'm to be married to-morrow and I'm terribly nervous. Stella—I suppose there always is a chance of a man getting away up to the last minute.—Brooklyn Life.

Times Have Changed.

"Was Cressens a very rich man, pa?" "For his time he was, but to-day he wouldn't be considered worth mentioning."—Judge.

MORE PINKHAM CURES

Added to the Long List due to This Famous Remedy.

Camden, N.J.—"It is with pleasure that I add my testimonial to your already long list—hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of this valuable medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered from terrible headaches, pain in my back and right side, was tired and nervous, and so weak I could hardly stand. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to health and made me feel like a new person, and it shall always have my praise."—Mrs. W. P. VALENTINE, 202 Lincoln Avenue, Camden, N. J.

Gardiner, Me.—"I was a great sufferer from a female disease. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me in three months."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 38, Gardiner, Me.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It surely has cured many cases of female ills, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, indigestion, dizziness, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

SANTARY CONDITIONS—ACT IN TIME.

We wish to call especial attention to the communication published in another part of today's issue of the ADVERTISER, of the Health Officer, Dr. Chas. R. Traitt, in reference to the precautions necessary to be taken to avoid an epidemic of typhoid fever. As stated by Dr. Traitt it is the duty of every citizen to keep his premises in a sanitary condition, and also report at once to the Health Officer any unsanitary condition in his neighborhood. There is but little use in keeping one's own premises clean and sanitary if the next door neighbor permits conditions to exist which will breed disease. If the adjoining premises are not kept clean and sanitary by the owners then the fact should be reported to the Health Department at once.

A garbage system is badly needed in this town and the Mayor and City Council would be doing the public a great favor if they could make arrangements to have one installed. If possible to finance the matter out of the City's fund, we believe that a great many of the property owners would welcome a cart to haul away garbage and refuse, on the basis of paying so much a week—a sufficient sum to bear the entire expense of the system installed. There is but little typhoid here at present and the best and safest way is to adopt measures which will keep it out.

There is nothing more important than the health of the community and the taxpayers either of the county or city will not object to the use of the public funds to put into force necessary regulations and precautions to prevent an outbreak of disease. Salisbury is no longer a little town or village in which a slight neglect of sanitary conditions can be overlooked, but has grown to a size that demands a systematic and scientific handling of these conditions. It is better to take hold of the question in time than wait and learn by bitter experience that something must be done.

DORCHESTER COUNTY FIGHT.

One of the hottest contests ever witnessed in Dorchester County—and she has passed through several hot contests—will be settled in the primaries there today. The main fight is over the judgeship, with three contestants in the field. There have been rumors of the use of whiskey and rum as well as hints of direct corruption of voters in that county.

The Judgeship—especially the Chief Judge—of this state should be free from any taint or suspicion of corruption or improper influences to secure his nomination or election, and it is to be hoped that some of the contestants for the high honor of judge will allow himself to be drawn into a campaign where corrupt methods are used. The Democratic party has taken a stand in favor of the purity of the ballot and the Democrats of Dorchester should see to it that the party lives up to its principles in the primary fight today.

There has been a great howl and outcry all over the State about Republican corruption and bribery. The Republicans have claimed that the law was only framed to prevent bribery and corruption on the part of the Republican party and that the Democrats were to be given free license as in the past. A primary with whiskey, rum and bribery in our sister county of Dorchester would tend to show that as far as Dorchester is concerned the law is correct. But it is hoped that the Democrats will not allow themselves to be drawn into a campaign where corrupt methods are used.

of its members in today's primaries. The primaries in Wicomico were free of any taint of this kind, and no hint or suspicion of bribery rests on the men nominated.

It has been claimed by some of the opponents of direct primaries that it offers too good a chance for bribery. It is very evident that the chances in a direct vote are no greater for the use of money than under the Convention system in use over in Dorchester today.

TELEPHONE GIRLS HELD

Up in Richmond, With Escorts. Two Highwaymen At Point of Pistol Take Money And Jewelry.

A daring hold up of two pretty "hello" girls, who went to Richmond, Va., from Baltimore to assist in instituting a new system of telephones, occurred at Lakeside Park Wednesday night. The robbery is one of the most reckless that has ever been known there according to those who underwent the ordeal and assisted in capturing at least one of the hold up men.

A. W. Folkes and Eugene F. Davis in company with Miss May Hodgins and Miss Helen Ratowski, were the unfortunate who were forced to give up their possessions. Everett Baughman and Bolt Epps are alleged to have committed the crime. Both have been captured.

When the hold up occurred the party was seated in the park. The two young men laughed when first approached and remarked that they had little cash to give the hold up men. At this one of the girls mentioned the fact that she had her jewelry. The robbers—condemned to accept this, and in a few minutes disappeared.

Before the men departed young Folkes begged them not to take the jewelry, and offered to give his check for $25 if the men would leave the jewelry. He even promised to give the check and say nothing, but the robbers informed him that they wanted cash only. Consequently it was agreed that the highwaymen would meet Folkes, and return the jewelry for the coin.

Unmindful of the fact that Folkes had time to secure aid the two men waited for him at an appointed place. Folkes secured the help of several constables and when the highwaymen stepped out of ambush to meet him they were suddenly confronted by the officers. Epps got away, and was not captured until noon today.

Baughman admitted frankly that he had taken the jewelry, and gave Epps' name to the police. Both men are well known.

No such robbery is reported to have occurred there in years. The highwaymen declare that had the girls not spoken of their jewelry it would never have been thought of. They wanted the money, and had only called on the young men, when the frightened girls offered to give them the ornaments.

ERNEST DIXON (COL.)

Arrested in Jersey For Molesting Daughter.

Sheriff W. W. Larmore and Deputy Sheriff Frank Waller arrested Ernest Dixon, colored, who lives in Jersey Thursday, for molesting his daughter. Wednesday evening Dixon beat his daughter over the head with a shot gun, and when she was ascending the steps of the house where she lives he said he was going to shoot her and fired the gun at her, blowing the top of her foot off. When arraigned before Justice of the Peace Wm. Traitt he was held on $1000, pending the result of the shooting.

These scholarships are awarded upon competition which is open to any one desiring a musical or literary education.

Anyone wishing to enter the competition or desiring information should write to Mr. George C. Williams, General Manager of the Ithaca Conservatory of Music, Ithaca, N. Y., before September 1st, 1909.

Lightning Kills Negro In Laurel.

Without the slightest warning of a storm, William Bradley, colored, 35 years old, was struck by lightning at Laurel late Monday afternoon and instantly killed. Bradley and other farm hands had been out in the field gathering hay and were on their way to the barn when the lightning struck, killing Bradley instantly and stunning another farm hand on the wagon and the mules. The hay caught fire and was burned, together with the wagon. Bradley's body was not disfigured in any way by the lightning except that his hair was singed. One of his shoes was split open.

INTERESTING SUNDAY

School Lesson for July 25, Paul's Second Missionary Journey.

Subject: "Paul's Second Missionary Journey—Athens." Acts 17th Chapter, 16th to 34th verses.

Time—about November 1st, 51 A. D. Place—Athens, formerly the capital of Greece, now in the province of Achaia and under the Romans.

St Paul landed at Phalerum, one of the two seaports of Athens, about November 1st, 51 A. D., and was conducted to lodgings in the city by his Berean friends, who immediately returned home with the Apostle's message "unto Silas and Timothy for to come to him with all speed."

During the interval of waiting he moved about the city examining as best he could the wonderful works of art and architecture with which the city was crowded. There were shrines and statues and temples and theatres and altars erected to the gods and dedicated to their worship, and St. Paul's spirit was stirred within him when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry. His apostolic spirit was agitated and he was strongly moved not to enquire over these splendid works of art and architecture but to protest against the idolatrous religion embodied in these altars and shrines and temples and to enlighten them by preaching the unsearchable riches of Jesus Christ.

Christianity, however, is unlike the old Jewish religion and does not forbid us not to erect statues to our famous statesmen and soldiers and philanthropists. Christianity sets religion above art and is at enmity only with art when art obscures spirituality or violates morals. St. Paul's protest was not against the statue but against the idol.

As his custom was he went into the synagogue of the Jews and preached unto them that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God." He also went in to the market place where the philosophers of the city had their favorite meeting place, and talked to individuals and groups concerning Jesus and the resurrection. But in a city where every religion was represented and discussed and laughed at, he could make but little headway. Nevertheless, his intense earnestness, which was the one thing wanting in the Athenians, attracted the attention of the Stoic and Epicurean philosophers who invited him to address them on Mars Hill.

On the summit of the hill, which rises gradually from the West but drops abruptly on the North East, remain the benches, out in the rock, on which sat the Areopagites. Sixteen worn steps lead to the summit. Here St. Paul addressed the most select and cultured audience of all careers. They had mistook his meaning in a manner very natural to the place, strange as it may seem to us. They thought that Jesus was our divinity and the resurrection another "that he was a setter forth of strange gods." They themselves had erected altars to Pity and Shame and Energy and Honor, the last indeed the most fitting and significant for a people who spent their time in nothing else but either to or to hear some new thing. Now they conduct the Apostles to a place of quiet and politely say "may we know what this new doctrine whereof thou speakest, is?" Here the new religion which was to make modern civilization was face to face with what was best in the old. It was an opportunity worthy of the man and the man was worthy of the occasion.

Here were three schools of thought; the Stoics were Paulists and taught the philosophy of endurance. They forbade all regard for pleasure and required their disciples to set solely for the absolute right. This was a noble philosophy and some of the noblest men of antiquity belonged to this sect. The Epicureans were Atheists and the essential principle of their philosophy that a man should aim to the greatest amount of happiness. Their idea of life was to "eat, drink and be merry," and as they allowed no future state, the tendency of the Epicureans was to sensuality and selfishness and utter baseness. It was against these two ideas that St. Paul delivered himself when he declared unto them God as the Creator and Ruler of the universe. He declared the existence of God as against the atheistic teachings of the Stoics. The contention of Christianity however is not against philosophy but against the philosophy that denies the existence of God or denies Him a place in the universe. The Athenians had acknowledged an "Unknown God" and erected an altar to Him. It was this altar that gave the Apostle his text and he declared that the "Unknown God" was the One whom he declared unto them. And this God whom he declared, was the common Father of us all, and "made of our blood all the nations of men, for to dwell on the face of the earth; and hath determined the times before appointed and the bounds of their habitation." While recognizing racial and national differences he yet brings every man within the compass of the Father's love and care. The doctrine of the "Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man" has grown so familiar to our ears that we do not realize how strangely it must have sounded in the ears of these aristocratic Greek philosophers.

Faithful on this from the inference that "Him, in whom we live and move and have our being and 'who giveth to all life, and breath and all things is not to be worshipped with men's hands as though he needed anything." He called them to a higher conception of God and as we are his offspring "we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold or silver or stone or graven by art and man's device. How it must have startled his audience when he cried that "the times of this ignorance, God winked at, but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." The doctrine of repentance involving as it does a sense of and sorrow for sin sounded strangely to them as did the announcement of the future judgment day by that man "whom God raised from the dead." Here his audience interrupted and the meeting broke up. The resurrection which Paul preached was not thru another duty, but in their minds an impossible process through which you may never pass except in a fable so some mocked him as if his words were too ludicrous for belief. Nevertheless "some clave to him and said we will hear thee again of this matter."

This society of learned triflers went back to their philosophy and their "Unknown God" and lost the opportunity to come to have better knowledge of the only true and living God. So many do today.

Helen Wilkinson Drowned.

Helen Ida Wilkinson, 13 years old, who had spent the day in warning persons not to cross a wagon bridge spanning a swollen creek near her home, at Hop Hollow, Mo., three miles above Alton, Wednesday, gave up her life in execution of her mission. She fell into the water and was caught under the bridge and drowned. The body was recovered.

Nobody saw the child fall into the water. The theory is that she sat on the edge of the bridge with her feet in the water, which came up to the roadway of the bridge and slipped off the structure when it sagged.

To-Night.

Do not fail to see Adam's Great Levitation where he takes a lady and floats her in the air several feet above the stage and passes a solid iron hoop, which is examined, over the entire body. This act has caused a sensation in all our large cities. His canvas theatre is on the Omburn lot, near the N. Y. P. & N. Depot. Tonight the last, but best of them all.—Adv.

The Butter You Will Eventually Buy.

If you want a high-grade butter for your Acadia brand will supply the want, and whether you are convinced of its superior quality by its advertisement, or the recommendation of some of your friends, who speak from actual knowledge, it is the Butter you will eventually buy.

In thousands of homes in Delaware Acadia Butter has filled its place on the family table for years. There is never a question as to its quality—it is always right. That is what has made it recognized here and elsewhere as the best butter sold over any counter anywhere.

Therefore, we say if you appreciate a fine quality of Butter you will eventually buy Acadia.

A Clothes Story.

We ask the attention of the man to whom outfitting means more than "just clothes." We sell a man clothes that will cause him to tie us and speak well of us to his friends.

For a Suit or a pair of Trousers that will at once mark you as a "good dresser"; for a correct Hat, Shoes, Tie, Shirt, or anything in togetherness that's choice and different, we are at your service. Our good outfitting costs you no more than the other sort—often less, and always less in the end. Prices range from $7 to $20.

An Attractive Showing of $10.50 Suits.

Never in the history of our business have we offered such values as are displayed at this price. The materials are cassimeres, chevots and worsteds, in plain effects and the new conceits. Not a suit in the lot that would not readily bring $30.00. But to insure quick selling the price is $10.50.

FERRIES, ROADS ETC.

Minutes Of The County Commissioners July 20, 1909.

Mr. Wright reported that the Ferry at Sharptown had been sold to Mr. Jerome Griffith for the year 1910 for $640, one half to be paid by Dorchester County.

Mr. Johnson reported that Upper Ferry had been sold to Mr. Nicholas Moore for the year 1910 for $200. His bond was presented, approved and filed.

Mr. Johnson also reported the sale of Wicomico Creek Ferry to Mr. Geo. W. Malone for $175 for the year of 1910, one half to be paid by Somerset County. His bond was approved and filed.

Messrs Wright and Clark reported that they had examined the road leading from Hebron to Quantico and that immediate attention was necessary and that the right of way for straightening and widening and draining had been obtained from the owners of the adjoining property. Mr. Clarke was authorized to have the work done without delay.

The report of Mr. L. B. Brittingham, E. A. Powell and E. P. Parsons, Commissioners on the tax Ditch in Dennis' District was filed and notice of ratification given on August 17th 1909.

Mr. Clarke was authorized to purchase one length of corrugated pipe from the Delaware Corrugated Metal Culvert Company with a guarantee of twenty years from the Company.

Messrs. Ward and Holloway were before the Board in reference to the White Road from Pittsville to Nelson.

The Board authorized Commissioner Travis to employ foreman and gang of workmen to put the road in order.

Mr. Cooper reported having sold the old iron of Fivest Bridge to Mr. E. W. B. Adkins at $6.00 per ton, same to be paid for as soon as the iron is weighed.

A committee came before the Board, headed by Mr. L. Atwood Bennett, asking that the County Commissioners do something to the road known as the Riverside road.

After much discussion the matter was laid on the table until some future date.

Mr. S. J. Moore was authorized to get material and make a new bridge over Adkins' Creek to replace the old one which was reported to be unsafe.

Messrs. H. M. Clarke, Clarence Johnson and E. E. Frosny were appointed Commissioners to lay out and straighten the road from Mr. E. J. Adkins' to Barren Creek Mills, improved by the State.

The Board authorized the President to borrow $5000 to be used in constructing the State road from E. J. Adkins' to Barren Creek Mills.

The next meeting of the Board will be July the 27th

BIG WHALE ASHORE

Worcester County People Flocking To Beach At Pope's Island To See It.

A whale from 80 to 85 feet in length and about 10 feet through was washed on the beach near Pope's Island lifesaving station a week or more ago, and was discovered by the keeper of the life saving station. All of the crew of the station except one man are now off duty and he did not have an opportunity to make known his find until he came over to the mainland on Saturday, when he told the news to many persons attending the Boston campmeeting.

Tuesday a large party from Snow Hill, Girdlestone and Stockton went over to the beach and saw the mammoth animal. It was in a bad state of decomposition and the oil was exuding from the flesh and running down on the sand.

The whale is lying on its back, and a large gash in the side indicates that it was struck by an ocean steamer and hurt so badly that it died from the wound. Some one had removed the upper jaw, which contains the valuable product known as whalebone. The mouth of the whale was so large that eight men stood inside of it with perfect ease. This is the largest whale ever seen in that section.

Eat What

You want of the food you need
Kodol will digest it.

You need a sufficient amount of good wholesome food and more than this you need to fully digest it. Else you can't gain strength, nor can you strengthen your stomach if it is weak.

You must eat in order to live and maintain strength. You must not diet, because the body requires that you eat a sufficient amount of food regularly.

But this food must be digested, and it must be digested thoroughly. When the stomach can't do it, you must take something that will help the stomach.

The proper way to do is to eat what you want, and let Kodol digest the food.

Nothing else can do this. When the stomach is weak it needs help; you must help it by giving it rest, and Kodol will do that.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today, and purchase a dollar bottle, and if you can honestly say, that you did not receive any benefits from it, after using the entire bottle, the druggist will refund your money to you without question or delay.

We will pay the druggist the price of the bottle purchased by you. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family.

We could not afford to make such an offer, unless we positively knew what Kodol will do for you.

It would bankrupt us.

The dollar bottle contains 2 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

CHAPTER XXVII.

MRS. SPANGLER ON A LUNCHEON.

WHEN Senators Peabody and Stevens had gone Langdon and Bud went over the situation together and concluded that their opponents had no means of defeating Langdon's program—that, after all, Peabody might really have meant his words of surrender.

"But they might try foul play. Better stay right here in the capitol the rest of the day," suggested Bud. Langdon scoffed at the idea.

"Haines bustled away to get a few mouthfuls of lunch to fortify himself for a busy afternoon—one that was going to be far busier than he imagined. The telephone bell rang at the senator's desk. It was Mrs. Spangler's voice that spoke.

"Senator Langdon," she said, "Carolina and Hope Georgia are here at my home for luncheon, and we all want you to join us."

"Sorry I cannot accept," answered the Mississippi, "but I am to make an important speech this afternoon."

"Oh, yes, I know. The girls and I are coming to hear it. But you have two hours' time, and if you come we can all go over to the senate together. Now, senator, humor us a little. Don't disappoint the girls and me. We can all drive over to the capitol in my carriage."

The planter hesitated, then replied. "All right; I'll be over, but it mustn't be a very long luncheon."

"Gone to eat, back by 3 o'clock," he scratched quickly on a pad on the secretary's desk and departed.

Mrs. Spangler's luncheon was equally as popular to Washington as Senator Langdon's dinner. The Mississippi and his daughters enjoyed the delicacies spread lavishly before them.

Time passed quickly. The old planter enjoyed seeing his daughters have so happy a time, and he was not inattentive to the charm of his hostess's conversation, for Mrs. Spangler had studied carefully the art of ingratiating herself with her guests.

Suddenly realizing that he had probably reached the limit of the time he could spare, the senator drew out his watch.

"What a stunning job you wear," quickly spoke Mrs. Spangler, reaching out her hand and taking the watch from her guest's hands as the case snapped open.

"Oh, that's Carolina's doing," laughed Langdon. "She said the old gold chain that my grandfather left me was—"

"Why, how lovely," murmured Mrs. Spangler, glancing at the watch.

"We have plenty of time yet. Won't you have a little more to drink? Your time is the same as mine."

she added, nodding her head toward a French clock on the black marble mantel.

As the hostess did this she deftly turned back the hands of the senator's watch thirty-five minutes.

Definitely turned back the hands of the senator's watch, to smoke, senator. Mrs. Spangler asked as her guests concluded their repast, "if the young ladies do not object?"

Langdon inclined his head gratefully and laughed.

"They wouldn't be southern girls, I reckon, if they didn't want to see a man, having every right to make him happy—or I beg pardon, Mrs. Spangler, I mean, comfortable. Nobody that's your guest could be unhappy."

The hostess beamed on the chivalrous southerner.

Langdon drew forth a thick black portfolio and settled back luxuriously in his chair, after another glance at Mrs. Spangler's clock. He was absorbed in a mental resume of his forthcoming speech and did not hear the next words of the woman, addressed positively to his daughters.

"Do you know, really, why this luncheon was given today?" she queried. Then she continued before Carolina and Hope Georgia could formulate reply.

"Because your father and I wanted to take this opportunity to announce to you—our engagement."

The speaker smiled her sweetest smile.

The two girls gazed at each other in uncontrollable amazement, then at Mrs. Spangler, then at their father, who had turned partly away from the table and was gazing abstractedly at the ceiling.

Hope Georgia was the first to regain her voice.

"Oh, Mrs. Spangler," she ejaculated, "you are very kind to marry father, but—"

"What's that?" exclaimed the senator, roused from such thoughts by his youngest daughter's words and thrusting himself forward.

Mrs. Spangler laid her hand on his arm.

"Oh, senator, I have just told the dear girls that you had asked me to marry you—that we were soon to be married," she said archly, looking him straight in the eye. She clasped her hands and murmured, "I am so happy!"

The hero of Crawfordville tried to speak, but he could not. He stared at his hostess, who smiled the smile of the budding debutante. His own open mouthed astonishment was reflected in the faces of Carolina and Hope Georgia as they observed their father's expression. He forgot he was in Washington. He had known he was a man, but he had not known he was a senator. He had not known he was a man, but he had not known he was a senator.

What did it all mean? Had Mrs. Spangler gone suddenly insane? His "Great heavens! I'm late, I'm late!" daughters—what did they think? These thoughts surged through his dazed brain. Then it flashed over him—she was joking in some new fashionable way. He turned toward the fair widow to laugh, but her face was losing its smile. A pained expression, a suggestion of intense suffering, appeared in her face.

"Why do you so hesitate, Senator Langdon?" she finally asked in low voice, just loud enough for the two girls to overhear.

The junior senator from Mississippi looked at his hostess. She had entertained him and had done much for his daughters in Washington. She was alone in the world—a widow. He felt that he could not shame her before Carolina and Hope Georgia. His southern chivalry would not permit that.

Then, too, she was a most charming person, and the thought, "Why not—why not take her at her word?" crept into his mind.

"Yes, father, why do you hesitate?" asked Carolina.

Senator Langdon mustered his voice into service at last.

"I've been thinking," he said slowly, "that—"

"That your daughters did not know," interrupted Mrs. Spangler, "of our—"

"The telephone upstairs is ringing, madam," said a maid who had entered to Mrs. Spangler.

The adventures could not leave the senator and his daughters alone, though she knew it must be Peabody calling her. At any moment he might remember his speech and leave. Already late, he would still be later, though, because he would have no carriage—hers would purposely be delayed.

"Tell the person speaking that you are empowered to bring me any message—that I cannot leave the dining hall," she said to the maid.

To gain time and to hold the senator's attention Mrs. Spangler asked slowly:

"Well, senator, what was it that you were going to say when I interrupted you a few moments ago?"

Langdon had been racking his brain for some inspiration that would enable him to save the feelings of his hostess and yet indicate his position clearly. He would not commit himself in any way. He would jump up and pronounce her an impostor first.

After a moment of silence his clouded face cleared.

"Mrs. Spangler," he began, "your announcement today I have considered to be—"

"Premature," she suggested. The maid returned.

"Mr. Wall says Senator Langdon is wanted at once at the capitol."

"Great heavens!" exclaimed Langdon, springing to his feet and glancing at the clock. "I'm late, I'm late! I hope to God I'm not too late!"

"Mr. Wall says a carriage is coming for Senator Langdon," concluded the maid.

"We must talk this matter over some other time, Mrs. Spangler," the Mississippi cried as he sent a servant for his hat and coat. "I hope that carriage hurries, else I'll try it on the run for the capitol!"

"It's a half hour away on foot," said Mrs. Spangler. "Better wait. You'll save time."

But to herself she muttered as though mystified:

"I wonder why Peabody changed his mind so suddenly? Why should he now want the old fool at the capitol?"

The rumble of wheels was heard outside.

"Hurry, father!" cried Hope Georgia. The senator hurried down the stone steps of Mrs. Spangler's residence as rapidly as his weight and the excitement under which he labored would permit.

Again the coach door, he plunged inside to come face to face with Bud Haines, who had huddled down in a corner to avoid observation from the Spangler windows. The driver started his horses off on a run.

Struggling to regain his breath, the senator cried:

"Well, what are—"

"Never mind now. But first gather in all I say, senator, as we've no time to lose. When I couldn't locate you and I saw you probably wouldn't be at the senate chamber in time to make your speech on the anti-trust bill, I persuaded Senator Milbank of Arkansas to rise and make a speech on the currency question, which subject was in order. He was under obligation to me for some important information I once obtained for him, and he consented to keep the floor until you arrived, though he knew he would earn the vengeance of Peabody. That was over an hour and a half ago. He must be reading quotations from 'Tilgman's Progress' to the senate by now to keep the floor."

Bud paused to look at his watch. The senator stretched his head out of the window and cried, "Drive faster!"

"But your speech all right?" called Bud above the din of the rattling wheels.

"The speech was the response, the senator keeping his finger breast pocket. 'Don't hurry, she'—cried Bud, seeing his head back in the direction where the carriage had gone.

The Mississippi shook his head negatively and set his jaws determinedly.

The coach swung up to the capitol entrance.

"Tell me," asked Langdon, as both jumped out, "how did you find out that?"

"I phoned the house—gave a name Peabody uses."

"Great heavens, but how did you know where to phone?"

"They were at the door of the senate chamber."

"Norton gave me the tip—for your sake and Carolina's—for old time's sake, he said," was Bud's reply.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Inventor Davy and Love.

Sir Humphry Davy, the inventor of the Davy lamp, found love something of a delusion, if not a snare. Writing to his mother, he said, "I am the happiest of men in the hope of a union with a woman equally distinguished for virtues, talents and accomplishments."

And in a letter to his brother he expresses his rapture thus: "Mrs. Apreece has consented to marry me, and when the event takes place I shall not envy kings, princes or potentates."

The widow must have been a person possessed of great powers of fascination, for Sir Henry Holland makes mention of her as a lady who made such a sensation in Edinburgh society that even a regius professor did not think it beneath his scholarship to go down on his knees in the street to fasten her shoe. The sequel need not be dwelt upon further than to add that the marriage turned out to be altogether a mistake.

Ferguson and the Rabbits.

Robert Ferguson, the poet, was first matriculated at St. Andrew's university in the session of 1764-5. It was the custom at this time for each bursar to take his turn in invoking "bleasins" at the meals. The college table having been surfeited with an unbroken diet of rabbits in various forms of cookery, Ferguson, on being called to say grace, repeated what he now celebrated lines:

For rabbits young and for rabbits old,
For rabbits hot and for rabbits cold,
For rabbits tender and for rabbits tough,
Our thanks we render, for we've had enough!

It may be added Ferguson was not sent down, but the rabbits were "rusticated."

The Quipus.

The quipus, upon which the ancient Peruvians kept their records and accounts, consisted of a thick main cord, with smaller cords tied to it at certain distances. Upon these smaller cords the knots were tied by means of which the reckoning was kept. The length of the main rope varied from a foot to several yards. The cords were of various colors, each with its own proper meaning—as red for soldiers, yellow for gold, white for silver, green for corn, and so on. The reckoning seems to have been largely regulated by the distances of the knots from the main cord and the sequence of the branches.

—New York American.

Same Effect.

"Cyril," said his mother as they sat down to the breakfast table, "did you wash your face this morning?"

"Well, no, mamma," said he slowly, evidently casting in his mind for an excuse, "but," he added reassuringly, "I cried a little before I came down stairs!"—Delineator.

SISTERS HOLD UP

Young Men in Chicago At Pistol's Point.
Wanted Ice Cream Soda.

Two sisters, the elder 16 years old, held up Charles Nadel in South Chicago, Wednesday night and with an empty revolver forced him to give up ten cents under penalty of death. Nadel gave up the dime and then ran to a nearby police station. He returned with a police escort, which captured the holdup girls. When taken before the sergeant the sisters treated the whole affair as a joke, laughingly recalling the nervousness of their victim.

Between giggles they gave their names as Helen Derowska, 16 years old, and Bertha Derowska, 13 years old. They admitted taking the money from Nadel under threat to kill him, declaring they wanted an ice-cream soda. The girls, both of whom are small, stout and good looking, said they recently had visited a Wild West show and had become imbued with the idea that robbery was an easy way to obtain money.

A $400 PIANO FREE!

GREAT CONTEST OF SKILL—READ CAREFULLY!

First Prize, $400 Kimball Piano.

Third Prize, $95, Credit Bill.

Second Prize, $100, Credit Bill.

Fourth Prize, $90, Credit Bill.

And Over $4,000 in Additional Prizes.

You have the same opportunity as anybody else to win. The KIMBALL Piano and other prizes will be given away to persons writing the four words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS the most times in accordance with Rules and Conditions below.

This great contest is gotten up for advertising purposes, and is free and open to all, except music dealers and Harry H. Hughes' employees and their families.

The large and wealthy factories I represent have allotted to me this vast amount for advertising purposes, and I propose to give it directly to piano and organ buyers, which will make a lasting advertising all over this section of Maryland.

Start TO-DAY And Send In Your Answer Early!

Some one will get the $400 Piano FREE, or one of the other valuable prizes. The fairness of this great contest is certain, as the judging of the contest will be in the hands of prominent men of Salisbury, whose names will be announced later.

How many times can you write the four words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS on a card or sheet of paper measuring 5 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches, or the size of an ordinary U. S. postal card?

The Prizes.—First award, $400 Kimball Piano, will be given absolutely free to the person sending us a card on which is written HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS the highest number of times in accordance with the Rules and Regulations given below.

All other contestants will receive, according to merit of answers, a copy of "The National Home Song" (words and music) and other valuable prizes.

In case of a tie, awards of equal value will be given.

Rules and Conditions.—The four words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS must be written plainly. Write on one side of the card or paper only. No words can be written across each other. All contestants must write their lists so that they can be read with the naked eye. Use any plain card or piece of paper, not to exceed 5 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches. Contestants must fill out coupons or exact written copy, and enclose to me with their answer.

CUT OUT THIS COUPON

I submit herewith my card, on which I have written the words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS..... times, subject to all the conditions of the contest; and I hereby agree to abide by the decisions of the Judges.

How Sarah Was Converted

So Hetty Granger's dead," observed Priscilla Pipp, solemnly, laying aside her book and shaking comfortably into a rocker. "God rest her soul," she said, devoutly.

"And her tongue," added Sarah Potts, tartly.

"Well—I suppose it will rest, now she's gone," admitted Priscilla. Then she added: "I low it's earned a rest, anyway."

"It wasn't exactly in need of exercise," observed Sarah dryly.

"It seems strange to think of Hetty gone—that she won't be her comin' over the back way any more with a plate to borrow butter on," Priscilla continued. "I remember her comin' over one afternoon when she had company to tea, unexpected like, with that old blue plate—you remember that old blue chiny one her great-grandmother handed down—no, you don't either, because you ain't ever been inside of their house as I know of—but anyway I let her have a piece of my last print of butter an' me not gettin' any more till Saturday, which was Dave Jenks's reg'lar time to bring it in, an' Hetty goin' back home so careless like an' slippin' where some one throwed out dishwater, and lookee the butter an' breakin' the chiny plate all pieces an' her lookin' all around to see if any one was lookin' an' then pickin' up the butter and wipin' it off on her apron. But the plate was too far gone for savin' although I believe she did afterward gather up the pieces and glue 'em together. Poor Hetty! It seems strange to think of Hetty gone—in Paradise."

"It does seem strange," Sarah admitted.

"What?" said Priscilla, absently.

"To think of her—in Paradise," Sarah said. "I don't s'pose she'll make any great stir in Paradise?" she continued, in a half inquiry.

"Well, maybe not as much as she will after she gets her beard's," Priscilla agreed with qualification. "Hetty's bound to be busy, in the flesh or in the spirit. Her's ain't no spirit to sit by with folded hands and watch things takin' place. It's my belief she'll be active even in the spirit. She was a powerful cleaner, Hetty was. I don't know of any one in the neighborhood that had rugs an' curtains out on the line oftener 'n Hetty did."

"An' certainly no one had her tongue out oftener," observed Sarah litely.

"We don't want to be too hard on her in departed, Sarah," Priscilla said, with mild rebuke.

"Truth don't hurt nobody, livin' or dead," Sarah declared, epigrammatically.

"Well, it ain't so apt to hurt th' dead as it is th' livin'," Priscilla agreed.

"An' it ain't told about th' dead as often as it is th' livin', either," Sarah returned.

"Sarah," she began, "you won't mind if I talk to you like a sister of yours, will you?"

"If you talk like a good many sisters do, maybe you better not," answered Sarah, with a frown and a drawing down of the corners of her mouth.

"I wouldn't feel hard toward her, now she's dead," Priscilla volunteered, feeling her way along cautiously. "I know she—she did you a lot of wrong, but maybe she liked him better'n you did, an' it was a'n' years an' years ago, an' she's dead an' he dead, an'—"

A tear trickled down Sarah's cheek. "Maybe she did," she admitted; "she talked faster'n I did, anyway." She brushed the tear away impatiently and left a shiny streak on her face.

"That ain't neither here nor there," Priscilla declared.

"Well, there was a good deal of it here when she was," observed Sarah. "An' there's apt to be a good deal of it there—if spirits talk, an' I fancy they do—when they get rested up, anyway," she finished sharply.

Priscilla rocked again.

"You've got nice things, Sarah," she said, looking about her through the big room. "I remember when you an' me was girls together how we used to build dollhouses an' wonder about all the nice things we'd have when we grew up an' got married—the last word came with an effort."

"An' then when we got along about the marryin' age, who should come along but Peter Pipp, with nothin' but poverty an' prospects, an' before I knew it we were married, an' while we ain't had no money to brag of, we've always been comfortable, an' Pipp's made a good husband, aside from his mother's interlunatic somethings. An' afterwards I remember how you an'—well, you fell in love an' some'at, it got broke off an' your father on th' old place for so many years, an' then he died an' left you comfortable for the rest of your days."

"I never knew what broke it off, Sarah," Priscilla said, suggestively.

"I'm goin' to give 'em to th' guild when I get 'em all hemstitched," Sarah volunteered this much in the way of information.

Priscilla went back to rocking.

"Hetty's left a girl, too," she went on, as though the destiny of the napskins did not impress her. "They say she looks more like him every day. It's too bad, ain't it—just the time she needs a parent's care the most, both of 'em gone an' nothin' left in th' way of money or property. I wonder what she'll do," she ventured.

"What she can, maybe—like th' rest of us," Sarah suggested harshly.

"They say she ain't got no relatives," Priscilla added.

"Which ain't always an unmitigated affliction," retorted Sarah.

"If it wasn't for Minnie an' Mamie an' Willie an' Jimmie an' Little Peter I'd take her myself," Priscilla continued, passing Sarah's remark over without comment. "It would be a nice way to teach her in an' give her a home. I s'pose th' Lord'll provide a way or her but blessed if I can see it."

Sarah smiled the napskins up and down on th' chair beside her.

How Sarah Was Converted

"I should think you'd get lonesome in this big house with not a soul around but a boy doin' chores an' goin' to school," Priscilla said.

"It ain't always them that's around you that keeps you from bein' lonesome," Sarah remarked, looking hard at something out of the window that seemed to have a mist about it.

"No, I s'pose not," Priscilla said softly.

There were a few minutes of rocking and looking out of the window.

"Only fourteen years old," Sarah mused, half to herself.

"What did you say Sarah?" Priscilla asked.

"Nothin'—I was just thinking," returned Sarah.

"You know," Priscilla said, after a pause, "if anything was to happen that my Minnie was to be left alone I wonder if I could send down a prayer that would go into somebody's heart and not let 'em rest until they went an' found her an' took her in an' gave her a good home—like you'n, for example," she said.

"I don't know," Sarah returned, slowly. "A good many prayers are sent on wild goose chases—like some I've had to do with. I used to pray, night after night, but I guess they went up when everybody was out," she added somewhat bitterly.

"You mustn't, Sarah, you mustn't," cried Priscilla, "it's a blasphemy."

"What—prayer?" Sarah inquired.

"No, talkin' like that," said Priscilla.

"Well, ain't I goin' to give th' napskins to th' guild?" Sarah retorted.

"It ain't napskins th' Lord wants," suggested Priscilla.

"What is it, then?" inquired Sarah.

"It's hearts—good, lovin', tender human hearts—that's what it is."

"Well, mine was good an' lovin' an' tender once," Sarah said, slowly. "But it's old an' hard an' dry now like an old cheese rind."

"Maybe He's tryin' to make it lovin' an' tender ag'in," give you some thin' to put into it that'll take it back to where it used to be," Priscilla suggested.

"How?" Sarah asked.

"Oh, I don't know," Priscilla responded. "He works in a mysterious way—that's what the poet says."

"You mean for me to take her—that girl of Hetty's?" demanded Sarah, fiercely.

"No; I mean for you to take her—that girl of Robin's," Priscilla answered her.

"I—I forgot," Sarah responded, less bitterly.

"Her name is Robin, same as his," Priscilla informed her. "It's the kind of a name you can give to a girl or a boy either—th' boys after Robin Hood an' th' girls after Robin Redbreast, maybe."

"She told him lies," Sarah cried, her bitterness returning. "She told him lies and he—"

She rested her chin on her hands and her elbows on her knees and looked hard out of the window, where everything was misty.

"I know," said Priscilla soothingly. "But she is dead an' he is dead an' you an' me are here."

"I never knew about her fallin' down with th' butter," Sarah said. Then she added: "Was it true that they got pretty poor before she died?"

"I guess they were in bad straits," Priscilla said. "They say little Robin ain't hardly got clothes enough to keep soul an' body together."

"Her mother should a talked less an' sewed more," Sarah ventured.

"Hetty Granger wa'n't idle," Priscilla objected. "Clare th' dead her due. She was always busy, but a woman can't do much in th' way of earnin' th' way things go."

"I suppose not," Sarah said. "Does she look any way like her mother?"

"They say she's th' image of her father. She's all alone in th' house up there, with nobody but Kate Adams, an' Kate's been havin' such a time mournin' openly for Hetty I'm afraid she'll have poor little Robin scared to death before night. Kate's a good soul but she's a powerful mourner, so I'm goin' up to get Robin and bring her home for a few days with me. Jimmie an' Willie an' Little Peter can sleep together in the three-quarter bed, an' that'll make room for her with Nellie."

"I don't think I ever saw her," Sarah mused. "I ain't looked at one of 'em for fifteen years."

"You better peek out when we're goin' by," Priscilla suggested.

"I'll rattle my parasol stick against th' fence pickets."

"I don't s'pose she'll look at me. Hetty probably filled her up with stuff about me."

"Hetty never told her a word," responded Priscilla. "She told me so on her dyin' bed, and th' truth will out then."

"Which is some better than never," said Sarah. "Well, maybe I'll peek out. Don't scrape th' fence pickets too hard. They're fresh painted."

"I'll crowd Jimmie an' Willie and Little Peter to sleep three in a three-quarter bed, but it's growin' in a good cause," Priscilla suggested.

"He's strange to live without growin' in," Sarah said, looking around her at the three-quarter bed, an' that'll make room for her with Nellie."

"If you think she'd come," Sarah hesitated. "If you think she would care to come Priscilla I'll let her have the front room upstairs—for a night or two."

Priscilla rose from the rocker and touched Sarah's forehead with her hand.

"It's like when we were girls again," she said.

"I don't s'pose she could help what her mother did before she was born," admitted Sarah.

"I don't exactly see how she could," admitted Priscilla, cautiously. Sarah's glance went out of the window and away off up a green slope to the top of a hill where white shafts rose.

"Priscilla," she said, "if you think she would care to come an' live with a dried-up old maid—"

"Yes," Priscilla said.

"Well, you can bring her in when you go by and leave her here for a while, anyway. I'll try to do right by her, although I ain't sayin' by th' Lord I s'pose th' Lord'll provide a way or her but blessed if I can see it."

Sarah smiled the napskins up and down on th' chair beside her.

But for Robin's sake."

"For Robin's sake," Priscilla assented.

"No, not for Robin's sake, either, but for the sake of Willie and Jimmie and Little Peter, an' to keep 'em from crowdin' three in a bed," said Sarah, wiping her eyes with a corner of one of the guild's napskins. "An' it'll save you scrapin' on th' fence pickets, too. They're fresh painted."—N. Y. Times.

HANDY PAPER BOX.

Folds Up Flat When It Is Not in Use.

A novelty in paper boxes has been devised by a Georgia man, and, judging by the variety of uses to which the article can be put, it will have a big demand. The novelty consists in the fact that the box folds up flat and can be put into the pocket when not in use. The device is made of heavy paper and so creased that the sides fold in upon each other until they are flat upon the bottom, as in a type of folding purse that has been in vogue for years. When open the box forms a light, substantial box, for which there is also a suitable cover. To two sides of the box are affixed tapes, which can either be used to tie the lid or can be fastened as to form a handle by which the box can be carried. For candy dealers, especially those who do business on a small scale, such as in booths at parks, etc., these boxes are very convenient, as they take up very little space and answer every purpose. One of these boxes can be put to many uses, for where a man would throw away the ordinary unwieldy receptacle he would fold up this type and bring it home in his pocket.

Prejudice Against the Stage in China.

So great is the official prejudice against the stage in China that it extends even to the children of actors, and these are prohibited from holding any post under Government. Four years ago the grandson of an actor named Cheng was appointed translator to the Chinese Legation at Berlin. Cheng in his day was in the very front of his profession, and ranked as high in the esteem of all classes of society as Sir Henry Irving did in this country. Yet the nomination of his descendant caused an outcry among Chinese officials, and a memorial praying for his removal was presented to the Empress Dowager. The new official, it was pointed out, belonged to the caste of actors, who ranked with barbers and chiropodists as the three lowest classes in the country. The younger Cheng, however, was able to prove that his parents did not follow his grandfather's profession, so the appointment was allowed to stand.

A Tin Cup Trick.

This little trick, performed in a parlor, will make you appear quite a magician.

Get beforehand two perfectly plain tin cups, without handles and with the bottoms sunk about a quarter of an inch, and straight sides. On the sunk bottom of each put some glue, and over it drop some bird's seed, so that it looks as if the cup were full, whereas it is really standing upside down and the layer of seed is glued to the outside bottom.

When you are ready to perform the trick have a bag of the same kind of seed, and, standing off from your audience, hold the cups so that they can see they are empty, but don't allow any one to approach you.

Now take one cup and dip it into the bag of seed, but instead of filling it turn it upside down, so that when you take it out the seed glued to the bottom will show, and everyone will think it

PATTISON FOR JUDGE

Dorchester Democrats Instruct The Delegates For Him. Applegarth Gets An Adjournment Of Convention.

Delegates pledged to the nomination of Mr. John R. Pattison for chief judge of the First Judicial Circuit, and Robley D. Jones for the associate judgeship, were chosen by the Dorchester county Democratic convention to go to the judicial convention at Ocean City, August 18.

No nominations were made for county officers, the convention deciding to meet again on August 4 to perform those duties. The convention met early in the afternoon and was called to order by the county chairman, W. Lake Robinson.

Mr. Charles R. Mills, of Hooper's Island, a close personal and political friend of Mr. Applegarth, proposed that nominations for county officers be made at once.

"In making this motion," Mr. Chairman," he said, "I desire to say that though in the minority respecting delegates representing as we do but six election districts, yet representing fully one half of the untitled Democratic voters of this county, we believe that a fair distribution of positions on the local ticket would entitle us to the following places: State Senator, one delegate, one County Commissioner, Sheriff and County Treasurer, and being accorded these positions we believe that the Democrats of this county can enter untried upon a campaign that will end in a sweeping victory."

The convention did not see it in that way and a substitute resolution that the convention adjourn until Tuesday, August 24, was adopted by a vote of 44 to 24. Mr. Pattison, who has just received the Dorchester endorsement for the chief judgeship, is the son of the late John R. Pattison, of Dorchester, and a first cousin to the late Robert Pattison, Governor of Pennsylvania. He is a leading member of the Cambridge bar. In politics Mr. Pattison has always been a straight and consistent Democrat. He was not always in sympathy with the course of the late Senator Arthur P. Gorman, nor with some of the State administrations. He was a member of the Legislature and was opposed to the actions of the extra session a few years ago, as he thought it was against the interests of his people. His delegation polled the largest vote at any primary election ever held on the Eastern Shore, his majority being about 400. Mr. Pattison is 40 years of age.

CREATE GOOD IMPRESSION

Fair Grounds, Race Course And Well Behaved Crowd Subject Of Favorable Comment At Large.

The condition of the track built by the "Woomioo" Fair Association was the subject of much favorable comment by those who witnessed the special race here on the 21st between Dry Dock and Gen. Mack.

The large number of persons present together with the feeling which was supposed to exist between the backers of the two horses gave rise to a fear of trouble on the grounds, and all present were much gratified that none occurred, and that a better behaved crowd never met on any course before. The ADVERTISER is in receipt of a letter from the President of the Association, Mr. D. J. Ward, which shows that a very favorable impression was created on the day of the race which will undoubtedly help in making the coming Fair a great success. Mr. Ward's letter is written from Kentucky where one of his horses is being trained. His letter is as follows:

Lexington, Ky., July 28, 1909.

Messrs. Editors Advertiser:
I find the people in Kentucky know of our first race meeting on our new Fair Grounds at Salisbury, of July 21st; the results of which were published in nearly all the Turf papers here.

During my stop in Baltimore City Monday I heard a great many comments of our race course, the location of our Fair Grounds, and especially the fine behavior the Eastern Shore people have when they meet to see a horse race.

The horsemen as well as other citizens of Baltimore tell me that never in their lives did they see a crowd of that size handled so well as this was. One party made the remark that he did not see a man look mad on the Fair Grounds that day, even though many were not able to secure seats in the grandstand.

The question was asked me if the Association would prepare more Grand Stand room to accommodate the great mass of people we would have during the four days of our Fair, August 17, 18, 19, and 20th. I was glad to assure them that an additional Theatre had been planned and ordered erected by the building committee of the Association, which would seat from one to two thousand people and that contractor John W. Windsor would have it completed before the first day of our Fair. With Robbins Great Wild West Show located on our Fair Grounds, giving two different shows daily and one each night, and with seating capacity great enough in our theatres to accommodate those who wish to see the races and other attractions. You remember we have contracts signed by reliable parties to furnish five different attractions free each day. We should have much larger crowds each day of our fair than we had on the 21st.

Yours,
D. J. Ward.

ELECTRIC LIGHT COMPANY

Of Laurel-Seaford Have Completed A Fine Plant. Owned In Salisbury.

The Laurel-Seaford Electric Light Company has just completed the new plant which they have been installing at Laurel. This is said to be one of the most complete of its kind in the country. It is fire proof in construction 40x100 and cost $80,000 for building and equipment.

This company lights the towns of Delmar, Laurel, Seaford and Bridgeville. Arrangements have also been completed for the lighting of the town of Bethel and a line will be run to that place in the next few weeks.

It is understood that Sharpstown has been considering the matter and that the Company has given them a price for which they will run their wires to that town, and it is believed that this progressive town of Woomioo will not long do without a good lighting system.

The Company further announces that a day current will be furnished for the purpose of lighting and power as soon as arrangements can be perfected.

A thorough canvass of the towns entered by their wires is now being made for the purpose of securing more patrons. The Company is offering to furnish all material and do all the work necessary for lighting and power at a price to represent the actual cost of material and work.

This does away with the contractors profits and makes the cost of installing lights and power very reasonable. The officers of the Company are W. M. Cooper, Pres., Jesse D. Price, Treasurer, Mark Cooper, Sec'y and General Manager.

FASHIONS AT BAR HARBOR

Colored Silk Coat With Light Frocks; A Greek Ball Dress; Tucked Lawn Parasols; Lingerie Hats.

This summer at Bar Harbor one needs every sort of gown, coat and wrap except those pertaining to the automobile for the town authorities have voted to entirely exclude the "devil wagon" from the place. A large majority of the summer residents concur with the natives in this decision for the roads here are so narrow, winding and picturesque, that though delightful for driving, they become positive death traps if motors are allowed to run over them.

Colored Coats For Thin Dresses.

Colored coats for thin dresses add novelty to the summer's color schemes. A very chic coat lately worn by a fashionable woman with a white frock was made of Chartreuse green taffeta veiled with marine blue chiffon. The use of quite vivid colors veiled with a neutral tone is one of the Fashions' latest caprice for such wraps. To wear with light dresses white, cream color, pale green, pale blue, gray, etc. are among the colors chosen for these silk coats. In spite of its fragility chiffon is decidedly the seasons' fad and coats and frocks are both veiled lavishly with the diaphanous fabric.

Frocks For Balls and Dances.

Evening gowns are gorgeous. At the Wednesday evening hops, at the Malvern the women are superbly gowned. Some of the loveliest costumes are of satin. A handsome woman who has lately joined the cottage colony appeared in a costume of white satin that had a certain resemblance to a Greek robe as the waist was draped around the décolletage and embroidered in gold. There was a tunic effect over the skirt richly embroidered in gold around the bottom and up each side.

Oriental colors are modish for trimmings. A pale blue silk mouseline worn at a dinner party last week had an odd trimming of braiding done in Oriental colors put on in ostentatious style.

Inexpensive Cottons Smart.

More and more one sees inexpensive cotton dresses that are smartly designed and neatly made worn "cheek by jowl" with more costly imported materials.

The American printed wash fabrics now come in such attractive fast colors, and in up to date checks and plaids in new crepe effect that they make ideal school and home dresses for use the year round. People to whom cost is not of importance prefer to clothe their children in cotton for hygienic reasons, long warm coats worn out of doors furnishing the needed protection in cold weather.

Lingerie and Linen Parasols.

Every morning or afternoon costume is completed by a parasol, hat, gloves, shoes and stockings to match. Lingerie and linen parasols are especially successful at the sea shore. They may be rather plain or elaborated with embroidery or lace. Dainty sunshades of sheer lawn are plaited all over and made up with a deep hem-stitch around the edge. These are mounted on colored silk linings to match various costumes and the effect is chic in the extreme. The fashionable parasol handle is rather long and extreme Directorate handles are sometimes seen but a more moderate length is generally favored.

Any Headgear.

The lingerie hats are especially becoming to young girls but rather trying to older women. All the most successful are on the Charlotte Corday order with a lace frill around the edge. An especially charming creation favored by a young girl who was introduced into society in Washington last winter, has a full draped crown across which runs lines of delicately embroidered lines alternating with lines of lace. A deep frill falls over the hair and forehead. This hat is trimmed with a flat wreath of crushed pink roses and a big bow of black velvet ribbon on one side.

Party In Honor of Guests.

Mrs. Ray Disharoon, of Smith Street, gave a delightful party to a number of little folks Monday afternoon from four to six, in honor of little Miss Louise Hitchens, of Baltimore, and Miss Mary Barker, of Wilmington, Del. Those present were Misses Helen and Pauline Bradley, Gladys Maddox, Adeline Rounds, Mildred Brinkingham, Katharine Leonard, Louise Hitchens, Mary Barker, Amanda and Laura Downing, Hazel Dykes, and Miss Irma Tindall; Masters Wilbur Rounds, Harry, Edward and William Duffy, Reynolds White, Robert Waller, Victor Taylor, Edward Tindall and Albert Brommarsh. The yard was beautifully decorated with flags and Japanese lanterns. Refreshments were served at 5.30 and each little tot was presented with a flag as they left. All reported a fine time.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS

The Proceedings of The Board At Tuesday's Meeting.

At a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners last Tuesday the following business was transacted. The Board were all present with the exception of Mr. Wright. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and ordered recorded.

Mr. George Adkins was before the Board asking that they would work a piece of road from Nassawango Bridge east. He also asked that the location of the bridge be changed and the road be straightened. Messrs. Cooper, Johnson and Truitt agreed to meet the citizens of that locality at 10 A. M. Wednesday and take up the proposition with authority to order the work done.

The Secretary was also directed to notify the Clerk of Somerset County that our County had renewed the contract for the keeping of Reading Ferry. Also that the bidders for the White Haven Ferry have refused to bond and that Mr. Messick was authorized to ascertain what could be done by private contracts.

Mr. Messick was also authorized to close the contract for keeping Westport Ferry at $135 for 1910. Mr. Clark and Mr. Johnson reported that they had examined into a proposition made by Capt. Wm. Vaughn, of Upper Ferry to change a public road that runs across his fields so that it would run along the edge of his field, and that they had agreed with Capt. Vaughn that they would consent to do it if it would not incur any expense to the County, and if the patrons would consent to same.

They also reported that they had ordered Capt. T. W. H. White to have certain ditching done on the road leading from the Ferry Road to Fruitland. And also reported that improvements were needed on the road leading from Mr. Jesse Haffington's place to Allen and that the new road by lands of W. T. Banks.

The Board ordered Mr. Clark to do this work, and also to put in three culverts on the road called Run Bridge road in Parsons District, and to have the road from Delmar to the old Manson Waller place on the Spring Hill road worked, a distance of three and one half miles.

Mr. Benj. Livingston called the attention of the Board to the condition of the newly worked road in Nutters District, leading from Fruitland to the Worcester line. He was authorized to work it through the season with the log drag and report the progress of the same to the Board.

The Board adjourned to meet the 10th of August next.

ANOTHER SPEAK EASY

Unearthed By Chief Of Police Disharoon. Operator Given Six Months.

Chief of Police, Woodland Disharoon, has found another speak easy and put the screw on the operators of same, in running down Jackson Pitts, colored, who was selling whiskey the day of the race between Gen. Mack and Dry Dock, and who had been selling liquor illicitly for some time past. The way Mr. Disharoon caught up with the racket was through the victim of one of Pitts' scents or agents.

Mr. Arthur M. Chaffee, of Talbot County, having seen Ernest Byrd colored, hand a certain young Mr. Davis in Salisbury a pint of whiskey and 50 cents change in the morning of the 21st, said he would like to have some whiskey and was told by Byrd, a colored boy, that he could get it for him.

Charles gave Byrd a dollar and waited some time for him but the boy did not show up again and he got a writ out for Byrd, handing it over to Mr. Disharoon, who arrested Byrd Wednesday night.

Byrd confessed that he had the man's dollar, but could not find him when he went back to look for him, and also that he had bought whiskey of Pitts for people before and that Thos. Goates also acted as a lieutenant for Pitts.

On the face of these facts Justice of the Peace, W. A. Truitt, sentenced Pitts to six months in the House of Correction and made Byrd pay for Charles' trip down here, $2.50, Thursday to identify the one of whom he bought the whiskey.

The witnesses and accomplices of running down these law breakers by Mr. Disharoon and Deputy Sheriff Frank Waller should be especially commended.

GUARDING PAPER MONEY

Cheeks Against Thefts Of Currency While In Process Of Printing.

The paper money of the Government is brought in from bound sheets, locked and sealed, from the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to the cash room of the Treasury and there delivered upon receipt to James A. Sample, chief of the division of issue, on sheets of four bills each. They are complete with signatures and numbers, except for the seal, which is printed upon them with power presses in a small department under the cash room.

These papers are worked by two people, usually a man pressman and a woman feeder or assistant. When the seal has been imprinted upon the bills they are counted automatically, bound in packages of equal numbers by bands of paper, marked, signed by the persons who have handled them, and carried into the adjoining room, where the sheets are out, the bills are recognized and inspected, so that the imperfect ones may be thrown out. They are then bound into packages of equal amounts and taken to the drying vault, where they lie upon the shelves for several weeks, until the ink has become perfectly dry.

Every safe guard that ingenuity can contrive is placed around these transactions, and the chief of division can tell which of his hundred or more subordinates have touched the different bills in the vaults. He knows who received them, who printed the seal, who wrapped and out them; for every package is numbered and its history is recorded in an enormous book.

The combination of checks is so complete that Mr. Sample would know within twenty minutes if a single bill were missing, but he has never had occasion to test this knowledge except twice within fifteen years. Only two attempts have ever been made to steal the money of the government while it is in this stage of its history.

On the occasion many years ago a pressman passing a pile of notes upon the table of his neighbor slipped the top sheet under his blouse without being observed and carried it with him to the lavatory, where he was successful in concealing it. The theft was discovered within five minutes and it was clearly apparent that he alone could be guilty, although the evidence was surely circumstantial. No one saw him take the money. Therefore he was not arrested and was never publicly charged with the crime. But he was dismissed from the service and he knew the reason why. The bills were never recovered. He probably destroyed them, as they did not appear in circulation. On another occasion eight or ten years ago a colored messenger whose business was to haul the money about on a cart slipped a loose sheet into his pocket unobserved while passing between the printing and counting room. The theft was also unseen, but the responsibility was fastened upon him. The pile of notes was complete when it left the printer for it was counted and registered automatically in the press. When it reached the counting room one set was missing and the package had not been out of the possession of the colored messenger in the meantime. Therefore he was responsible, and as he could not offer any satisfactory explanation he too was dismissed from the service, but was not prosecuted because there was no direct proof of his guilt.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dear beloved husband and father, Elijah Toadwine, who departed this life one year ago, July 26, 1908.

O how hard it is to live Without thee in this early World of sorrow and pain Why God has called him from us We cannot understand.

O how we miss his smiling face His kind and willing hand O Father if you could but speak to us And could you live again Our broken hearts would then be healed.

How sad and lonely without father, And our home can be no more, In this world of sorrow here below May our blessed Saviour ever be near us

We know he's all and all And will guide us, Safely to the beautiful home above.

WHILE ENTERTAINING A DUKE

A Few Suggestions Made by a Wife in a Lighted Room.

Many people are unaccustomed to a duke's visit. This is a great mistake. Of course a duke is a duke; but then, there is no reason why he shouldn't be treated with a certain amount of respect.

To do this it is not necessary to respect him too much. Treat him with as much respect as you think he will stand, but do not lavish it upon him.

If he leaves his boots in front of his door at night, do not feel that it is incumbent upon you to get up at six o'clock to shine them. Wait until seven, anyway. He will never know the difference.

Let him be alone with your daughter as much as he likes. If he resents this, tell him he can get even later. This might under some circumstances seem too candid; but it is better to meet him in a frank and open-hearted manner.

At night, before the duke goes to bed, sneak into his room and turn on all the steam. Being an Englishman, he may not understand this sudden warmth on your part, but you can explain to him, the next morning when he fawns himself down to the breakfast table, that it's only a foretaste of what he may expect later. Not being able to see a joke, he will probably think that you mean to pay all his expenses to Palm Beach, which will restore him to his good humor.

When you have a duke on hand, do not talk too much about your ancestors, or rub it in about your family. It might make him feel uncomfortable. No duke likes to feel that he is marrying above him.

Naturally you will provide him, while he is with you, with the necessities of life. It is extremely embarrassing when you invite some of your intimate friends in to see your duke to have him sit on the end of your davenport couch with fringe on his trousers and a false bosom to his shirt. Feed him, therefore, on good nourishing food, and make him as respectable as any duke can ever be made.

Always the Way.

Tommy had been invited to dine at a learned professor's house, and his mother was anxious for his good behavior at table. She gave him elaborate instructions.

"Well, Tommy, how did you get on?" she asked on his return. "You are quite sure you didn't do anything impolite?"

"Well, no, ma—at least nothing to speak of."

The mother's anxiety was aroused. "Ah, then, there was something wrong. Now tell me all about it, Tommy."

"Oh, it wasn't much. You see, I was trying to cut my meat when it slipped off the plate on to the floor."

"Oh, my dear boy; what ever did you do?"

"I just said, sort of carelessly, 'That's always the way with tough meat,' and went on with my dinner!"

The Fates.

The attendant was showing the lunatic asylum to the visitor, and opened the door to the first cell. Inside was a man sitting on a stool and gazing vacantly at the wall. "Sad story," said the attendant; "he was in love with a girl, but she married another man, and he lost his reason in grief." They stole out softly, closing the door behind them, and proceeded to the next inmate. This cell was thickly padded, and the man within was stark, staring mad. "Who is this?" inquired the visitor. "This," repeated the attendant, "is the other man."

ONE WAY OF PUTTING IT.

"How would you decide which to marry if you were proposed to at the same time by a man with money and one without?"

"I'd trust to fortune."

A Winner.

A gifted Southern woman said that her colored woman surprised her one day with the announcement that she was soon to be married again. The servant explained that she had attended a funeral six weeks before and that she was to wed "the husband of the corpse." She added that the bereaved widow had noticed her at the funeral.

"He said I was the life of the occasion."

What He Needed.

The waiter girl knew a thing or two about table etiquette. So she smiled scornfully as she said: "It's not our custom to serve a knife with pie."

"No?" remarked the party in surprise. "Then bring me—"

Value of Bokhara Clover.

Bokhara clover is not cultivated to any extent in this country as yet, though it deserves to be. As a leguminous plant, few flowers excel it. It is a very good plant for renewing the fertility of worn-out misused farming land for it will grow where other clovers refuse to grow at all. It is good for planting along railway cuts and embankments to prevent washing of the soil. It contains a large amount of gum which is a substitute for vanilla.

Chalmers-Detroit "30"

$1500.

FIVE STYLES:

Touring Car, Roadster, Pony Tonneau, Inside-Drive Coupe, and Limousine.

The 1910 Chalmers-Detroit "30" has a 115-inch-wheel base. That's three inches longer than our "40" of last season.

Its wheels are 34 inches, while last season's were 32.

The hood is longer and higher, the tonneau more roomy, and the lines are like the costliest cars on the market.

Yet the price remains $1500. By increasing our output and retaining our chassis, we save enough to make these improvements.

BULLETIN

FORTY PLAYGROUNDS BY THE SEA

This is seashore time.

The dog days call to the worker in home, office, and mill and the answer brings up thoughts of the many resorts beside the sea where comfort, recreation, and pleasure alike await the coming of the holiday-maker.

Along the shores of New Jersey from Cape May to Sandy Hook lie forty beaches, each offering delights for outings long or short and each easily accessible by the splendid train service of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Atlantic City, with its myriad attractions for young and old, needs no introduction, for its charms are known from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Cape May, for a century the summering place of satisfied thousands of seekers after cool breezes, fine bathing, and the refined amusements of the seaside, is more attractive than ever in its new life.

Ocean City, Wildwood, Sea Isle City, with their smaller neighbors, Anglesea, Holly Beach, Wildwood Crest, Avalon, and Stone Harbor, afford summer pleasure to thousands.

To the north lie Beach Haven, Seaside Park, Island Heights and the other resorts about Barnegat Bay, where the lover of fishing and sailing finds the choicest sport.

Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Spring Lake, Long Branch, Sea Girt, Point Pleasant, Allenhurst, Elberon, and Belmar on the Upper Coast where the country meets the sea right on the beach, appeal with mighty force to the vacationist.

Any Pennsylvania Railroad Ticket Agent will be glad to give full information regarding excursion rates, time of trains and arrange your outing whether it be for a day, a week or the whole summer.

DANGER IN DELAY.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous For Salisbury People To Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, lameness, soreness, lumbago, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Care the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which have cured people right here in Salisbury.

Mrs. Walter E. Nichols, 871 Elizabeth Street, Salisbury, Md., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have brought me great relief from kidney complaint and I believe they will do as much for other sufferers. I was afflicted with symptoms of kidney disease from childhood but was never troubled seriously until about two years ago. Then my back began to ache severely and last summer I was laid up for two weeks. I used any amount of medicine but found only slight relief. Doan's Kidney Pills which I procured at White & Leonard's drug store went at once to the seat of my trouble and helped me in every way. I consider this remedy worthy of the highest recommendation."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Sees Mother Grow Young.

"It would be hard to overstate the wonderful change in my mother since she began to use Electric Bitters," writes Mrs. W. L. Gilpatrick of Danforth, Me. "Although, past 70 she seems really to be growing young again. She suffered untold misery from dyspepsia for 30 years. At last she could neither eat, drink nor sleep. Doctors gave her up and all remedies failed till Electric Bitters worked such wonders for her health." They invigorate all vital organs, cure Liver and Kidney troubles, induce sleep, impart strength and appetite. Only 50c at John M. Toulson's.

Tortured On A Horse.

"For ten years I couldn't ride a horse without being in torture from piles," writes L. S. Napier, of Russell, Ky. "When all doctors and other remedies failed, Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me." Infallible for Piles, Burns, Scalds, Cuts, Bolls, Fever Sores, Eczema, Salt Rheum, Corns, &c. Guaranteed by John M. Toulson.

A Night Rider's Raid.

The worst night riders are calomel, croton oil or aloes pills. They raid your bed to rob you of rest. Not so with Dr. King's New Life Pills. They never distress or inconvenience, but always cleanse the system, curing Colds, Headache, Constipation, Malaria, &c. at John M. Toulson's.

If you have pains in the back, weak back, or any other indication of a weakened or disordered condition of the kidneys or bladder, you should get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills right away when you experience the least sign of kidney or bladder complaints, but be sure that you get DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. We know what they will do for you, and if you will send your name to E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, you will receive a free trial box of these kidney and bladder pills. They are sold here by All Druggists.

Get DeWitt's Carbolic Acid Wafers when you ask for it. There are a great many imitations, but there is just one original. This salve is good for anything where a salve is needed to be used, but it is especially good for Piles. Sold by All Druggists.

It soothes itching skin. Heals cuts or burns without a scar. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheum, any itching. Doan's Ointment. Your Druggist sells it.

"I suffered habitually from constipation. Doan's Regulants relieved and strengthened the bowels, so that they have been regular ever since."—A. E. Davis, grocer, Sulphur Springs, Tex.

Cheapest accident insurance—Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Stops the pain and heals the wound. All druggists sell it.

—FOR SALE—House and lot in Fruitland. Five room dwelling, six acres of land, nice orchards in good bearing. Price $3,675. For other particulars apply to Morris Banks, Route 1, Salisbury, Md.

The best pills made are DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous little liver pills. They are small, gentle, pleasant, easy to take and act promptly. They are sold by All Druggists.

Feel languid, weak, run down? Headache? Stomach "off"?—Just a plain case of lazy liver. Burdock Blood Bitters tones liver and stomach, promotes digestion, purifies the blood.

CONVENTION SYSTEM LEAVES SORES

The bitter fights which have been waged in several counties of the State this year, is a sufficient answer to those who claim the convention system of making nominations brings harmony and peace to the party. There perhaps has never been waged a more bitter primary fight than the one Dorchester County has just passed through and the party managers there have seemed it better for the party to postpone the nominations for the county offices until a later date, when time has somewhat softened the feeling and wiser counsel as to the makeup of the ticket may prevail.

In Prince George County another bitter primary fight has been waged with the convention system, and the sores left after the fight will probably be hard to heal up.

In Wicomico County the feeling of the defeated candidates is not nearly so strong and the ticket nominated will have behind it the entire party. When feeling runs high probably under any plan there will be considerable soreness felt by the defeated candidates but we believe that with the people deciding directly for themselves the defeated men will submit more gracefully than they would if turned down by professional political manipulators.

The results in Dorchester seem to assure Mr. Pattison's nomination for Chief Judge and the nomination of Judge Robley D. Jones, for Associate Judge. Mr. Pattison has many friends in Wicomico County who will gladly welcome his elevation to the judicial bench, and Judge Jones is universally popular with the voters throughout the First District. Chief Judge Henry, who was defeated in the primaries in Dorchester County will leave the bench with the best wishes of all. During his short incumbency he has made good, and many will regret his retirement. Mr. Pattison who will probably succeed him is a lawyer of acknowledged ability and will undoubtedly fill the high office of Chief Judge with honor to himself and his constituents.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

For Tomorrow, Who Neglect The Weightier Things of Life.

Close of Paul's Second Missionary Journey.
Place—Corinth. Time—About Nov. 10th, 51 A. D.

Soon after Paul's encounter with the Stoics and the Epicureans on Mar's Hill, he left Athens and came to Corinth. His mission at Athens can hardly be called a success. The learned carelessness and the haughty contemptuousness of the Areopagites or the governing council of the city quenched the ardor and chilled the enthusiasm of the Apostolic spirit within him. The shallow intellectualism of the university city and the frivolous character of its inhabitants furnished poor soil for the seed sowing of the Kingdom of God. Paul, therefore left Athens for the more vigorous and commercial city of Corinth.

Corinth was 48 miles west of Athens and was situated on the isthmus of Corinth which connected northern and southern Greece. It was called the "Two sea'd Corinth" because it had two sea ports—one, Cenchrea on the Gulf of Argina; and the other Lecheon on the Gulf of Lepanto—and was the quickest route from Rome to the East. The city sat astride its narrow isthmus and commanded the commerce of two seas. Its population was therefore cosmopolitan. There were Romans, Greeks, Jews, Macedonians, Egyptians and others. Its streets were crowded with rich merchants, bringing their cargoes of purple and fine linen, sailors, slaves, freedmen, all sorts and conditions of men. It was a city, rich, luxurious, opulent, vicious. In the city was erected a temple to Venus, which was munificently endowed with 1000 priestesses whose only ritual was prostitution. They were prostitutes because they were priestesses and priestesses because they were prostitutes. It was religion sanctioning prostitution. To the city of commerce, politics and pleasure, St. Paul came from the city of culture and remained for a year and a half. Here the Apostle labored with great success and founded a church to which he afterward addressed two of his greatest epistles. It was while laboring here too, that he wrote the two epistles to the Thessalonians. If his "spirit was stirred with in him" as seeing the idolatry of the Athenians what must have been his feelings when he saw the sensuality, selfishness and viciousness of the Corinthians.

Stark, alone, friendless, for he did not wait at Athens for Silas and Timothy, he came to the hard, busy, selfish city, apparently the most unpromising field for the sowing of the seed, but God encouraged him by a vision in the night and said unto him "I am with thee and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; for I have much people in this city." God also provided friends for him in the city. Paul when he came to the city naturally sought the Jewish quarters and there he met a Jew named Aquilla and Priscilla, his wife, who had been expelled from Rome by an edict issued by Claudius, the step-father of Nero, who was reigning then upon the throne of Caesar. These two were evidently Christian Jews and as Aquilla was a tentmaker by trade, the same trade as the Apostle, they worked together during the week and Paul went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day and preached to the Jews and the devout Greeks who were proselytes.

Writing afterwards of this period of his work he said "I was with you in weakness, and fear, and much trembling, nevertheless I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified."

From these two Roman Jews the Apostle must have learned a great deal concerning the progress of Christianity in the imperial city and this must have been the determining influence which constrained him to write to the church at Rome. "I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established."

Soon, the old Jewish bigotry was aroused against Paul and he was driven from the synagogue; but one, Justus, whose house was next door to the synagogue, had been converted to Christianity, and he opened his house for the preaching of the gospel. Crispus, the chief ruler of the synagogue, had also been converted and decided to follow Paul into the house of Justus. When Paul decided to take this step, he said to the Jews, "Your blood be upon your own heads; I am clean, from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles." So now the Apostle joined by Silas and Timothy, who had arrived from Berea, and Justus and Crispus began a campaign of evangelism for the conversion of the Greeks. But when Gallio came to Corinth as proconsul of the province, the Jews who were numerous, rich, and influential, made insurrection and brought Paul to the judgment seat. They had no case against the apostle, but were depending upon the well known reputation of Gallio for sweet temper and mild manners. Gallio came from a distinguished Roman family, and was a brother of the philosopher and tutor of Nero, Seneca and uncle of the poet, Lucan. This brother of the philosopher had in common with all the Roman aristocracy of that day, a profound contempt for these agitating Jews, and when he learned that all the tumult had been raised over a question of worshipping God, he said: "If it were a matter of wrong or wicked lewdness I would have reason; but if it be a question of words and names, and of your law, look ye to it; for I will be no judge in such matters." He would have nothing to do with what he considered was a quarrel among bigoted sectarians, so he drove them from the judgment seat" and the decision so delighted the Greeks, who naturally hated the Jews, that they took Southern, who had succeeded Crispus as ruler of the synagogue, and beat him, and "Gallio cared for none of these things." Because of this attitude toward the beating of Southern, Gallio has been held up as an example of religious indifference—a type of mere worldlings; wrapped up in the material interests of life, but this is hardly correct. He took no notice of the beating because it was beneath his dignity. He was no police judge. But it was his haughtiness and pride that lost him this opportunity of leaving a grander philosophy, a deeper contentment and more satisfying peace in this world. Yet how many there are who for philosophy, art, literature, politics, neglect the weightier matters of religion and eternity and destiny.

A Few Reasons Why

Acadia Butter Is Best

BECAUSE it is an absolutely pure Butter.

BECAUSE it is made from the pure, sweet milk of the best herds of dairy cattle in the State.

BECAUSE it is worked dry and contains not over four per cent moisture. (Most Butter will show from 15 to 20 per cent moisture.)

BECAUSE it is sold only in hermetically sealed packages, thus retaining the natural flavor.

BECAUSE in all the years it has been on the market we have never had a single complaint regarding its quality.

BECAUSE of a dozen other reasons which every person who knows good butter is sure to appreciate.

Sold by all first-class grocers.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have tried with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dizziness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. But what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the same fastidious in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of Kodol. Then take it and you will see the entire contents of the bottle if you can stomach it. If you cannot stomach it, we will refund your money without question. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. But what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary peptic "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Peppin is only "Have you any farms for sale, and what kind?" Yes; we have large and small stock farms, and large and small truck farms, and a full selection of water-front homes, sizes 20 to 1,000 acres.

"Are they productive?" Yes; the truck farms will net you, clear of all expenses, $125 to $200 per acre, stock farms 20 to 30 bus. of wheat per acre, 14 to 20 tons hay per acre, and 40 to 60 bus. shelled corn per acre.

"Where are the farms located?" On the Eastern Shore of Maryland, Delaware and Virginia.

"Do you sell them?" Yes, this firm has recently sold 18 of them—3,000 acres for $52,000. Do you want one? If so, apply to—

ON THE FLOOR OF THE SENATE.

TOO much occupied in concentrating his thoughts on his speech, Langdon failed to notice the consternation on the faces of Peabody and Stevens as he walked to his seat in the senate. They had failed to succeed in getting Milbank to conclude and consequently could not push the naval base report through. But they noted the passing of over an hour after their opponent's appointed time and had felt certain that he would not appear at all.

"The boss of the senate," leaned across to Stevens and whispered hurriedly:

"We must tear him to pieces now—discredit him publicly. It's his own fault. Our agents can sell the Standard Steel. Our connection with the scheme will be impossible to discover—after we have made the public believe Langdon is a crook."

"But how about our supposed combination to protect the government that Langdon will tell about?" asked Stevens.

"We can't deny that, of course."

"No," answered Peabody. "We can't deny it, but we will not affirm it. We will tell interviewers that we prefer not to talk about it."

"It's our only chance," replied Stevens cautiously.

"Yes, and we owe it all to Jake Steiner," went on Peabody. "That fellow Teller will do anything to please Jake. Jake has convinced Teller that Langdon was responsible for the defeat of Gulf City, and the mayor is wild for revenge."

"A lie, a lie!" screamed Langdon.

"The boss of the senate" rose and walked to the rear of the senate chamber to issue orders to two of his colleagues.

"Report of the committee on naval affairs," droned the clerk mechanically.

"House bill No. 1100 is amended to read as follows." And his voice sank to an unintelligible murmur, for every senator present he well knew was aware that the amendment named Altacoola as the naval base site.

Senator Langdon rose in his seat.

"Mr. President," he called.

"Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi," said the presiding officer as he leaned back to speak to Senator Winans of Kansas, who had approached to the side of the restrainer.

The Langdon speech on "The New South and the South of the Future" proved more than a document suited only to a reverent burial in the Congressional Record. Although wearied at the start owing to the exciting happenings of the day, the Mississippians' enthusiasm for his cause gave him strength and stimulation as he progressed. His voice rose majestically as he came to the particular points he wished to accentuate, and even those in the uppermost rows in the galleries could hear his every word.

At the close of his formal speech he began on his statement of the action of the naval affairs committee in buying control of Altacoola land to buy attempts to rob the government. As he had predicted, the senate did "sit up." The senate did agree that a new kind of politics had arrived.

During this latter part of the speech many curious glances were directed at Peabody and Stevens, who sat in the same tier of seats, in the middle of the chamber, only an aisle separating them. Through this choice of seats they could confer without leaving their places. Various senatorial associates of these two men in other deals found it difficult to believe their ears—but was not old Langdon at this moment narrating the amazing transaction on the floor of the senate? Would the sphinx of the desert speak the story of the lost centuries? Would honor take the place of expediency in the affairs of state? What might not happen, thought the senate machine, now that Peabody and Stevens had taken to their bosoms what they termed the purple pup of political purity?

Neither did the full portent of the situation escape the attention of the reporters' gallery. Dick Cullen observed to Hansel of the Record:

"Virtue's getting so thick around here it's a menace to navigation."

"Blocking the traffic," quipped Hansel, and both laughed.

"Hello! What's this?" exclaimed Cullen a few minutes later. "Horton has been recognized, when the program was to adjourn when the naval base bill was over with."

Langdon's speech had proved the hit, the sensation of the session. After he concluded, amid resounding applause, in which senators joined, as well as occupants of the galleries, Senator Horton of Montana rose and caught the presiding officer's eye.

"I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution."

"It is my unpleasant duty," Peabody and Stevens exchanged glances. "This is a matter before this body that is me, as a member of this honorable body, is not only distasteful, but deeply to be regretted."

There has arisen ground to suspect a member of this body of having endeavored to make money at the government's expense out of land while he is alleged to have desired his own committee to choose as the naval base.

"Therefore offer this resolution providing for the appointment of an investigating committee to look into these charges."

Langdon was intensely excited over this new development. "Some one has learned something about Peabody and Stevens," he muttered. "He feared that this new combination might in some way affect the fate of the naval base—that the south, and Mississippi, might lose it. He rose slowly in his seat, while the senate hummed with the murmur of suppressed voices.

"I ask for more definite information," he began when recognized and after the president of the senate had pounded with the gavel to restore quiet, "so that this house can consider this important matter more intelligently."

Senator Horton rose. He said:

"I will take the liberty of adding that the senator accused is none other than the junior senator from Mississippi."

Langdon's eyes blazed. He strode swiftly into the aisle.

"Mr. President," he cried passionately, "I know this is not the time or place for a discussion like this, but ask that senatorial courtesy permit me to ask"—then he concluded strongly before he could be stopped—"what is the evidence in support of this preposterous charge?"

"This is all out of order," said the presiding officer after a pause, "but in view of the circumstances I will entertain a motion to suspend the rules."

This motion passing, Horton replied to Langdon.

"Your name is signed to a contract with J. D. Teller, mayor of Gulf City, Miss., calling for 3,000 shares in the Gulf City Land company, and—"

"A lie, a lie!" screamed Langdon.

"That official," went on Horton coolly, "is now in Washington. He has the contract and will swear to conversations with you and your secretary. His testimony will be corroborated by no less a personage than Congressman Norton of your own district, who says you asked him to conduct part of the negotiations."

"And I might add," cried Horton, "that it is known to more than one member of this honorable body that you had drawn up a minority report in favor of Gulf City because of your anger at the defeat of your plan to take the naval base away from Altacoola."

Langdon sank into his chair, bewildered, even stunned. There was a conspiracy against him, but how could he prove it? The ground seemed crumbling from under him—not even a straw to grasp. Then the old fighting blood that carried him along in Beauregard's van tugged at the valves of his heart, revived his spirit, ran through his veins. He leaped to his feet.

A sound as of a scuffle—a body falling heavily—drew all eyes from Langdon to the rear of the main aisle. An assistant sergeant at arms was lying face downward on the carpet. Another was vainly trying to hold back Bud Haines, who, tearing himself free, rushed down to his office waving a sheet of paper in the senator's eyes.

"Read that," gasped the secretary breathlessly, and he hurried away up a side passageway and out to reach the stairs leading to the press gallery.

Langdon spread the paper before him with difficulty with his trembling hands. Slowly his whirling brain gave him the ability to read. Slowly what appeared to him as a jumbled nothing resolved into orderly lines and words.

"The letter is signed 'Charles Norton.'"

He read and again stood before the senate, which had regained its usual composure after the fallen sergeant at arms had regained his feet and rubbed his bruises.

"I do not think there will be any investigation," he said, with decided effort, struggling to down the emotion that choked him. "I ask this house to listen to the following letter:

"Dear Senator Langdon—When you receive this letter I shall be well on my way to take a steamer for Cuba. I write to ask you not to think too harshly of me, for I will always cherish thoughts of the friendship you have shown me."

"Peabody and Stevens have finally proved too much for me. When they told me that Teller was to be a forged contract and wanted me to forge your name in the land records at Gulf City, I threw up my hands. Their game will always go on, I suppose, but you gave them a shock when you broke up their Altacoola graft scheme. And I'm glad you did. They cast me aside today, probably thinking they could get me again if they needed me."

"I am going on the sugar plantation of a friend where I can make a new start and forget that I ever went to Washington."

Langdon paused deliberately. The senate was hushed. The galleries were silent. Not even the rustle of a sheet of paper was heard in the reporters' gallery. The Mississippians gazed across the senate chamber. He saw Stevens and Peabody craning their necks across the aisle and talking excitedly to each other.

Then he stepped forward and spoke, waving the paper in the air.

"This letter is signed 'Charles Norton.'"

The old southerner gazed triumphant at the men who had sought to destroy him. It was with difficulty that the presiding officer could hammer down the burst of handclapping that arose from the galleries.

Senator Horton, however, was not satisfied with Langdon's sudden ascendency.

"How do we know that that letter is not a forgery, a trick," he exclaimed.

"Go get Congressman Norton—if you can—and get his denial," responded Langdon.

The junior senator from Mississippi hurriedly pushed his way out of the senate chamber. His day's work was done.

Down on a broad plantation along the Pearl river an old planter, who has borne his years well, as life goes now, today passes his days contentedly. He delights in the romping of his grand children as they rouse the echoes of the mansion and pride himself on the achievements of their father, Randolph, who has improved the plantation to a point never reached before.

Sometimes he receives a letter from his daughter, Hope Georgia, now Mrs. Haines, telling him of her happy life, or perhaps it is a letter from Carolina describing the good times she is having in London with the friends she is visiting.

And the old planter goes out on the broad veranda in the warm southern twilight and he thinks of the days that were. He remembers how the Third Mississippi won the day at Crawfordville. He thinks of the days when he fought the good fight in Washington. His thoughts turn to the memory of her who went before these many years and whom he is soon to see again, and peace descends on the soul of the gentleman from Mississippi as the world drops to slumber around him.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have been troubled with indigestion, have been sorry for it when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness or stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headache, dulness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all. Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the same tub-tube in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a bottle of Kodol. Then before you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 1/2 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of H. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

"Blocking the traffic, eh?" queried Hamsel, and both laughed.

"Hello! What's this?" exclaimed Cullen a few minutes later. "Horton has been recognized, when the program was to adjourn when the naval base bill was over with."

Langdon's speech had proved the hit, the sensation of the session. After he concluded, amid resounding applause, in which senators joined, as well as occupants of the galleries, Senator Horton of Montana rose and caught the presiding officer's eye.

"I ask unanimous consent to offer a resolution."

"Resolving no objection be confined to a banner that instantly attracted universal attention:

fellow Telfer will do anything to please Jake. Jake has convinced Telfer that Langdon was responsible for the defeat of Gulf City, and the mayor is wild for revenge."

"The boss of the senate" rose and walked to the rear of the senate chamber to issue orders to two of his colleagues.

"Report of the committee on naval affairs," droned the clerk mechanically. "House bill No. 1109 is amended to read as follows: And his voice sank to an unintelligible murmur, for every senator present he well knew was aware that the amendment named Altacoola as the naval base site.

Senator Langdon rose in his seat. "Mr. President," he called.

"Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi," said the presiding officer as he leaned back to speak to Senator Winans of Kansas, who had approached to the side of the rostrum.

The Langdon speech on "The New South and the South of the Future" proved more than a document, read only to a reverent burial in the Congressional Record. Although wearied at the start owing to the exciting happenings of the day, the Mississippi's enthusiasm for his cause gave him strength and stimulation as he progressed. His voice rose majestically as he came to the particular points he wished to accentuate, and even those in the uppermost rows in the galleries could hear his every word.

At the close of his formal speech he began on his statement of the action of the naval affairs committee in buying control of Altacoola land to foil attempts to rob the government. As he had predicted, the senate did "sit up." The senate did agree that a new kind of politics had arrived.

During this latter part of the speech many curious glances were directed at Peabody and Stevens, who sat in the same tier of seats, in the middle of the chamber, only an aisle separating them. Through this choice of seats they could confer without leaving their places. Various senatorial associates of these two men in other deals found it difficult to believe their ears—but was not old Langdon at this moment narrating the amazing transaction on the floor of the senate? Would the statue on the pedestal step down? Would the sphinx of the desert speak the story of the lost centuries? Would honor take the place of expediency in the affairs of state? What might not happen, thought the senate machine, now that Peabody and Stevens had taken to their bosoms what they termed the purple pup of political purity?

Neither did the full portent of the situation escape the attention of the reporters' gallery. Dick Cullen observed to Hamsel of the Record:

"Virtue's getting so thick around here it's a menace to navigation."

"Blocking the traffic, eh?" queried Hamsel, and both laughed.

BIVALE.

Rev. Levin I. Inley of East New Market arrived home today for his summer vacation.

The Bush Meeting which started July 24th is to be turned into a camp meeting July 30. We are as a whole very glad of the change and hope it will be a grand success.

This place is being visited every day by excursionists from various places and we are always glad to welcome them.

Miss Frances F. Inley spent Thursday in Salisbury.

We are very glad to report the sick very much improved.

Rev. Mr. Ward, our former pastor and a very popular one is here helping our pastor, Mr. Zupp with the meeting. We are constantly hearing good reports of Mr. Ward from Cambridge and we are very glad to have him spend some time with us.

This great contest is gotten up for advertising purposes, and is free and open to all, except music dealers and Harry H. Hughes' employees and their families.

The large and wealthy factories I represent have allotted to me this vast amount for advertising purposes, and I propose to give it directly to piano and organ buyers, which will make a lasting advertising all over this section of Maryland.

Start TO-DAY And Send In Your Answer Early!

Some one will get the $400 Piano FREE, or one of the other valuable prizes. The fairness of this great contest is certain, as the judging of the contest will be in the hands of prominent men of Salisbury, whose names will be announced later.

How many times can you write the four words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS on a card or sheet of paper measuring 5 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches, or the size of an ordinary U. S. postal card?

The Prizes.—First award, $400 Kimball Piano, will be given absolutely free to the person sending us a card on which is written HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS the highest number of times in accordance with the Rules and Regulations given below.

All other contestants will receive, according to merit of answers, a copy of "The National Home Song" (words and music) and other valuable prizes.

In case of a tie, awards of equal value will be given.

Rules and Conditions.—The four words HUGHES SELLS KIMBALL PIANOS must be written plainly. Write on one side of the card or paper only. No words can be written across each other. All contestants must write their lists so that they can be read with the naked eye. Use any plain card or piece of paper, not to exceed 5 1/2 inches by 3 1/2 inches. Contestants must fill out coupons or exact written copy, and enclose to me with their answer.

Now is the time to get a Fine Piano Absolutely Free. It costs you nothing to try. There is no fee to pay. Let the children work on it. It will be instructive and entertaining to all the family. DO IT NOW--GET BUSY--START TO-DAY. You may secure one of the most valuable awards, which will only cost you a few hours' work.

Remember, Contest Closes Tuesday, Aug. 3d, 6 P.M.

THE NORTH WOODS' PRIVATE PRESERVES

Public Doesn't Take Kindly to Exclusion From Vast Private Domains

1,102 SQUARE MILES RESERVED

One-fifth of the Territory in Park Probably Preserved by Clubs and Individuals To-day — Adirondacks Preserve New Creation.

The breadth of territory that is covered by the private preserves in the Adirondacks is probably not generally realized. The figures, 1,220 square miles, look rather startling, yet that is the quantity of land upon which "no trespass" signs were fixed in 1902, according to the report of the Forest, Fish and Game Commission of that year.

Within the blue line, or within the State park, ultimately to be set aside for the people of the State, as it is proposed, are 1,102 square miles of territory upon which the "common herd" cannot set foot without running the risk of being fined $25 straight, plus costs, together with damages. The preserves numbered sixty, some of them with more than a hundred square miles of territory. Within the State park are 5,040 square miles, the State owning in 1902 about 1,817 square miles. Individuals owned 2,120. Thus about one-fifth of the territory in the park is probably preserved by clubs and individuals to-day. The State has been buying land, so that now it probably owns between two-fifths and three-fifths of the proposed State park.

The preserves are posted at every forty rods of its circumference with notices couched in terms according to the temper of the owners. Some of the notices merely state that it is private land and that no trespassing, fishing or hunting is allowed. Other notices assert that if any trespassing is committed the violator will be prosecuted to the limit of the law. It is not necessary to own the land to "preserve" it. The land may be leased, the camping, hunting and fishing privileges obtained perhaps for a song, and then you may go ahead and put up the notices to keep off people. Lumber companies often lease their property to clubs and individuals in this way. Some of the preserves carry on lumbering and thus help to pay expenses of the club. Some preserves cover virgin forest and others are in regions which have been lumbered, although a good second growth may be standing.

The Adirondack private preserve is a new creation, having been born about twenty years ago. Most of them were formed since that time and the rate is apparently accelerating. Preserves are getting to be quite the fashion, with the result that preserve property is on the rise in price. Curiously enough, in 1902 Supt. William Fox said in his report, "The acquisition of these high priced lands may be safely deferred until the rest of the Adirondack Park has been bought." He does not state the premises of the argument, consequently it is not quite clear how the State will be the winner if it waits until the property goes higher.

A sort of feud exists between the people of the region and the club men. Decker is supposed to have been shot in the back because of the war. Forest fires are frequently set in order to "get even." Deer are killed just for spite. In some cases the well watched preserves do preserve the game until it gets so tame that to shoot a deer is like going out shooting a cow. Some of the fish ponds swarm with trout. A Willmott trespasser, a respected citizen, was down to Little Deer Lake about mid-summer a year or so ago for the purpose of getting a mess of trout. A watchful eye caught him at it. It is said that the watchful one, hearing the brush crack, let fly at him with a shotgun, taking an aim in the general direction of the noise. Just as the gun was fired the trespasser was lying behind a log and with his hand on the log was about to peek over to see what was doing. A BB shot struck the thumb and made the blood fly, but the citizen got away with no further wounds.

Small preserves can do no particular harm, but it is the widespread affair which shuts out so many people. America is so young that it has not learned some things. It is to be observed that in aristocratic England and Scotland it is counted against public interest to preserve wild waste lands, and thus the people under proper restrictions have the pleasure and use of them as grounds for recreation and health.

Slightly Mixed.
Ernest had been absent for several days. His teacher asked the class if any one could tell why Ernest did not come to school. One little hand went up and its owner said: "Please, teacher, he's sick; he's got the chicken coops."

Another girl was absent. "Can any one tell me why Marie is away?" asked this same teacher. Patsy piped out the same reason. "Marie's got an illustrated tooth."

Simulation Wins.
Some pretty long-headed philosophers hold that if you are not jealous of your wife you must make her think you are.—Detroit Free Press.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble, says upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine is the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depending upon the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root. It is a natural remedy, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper, so that we may make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

A LIAR'S BIG TOE WIGGLES

Prof. Skeels of Kansas, Reaches a Great Truth After Much Experimenting.

Eny, meeny, miny, mo; Catch your husband by the toe; If it wiggles call him down, Eny, meeny, miny, mo.

Lawrence, Kan.—Almet Skeels, Ph. D., professor of physiology at the University of Kansas, has made a most important and interesting discovery.

After years of observation and experiment Prof. Skeels affirms that whenever a man tells a lie he wiggles his great toe.

The learned professor declares it is impossible for any man, by any exercise of will, to prevent one or the other of his big toes from wiggling when he is telling a falsehood. Reflex force is excited by the man's subconscious radiomental activity.

But the explanation is somewhat abstruse and technical. To put it plainly, the man who is falsifying thinks to himself "You know you're a liar," and then his toe wiggles.

The witty Prof. Skeels says shoes were given to man to conceal his thoughts. He adds that if all men went barefooted the race would soon be regenerated, freed of guile and falsehood; for what's the use of lying if you know you're going to be caught? In reaching the grand truth which he gives to the world—and more particularly to the better half of mankind—the professor made some experiments with monkeys. He found that the reflex action is stronger and more widely distributed in monkeys when they lie or are deceitful than in man. One experiment is particularly interesting:

Prof. Skeels placed a lump of sugar in a baboon's cage and went away. When he returned the sugar was gone. In angry tone he asked the baboon: "Where is that lump of sugar?"

The big ape chattered loudly, plainly trying to say, "I haven't seen any sugar." While it chattered both its toes wiggled violently. But, more, the baboon, still chattering, placed the top of its thumb on the tip of its nose and wiggled its fingers.

The professor says this wiggling can no more be controlled by the will than can blushing. No man can prevent a blush from mantling his cheeks—that is, if he has not lied so much that he has forgotten how to blush.

SHIP HELD UP BY GHOSTS.

Crew of the Moncelio, Bound for New York, Desert Her at Palermo. Rome, Italy.—The Italian steamer Moncelio, bound for New York with a cargo of pumice stone, has been held up at Palermo by ghosts.

On the arrival of the steamer at Palermo—from the Lipari Isles the crew refused to continue the voyage because ghosts were making a devilish row in the hold and they believed the disturbance presaged shipwreck.

The police searched the vessel, expecting to discover that members of the Mafia had stowed themselves away on board hoping to escape to America, but they found nothing.

As soon as the police left the steamer the ghosts became livelier than ever. The crew left her and refuse to re-embark.

Other hands cannot be obtained.

REVENGE OF A BRIGAND.

Refusal of a Girl's Hand Causes Murder of Parents and Their Defenders. Rome, Italy.—Giuseppe Lombardo, 62 years old, a notorious member of the Mafia, who had spent a third of his life in prison, attacked near Siracusa the parents of a girl whom he wished to marry and stabbed them to death.

He also killed two men who had gone to the defense of the father and mother and seriously wounded another man who attempted to disarm him.

He then committed suicide.

SOUND PEARL FETCHES $600.

Its Finder Took a Boat Worth $300 in Exchange for It.

South Norwalk, Conn.—William Redding, an oysterman, found a pearl in an oyster when at work on the Southport natural bed. Horace A. Saunders promptly bartered his oyster boat for the pearl and started for New York. Redding came ashore here, sold the boat for $300 and boasted how he had outwitted Saunders in the deal. He was glum, however, when Saunders returned from New York with $600, the price paid for the pearl by a Fifth Avenue jeweler.

The pearl is believed to be the largest ever found on the Connecticut shore. It is larger than the average thimble, and is perfect in its formation and coloring. Saunders knew the value of the pearl, as he visited the Ceylon pearl fisheries when a sailor before the mast. He said that the pearl was superior to any he had seen in two weeks in Ceylon. He was dragging for oysters about twenty feet from Redding. "Say, Horace," hailed Redding, "I've got a pearl here, and it's as big as a walnut." Saunders paddled over, examined the pearl, and said, "I'll give you my boat for it." Redding accepted on the spot, and returned here to sell the boat and tell of his good luck.

Voted Ugliest Man, Leaves Town.

Hooper, Nev.—S. J. Hall, a blacksmith, who at a church bazaar held here recently was voted to be the ugliest man in town, has disappeared, leaving a note to the effect that he is all right, but will seek a community where he can divide his distinction with some other "looking-glass breaker."

The bread of independence is often distressingly shy of butter.

THE LITTLE LADY IN FUR

"Sister, Jack's come!"
"Mercy me! So early!" exclaimed Dora.

"Why, no, it isn't early, is it, Toots? I've been writing an hour. Run along, dear, and ask Jack to tell you a story while sister finishes her letter."

Toots needed no second bidding. One of Jack's stories to this four-year-old was a glimpse into fairyland. She tripped lightly into the drawing room.

"Dood evenin', Mister Jack."
"Hey, Toots!" exclaimed Jack Esmond. "Good evening, my little lady," and in a second more she was perched high on a broad shoulder.

"Toots lost her breath, the ascent had been so very sudden, but she managed to keep her seat."

"Mitter Jack, Dora thaid p'raps you'd tell me a thory."

"A story, Toots? You bet, but where is Dora?"

"Writing to muer and she wanted to finish it so you can mail it to-night. She said she'd hurry and be down very thoon."

"All right; where is our big comfy story chair? Ah, over here! Come on, Toots, cuddle down, it's going to be a really truly one to-night."

"Dood! All true, Mitter Jack?"

"Every word, dear. You see, I was called to New York to-day and took the train you and Dora always take, Toots, when Dora goes to buy you a new dress. Well, at the very first station, the daintiest little lady I ever saw boarded the train. She stepped so lightly up the aisle and took the seat next mine. I couldn't keep my eyes off her, Toots, she was such a beauty. O, I must tell you how she was dressed because you are a little girl and of course you will want to know that."

"She was all in fur, from her head to her feet, the softest, prettiest gray, Toots, and at her neck such a pretty blue satin bow."

"Did the pretty lady look at you, Mitter Jack?"

"Did she look at me? Well, I should say. You see, Toots, I read my paper very fast so I would not watch her every moment. But when I did look again she actually winked at me, Toots."

"O, Mitter Jack!" exclaimed Miss Toots. "Dora says that is very rude, and a lady never does that. I heard her tell Becky that just the other day."

"O, but Toots, it was all right for this little lady; she was far from rude. Well as I was saying, I read my paper harder than ever after that; and, Toots, you never could guess what happened next."

"O, did she faint, Mitter Jack?"

"Faint? No, but I nearly did that. Toots, I felt a light touch on my arm and behold in my seat right beside me sat the little lady in fur. Her touch was like a feather, but it made me jump, Toots, and it made my heart go pit-a-pat."

At this Toots clapped her chubby hands and giggled, "O, Mitter Jack, I heard Dora tell muer that her heart throbbed when you gave her that fairy ring that she kisses every night when she puts it in its little velvet box."

Toots got a big, big hug for that bit of information and Jack Esmond almost forgot his story, but Toots had no notion of missing the end.

"What next, Mitter Jack?"

"Let's see. O, yes. 'What can I do for you, miss?' I asked. Then she spoke and O, Toots, such a voice! Soft as music. I never heard such a beautiful voice. I had to bend my head to catch what she said, and when I did that she sat plump down in my lap."

"Oh! Toots' voice was as shocked as it should have been while breathlessly she asked: 'What did you do, Mitter Jack?'"

"What did I do? I hugged her tight, just as tight as I'm hugging you, Toots, and—"

"Jack Esmond!"

Through the silent room the tones of Dora Ware's voice sounded like an exploded bomb.

"Ah, good evening, Dora, dear, thought you were never coming. Toots wanted another story and—"

"That will do, Toots, come here instantly. And now, Mr. Esmond, how dare you sit there in my house and tell my little sister such trash?"

"But, Dora, dear."

"Not a word!" Dora's eyes flashed fire. "Our engagement is broken, Mr. Esmond, and please never darken my doors again."

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."

Mrs. W. S. Bond, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md.

"The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and today is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed."

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

DAIRY AND CREAMERY

SYMPTOMS OF EGOTISM.

Cattle Are Most Susceptible to This Dread Disease.

Ergot is a fungus that forms on the heads of grasses and grains. The ergotised seeds several times larger than the natural seeds, are hard, black and slightly curved. Rye, blue grass, oats and red-top may contain the ergot. Ergot is most commonly developed on rich soils, in hot seasons, especially when considerable moisture is present.

Cattle are most susceptible to the disease. When eaten, ergot produces a contraction and finally a closing of the blood vessels in the extremities of the body—limbs, tail and ears—with the result that the parts below the line of obstruction die and later drop off. Pregnant cows may abort. It is not uncommon to see a steer or a cow with but one toe on a foot, or the absence of the entire foot.

The first symptom of ergotism is a slight lameness in one or more limbs, later a dark line forms around the limb somewhere between the knee and the hoof. The line deepens into a crack containing pus. This crack shows the line of separation between the dead and the living tissues of the limb.

The affected animals should have a change of feed and should then be given a physic to get rid of any ergot in the intestines. Then give tannin in one-half drachm doses twice daily for a few days to destroy the ergot not absorbed. To increase the circulation in the extremities, chloral hydrate, in one-half ounce doses, twice daily, is often beneficial. Affected parts should be bathed with as hot water as the animal can stand; after this apply disinfectants to the skin, such as senolium (a teaspoonful to a quart of water). When the foot has started to come off, nothing can be done for the animal, and it is best to put it out of misery.—C. L. Barnes, D. V. M.

Temperature for Churning.

The proper temperature for churning is the lowest temperature which can be used and produce proper granules within a reasonable time. A reasonable time is from thirty to forty-five minutes, and fifty minutes or an hour is not too long. The colder the temperature, the better the granules and the less fat lost. The real churning temperature is the temperature at which the butter breaks. This is from two to four degrees higher than the starting temperature, from the friction of the machine. If the granules form in less than 25 minutes, you may be certain that the temperature was higher than it should have been. If the butter comes in 15 minutes or less, a large amount of fat is lost in the buttermilk and the butter will be soft and greasy in texture. Ordinarily from 5 degrees to 60 degrees is about the right temperature.

Cause of Bloody Milk.

Bloody milk may be caused by a variety of conditions. Dr. Schroeder declares that some claim that the cow, fighting flies, kicking and throwing the body to and fro, will tend to rupture the small blood vessels and thus cause the trouble. Others hold that the steady diet of green, succulent food and perhaps the derangement of the blood caused by certain weeds, bring on this trouble. The latter opinion the doctor is inclined to believe, for it has been his observation that many cases can be cured by changing the pasture or changing the feed.

"We have cured cases of bloody milk," he goes on to say, "by giving sulphur and saltpeper mixed—half and half in the feed. Whether or not this is a sure cure I can not say, but it might be worth trying."

Old Pan Process Bad.

By the old pan process of raising cream in the summer time much of the butter fat is lost, as it falls to rise. The milk is soured by the time more than half the cream contained in the milk has risen to the surface, and that which has already risen is soured by butter. In the summer a hand separator is needed to get all the cream. In the winter one is needed to get the cream separated from the milk as quickly as possible that the milk may go to the calves or pigs with the animal heat still there. There is no season of the year when the hand separator is not just the machine to have on the dairy farm.

Grow Dairy Feed.

To realize the best profit from dairy cows all the feed should be grown up on the farm.

Walt Till Cream is Ripe.

When cream is not ripe for churning you will lose much of the butter fat.

Oldest Treaty.

The oldest text of a real treaty extant is that of the convention between Ramesses II, king of Egypt, and the prince of Kheta, which embraces the articles of a permanent offensive and defensive alliance, with clauses providing for the extradition of emigrants, deserters, criminals and skilled workmen. This treaty was drawn up in the fourteenth century B. C., and is the earliest record that we have of any international transaction.
